"For a State containing so large a proportion of negroes the illiteracy is slight. In 1900 persons of ten years of age and upward who were unable to read and write constituted 11.1 per cent of the population. The illiterates comprised only 4.1 per cent of the native whites over 10 years old, 13.4 per cent. of the foreign born and 35.1 per cent of the negroes.

"Of persons 10 years old and upward practically one-half, or exactly 49.8 per cent., were engaged in gainful occupations. Of males 79 per cent. were wage-earners; of females, 21 per cent. The following table shows the proportion of wage-earners employed in each of the five general classes of occupations:

Agriculture	20.8 per cent.
Professions	4.2 per cent.
Domestic and postal service	26.1 per cent.
Trade and transportation	19.9 per cent.
Manufacturing and mining	29.0 per cent.

"Agriculture is one of the leading occupations. In 1900 the State contained 46,021 farms, of which seven-eighths were occupied by white farmers and one-eighth by negro farmers. Two-thirds of the farms were owned by their occupants and one-third were rented, either for money rental or on shares of the products. The farms had a total area of 5,170,075 acres. The cultivated area amounted to 3,516,352 acres, or more than two-thirds of the farm area and 55.7 per cent of the area of the State. The average size of the farms was 112.4 acres being considerably less than the average for the United States. The total value of all the farms was $204,645,407, which was made up of the following items:

Land	$120,000,550
Buildings	54,810,760
Implements and machinery	8,611,220
Live stock	20,855,877
Average value per farm	4,448
Average value products per farm	952

"The product amounted to 21.00 per cent. of the value of the farms, and may be regarded as the farming profit. The following table shows the amount of live stock in the State:

Cattle	376,710	Sheep	194,079
Horses	188,726	Swine	359,812
Mules	19,734

"The following table shows the leading farm products:

Dairy products	$5,228,698
Poultry products	1,158,020
Fruit	2,490,385
Corn*	19,766,510
Wheat*	9,671,800
Oats*	1,109,560
Potatoes*	1,991,337
Sweet potatoes*	677,884
Hay†	707,042
Tobacco‡	24,586,480

*Bushels. †Tons. ‡Pounds.

"In the production of tobacco Maryland is the eighth State in the Union.

"Manufactures are of great importance. Maryland being the fourteenth State in the Union, while in agriculture it is only the twenty-ninth. The following table summarizes its manufattures, of which two-thirds are carried on in the city of Baltimore:

Establishments	9,879	Wages	$ 38,748,551
Employees	108,325	Materials	144,397,680
Horsepower	141,879	Products	242,552,990
Capital	$163,147,200

"The principal and almost sole mineral product of the State is coal, which is mined in large quantities in the neighborhood of Cumberland. It is bituminous of excellent quality. In 1901 the amount mined was 5,113,127 tons."

BLOOMINGTON.

The foundation for the new M. E. church was completed on Friday.

The Piedmont Sunday School of Piedmont picniced in Broadside Grove on Wednesday and had a most delightful day.

The opening day of the new saloon in the Michael Elwood stand has been postponed until September 1st.

It is reported on pretty fair authority that Parker and Davis will speak at Pea Vine Park some time the latter part of October.

Miners' Sunshine Council No. 81 Jr. O. U. A. M., of this place, has secured a location and is now completing arrangements to erect a large and commodious lodge room.

Mrs. W. L. Rawlings, of Cumberland, is spending a few days with friends in this community.

Miss Pearl Merrill, of Westernport, was a guest of Miss Fannie Elliott the first of the week.

Wednesday, August 17th, was payday at the mines.

Mrs. Charlotte Kemp, widow of the late E. Kemp and mother of Dr. H. M. Kemp, of this place, whose critical ilness was noted in your issue a few weeks ago, died at her home last Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. Mrs. Kemp was 76 years old at the time of her death and survived her husband about nine months. She was the youngest daughter of 'Squire John M. Kight, the pioneer settler of Bloomington, then called the Mouth of Savage. The funeral services were conducted at her home by Revs. Snedegar and Howard on last Thursday afternoon. Interment in Philos Cemeteay, Westernport, by the side of her husband.

Mr. John Raley, a member of the Highlanders base ball team and Miss Olie Bartlett, daughter of our postmistress, Mrs. Fannie Bartlett, were married at Cumberland on last Monday evening at 7 o'clock. The happy couple returned on train No. 1 the same evening and gone to housekeeping with their mother.

Mr. B. W. Klipstein, wife and little daughter, of Beeville, Texas, are in town this week on a visit to friends. "Burk," as he is familiarly called was born and raised in Bloomington. He left his home twenty-eight years ago and has been pushing along in the business world with the same good fortune and luck that has attended many of our boys. He is a prominent banker and business man in his adopted town and reputed wealthy.

Lawn Fete.

There will be held on the Trinity Reform church lawn in New Germany on Saturday evening, August 20th a lawn fete, the proceeds of which will be used for the benefit of the church. All are cordially invited to attend.

The Carnival.

Sheridan & Swanson's Carnival Company, which arrived here Sunday night from Grafton, and on Monday set up its various attractions on the Oakland Hotel grounds, is showing to fair sized audiences. Some of the attractions are of a good character; others inferior.

Car Load Corn

Just arrived for Dixon & Kelso.

We like best to call
SCOTT'S EMULSION
a food because it stands so emphatically for perfect nutrition. And yet in the matter of restoring appetite, of giving new strength to the tissues, especially to the nerves, its action is that of a medicine.

Send for free sample.
SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists,
409-415 Pearl Street, New York.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

The Garrett National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, - $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, - 15,000.00

Safe Gear Wheels

Suppose—while you were turning one of the old style exposed gear, bucket bowl separators—something should catch in the gears—your fingers, your child's hair or dress? It is not pleasant to think of.

TUBULAR SEPARATORS

are absolutely safe—it is utterly impossible to catch in them. A child may sit on the gear case with safety. Drop in when you're around next time, and let me show you.

J. E GNAGEY, Accident, Md.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Harry Lowenstein, of Johnstown, Pa., is home on a visit for a few days.

Mrs. J. Rush Snyder, of Baltimore, is visiting her mother, Mrs. R. I. Anderson.

Mr. James W. Beeghley, of Accident, was in Oakland Tuesday on business.

Miss Mary Sloan, of Lonaconing, arrived here yesterday evening to visit Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Sliger.

School Commissioner Chauncy E. Flithorpe, of Bittinger, was in Oakland Monday and Tuesday on business.

Mr. Thomas Martin, Sr., one of the oldest residents of Oakland, is quite ill at his home on Oak street with an attack of pneumonia.

Miss Grace Cassell, of Grafton, is spending a week here as the guest of Misses Kate and Gertrude Shirer at their home on Alder street.

The ladies of the Lutheran church will hold a social in Naylor's Hall on next Thursday night. A silver offering will be taken at the door.

Fsank Sterling spent Sunday at Friendsville, Md., returning Monday accompanied by his grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Sterling.—Preston Leader.

Mr. and Mrs. V. V. Washburne went to Brunswick and Frederick last week to visit relatives and friends, returning to Oakland Sunday morning.

Miss Minna Flynn, of Kingwood, who was the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. M. Orr in Oakland last and part of this week, returned to her home Tuesday morning.

Mrs. A. D. Naylor and Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell, of Oakland, and Miss Tina Connell, of Hutton, were the guests at a dinner party tendered yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Parley DeBerry at their home in Terra Alta.

Deputy Sheriff James Frantz and John J. Sweeney, of the Oakland police force, went down to Friendsville last Friday and spent the following day there attending the picnic which was held there by people from points in Pennsylvania.

Miss Grace Cassell departed Saturday for Oakland, Md., where she will be the guest for a few days of Miss Gertrude Shirer, formerly of the Sentinel office. Miss Cassell will also spend a few days at Mt. Lake Park before returning home.—Grafton Sentinel.

Today at the Park a reunion of the Lutherans of this section of Maryland and West Virginia will take place. This afternoon Senator George L. Wellington, of Cumberland, will make an address to the audience and tonight a program of more than ordinary merit will be rendered.

Bishop J. C. Hartzell, whose station is at Funchal, Maderia Islands, Africa, and who preached at the Park Sunday morning to an immense audience, was in Oakland Monday morning where he met and conversed with a number of our citizens, detailing at some length the work he is accomplishing in the Dark Continent. Recently his mission was endowed by Earl Grey, of London, with a tract of 13,000 acres of good agricultural land, situated in Africa which is being farmed by the natives. Monday afternoon the Bishop was the guest of Rev. John M. Davis. Dr. Hartzell expressed himself as being highly pleased with the Park and Oakland. He left Monday night for New York City whence he was summoned by a telegram.

Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft, of Accident, whose serious illness extending over several weeks was noted from time to time in these columns, returned to his home in Accident from the hospital in Baltimore one day last week and yesterday was brought up to Oakland where he will remain a few days to further recuperate his health. His many friends here are all glad to see him again.

LOST—A note date Sept. 15th, 1903, drawn by F M. Fogle to The Rowlesburg Improvement and Development Company, payable on or before Sept. 10th, 1904, for two hunderd and fifty dollars, with interest. All parties are warned not to negotiate said note, some having been paid.

THE ROWLESBURG IMPOVEMENT AND
2t DEVELOPMENT COMPANY.

Adjudged Insane.

Monday before Judge Henderson, who came up to Oakland that day to draw the jury for service at the September Term of the Circuit Court, a jury was empanelled to inquire into the mental condition of J. Ross Carney, who remove to a point near Oakland a year or more ago from Mannington, West Va., and who recently wandered from his home and was found two days later lying in a stream with no clothing on except an old overcoat. He was brought to Oakland one day last week by Sheriff Frantz and placed in jail to await the action of the Court.

The jury heard the testimony in the case, the witnesses being the man's son, Sheriff Frantz and Policeman Sweeney. The State was represented by Mr. Thayer and Carney had as his attorney Mr. Heindel. Drs. Ravenscaft and Legge were also examined who testified concerning the mental condition of the man, the physicians saying that his condition was brought about by the excessive use of chloral and other drugs.

The jury rendered a verdict to the effect that Carney was of unsound mind and in accodance therewith Judge Henderson passed an order committing him to one of the State's institutions where he will receive proper treatment.

Died.

SWEITZER—At the home of his parents in Swanton on Saturday morning, of cholera infantum, Nelson, aged two and a-half years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Sweitzer.

HAYMOND—On Monday at her home at Mountain Lake Park, after an illness extending over several months, Mrs. Haymond, wife of Col. Luther Haymond, of Clarksburg, West Va., to which point the remains of the deceased lady were shipped for interment Tuesday morning.

SKIPPER—At the home of its parents, the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Skipper, aged one year and four months, on Monday, August 15th.

A Church Fair

On behalf of St. Matthew's Protestant Episcopal church will be held on the grounds of the Oakland Hotel on Thursday, August 25th, commencing at three o'clock p. m. A grand concert will take place in the concert hall of the hotel at four o'clock; admission 25 cents. An excellent program has been arranged by Prof. Zimmerman, director of the Naval Academy Band, and will be carried out by the members of his orchestra. Attractions will include fancy tables, refreshments stalls, etc.

TAXES AND POLITICS.

H. P. Tasker Holds the Democratic Party Responsible For Untaxed Lands.

In a letter published in the Cumberland News of the 12th inst., Mr. H. P. Tasker, formerly of Oakland, says:

Editor Daily News:—In your issue of yesterday (Aug. 11th) I noticed that Judge Boyd heard arguments in the suit of Garrett county vs. the Consolidation Coal Company for $40,000 taxes on coal lands, lying along the disputed boundary line between Allegany and Garrett counties. Thereby hang a tale of the utmost importance to the taxpayers of both counties. This case does not cover one-half of the "omitted lands," in Garrett county and a much larger area yet remains "untaxed" in Allegany county. Soon after the formation of Garrett county I discovered these discrepancies and established the Garrett County Herald at Oakland, as a medium to lay the facts before the taxpayers and the legislature in order to have the boundary lines established and all the lands assessed. Beginning in 1873 I have devoted thirty years of my life to this important work. During this period more than a million dollars in taxes have been lost to the two counties. Who is to blame for the long continuance of these outrages against the taxpayers? As a conscientious and truthful man I am compelled to lay the blame primarily upon the Gorman ring of politicians, who made it a personal issue with me because I, as an Independent Democrat, refused to wear the yoke and do the dirty work of the corrupt "bosses" of said "ring." Finally, through the aid of Governor Wm. Pinkney Whyte and other valued friends, I succeeded in having a suit brought in the Supreme Court of the United States, to decide the boundary between Garrett county, Md., and Preston county, W. Va., which probably will throw some forty-five square miles of disputed territory into Garrett county. Subsequently, in 1896, after my appeals and the petitions of taxpayers had been turned down in a half a dozen legislature by the aforesaid bosses, I secured, through the aid of Governor Lowndes and a Republican legislature, the passage of the law in 1896 which resulted in the completion and establishment of the true Allegany-Garrett boundary line.

In 1888 the commissioners for Garrett and Allegany counties contracted with me, as their special agent, to abstract the titles to the untaxed lands in both counties. The complications in the titles to the 4,156 military lots, as well as numerous tracts belonging to non-residents, involved an enormous amount of labor and research in the land office and record offices of both counties, besides locating lines on the ground, as a practical surveyor, which I have not fully completed yet. I regret to say that neither county has paid me for all this work. Looking back over all the trials and tribulations I have passed through in the completion of this important work of public necessity and realizing that most my troubles came from the so called Democratic organization, and that Democratic success in the approaching elections, both in state and nation, would result in upholding the odious class of ring bosses everywhere, I shall hereafter vote with the party that aided the outraged taxpayers and myself when they had a chance to do so. Respectfully,

HIRAM P. TASKER,
Special agent for Garrett and Allegany Counties.

ANOTHER BALLOON BURNED.

This Time the Accident Took Place at Friendsville.

Last Saturday was a big day at Friendsyille, it being the occasion of an excursion from Connellsville and other points in Pennsylvania to that town which brought hundreds of people there for the day.

Among the amusements provided for the entertainment of the visitors was the balloon ascension and parachute leap to be made by Mrs. Murphy, the monkey balloonist, but in times as before the balloon failed to go up, the cause being an explosion of gas inside the sphere and the almost instant destruction of the fabric composing it. The balloon was the property of Mr. S. F. Herr, of Oakland, and was the same one which he tried several times to inflate but always failed.

When the balloon took fire a big crowd was about it and the flames very seriously burned three or four men, one having his hand and arm so badly injured that the flesh hung from it.

Lutheran Church Services.

Services at St. Mark's Lutheran ch. as follows: Prayer service every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.; Sabbath School, 9:30 a. m.; Christian Endeavor, Sunday, 7:00 p. m.; Preaching services next Sabbath at 10:30 a. m., and 8:00 p. m.

Rev. Charles H. Butler, of Washington, D. C., will preach in the morning.

LONDON AND GLASSGO.

Miss Anna Anderson, of Oakland, Writes Entertainingly of these Two Cities.

LONDON.

No city of ancient or modern times can compare with London, the capital of the British Empire. Her vast size, great wealth, population, her noble river, grand public buildings, stately bridges, beautiful parks, numerous manufactures, fine shops, all combine to make it the greatest city on the globe.

More than 4,000,000 people have their homes within a circle of ten miles radius. Men of every rank, race, religion and employment may be seen in its crowded streets. It is said there are more Scots in London than in Edinburg, more Irish than in Dublin and more Jews than in Palestine.

Among the great public buildings is the Towe: which for hundreds of years has held a chief place in history. It has been a palace, a prison, and a fortress. It is now only an armory and a jewel room, the latter containing the regalia of England.

On the left bank of the Thames stands Westminister Abbey. Here I saw the two coronation chairs one for the king the other for the queen. In this grand old abbey many monarchs, sailors, statesmen, warriors and authors have found their last resting place. It also contains some absurd anomalies. The statue of Sir Cloudsley Shovel, a British admiral, who was in 1707 in a shipwreck off the coast of Cornwall, is clad in a Roman cuirass and sandals and an 18th century wig.

Near Westminister Abbey stands the House of Parliament. This building contains the House of Lords and the House of Commons, the writer having had the pleasure of listening to a debate in the latter. The building is very handsome and contains 1000 rooms.

St. Paul's Cathedral is a dream of beauty, with its Greek columns and Italian scheme of decoration. It is lovely beyond description. It is the largest Protestant church in the world and took 150 years in building, was finished in 1240, but in the great fire of London in 1666, when a large portion of the city was burned down, it was destroyed. The present magnificent building was finished in 1710. In St. Paul's are buried Lord Nelson, Duke of Wellington, and many other famous men.

The British Museum contains a splendid collection of ancient art and of natural history. There you see the death warrant of Mary, Queen of Scotts, signed by Elizabeth in 1657, and that of Charles the 1st, signed by Cromwell in 1649.

The Bank of England, in London, occupying 4 acres of ground. There the money is made, and it is constantly guarded by soldiers. The traffic is very great. It is said 690 buses pass this bank in an hour, and in 12 hours 16,064 vehicles of all kinds passed a particular spot in Piccadilly. A census taker of the number of pedestrians who crossed the London bridge on a certain day showed a total of 116,302.

Hampton Court Palace, long a royal residence, but now occupied by persons of rank reduced in circumstances, is of special attraction to visitors.

The picture gallery comprises Lelly's, "Beauties of the Court of Charles II," valuable specimens of Holbein, Rapheal, etc. The gardens are numerous and among the attractractions is a "maze" which furnishes much amusement.

GLASGOW.

Glasgow is a city of vast manufacturing industries and contains the greatest ship building yards in the world.

It is situated on the Clyde, and the ground upon which Glasgow is built is for the most part level.

Owing to its great industries of all kinds, the city has a somewhat smoky aspect, many of the streets are continually thronged with pedestrians, and noisy with carts, cabs and cars. In other respects it has many attractions; the buildings are beautiful and many afford a fine view of the harbor with its steaming funnels and forests of masts.

In all that relates to lighting, paving, sewerage, etc., Glasgow deserves special mention.

I particularly liked their street cars and think them superior to our American ones. The seats on top are an added attraction and enable visitors to obtain a fine view of the city.

Among the noted points of interest is the Glasgow Cathedral. The interior is magnificent. It was completed in 1100 and was built by the Monks and took 300 years to finish it. It was all penance work and originally belonged to the Catholics, but is now in possession of the Protestants.

Its municipal building is also very handsome and interesting. The marble and onyx stairway is beautiful and presents a magnificent appearance. The city contains many fine parks and statues.

The people are charming and noted for their hospitality. I spent many months in that city and was indeed sorry to say good-by.

They are very intellectual and especially accomplished in music of a classical nature. The Scotch dialect is very seldom used, the English language being now taught in the schools.

The climate is delightfully cool in summer and very mild in winter.

Dixon & Kelso

Will Sell Bargains in

FRUIT JARS AND JELLY GLASSES

AS FOLLOWS:

Mason's Pints, per dozen, - - - - 45c.
" Quarts, " - - - - - 49c.
" Half-Gallons, per dozen, - 59c.

Jelly Glasses, 25 to 30c doz., as to size.

We also have an immense stock of

STONEWARE,

To Sell at 8c per Gallon.

Have contracted with two large peach growers for

Several Thousand Backets of Peaches,

for this season, and can furnish this delicious fruit for the next two months.

Will exchange any of the above for good produce at market price.

Yours, respectfully,

DIXON & KELSO.

A PERIOD OF VERY SEVERE STORMS

In the Midst of Important Weather Events, Says Foster.

At the request of the reporter for the Washington Post, W. T. Foster, the weather prophet, lifted the veil of the future to the extent of revealing these weather conditions for this week, and he invites the test of his predictions by the facts as they may occur during the week:

August, September and October 1904, will bring about the greatest and most important weather events of recent years. August is usually a quiet weather month on the continent and fully two-thirds of the time is equally quiet on the oceans. The reverse will be true of the incoming August. As a test of planetary meteorology, I will make a definite forecast as to time, but will, in this case, not endeavor to locate the storms:

"The week of which August 18 will be the central day will bring a period of very severe storms all around the earth. The Atlantic Ocean and eastern part of North American continent are affected by two great weather systems, each independent of the other. One of these systems brings us the transcontinental weather disturbances that moves in an easterly direction. From that source will come a series of very important weather events during the week mentioned, and these storms will reach their greatest intensity not far from Aug. 18. Their paths will probably lie north of Washington, through Pennsylvania, New York, and the New England states.

"The other system of disturbances encircles the Saragassa Sea in the North Atlantic Ocean, includes the tropical hurricanes; and the severe storms that moves northeastward along the Atiantic coast. That system will organize a tropical hurricane not far from August 19, probably in the Caribbean Sea. It will move with more than usual speed and rapidity, increase in force till August 21, near which it will be at its greatest intensity. It will probably move into northern parts of the Gulf of Mexico but I only wish to call attention to dates and ask that readers watch the weather maps and Weather Bureau reports for subsequent movements of that tropical storm."

WATER WORKS FRANCHISE

Will Be Taken Up at Special Meeting of Council Saturday Night.

The franchise for the introduction of a system of water works and sewerage for Oakland, which was to have been considered at a special meeting of the Council this evening, has been postponed until Saturday night when the matter will come up.

The franchise has already been prepared by City Solicitor Heindel.

While the paper is liberal in its granted privileges it at the same time safeguards the interests of the citizens of town.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

Lot $3 and $3.50 pants for $2.25.

Lot Clothing cut to half price.

Lot Straw Hats, your choice for 25 and 40c.

$1.50 Lace Curtains, 90c.

50c Lace Curtains, 35c.

Lot 50c Caps, 25c.

Lot 25c Caps, 15c.

50c Shirt Waists, 40c.

Lot Women's Shoes, 75c.

Lot Oxfords, 50c.

WATCH OUR WINDOWS NEXT WEEK.

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

For Sale.

A cottage at Mountain Lake Park, Md.; 12 rooms, kitchen and attic; is used as a boarding house, and has good patronage; splendid location, near Auditorium. Also, 10 acres of good land one-half mile south of Mt. Lake Park, all cleared except 1½ acres. For further particulars address or call on F. P. ARNOLD, Mt. Lake Park, Garrett county, Md. 49-26t

L. E. HANSON,
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland
PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R.

POPULAR SEASHORE EXCURSIONS.

Atlantic City,

Cape May, Ocean City, Sea Island City, N. J., Ocean City, Md., and Rehoboth Beach, Del.,

July 16 and 28, August 11 and 25, and September 8.

At following very low rates from OAKLAND:

Only $8.50 Round Trip, tickets good in coaches only.
Only $10.50 Round Trip, tickets good in Pullman cars when accompanied by regular Pullman ticket.
All tickets good returning 16 days, including date of sale.
Stop-overs allowed on return trip at Philadelphia and Washington.
Sky Ticket Agents for pamphlet giving detailed information.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

How Earl Hargis Went A-shopping

By Sara Beaumont Kennedy

Copyright, 1903, by Sara Beaumont Kennedy

THE gentlemen's furnishing house on Spring street was making a "run" on fine shirts, and, although Earl Hargis hated shopping as the devil hates holy water, he wended his way thither, having been recently reminded by his landlady that his shirts were getting "low." On the counters were a vast array of garments in all sizes and colors. It seemed a hopeless task to decide among such a bewildering assortment of blues and pinks and lilacs and stripes and dots, and Earl found himself inwardly upbraiding Eve for entailing upon the human race the necessity for anything beyond "nature unadorned." He was just making up his mind to tell the sleek clerk to put him up "any old thing" when a sweet feminine voice from somewhere near his elbow asked another clerk to show her the shirts. Surprised to find a woman in a tailor shop, Earl glanced up from the red and black monstrosity he was examining and saw a slender and particularly pretty young woman beside him. In fact, there were two women, but he did not glance a second time at the elderly one.

EARL SAW THE HAT SHE HAD CHOSEN.

"Jack had rather go shirtless than shop for himself," the young divinity was saying to her companion, "so I buy all his things. It is as much as I can do to drag him in here to be measured for a new suit. Ah, is not this blue shirt a beauty?" She lifted one of the garments Earl had rejected, and instantly it seemed the most desirable one in the lot. Down into the heterogeneous mass she plunged and drew out garment after garment, holding them up for inspection, rejecting or retaining them and talking gayly all the while.

"Do you know, Mollie, I think men are greatly to be pitied. Think of having nothing prettier or daintier than these madras things—no laces, no ribbons, no chiffons. I am sure I consider the wearing of organdies and elbow sleeves a higher privilege than stuffing ballots in an old box. Give me that red shirt," she continued to the clerk. "No, not the red and black. That is mourning for his Satanic majesty, so the proverb says. And now that lilac striped one. That is the very prettiest shirt I ever saw. Jack will look lovely in that, just lovely."

These remarks were divided between the clerk and her companion, but Earl drank it all in. What a lucky dog Jack was to have an angel like that to do his shopping and, incidentally, his housekeeping. He had never before felt his bachelorhood to be a burden. But at any rate he would profit if only at second hand by this woman's fine taste. So he surreptitiously duplicated the selections she made and, paying his bill, followed the two into the street. With what a sure tread the younger one walked! How well she held her shoulders and what wonderful gold gleams there were in her hair! Thinking enviously of Jack's luck, Earl went into the bank where he worked. But all day he seemed to hear that clear voice saying, "Jack will look lovely in this shirt, just lovely!" How nice it must be to have a pretty woman say that about one! And he put his own name in place of Jack's and tried to imagine how her voice would sound in pronouncing it. That night his dreams were a checkered conglomeration of blue and lilac shirts trimmed in impossible chiffons and short sleeves. In the morning he told himself he was a fool and went soberly to his ledger.

But a week later, prodded by a very shabby reflection in his glass, he once more sought the tailor's shop and, to his surprise, found the same two young women before the counter.

"I simply could not stand Jack in his old suit another day, so I am selecting him a new one, Mollie. This gray is very soft and will make up beautifully. That brown? No. I do not care for a dark man in brown. It kills his coloring. Gray emphasizes his best points. I shall take this."

She laid the sample down and went to look at some hats. Earl, unnoticed, picked up the bit of cloth and fixed the quality and shade in his mind. Was he not a dark man? And if gray suited Jack it would suit him also. While he was talking to the clerk he heard the clear voice that haunted his dreams so often of late saying:

"Not that wide brim, Mollie. A tall fellow like Jack would look childish in that. This straw alpine is the very thing. Jack's square, cut off shoulders will look like those of Hercules topped off with this."

Lifting his eyes to a nearby mirror, Earl saw without turning his head the hat she had chosen. Certainly Jack's shoulders could not be any squarer than his own. He, too, would have an alpine hat. And so once again had she rescued him from doubt. It really seemed a shame, almost a theft, for him to use her taste and judgment thus without her knowledge, but it was so much easier than thinking out things for himself, and it could make no difference to her, for she would never know. So he gave his order and then went outside and stood smoking until the two women emerged from the door, and he saw plainly the face of his unknown and unknowing mentor, and he told himself for the twentieth time that she was beautiful and that Jack was the luckiest dog in the world.

A week later when the gray suit came home he did full homage to her taste. Never had he had anything that suited him so well, and the alpine hat "topped" him off just as she had said. He caught himself ardently wishing that she could see him and set upon him the seal of her approval with one of those flashing smiles he had watched play about her fine lips. And, realizing what he was wishing, he blushed at his vanity and daring, and, having argued that it was neither wise nor proper for him to think so often of her, he set to work to forget the litheness of her movements and the exact tint of gold in her hair.

Before the suit was a fortnight old Mrs. Gorman gave her long remembered boat excursion.

"I specially wish you, my dear Earl, to meet Nellie Penton, and shall expect you to take her off my hands for the evening. She is just the girl to cure you of your bachelor proclivities," so the old lady wrote, and Earl, owing her several social obligations, acquiesced, mentally anathematizing the girl, who would, of course, be dull and homely. Women of Mrs. Gorman's age were likely to put general utility before grace or beauty in another woman.

The evening of the outing was perfect—a gold and violet sunset to be followed by star shine and moonlight such as Cupid dearly loves. A brilliant company had already assembled on the boat when Earl crossed the gangway and mounted to the cabin deck. He glanced at the cloud dyed water rippling away to the river's farther shore and then at the tete-a-tete chairs along the boat's rail and sighed to think that the coming hours, with such wonderful possibilities in the line of lovemaking, must be squandered on a plain, "sensible" girl. At the top of the stair there was something of a crush, most of the company having just emerged from paying their respects to the hostess in the cabin. So it happened that Earl, turning his broad shoulders first one way and then another to occupy less space, came at last to the cabin door and entered simultaneously with two other late guests.

At the far end of the saloon hung a huge mirror, and as the three newcomers cleared themselves from the outgoing crowd and stepped forward they involuntarily lifted their eyes to this mirror and then suddenly stopped, for the reflection showed a lithe, graceful girl with blue eyes and wonderful sun tints in her hair standing between two men who at first glance might have been taken for twins. With a quick motion the girl put her hand to her eyes as if to clear them from some mist, but when she looked again at the mirror the same reflection was there. On either side of her was a tall, dark, broad shouldered man in a light gray suit, lavender striped shirt and alpine hat. Even the white polka dotted ties were the same. She gasped, and her companion, stared stupidly, but Earl flushed hotly. It was as if he had been detected in a theft with the stolen goods upon him. In the flash of time they stood thus he felt the girl's eyes travel over him questioningly, accusingly. Then, bareheaded, he strode across the floor to where the hostess stood surrounded by her guests.

"HOW DO YOU HAPPEN TO BE DRESSED JUST AS YOU ARE?"

"My dear Earl," she cooed softly, "I am so glad to see you! As soon as I am at leisure I will hunt up Nellie Penton and introduce you."

But Earl as soon as possible slipped away in the crowd. He knew he was a fool, but the thought of spending those moonlit hours with the homely Nellie and this other woman within reach was intolerable. If he could only talk to the latter for a few moments out there in the starlight by the rail, how delightful it would be! But he sternly forbade himself to seek so much as an introduction to her. He knew his duty to the proprieties, and there was no use in running his neck or his heart into a metaphorical noose. So after chatting with some chance acquaintances he found a quiet nook on the pilot deck and sat smoking and watching the stars reflected in the water, dreaming an idle dream of what "might have been."

But presently he was aware that some one stood behind his chair. A hand fell on his shoulder and then a clear voice said softly:

"Having a pleasant time, Jack, dear? You were wise to come up here. It's awfully stuffy dancing in the cabin. I literally ran away from Mrs. Gorman, who wished me to play the agreeable to one of her bachelor proteges."

A dozen emotions fought for dominance in Earl's consciousness. He knew he should declare himself, but a glance at the white hand on his shoulder dissipated his resolution. He simply could not tell her to take that hand away; every nerve in his body was responding to its gentle pressure.

"Was not that a strange meeting as we came in?" continued the girl. "For a moment I thought I 'had 'em,' as you bad boys say. Then I saw your two faces, yours clean shaven, his with a mustache, and my reason was re-enthroned. I knew I was not 'seeing double.' I wonder who he is. He is certainly very handsome, and his eyes—I should adore a man with eyes like that!"

The blood was racing through Earl's veins, mingling a tumultuous happiness with his embarrassment. Each moment an announcement of his identity seemed more imperative and at the same time more impossible. He could imagine her confusion if she now discovered her mistake. He had waited too long; there was nothing to do but keep up the deception and trust to fate. So he sat quite still while she babbled on for a few moments about the interesting stranger. Then she pulled his ear softly and ran away. Earl, relieved at the turn of affairs, followed her slowly and unnoticed to the deck below, where she paused in the belt of light that streamed from the cabin door. Inside Jack was dancing with a pretty girl and looking unutterably tender things into her upturned eyes. Seeing him, the woman outside stopped as if suddenly stricken with some moveless horror. Was she jealous? Earl wondered and would gladly have throttled Jack for her. But evidently jealousy was not the trouble. She passed her hand quickly over her eyes and then looked back over her shoulder up the stair she had just descended, a storm of questioning annoyance in her eyes. Then Earl knew she understood, and he stepped boldly out of the shadow beside her and lifted his hat.

"I most humbly beg your pardon," he began, but got no further, for Mrs. Gorman came out of the opposite shadow and exclaimed in delight:

"Well, here at last I have you two together. Earl, this is Miss Penton, of whom I told you, and, Nellie, this is Mr. Hargis, the crusty bachelor whose heart is said to be invulnerable and on whom I wish you to try your sharpest arrows. Run along, now, both of you, to the end of this deck. Supper is just being served."

She bustled on into the cabin with her invitation, and the two in the band of light stood staring at each other.

"How do you happen to be dressed just as you are," she demanded, "and how dared you sit up yonder"—

But he interrupted with another question. "You are not Jack's wife?"

"Jack's wife! Of course not. I'm his sister."

"His sister? Thank heaven! Say, let the supper go hang, and come back to the upper deck. I have yards and miles of apologies to make. Come, please." He drew her to the stair, and in a few minutes two pairs of eyes saw the broken star shine from the pilot deck.

"It was deucedly impertinent in me to use your taste that way," Earl concluded penitently when he had told her how he had eavesdropped her in the shops. "I can't be sorry, but—won't you forgive me anyhow?"

"I might forgive that, but you let me stand here with my hand on your shoulder and say"—

"And say you'd adore a man with eyes like mine? Yes, thank heaven, you said it, and I heard it."

She stood up. "Will you take me down to supper, Mr. Hargis?"

"No, for you are not hungry. You are going to stay right here and say that you forgive me."

And she stayed. Two hours later when they parted at the end of the gangway he held her hand a moment. "Miss Penton, there is something I wish very much to hear you say."

"What is it?"

"This: 'Earl Hargis, you are lovely in those clothes, just lovely, and I rather like you, and you may send me some roses in the morning and call to see me in the evening.'"

She must have said it, and many calls must have followed that first one, for when the house on Spring street had its clearing sale the following season two women again stood before the counter.

"Yes, Mollie, I have two sets to choose now, for Earl is as bad about shopping as Jack and has not set his foot in a dry goods store since we were married."

Mr. Bowser Is Left All Alone

What Happened to the Poor Abused Fellow When His Wife Was Sent For by Her Sick Mother.

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]

THE Bowsers were eating breakfast the other morning when a telegraph boy delivered a message. After Mr. Bowser had read it, he said:

"Well, your mother has swallowed a fly or got the earache or fallen over her own feet or something. She wants you to come up on the 10 o'clock train."

"Then I must go," replied Mrs. Bowser. "You know how mother is. She would never telegraph unless she was seriously ill. You haven't any objections, have you?"

"Not a one. On the contrary, I shall be glad to get rid of you for a week or so—that is, I can get along here all right. It happened luckily that the cook walked out yesterday, and I will get my own meals and have a sort of picnic. It will be as good as camping out."

"And you won't be lonesome?"

"I don't want to seem hard hearted, Mrs. Bowser, but I shall take solid comfort in being here alone. Don't you hurry back on my account. Indeed, I shan't expect to see you for two weeks to come. I cannot help but remember how your mother talks to me every time she comes down here, but at the same time you may give her my love. Now, then, you'll have to hustle to get ready."

HE STARTED IN TO WASH THE DISHES.

Mrs. Bowser got ready and departed, and Mr. Bowser went to the office. All the rest of the day he thought of the dinner he was going to prepare for himself at night, and on his way he stopped and got eggs and bacon, cucumbers, tomatoes and potato salad. As he ascended the steps and realized that the house was untenanted a sudden feeling of loneliness came over him. This was added to as the cat came mewing in from the back yard and rubbed against his leg to demand sympathy, but he began to whistle and sing and imagine he was camping out in the woods.

The dinner, which took him a full hour to prepare, would have been a success but for several things. He burned the bacon, fried two eggs which had seen younger and fresher days and through some accident put salt in the coffeepot and poured molasses on his salad. Even the cat understood that it was not much of a picnic.

When Mr. Bowser had blunted his appetite on bread and butter and beet pickles he started in to wash the dishes. He went as far as to tie the cook's apron around him, and then the stillness of the house and the loss of his eggs and bacon seized him all at once and he decided to wait until he got a car load of dirty dishes and wash them all together. And to this he added:

"Hang that old mother-in-law of mine! Why did she want to go and step on a tack and telegraph Mrs. Bowser?"

Then he went upstairs to wander through the rooms and wonder why each and every one of them seemed to be attached to a graveyard. He presently decided that he would go to one of his clubs, but he no sooner started to put on a clean collar than he changed his mind. It would be too lonesome to come home and not find Mrs. Bowser sitting up for him. He went down and sat on the front steps with his evening paper and cigar, and the cat crept up beside him and heard him say:

"Mrs. Bowser needn't flatter herself that I miss her. She can stay away a whole month if she wants to. This is solid old comfort, this is."

He tried to make himself believe it for ten minutes and then gave it up and started out for a stroll. He hadn't sauntered far when he met his family grocer.

"Mrs. Bowser away, eh?" queried the grocer.

"Yes."

"And you are having a mighty lonesome time of it?"

"No, I am enjoying myself."

He met the butcher and the plumber and was asked and answered the same questions, but he knew he was lying, and he went back to the front steps and began to whistle and to think of horse races and dog fights and other lively things. He thought he was feeling happy, but all at once he turned to the cat and exclaimed:

"Why in thunder didn't I object? Suppose that old mother-in-law of mine has got a fish bone in her throat. Was that any reason she should drag Mrs. Bowser up there and break up my routine?"

The cat eyed him wistfully and doubtfully and refused to go on record. Mr. Bowser had picked up his paper and was making an effort to interest himself in the war news and the murder cases and had just decided that he was to be congratulated when a tramp came along and leaned on the gate. He had been leanin there for five minutes before he said:

"I'm not asking for money to buy food, as I can eat thistles and grass, but if you could spare me a dime to get something for this cough I'd look upon it as a Christian act."

He thereupon coughed seven consumptive and hollow coughs. They were coughs made to order, and Mr. Bowser knew that they were, but in view of the fact that he was having a picnic he decided to give the man a quarter. He was reaching for the money when a sudden wave of loneliness swept over him. Mrs. Bowser was far away and he would be alone in the house all night, and he felt that a nickel was enough for any tramp living. Before he could get that out he got mad and struck the steps with his fist and appealed to the cat:

"Was it right of that old mother-in-law of mine? Why didn't she send for a professional nurse? Why didn't she die, if die she must, with as little fuss as possible? Why send a redhot telegram down here and break up a happy home?"

The tramp increased his hollow and consumptive coughs to eight and entered the yard for a heart to heart conversation. Mr. Bowser felt that he had been injured; he was posing as a martyr; he was looking to take it out on some one. With a sudden yell that lifted the cat off its feet he dashed down the steps and seized the tramp and played baseball with him. He stood him on his head and rolled him on the grass and lovingly dallied with him, and when the man and his fifteen hollow and consumptive coughs finally got away there was a rumble of thunder low down in the west.

For a quarter of an hour, or while Mr. Bowser was picking the splinters off his coat, he was glad that Mrs. Bowser had gone, but when the dust had settled down and he thought of the empty rooms behind and the long night ahead he groaned in despair and raised his fist at the cat and shouted:

"You were there when the telegram came, and why in thunder did you allow me to make a fool of myself? You knew all the time I didn't want her to go, and I'm a good mind to knock your two old eyes into one!"

The cat prudently closed his eyes referred to and withdrew from the convention for a time, and Mr. Bowser gritted his teeth and trotted his foot and made up his mind that he would go and get tight and come home and smash the furniture. Five minutes later he changed the programme and went to bed. It was two hours ahead of time. He had planned for a long and peaceful snooze.

The snooze didn't come. He had no sooner got to bed than the noises of the street became plainer, and he thought he could hear footsteps in the house. Even when the city grew quiet he had Mrs. Bowser and the mother-in-law to think of, and the clock struck midnight and he was still awake. At that hour the cat came upstairs to see if he slept, and, if so, to pur in his ear and keep him dreaming, but Mr. Bowser leaped out of bed and grabbed for one of his shoes and yelled at him:

"You miserable, wall eyed wretch of perdition, but I'll tie you to the stake and burn you alive!"

The cat went up no more, but, sitting on the stairs, he took notes during the rest of the night. At 1 o'clock Mr. Bowser was groaning and sighing. At 2 he was blessing the mother-in-law. At 3 he was walking around his room and talking about divorce. At 4 he seemed to be asleep, but was kicking around a good deal. At 6 he came downstairs looking hollow eyed, but determined, and burned some more bacon and scrambled three eggs. Then he busied himself packing a bag, and at 7 he stood in the door and said to the wondering cat:

"I'm going after Mrs. Bowser. I'll be hanged if I would put in another night here alone for ten thousand dollars. Yes, grin, you old sinner, but don't be too smart! I'm not going because I miss Mrs. Bowser or want her back, but if my mother-in-law is dangerously ill people will think it curious I don't go up to see her. I've had the best time of my life thus far, but— Well, when I come back I'll attend to your case. What you need is to have your head knocked off a few times!"

And then he hurried away to catch the early train, and the cat sat down to ponder and think and come to the conclusion that human nature is a very unreliable quantity.

M. QUAD.

An Artistic Principle.

"Mr. Bliggins talks a great deal about himself, doesn't he?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "He is evidently one of the people who believe that the most trifling topic may be made interesting if properly handled."—Washington Star.

Ode to Work.

So stern she seemed, so grave and soberwise,
This friend of serious mien and patient eyes,
I teased her oftentimes by jest and smile
That she should be so earnest all the while.
She did but serve to pass the time away
When I became a-weary of my play.

Yet now that life grows harsh and sad and drear,
Behold my friend of friends, most stanch and dear—
My sanctuary sweet, upon that day
When Sorrow presseth hard upon my way
With her alone I find my blest release
From care in deep forgetfulness and peace.

—Boston Transcript.

Announcements of Reduced Fares Authorized via B. & O. R. R., Summer Season—1904.

ATLANTIC CITY AND SEASHORE: Special Low Rate Excursions from all points east of the Ohio River on June 30th, July 14th and 18th, August 11th and 25th, and September 8th.

BOSTON, MASS.: National Encampment, G. A. R., August 15-20. One fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale August 13th to 15th, good returning August 20th, inclusive.

LOUISVILLE, KY.: Knights of Pythias, Biennial Encampment, August 16-19. One fare plus $1.00 for the round trip. Tickets on sale August 12th, 13 14th and 15th, good returning until August 31st, inclusive.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.: Triennial Conclave, Knights Templar. September 5-9. One fare for the round trip to Chicago or St. Louis added to fares tendered therefrom (Chicago $50.00; St. Louis $47.50). Dates of sale to be announced later.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.: Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F. September 19-25. One fare for the round trip to Chicago or St. Louis added to fares tendered therefrom (Chicago $50.00; St. Louis $47.50). Dates of sale to be announced later.

TORONTO, ONT.: Friends' General Conference, August 10-19. One fare plus $2.00 for the round trip. Tickets on sale August 9th to 11th, good returning until August 31st, inclusive.

For additional information concerning rates, routes, time of trains, etc., call on or address ticket agents Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR, ST. LOUIS.

Three THROUGH Trains DAILY

Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars, VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RATES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS

From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information.

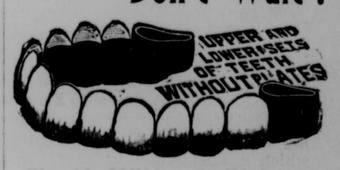
GRANULATED Fertilizer Lime! FOR FAR ERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

C. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—21t

Now is the Time! Don't Wait!



Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY, First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.

Residence on North Third street. Office in McComas Building.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO. FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

Sheridan's Order to "Go In"

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

September 15-19, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

SHERIDAN'S first attempt at ridding the famous Shenandoah valley of the Confederates ended in his being bottled up around Berryville, close to the Potomac river, by the forces under General Jubal A. Early. The preliminary history of the campaign about to be described is as follows: General Early raided Maryland and nearly captured the city of Washington in July, 1864. Sheridan was sent from the Army of the Potomac at Petersburg to cut in behind Early on the valley route and destroy him. Early got past Sheridan on his retreat from Maryland southward, and Sheridan followed up to the bank of Cedar creek and, hearing that Early had been re-enforced from Lee's army at Petersburg, beat a retreat and was chased back to the Potomac in August.

The middle of September brought General Grant from Petersburg to Sheridan's camp to devise a move that would change the face of things in the valley. At that time Early's lines covered the town of Winchester, and Sheridan's scouts learned that an old colored man living within his own lines had permission from the Confederate commander to go into Winchester to sell vegetables. Learning that the darky was shrewd and favorable to the northern cause, Sheridan had him piloted to headquarters. There was known to one of the Federal generals a young woman of Winchester, named Rebecca Wright, who was also friendly to the north, and the colored huckster knew her well. A note to Miss Wright was written on tissue paper and inclosed in a pellet of lead so small that it could be swallowed in case of danger of discovery. This was intrusted to the colored messenger and read as follows:

Sept. 15, 1864.

I learn that you still love the old flag. Can you inform me of the position of Early's forces, the number and divisions of his army and the strength of any or all of them and his probable or reported intention? Have any more troops arrived from Richmond, or are any more coming or reported to be coming? I am, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

You can trust the bearer.

Miss Wright received the note and resolved to risk her life as a spy for the Federal cause. It happened that the evening before she had learned from a Confederate officer that troops had left Early's camps to report back to Lee, on the James river, and she immediately sent Sheridan by the dark hued messenger the following reply:

DEATH OF GENERAL D. A. RUSSELL AT THE MOMENT OF VICTORY.

Sept. 16, 1864.

I have no communication with Confederates, but can tell you what I know. The division of General Kershaw and Cutshaw's artillery, twelve guns and men, General Anderson commanding, have been sent away, and no more are expected, as they cannot be spared from Richmond. do not know how the troops are situ- ed, but the force is much smaller than presented. I will take pleasure hereafter in learning all I can of their trength and position, and the bearer nay call again. Very respectfully yours,

Grant in person reached Sheridan's mp just as this important news item from the hand of the fair Virian. The gallant Phil was in a ting mood all at once, and, after itting his plan to the chief, reived the famous laconic order, "Go !" Sheridan's plan was to turn rly's flank by striking the valpike ten miles south of Winchester, it while his troops were on the march o carry out this order he learned that Early had scattered his army along the oad between Winchester and Martinsburg, a distance of thirty miles, leaving Winchester weakly defended. Hoping to overwhelm the force at Winchester, supposed to be two divisions, Sheridan formed his line on the bank of he Opequon river, which divided the ombatants. His troops were in motion the morning of Sept. 19, infantry ollowing close upon the heels of General James H. Wilson's cavalry, which ad charged and carried a Confederate edoubt at the head of a long defile bepre daylight.

Fortunately for Early, the whole forenoon was consumed by the Federal infantry in getting through the long defile which lay between their camp and the battleground, and, being warned by Wilson's attack that his foe was marching on Winchester, he hastily recalled the divisions of Generals John B. Gordon and Rodes from a distance to support the division of General Ramseur, which lay in the works at Winchester alone that morning. Thus by a margin of a couple of hours Sheridan lost the chance to smash the Winchester defenders.

After getting his infantry on the field Sheridan formed the Sixth and Nineteenth corps, under the leadership of General H. G. Wright and General W. H. Emory, in the front line, with General George Crook's corps of West Virginians in reserve. Shortly before noon the Sixth corps divisions, led by General J. B. Ricketts and General G. W. Getty, and General Grover's division of the Nineteenth corps dashed across the open space in front of Ramseur's batteries, which were screened by a strip of woods. Ricketts and Getty drove Ramseur's men at the first shock, but were soon met by the column of General Rodes, which had hurried to the support of Ramseur. Grover's division, which was to have taken Ramseur's line in the flank, ran into Gordon's column, Gordon, like Rodes, having brought his men to the battlefield in nick of time to rob Sheridan of an easy victory.

General Ramseur's division, supported by a battalion of artillery, was in position squarely across the pike along which Sheridan was getting to the field. The ground was elevated and protected on either flank by a creek. In his first clash with Gordon General Grover smashed Evans' brigade of Georgians, driving it through the woods, but this success temporarily broke up the Federal line. The Confederate batteries concentrated their fire upon the victors, and at the critical moment General Battle's brigade of Rodes' division charged pellmell through the scattered ranks of the Georgians, penetrating an interval between the Sixth and Nineteenth corps' lines. Instantly the remainder of Rodes' division and the whole of Gordon's rushed forward, driving both Getty and Grover back one mile to the ground where they had originally formed for the advance. Rodes was killed in this attack.

Meanwhile General Russell's division stood in reserve some distance behind the point of junction between the Sixth and Nineteenth corps. Sheridan rode up, and, calling on the First brigade, which happened to be that of the gallant Colonel Upton, sent it in, with fixed bayonets, to recover the lost ground. General Russell went forward with Upton's line, striking the flank of the enemy, and, aided by the guns of the Fifth Maine battery, which enfiladed the Confederates with canister, quickly turned the tide. The remainder of the division, following up, sent the enemy flying, and the ground lost was completely recovered. After seeing that the heavy volleys of Upton's men were checking the Confederate advance, General Russell turned back to direct the supporting brigades. He was already wounded by a bullet in the left breast, but gave no attention to it. While leading the new line to a crest that commanded the woods and fields where the enemy were retreating he was instantly killed by a piece of shell, which tore through his heart, and he fell from his saddle at the moment when his troops were cheering for victory. They had saved the day.

After Russell's triumph Early stood at bay, with his line facing east and north to cover Winchester. Sheridan brought up the reserve under Crook and attacked both sides at once. Gordon disputed the ground bravely north of the town, but the Federal cavalry divisions of General W. W. Averell and General Wesley Merritt swept down from the north on a mounted charge and broke through Gordon's line. This blow disrupted the whole of Early's line on the north of Winchester, and at the same time the troops of the Sixth and Nineteenth corps charged forward on the east front. At last Ramseur's line was broken and, with that of Rodes, was forced back to Winchester.

Early said that as soon as the firing of the cavalry and Crook's West Virginians was heard north of the town, on the Confederate left flank, he could no longer hold his troops for battle. Close to the town, however, there was an old and abandoned line of breastworks, which had been constructed in 1862, where the shattered Confederates found refuge, with batteries to bear upon the approaches. But again Sheridan's cavalry swept around the Confederate left, and after a stubborn but useless fight the entire force poured through Winchester in wild retreat toward Cedar creek, twenty miles up the valley.

Sheridan rode into Winchester and was piloted by General Crook to the house of his correspondent, Rebecca Wright. There he wrote the famous dispatch announcing his first triumph, saying that he had "sent Early whirling up the valley." The Federal loss was 5,000 men, and Early lost about 4,000. Four of Sheridan's generals, including the brave Upton, were wounded. On the Confederate side Fitz Lee was wounded at the head of his cavalry division.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

The Proper Age For Marriage

By Governor EDWIN WARFIELD Of Maryland

MY ADVICE TO GIRLS IS NOT TO MARRY TOO EARLY. IF ASKED THE AGE WHEN GIRLS SHOULD MARRY I SHOULD SAY FROM TWENTY-FOUR TO TWENTY-SIX.

Marriage for the purpose of settling a daughter in life is, as a rule, a failure and an unhappy one. No parent, and especially no true and loving mother, will wish to push her daughter into matrimony before she is fully matured and fitted for the grave responsibilities of married life. Girls just out of school are not equipped for the ordinary household duties of wives and for the cares and trials of motherhood.

THE GIRL WHO MARRIES TOO EARLY MISSES MANY OF THE PLEASURES OF LIFE. She is doomed to spend her youthful days in the trying and taxing cares of motherhood and household duties.

Such marriages are unfortunate. They are entered into without due consideration and frequently before the husband has fully established his business ability and the earning capacity that will enable him to provide for the increasing wants of married life. GIRLS SHOULD BE TAUGHT THAT THERE IS MORE IN LIFE THAN GETTING MARRIED; that when they leave school they owe some service to their parents, and that they should spend some of their days in making the lives of their fathers and mothers easier and brighter.

* * *

THE SAME ADVICE PERTAINS TO YOUNG MEN. I have known cases where young men, because they married too soon and before they had established themselves in permanent positions, were compelled to give up good opportunities for advancement because family ties and environments kept them down to one locality. The realization of the mistake of marrying too early has discouraged many a young man, blasted his future, brought disappointment to himself and deprivation and suffering to his family.

I BELIEVE IN MARRIAGE AND WOULD LIKE TO SEE EVERY MAN AND WOMAN MATED IN CONGENIAL COMPANIONSHIP FOR LIFE, BUT I AM OPPOSED TO EARLY AND THOUGHTLESS MARRIAGES.

The Man Is a Fool Who Lives In the Past

By Senator CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW

WE PASS THIS WAY BUT ONCE. We cannot retrace our steps to any preceding milestone. Every time the clock strikes it is both the announcement of the hour upon which we are entering and the knell of the one which is gone. EACH NIGHT MEMORY BALANCES THE BOOKS AND WE KNOW BEFORE WE SLEEP WHETHER THE RESULT IS ON THE RIGHT OR ON THE WRONG SIDE OF OUR ACCOUNT.

The older we grow the more we realize that life is worth the living. We think too little of the fun there is in it. WE ARE TOO PARSIMONIOUS OF LAUGHTER. We do not appreciate as we ought the man or the woman who can make us forget while we are amused. We cannot help the past and that man is a fool who lives in it. TODAY IS A BETTER DAY THAN YESTERDAY!

* * *

The secrets of happiness and longevity, in my judgment, are to cherish and cultivate cheerful, hopeful and buoyant spirits. If you haven't them, create them. Enjoy things as they are. The raggedest person I ever saw was a Turkish peasant standing in the field, clothed in bits of old carpet. But the combination of color made him a thing of beauty, if not a joy forever.

LET US NEVER LOSE OUR FAITH IN HUMAN NATURE, NO MATTER HOW OFTEN WE ARE DECEIVED. DO NOT LET THE DECEPTIONS DESTROY CONFIDENCE IN THE REAL, HONEST GOODNESS, GENEROSITY, HUMANITY AND FRIENDSHIP THAT EXIST IN THE WORLD. THEY ARE OVERWHELMINGLY IN THE MAJORITY.

When Wives Should Be Wage Earners

By Dr. SIMON N. PATTEN, Professor of Political Economy, University of Pennsylvania

THE whole social problem would be solved were the wife to become an income producer. Of course, I refer to the young married couples, where each before marriage is earning between $10 and $12 a week. I BELIEVE THAT EACH SHOULD CONTINUE A WAGE EARNER until the husband's income increases to at least $20, when the wife can add more to the utility of his money by withdrawing from the wage-producing class.

* * *

As the income from the man increases from $10 to $20 a week, that of the woman remains stationary at $10, and then, giving herself up to the home, they both can get better and more pleasure out of the husband's income. The social pressure on the woman is to force her from the employed classes. But from my point of view I SEE NO OBJECTION TO THE WIFE WORKING as long as it is to the better utilization of the income of the husband.

TO MY MIND, FROM AN ECONOMIC AND MORAL VIEWPOINT, IT IS DESIRABLE THAT PERSONS OF SMALL MONEY EARNING CAPACITY SHOULD BE MARRIED, PROVIDED BOTH CONTINUE WAGE EARNERS. MARRIAGE UNDER THESE CONDITIONS MERELY MEANS A MORAL, ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL UPLIFTING.

Mighty Good For Corn.

WHEN you get up in the morning
From your superheated couch
With a brain all hot and addled
And a temper full of grouch;
When you wander to your office with a dull and fishy eye
'Neath a sun that's gayly blazing like a furnace in the sky,
Oh, it's hot, but don't you mind it, though
you're wilted and forlorn;
It's a little tough for mortals, but it's mighty good for corn.

When you stagger home to dinner in a blinding glare of heat,
And you smell the burning leather of the shoes beneath your feet;
When your mouth is full of cotton and your collar's on the run,
And you bake and fry and frizzle like an oyster in the sun,
Don't cuss about the weather and don't mope about and mourn;
It's a little breath of hades, but it's mighty good for corn.

When you spend the humid evening full of anger and despair,
Chasing round with cots and pillows after cooling breaths of air;
When you're hot and damp and sticky and you think with mortal dread
Of that little hot air oven that surrounds
your waiting bed,
You may contemplate resigning from this torrid earth in scorn,
But you're foolish if you do it—this is bully for the corn.

—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

Nothing Growing.

The Girl—I guess you're mistaken, Willie. I can't see de least sign of a mustache.—New York American.

"Every Little Helps."

An exceedingly dilapidated member of the hobo fraternity came to a suburban home the other day and most politely asked for some breakfast. That meal had been finished an hour before and all remains cleared away, but his politeness was so impressive that the mistress of the house offered to get him a little something to eat.

A visit to the pantry revealed the fact that it was in much the same condition as was poor Mother Hubbard's cupboard. It was the day when the weekly supplies arrived, but they had not yet been delivered. The butter had been finished at breakfast, and only two slices of bread remained in the box. A sandwich of cold meat was made and taken to the door.

"I am sorry I have nothing more," said the benefactress, "but we are out of bread and butter too."

"Well, to be sure, it ain't very much," was the unexpected reply given most mournfully, "but I thank you, ma'am. It will keep the worm from eating me."—Philadelphia Press.

Caught.

"I bought a new raincoat yesterday."

"Yes?"

"My wife said I'd better wear it this morning, but the sun was shining, so I told her on such a day I wouldn't be caught with it on."

"Yes?"

"Well, you know it rained this noon."

"Yes?"

"And I was caught with it off."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

His Comment.

"This preacher," remarked Mrs. Snarle, "declares that he will never again marry a fool or an idiot."

"He'll starve to death then," commented Mr. Snarle, "if he depends on marriage fees for his living."—New Orleans Item.

Time's Changes.

"Is the story you have written a historic novel?"

"No," answered the litterateur in hard luck. "It's a modern novel now. But I guess it will be historic before I get it published."—Washington Star.

Neighborly.

"How much better Thompson's lawn looks than ours."

"I don't know why it should. He borrows my lawn mower and I borrow his hose, and we both use Simpson's roller."—Detroit Free Press.

Not the Kind She Wanted.

"He is one of nature's noblemen," said her father.

"Yes, that's all right," replied the lovely heiress, "but nature doesn't pass around any titles or fix up coats of arms."—Boston Globe.

Rehearsal.

The Monkey Comedian—What is Madam Hippo kicking about now?

The Stork Manager—She complains that the limelight isn't big enough. It only covers a part of her figure.—Puck.

In the Ring.

Patience—I see Peggy has broken another engagement, but she has kept the ring.

Patrice—Oh, yes; she's still in the ring.—Yonkers Statesman.

Literally.

"What's the most recent intelligence?"

"That of Jones. He has just recovered from an attack of insanity."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT NOV. 29, 1903.

SOUTHWARD No. 3 P. M.	SOUTHWARD No. 1 A. M.	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2 NOON	NORTHWARD No. 4 P. M.
3 15	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June	10 54	6 01
4 47	8 27	Barnum	10 36	5 45
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 19
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 15
6 00*	9 50† lv	Elk Garden	*8 10	*4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	†4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38*	10 27†	Thomas	*8 38	*3 53
7 10	10 55† ar	Davis	*8 05	*3 15
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 33	3 48
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 15†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	2 15
	NOON

No. 25 P. M.	No. 3 A. M.	No. 1 P. M.		No. 2 P. M.	No. 4 P. M.	No. 26 P. M.
3 30§	6 30†	2 30† lv	Elkins ar	*8 20	12 50	*9 15
3 45	6 47	3 47	R.C. Jct	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 51	2 51	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 57
4 01	7 04	3 04	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10§	7 15†	3 15 ar	Bel'g'n lv	*7 35	11 45†	*8 35
					A. M.

P. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.
*8 30	12 35† lv	Elkins ar	*9 55	*2 00
8 46	12 52	Beverly	9 39	1 44
9 10*	1 15† ar	Hutt'e ar	*9 15	1 20

No 1 27. A. M.			No. 28. P. M.
8 00*	lv	Elkins	ar †4 45
8 58		Fishing Hawk	3 46
9 22		Glady	3 22
10 08		Burner	2 37
10 30*	ar	Durbin	lv *2 15
A. M.			P. M.

† Daily * Daily except Sunday. § Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily ..... 1.54 A. M
No. 3—Daily ..... 7.17 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday ..... 9.26 A. M
No. 55—Daily ..... 4.53 P. M
No. 1—Daily ..... 10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily ..... 12.27 A. M
No. *8—Daily ..... 6.04 A. M
No. 2—Daily ..... 6.31 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun ..... 5.12 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily ..... 4.34 P. M
No. 12—Daily ..... 8.32 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN, Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

THE Percheron Stallion

BLACK BRILLIANT

Will stand for the season of 1904 as follows:

Monday and Tuesday of each week at the Stable of P. F. Mellinger, Beckman.
Balance of week at the Stable of Amos H. Reckner, near Bittinger.

BLACK BRILLIANT is registered in the Percheron Stud-book of America, his number being 19238.

He is black with a few white hairs on forehead.

PEDIGREE:—Foaled May 22, 1895; bred and owned by Bond Bros. of Sugar Hill, Pa.; got by Fra Diavolo 10382, he by Fra Diavolo 5717 (2989), he by Brilliant 710, he by Brilliant 1899 (756), he by Coco II. (714), he by Vieux-Chasiln (513), he by Coco (712) he by Mignon (715), he by Jean-le-Blanc 730. Dam, Flora 18610 by Black Prince 1609.

Terms:—For Insurance, $10; $15 ten days on foot.

- 2m AMOS H. RECKNER & CO

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD

CHEAP EXCERSIONS

TO THE

St. Louis World's Fair

EVERY WEDNESDAY IN

AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.

Only $14.50 Round Trip from OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Beware of Counterfeits. Refuse all Substitutes.

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.
2100 Madison Square, PHILA., PA.
Mention this paper.

COAL.

I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of

Bituminous Coal,

mined from my mine west of town.

Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.

Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be promptly filled.

E. Z. TOWER.

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

THE

SECOND NATIONAL BANK

of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital	$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits	250,000
Liability of Shareholders	100,000
Additional Security to Depositors	$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE"

TO THE

World's Fair, ST. LOUIS.

Three Through Trains Daily,

Vestibuled Throughout With Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars VIA CINCINNATI.

Season, Sixty-Day and Fifteen-Day

Excursion Tickets ON SALE.

Cheap Coach Excursions

Every Tuesday in June AT

Very Low Rates.

Ask ticket agents for Descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information.

When Young Archibald Was Roused

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis

"He is too lazy even to flirt with me!"

It was Miss Hattie Graham, U. S. A., traveling with her father in the east and just at that time at a hotel in Smyrna, who spoke the above words with contempt in every inflection. Six weeks previously they had met young Archibald Weston, son of Sir Wallace Weston, who was also traveling, or, rather, dawdling, over the country. He had been friendly for an Englishman; but, although David Graham was a millionaire and entitled to "Hon." before his name and Miss Hattie was under twenty, handsome, vivacious and an heiress, there hadn't been the slightest attempt even at a flirtation. Young Weston was a good looking fellow of twenty-four and not at all a cad, but it was too much trouble for him to flirt or make love. He was languid, he was lethargic, he was a droner and a dreamer. He would reply, "Aw, yes," and "Aw, no," and now and then "doncher knaw," but he would sooner listen than talk and sooner sit in a deck chair, with a pipe in his mouth, and gaze at the moon or at the clouds than to promenade the deck with one of the best looking girls he had ever seen. He said she was, but he said so to himself and yawned after saying it.

Miss Graham was not flinging herself at any man's head, and she wasn't dying for a flirtation, but it was a new thing in her experience to find a man bored with her presence. She could see many good points in the Englishman, but on the whole she had a feeling of contempt and showed it plainly. He on his part took no pains to conceal the fact that he didn't care much what her opinion was. One night while steaming among the islands she was in the mood to speak her mind.

"Mr. Weston, you are young, rich and in good health, and you ought to be making a mark in the world for yourself. Instead of that you are a drone in the hive. Even to live from day to day seems to bore you. Do you think it possible that even an earthquake would arouse you from your morbid indifference for ten minutes?"

HE DELIBERATELY HURLED THE STICK AGAINST AT THE BIG ROCK.

"Bah Jove, Miss Graham, but I couldn't really say, doncher knaw," he drawled in reply, thus making the longest speech she had ever heard from his lips.

It happened that young Weston's route was the same as the Grahams', but he did not reach Smyrna with them. He overslept at the hotel at Bondroun and missed the steamer and "happened" to catch one three days later. His arrival at the hotel at last had been carelessly announced to Miss Hattie by her father and had called forth the remark befitting the man and the occasion.

"No, not much hustle to him," replied the father as he looked in a disgusted way at his ill tasting cigar.

"Hustle!" exclaimed the girl. "Why, I'll wager that if he stays in Smyrna for a week he won't move a hundred feet from the hotel. I wish I could bribe a boy to explode a cannon firecracker under his chair."

Had she wagered she would have lost. Three days later, when father and daughter drove out to the foothills of the mountain range to the east to see the tomb of Xerxes or somebody else of equal renown, they were followed in a second carriage by young Weston. True, the scenery had no interest for him, and the flies permitted him to dose most of the way, but he actually got out of the carriage when the tomb was reached and put up his eyeglass to study the epitaph. He did more. He got a lunch basket and a bottle of champagne from his carriage and with a great effort forced himself to say:

"Now then, doncher knaw, luncheon goes with this."

So did something else—something not put up at the hotel and brought along. The three were picking at the luncheon when four Turkish brigands, who had the necessary amount of fleas, dirt and rags to render them romantic, came out of the bushes and made the scoop of the season, two millionaires and a good looking girl and not a shot fired nor a hand raised. The vehicles drove off with a great clatter to give the victims the impression that the drivers feared for their lives or liberty, and the captives were ordered to get up and walk. It was all very sudden, and the outlook was a bad one, but instead of hysterics Miss Hattie gave her attention to young Weston. Here was something that ought to arouse him and make good the record of his race, but he was not aroused—that is, he was only aroused enough to remark:

"They might have waited till we had finished our luncheon, bah Jove, but I suppose we'll have to go along with them."

And go they did. Mr. Graham fretted that he had not been prepared for the fellows, but young Weston was undisturbed. Even the brigands, who had gobbled up all sorts and conditions of men before, winked at each other and wondered what sort of fish they had landed this time. We all know how brigands work their rackets. They are out for the money and do not ill treat their captives. A walk of ten miles brought them to a wretched camp among the rocks and trees, and the captured were made as comfortable as circumstances would permit. The cooking was rude, the fleas plentiful and the demeanor of the brigands anything but high toned, and after a wretched night a palaver was called. The captives couldn't speak the Turkish language, and the brigands couldn't speak the English, but in an hour or two a satisfactory conclusion had been arrived at. It was to be $50,000 for the girl, the same for her father and a like sum for young Weston, all rated A1 and no discount for age, sex or previous condition. Letters were written to the American and English consuls in the city, and as the money could be easily raised it looked as if the captives would be restored after four or five days' detention.

On the second morning of their stay a peasant boy came into camp with a strange burden—strange to him and to the brigands. The contents of the basket were sticks of dynamite, which had in some way been lost on their journey to a marble quarry three or four miles away. The boy had brought his find to be examined and perhaps purchased, but as the brigands knew nothing of the stuff they had no use for it. The four sat around the morning campfire and handled the sticks and wondered over them, and strolling down that way from the huts on higher ground young Weston saw and recognized the dangerous explosive. Not only that, but he took a stick in his hand and sauntered back and said to Mr. Graham:

"Bah Jove, but I've an idea. You and Miss Graham keep within doors for a few minutes."

He turned away before he could be questioned, and walking back to within twenty feet of the fire he deliberately hurled the stick against the big rock at the brigands' backs. There was a flash, a roar, an earthquake, and a quarter of an hour later the dawdling young man opened his eyes to find Graham and his daughter bending over him. He had been hurled a hundred feet, but was only bruised.

"It must have gone off, doncher knaw," he said as he sat up.

"Yes, it did," replied Graham. "If you meant to wipe those brigands off the face of the earth you've done it, and we all came near going to."

"Bah Jo[illegible]"

"Well, M[illegible] Weston, you have experienced an earthquake," said Miss Hattie, "and can you tell me whether it actually roused you out of yourself?"

"It may have, Miss Graham—it may have, but I'll think the thing over after getting back to town and let you knaw, doncher knaw!"

Stage Drivers of Early Days.

Speaking of stage drivers reminds one of the glory of stages, which reached its crowning point when rival lines ran between Sacramento and Virginia City—six magnificent horses to each coach, the coaches the finest possible, the horses caparisoned with every ornament which could be added to enhance their beauty.

The driver, in a bearskin coat and cap, with bearskin gauntlets, was a sovereign in his way. No matter what the grade was, no matter how fierce the blizzard or how deep the snow, he carried things through on schedule time. He cared nothing for snowslides or high water, and his ruling idea was that he must make the station ahead of the opposition line.

In this work there were a dozen men, each with a personality of his own and all with a perfect art in their hands and their brains which made them sovereigns, and the locomotive that succeeded them did not very much increase the time which some of them made. Each had his friends, his champions; each was greatest in his sphere among a certain crowd, but they were altogether great. The like of them was never before and never will be again.—Salt Lake Tribune.

The Kaiser In the German States.

Outside Prussia, his own kingdom, the kaiser is, strictly speaking, a foreigner. Should he visit Hamburg he is a foreign guest of the burgomaster, who rules Hamburg as a monarch and is reckoned with the sovereigns of the German states. Similarly whenever the kaiser visits the courts of his allied sovereigns of Bavaria, Wurttemberg, Saxony and so on he is a guest, not a proprietor. His relations with these kings are only those of a chairman toward his fellow directors.

The kaiser only has free entree to the other states in his capacity of commander of the army, and he is able to travel anywhere as a general, but not in Bavaria, where he holds no such command. Bavaria is therefore to all intents and purposes foreign soil to the emperor, though it is included in the German empire.

Supervisors' Notice of APPOINTMENT OF Judges & Clerks Of Election.

OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., AUG. 13, 1904.

The Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Judges and Clerks of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland for the year 1896, hereby give notice of the names and post-office address of each person so selected as Judges and Clerks, and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Elections intendes each of said persons to represent, respectively.

The law make it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be preferred to them in writing against any person so selected and to remove any such person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable to discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

Frank Sharpless, Democrat, Judge of Election, Swanton; Sheridan Stottlemeyer, Republican, Judge of Election, Beckman.

Sames L. McRoble, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Swanton; Alfred B. Mason, Republican, Clerk of Election, Beckman.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

Milford E. Frazee, Democrat, Judge of Election, Friendsville; Selathial Savage, Republican, Judge of Election, Friendsville.

Jos. E. Friend, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Kendall; Burbridge Thomas, Republican, Clerk of Election, Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

Leonard B. Kurtz, Democrat, Judge of Election, Grantsville; Gust Durst, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville.

Lewellyn Blocher, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Grantsville; Henry Latham, Republican, Clerk of Election, Keyser.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

Edwin Fazenbaker, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bloomington; Henry Barnard, Republican, Judge of Election, Bloomington.

Wm. Moorehead, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bloomington; Floyd Duckworth, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

Josiah Smearman, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; A. P. Enlow, Republican, Judge of Election, Hoyes.

Clarence Diehl, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Accident; M. H. Lohr, Republican, Clerk of Election, Cove.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

J. T. Weimer, Democrat, Judge of Election, McHenry; M. H. Frankhouser, Republican, Judge of Election, Cranesville, W. Va.

Wm. J. Bowman, Democrat, Clerk of Election, McHenry; Frank Glotfelty, Republican, Clerk of Election, McHenry.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

Jos. H. Smithman, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Jas. O. Cleveland, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

A. Y. Hinebaugh Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; W. S. Friend, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

D. H. Ridder, Democrat, Judge of Election, Gortner; Jas. Aronholt, Republican, Judge of Election, Wilson, Grant county, W. Va.

J. A. Shaffer, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Gortner; Geo. W. Harvey, Republican, Clerk of Election, Gormania, W. Va.

Election District Number Nine—Johnsons.

Patrick Hoye, Democrat, Judge of Election, Frostburg; Thomas Layman, Republican, Judge of Election, Frostburg, Allegany county.

Floyd Crowe, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Frostburg, Allegany county; Jas. R. McKenzie, Republican, Clerk of Election, Frostburg, Allegany county.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

Emil F. Droege, Democrat, Judge of Election, Deer Park; Isaac A. Paugh, Republican, Judge of Election, Deer Park.

Michael J. Garrett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Deer Park; J. B. Shockey, Republican, Clerk of Election, Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

Albin Fazenbaker, Democrat, Judge of Election, Barton; Salem V. Broadwater, Republican, Judge of Election, Merrill.

David Warnick, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Barton; David P. Hansell, Republican, Clerk of Election, Lonaconing.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

Jas. Harrison, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bond; Dennis Dietrich, Republican, Judge of Election, Bittinger.

Oliver Buckle, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bittinger; Edward S. Brenneman, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

C. H. Pool, Democrat, Judge of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.; Robert C. Wilson, Republican, Judge of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.

George J. Pool, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.; Burt Wilson, Republican, Clerk of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.

Eliction District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

Daniel A. Vaughn, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Jos. T. Glotfelty, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

J. O. Browning, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; Samuel Lawton, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

EDMUND JAMISON, Pres.,
C. M. MILLER,
E. E. SOLLARS,

Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett County, Md.

CHAS. A. DEFFINBAUGH, Clerk.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroal now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later thsn December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett County, to view the lands through whice the proposed new road is to be located, said road to be located in election district No. 4, beginning at or near the old mill race bridge on the Bloomington and Westernport road and running thence northwest through the lands of the Davis Coal & Coke Co., and to intersect the Michaels and Westernport road at a point known as Kight's water trough, and to discontinue the old road, the distance of the proposed relocation being about one mile, and examine whether the said proposed road should be relocated, will meet on the 10th day of September, 1904, for the purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said proposed location of said public road, and if so, to locate the same, and perform their duty in the premises.

MARCUS M. FAZENBAKER,
GEORGE T. MILLER,
THOMAS BURKE,
Examiners.

NOTICE.

The undersigned hereby gives notice to the general public not to trust or harbor my wife, Mary Ann Bittner, who left my bed and board without just cause or provocation, nor my three minor children, who accompanied her, they being Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, as I will not be responsible for any debts she, the said Mary Ann Bittner, nor they, the said Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, may contract in my name.

JEREMIAH BITTNER.
Friendsville, Md., August 5th, 1904. 2-3t

ROAD PETITION.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first insertion of this notice in one of the county papers of Garrett county, application will be made by the undersigned to the County Commissioners of said Garrett county for the appointment of viewers to view and lay out a public county road beginning at or near Forty Water Station on the B. & O. R. R., in District No. 1, and running thence through the lands of Thomas Nines, C. H. Sweitzer, Levi Sweitzer, Frank Sweitzer, Jerry Sweitzer, Simon Sweitzer and others, and to intersect the County road leading from Swanton to Beckman at or near the top of the hill near the place of J. D. Ashenfelter, a distance of about one mile.

CHAS. H. SWEITZER,
A. F. SWEITRER, SR.,
C. E. SWEITZER,
BENJAMIN SWEITZER, JR.

Proposals for Building Sidewalks

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, for the erection of a sidewalk fronting the opera house block in Oakland, beginning at the corner of Green and Second streets and ending at the north property line of H. Lauer and extending from the property line along said block to the wood curbing.

Proposals will also be received for the erection of a walk from Second street to Railroad street walk.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the store of D. E. Bolden & Co., Second street, Oakland.

Proposals must be on file with the clerk of said Mayor and Council not later than six o'clock August 15th, 1904, and endorsed on the back "Proposal for erecting sidewalks."

By order of the Mayor and Council of Oakland.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,

Plumbing, Gas Fitting, Steam and Hot Water Heating.

Center Street, Keyser, W. Va.

PHONE 62.

ONLY $4.00 TO WASHINGTON AND RETURN,

ONLY $4.00 TO BALTIMORE AND RETURN,

Saturday Night, August 20th, via BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD,

Special train will leave OAKLAND at 12.00 night, affording an opportunity to spend all day Sunday among the attractions of either the Capital or Monumental City.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

REAL ESTATE

In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity, and paseed in a cause in said Court standing as No. 1235 Equity wherein David Sloan is plaintiff and Jefferson S. Green is defendant, the undersigned Trustee was duly authorized to make sale of the real estate mentioned, and I hereby give notice that on

MONDAY,

The 5th Day of September 1904

at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M., in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, I will offer at public auction to the highest bidder all the following described real estate situate, lying and being in Election District No. 11 of Garrett county, State of Maryland, aforesaid:

All that lot, piece or parcel of ground known as in the sub-division of a tract of land called "Lochiel," and described as follows:

Lot No. 11

Beginning for the same at a stone pile standing at the end of 83 perches on the sixty seventh line of "Lochiel," said line being also the given line of a tract of land called "Savage Ridge," and running thence North 56½ degrees West, 76 perches to a bounded white oak tree standing on the west side of the Frostburg road, North 65½ degrees West, 114 8-10 perches to the middle of the Savage River, then down and with the meanders of said river South 36½ degrees West, 9 perches, South 2½ degrees West, 6½ perches, South 39½ degrees West, 26 perches, South 30½ degrees West, 19 perches, South 26½ degrees West, 21 perches, South 67½ degrees West, 30 perches, North 67 degrees West, 28 perches, South 32½ degrees West, 27 perches, South 14½ degrees East, 39 perches, South 34 degrees East, 30 perches, then leaving the river and running thence South 89 degrees East, 107 perches to a stake and stone pile on the North side of the Lonaconing road, then South 85 degrees East, 10 perches to the middle of the forks of the Lonaconing and Frostburg roads, then with said Lonaconing road South 6½ degrees East 19 perches, South 17 degrees East, 12 perches, South 4 degrees West, 10 perches, South 12 degrees West, 20 perches, then South 56½ degrees East, 41½ perches so a stone pile in the sixty-seventh line of "Lochiel," and with part of said line reversed North 33½ degrees East, 177 perches to the beginning, containing more or less, it being the same property which was conveyed by Thomas E. Green and wife to Jefferson S. Green by deed dated the 17th day of August, 1895, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 22, folios 245, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, Maryland.

Two Hundred and One-Fourth Acres,

Terms of Sale, as prescribed by the decree—Cash on day of sale.

Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
Trustee.

The Keyser Preparatory Branch
OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.
A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.
Special Instruction for public School Teachers.
Instruction in Music.
A Splendid New Building Provided.
State.
A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.
Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.
No Tuition in Commercial Department.
Small Tuition Charged Students from other States.
Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.
Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.
For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal,

L. L. FRIEND,
Keyser, W. Va.

The Maryland Agricultural College
COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY.
THREE COURCES OF INSTRUCTION.
AGRICULTURAL, MECHANICAL, SCIENTIFIC.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements: bath-rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.
New buildings with every modern improvement, and old buildings thoroughly renovated by opening of first session. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, with annual deposit, ($159) one hundred and fifty nine dollars, for scholastic year. Daily visit by physician to College. Catalog giving full particulars sent on application. Attention is called to the Short Course of ten weeks in Agriculture. Write for particulars.
Term Commences, Thursday, September, 15.
Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Maryland.

The Maryland School for the Deaf,
37TH SESSION.

Reopens September 14th, 1904.

Non-Sectarian. For the deaf and dumb and those whose hearing is too defective for attendance on public school. Speech and lip-reading taught, as well as grammar school and academic studies.

Location very healthful. Board and Tuition free to residents of Maryland.

Apply to
CHAS. W. ELY, Principal,
Frederick, Md.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. CO.

TO THE

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS BIENNIAL ENCAMPMENT,

LOUISVILLE, KY.

VERY LOW RATE

For the Round Trip.

TICKETS ON SALE August 12, 13, 14, 15,

good returning leaving Louisville not later than August 31st, 1904.

Stop-overs allowed at specified points in each direction.

Get details from Ticket Agent.

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.

Office and residence, Alder St., east of post office.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, AUGUST 25, 1904. NUMBER 25

AT OFFUTT'S.

For one Week from Aug. 20th to Aug. 27th.

1 Lot—1,000 yds. Calico, 4c yd.

1 Lot—500 yds. Apron Ginghams, 4c. yd.

Just Opened==

Our Fall Line Men's Clothing, the Nobbiest and Latest Styles and Shapes. All the Latest Fancies, and Full Lines Black Goods, at the LOWEST PRICES.

Anything in Hammocks, Crouquet Sets, Swings and Mattings and all Summer Goods at COST.

OFFUTT'S.

AUGUST MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Issued by Clerk Tower from August 1st to Present Time.

Lee Earl Butcher and Alma L. Hall, both of Lewis county, W. Va.

Samuel Arthur Felton, of Corinth, and Annie Laura Schnopp, of Terra Alta, W. Va.

Edward Pritts and Cordelia Broadwater, both of Garrett county.

Clay Calder Hamrick and Minnie Shanabarger, both of Adamston, W. Va.

Thomas Joseph Miller and Mollie Minnick, both of Edinburg, Va.

Henry Cleveland Endler and Gertie Lee Shrout, both of Garrett county.

David Elmer Ferguson, of Westmoreland county, Pa., and Annie L. Ferguson, of Garrett county.

Parley Diehl and Catharine Victoria Pysell, both of Garrett county.

Calvin Henry Tarleton, of Watson, W. Va., and Mary Cordelia Schell, of Garrett county.

Walter Hiram Meyers, of Markleysburg, Pa., and Fanny Frazee, of Garrett county.

Benjamin Upperman, of Oakland, and Bertha Buckalew, of Tunnelton, W. Va.

Franklin Morton Gooding and Eliza Young, both of Marietta, O.

Thomas Henry McKinney and Alice Smith, both of West Union, W. Va.

Frank Gaylord Lowther, of Grafton, and Mary Veronica Laffey, of Frankville, Md.

Cecil James Fessler and Emma May Thrash, both of Clarksburg, W. Va.

Henry King and Cladda Cochran, both of Marion county, W. Va.

Austin Smith Wilson and Gertrude Lenore Wright, both of Marion county West Va.

John S. Gnegy and Clara Virginia Englehart, both of Garrett county.

John Sholes and Nancy Boyess, both Braxton county, W. Va.

Gustavus Robert Wilson and Goldie Wil[illegible], both of Bloomington, Md.

Edward J. Taylor, of Mineral county, W. Va., and Christina Snider Conell, of Hutton.

Elmer J. Fizer and Nora Eretta Craig, both of Kingwood, W. Va.

Isaac E. Lewis and Clara Rebecca Sn[illegible] both of Garrett county.

Thomas Leo Moore and Mary Lillian Cleavenger, both of Fairmont, W. Va.

Luty Marion Ward and Bessie Westfall, both of Upshur county, W. Va.

Eugene Ord Garlitz and Florence Anna Sommers, both of Marion county, West Va.

Benj. L. Knight and Nina May Hyer, both of braxton county, W. Va.

Wid Stier and Sela Lindsay, both of Harrison county, W. Va.

WITH HIS THROAT CUT

Peter Fernandes, a Swede, Found at the Lee Farm West of Oakland.

Tuesday Messrs. Samuel B. Lee and John Harned, residing on the Davis farm west of Oakland near Hutton, found Peter Fernandes, a Swede, lying in the woods on the farm with three severe and dangerous cuts across his throat, which evidently had been self-inflicted two or three days prior.

When found the man was perfectly conscious and stated that he had been in the woods two days in the condition in which he was discovered and declared that he had been assaulted by two or three men who after inflicting his wounds robbed him of three dollars and left him. He then wandered from the spot where the alleged assault had been committed to the Davis farm. He had on neither coat, hat or shoes and was weak owing to the fact of having lost so much blood and nothing to eat.

He was brought to Oakland by Messrs. Lee and Harned and taken to the jail where he is being treated by Dr. Ravenscraft the health officer, and is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances now existing at the jail, which contains twenty-three prisoners when there are comfortable accommodations for less than half that number.

Married.

TAYLOR—CONNELL.—At the home of the bride's mother at Hutton, Maryland, Tuesday afternoon, in the presence of a few immediate relatives of the family, by Rev. S. M. Miller, former pastor of the Oakland Presbyterian church, Mr. Edward Johnson Taylor and Miss Christina Connell, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Connell. The groom is a prosperous business man of Century, W. Va., while the bride is one of Garrett county's most amiable ladies. After the ceremony the couple went east on train No. 46. They will be at home to their friends at Century after September 20th.

GNAGY—ENGLEHART—Yesterday morning at 11 o'clock in the Lutheran church at Accident in the presence of a large concourse of friends by Rev. George A. Royer, Mr. John S. Gnagy, of near the Red House, to Miss Clara Virginia Englehart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Englehart, of Accident. The bride and groom are both well known teachers in the public schools of Garrett county and will reside near Oakland in the future.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

GRAND ARMY DAY AT THE PARK.

Next Monday Will Witness Close of the Season of 1904.

LECTURE PRINCES WILL BE THERE

Jahu DeWitt Miller and Capt. Jack Crawford—A Magnificent Entertainment At Night—Fire Works at the Lake.

Next Monday, August 29th, will be the final day for the Mouatain Chautauqua for the season of 1904, which day is given over entirely to the Grand Army of the Republic.

The program for the day is one that will be pleasing to people in all walks of life, touching, as it will, upon many topics, foremost of which will be the lecture by Jahu DeWitt Miller, entitled "Our Country," which will be delivered in the great auditorium at 11 o'clock. Mr. Miller has been one of the lecturers at the Park every year for more than twenty consecutive seasons and has always been received by crowds of admiring listeners. He is the most popular lecturer on the American platform today.

At two o'clock in the afternoon a concert of war songs, with orchestral numbers, by the Royal Hungarian Orchestra will be the feature, followed at 2.30 by an hour of mimicry and poetry by Capt. Jack Crawford, the Poet-Scout of the Western plains. Capt. "Jack" will relate many wild and thrilling experiences in many battles of the West and South. He is a picturesque character and when upon the lecture platform is attired in his garb of buckskin and "guns." He has a National reputation as a poet and is a superb orator.

At half past four o'clock the annual camp fire of the old soldiers will take place and a good time is anticipated by the "boys" of both the blue and gray.

In the evening at seven o'clock the grand farewell entertainment will occur. For this hour Rosani, the incomparable juggler, has been engaged, who will perform some of the most astounding feats. Others upon the platform during the evening will be the famour Williamson Sisters Quartette, Dr. Pontius and chorus and the Hungarian orchestra.

The fireworks will be put off at the lake at nine o'clock and the grounds will be beautifully decorated and illuminated upon the occasion.

Special excursion trains will be run for the occasion from both east and west and all who can should take advantage of the low rates and visit the Park on that day. They will be amply repaid by their visit.

Monday, September 12th, will be Maryland Day, and Wednesday, September 14th, will be Louisiana Purchase Day at the World's Fair, and for these occasions the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will sell excursion tickets on Saturday, September 10th, good in coaches only and valid leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale. Round Trip only $14.50 from Oakland. Ask ticket agent for time of trains and full information.

Call for Your Letters

Mrs. A. B. Means, Miss Annie Chambers, Mr. S. A. Dunham, Wm. Root, Louis Raub, Alexander McMullen, Charlie Allen, May Kimmell.

Subscribe for The Republican.

PROF. J. FRANK M'BEE CHOSEN PRINCIPAL

Of the Oakland Public Schools—He is a Native of Baltimore.

COMES HIGHLY RECOMMENDED.

As An Excellent Educator—Is a Graduate of Randolph—Macon College and of Maryland State Normal.

Monday the trustees of the Oakland public schools, Messrs. Joseph E. Harned, Daniel Hinebaugh and John W. Hart, met and after considering a number of applications for the principalship of the school here, decided to employ Prof. J. Frank McBee, of Baltimore, until recently principal of the Centreville High School, at Centreville, Md., which position he held for two years, recently resigning.

Before deciding to employ Prof. McBee the trustees here made a thorough investigation of his qualifications and the many letters received from merchants, bankers and business men generally of Centreville in answer to the inquiries of the board spoke with one accord of his ability as an organizer, educator, scholar and gentleman.

Prof. McBee was born in Baltimore and is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College, Va., and also of the Maryland State Normal School in Baltimore. Two years ago he took charge of the Centreville High School and "by his ability, industry, and love of profession," one of the business men of Centreville writes, "he has brought the school from a low level to a high plane."

From a recent issue of the Centreville Record, the following is clipped concerning Prof. McBee:

"The commencement exercises of the Centreville High School will take place next week and the showing is a credit to the principal, Prof. McBee, the faculty and the county. The six young ladies of the graduating class of 1904, show averages seldom obtained where the curriculum is so varied and where the contestants for the honors were equally ambitious.

"It is the intention of a majority of the young ladies to teach school and their high averages in their numerous studies show they are qualified.

"They are better qualified than if they held a certificate from the State Normal School and about as well qualified as graduates of that institution. If our local educational institutions can prepare teachers and young ladies and gentlemen of the county can be found who have the ambition, grit, perseverance and ability to make the effort and win out, there is no just reason why the county school board should not give them a school over applicants out of the county.

"As we understand it one of the objects in building the high school was to give the local ambitious, worthy young ladies and gentlemen an opportunity to prepare for teaching or for college, where their financial condition would not permit them to make such preparations from home. This was intimated to Prof. J. Frank McBee when he took charge of the institution and he has faithfully labored to carry out the plans and purposes of the county school board and the patrons of the high school.

"We have not learned positively whether or not Prof. McBee desires to continue at the head of the High School for the ensuing year. If he does and will accept the appointment there are a good many reasons for retaining him. He is popular with the faculty, scholars and the people generally, and all admit that he has by his labor and signal ability as an instructor and organizer of youth placed the Centreville High School on a plane equaled by few and not surpassed by any in the State."

G.A.R. DAY.

Last Excursion of the Season to Mountain Lake Park and Its Splendid Chautauqua.

Monday, Aug. 29th, 1904.

Lecture: "Our Country," JAHU DE WITT MILLER,
The most popular lecturer on the American Platform.

Concert of War Songs, with orchestral numbers, by the ROYAL HUNGARIAN ORCHESTRA.

An hour of Humor, Mimicry and Poetry, with CAPTAIN JACK CRAWFORD, the Poet-Scout. Wild and thrilling experiences in many Battles West and South. The most picturesque character on the American platform. Dresses in his western garb.

At Night special engagement of ROSANI, the famous Juggler; Williamson Sisters Quartette; Vocal and Violin Solos and Great Chorus in Cantata, winding up the night with a .....MARVELOUS DISPLAY OF FIREWORKS......

Your Fall Clothing.

THE KAHN-FEINBERG CO., 650 Broadway, New York, whose line of samples was shown at our store on Monday and Tuesday, August 22nd and 23rd.

Will be on Exhibition during the Balance of the Fall and Winter.

You know the character of their work; if not, it will pay you to learn it.

500 patterns of Suitings, Trouserings and Overcoatings to select from. Perfect fit guaranteed. The Newest and Richest Foreign and Domestic Fabrics.

H. L. DAUGHERTY, Oakland, Md.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

Great Bargains at Sincell's.

We Want You to See Them.

"Vast" begins to describe them—but doesn't even suggest the variety—the quality—value so conspicuously present in them all.

You must simply see them for yourself to realize the size and magnificence of our shirt waists which we are offering at 98 cents. They are winners and we have about ten dozens, all sizes, from 32 to 44. We invite you to call and look at them whether you care to buy or not.

Our Clotning Department,

In the careful choice of our selection lies much of its value to the buyer.

Constant touch with the centers of manufactnre and a carefully gleaned knowledge of what Fashion demands—these little things make our stocks strong.

The choicest line we have ever had to offer in Clothing we have now on display at prices astonishingly low. The prices in the ready-mades run from $4.50 to $18.00; made-to-measure $15 to $50

Come and See for Yourself.

The very newest styles in

Women's Tailor-Made Suits
One-Third Off.

We must close up our stock and offer

Great Bargains
To the Public.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

MOUNTAIN TIMBER LANDS.

New Railroad for Garrett County—State's Interests Involved.

The Manufacturers Record of Baltimore in its current issue says:

"With reference to a report that its lumber railroad would be extended to Parsons, W. Va., the Preston Lumber & Coal Co., of Oakland, Md., writes the Manufacturers' Record as follows:

"We are now constructing a 12 mile extension from Crellin, Md., to the head waters of the Youghiogheny river. Our junction point with the Baltimore & Ohio is Hutton, Garrett county, Maryland. This line of tract extends through Garrett county, Maryland, into Preston county, West Virginia. We do not contemplate extending this line of track to connect with the West Virginia Central at Parsons, although the same is not impossible.

"We own a considerable body of timber land on the west slope of Backbone mountain and Horseshoe run, a tributary of Cheat river. This road will eventually be extended as our timber operations warrant. We will build this line ourselves, and there will be no opening of bids for construction and for the furnishing of equipment, etc. We have about all the rolling stock needed for the present and will order supplies, tools, etc., as needed.

LOST—A note date Sept. 15th, 1903, drawn by F. M. Fogle to The Rowlesburg Improvement and Development Company, payable on or before Sept. 10th, 1904, for two hunderd and fifty dollars, with interest. All parties are warned not to negotiate said note, some having been paid.

THE ROWLESBURG IMPOVEMENT AND
2t DEVELOPMENT COMPANY.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

TWO SOWERS

Behold our Uncle Samuel had a big field to sow; whereupon he sent forth into the field one Grover whose surname was Cleveland to do the sowing. And Grover straightway sowed the field with the seeds of Free-Trade, with a remarkable crop resulting.

For in due season the field was white unto harvest with a mighty yield of bond issue in a time of peace, idle factories, tramping laborers, Coxey armies, ragged breeches, shanghai shadow soup and poor prices everywhere.

Then arose Uncle Samuel in the midst of his wrath and spoke unto the sower saying:

Grover git. Depart unto the dungeons of political darkness. Hie thee away to the shimmering waters of Buzzards Bay, there to follow the gentle craft of Sir Isaac. Go quickly, ere I dash my No. 13 into the midst of thy rear rotundency. And Grover went away sorrowful, for he had hopes of great riches—and a third term.

Then Uncle Samuel opened his mouth again, and said: Son William whose surname was McKinley, sow in my field this year. And William went straightway and sowed in the very same field, but he had good seed to wit: Protection, Sound Money, and Such.

Again the field brought forth abundantly, but this time it was an overflowing Treasury, busy factories, employed labor at increased wages, clothed, fed and well paid people and good pay for all prodnce.

Then was Uncle Samuel made much glad, and he smiled a smile of great joy, and said: "I will have this seed sown in my field forever more."

And all the people were well pleased, and shouted with a great shout, saying: Let this be true.

OF INTEREST TO FRUIT GROWERS

Precautionary Measures Are Adopted by State Agricultural Department.

The following communication from the departments of entomology and vegetable pathology of the Maryland Agricultural College is self explanatory:

"As the season is at hand when the officers of the State Horticultural Department conduct the annual inspection of nurseries in the State as required by laws of Maryland 1898, Chapter 289, we wish to announce to the public that it is necessary for everyone who wishes to sell either trees, vines, shrubs, plants, etc., in this or any other state to have their premises inspected by the State Entomologist and the State Pathologist, and secure a certificate from the above mentioned officers, if the inspection is satisfactory, certifying that said inspected stock is apparently free from injurious insects and plant diseases. Such certificates should be attached to every consignment of either trees, vines, shrubs, plants, etc., in order that the consignee may not violate the before mentioned law.

"The inspection of nurseries is of great importance both to the nurserymen and the growers; to the former, in that a rigid inspection of his stock will reveal any injurious pests which may have recently commenced their ravages, thereby giving him an opportunity to control the same before their depredations are serious. Further, having the stock inspected by specialists enables him to give a greater assurance to the public that his stock is clean and healthy. The official certificate given to the nurserymen in this state protects them from competitors who grow inferior stock and moreover allows them to ship their stock into other states without it being confiscated by the officers of the respective states.

"To the grower, the attached certificate accompanying every consignment of nursery stock assures that the stock has been duly inspected and is apparently free from any injurous pests. As there are so many pests that attack nursery stock, which the ordinary grower would not detect until after the planted stock commenced to lose vitality or dies, the result being a loss of money and time, the inspection of nurseries is in many ways a great benefit to the prospective grower.

"Those wishing to sell trees, vines, shrubs, plants, etc., should at once notify the officers of the State Horticultural Department, College Park, Md., and the inspection will be made at the proper time, at the expense of the State Horticultural Department.

"THOMAS B. SYMONS,
"State Entomologist."

For Sale.

A cottage at Mountain Lake Park, Md.; 12 rooms, kitchen and attic; is used as a boarding house, and has good patronage; splendid location, near Auditorium. Also, 10 acres of good land one-half mile south of Mt. Lake Park, all cleared except 1½ acres. For further particulars address or call on F. P. ARNOLD, Mt. Lake Park, Garrett county, Md. 49-26t

PLEASANT FIELDS OF HOLY WRIT

SAVE for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ,
I might despair. —Tennyson.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Third Quarter. Lesson IX. 1 Kings xix, 1-8. August 28, 1904.

copyright, Davis W. Clark.

Elijah Discouraged.

Elijah is one of the towering, picturesque, and ever-living characters of Hebrew history. His peership to Moses is indicated by the fact that with him he was permitted to view our Savior's transfiguration. His imminence in Jewish thought had a singular illustration when Jesus was crucified. The people thought the sufferer on the cross called Elijah, and said, "Let us see if Elijah will not come." To this very day in orthodox Hebrew homes there is one occasion when a vacant chair is set for the prophet, and he is the honored, though invisible, guest. Elijah is more frequently mentioned in the New Testament than any other prophet. The very abruptness with which he enters the annals of his times seems appropriate. The descent and parentage of other prophets is given with minute particularity—that of Elijah is omitted. Like the fabled Melchezedech, he is without father or mother, beginning or end of days. Some one says he bursts into Hebrew history in a storm, and makes his exit in a whirlwind.

Attention is directed again to this unique character. He is not, however, in this instance, seen riding the crest of a popular reformation—its idolized hero—but ignominiously stranded upon the shore, where the receding tide has left him. The picture may not be pleasing and exhilarating, but it may be quite profitable, or even more so, than the other. How to deport one's self in defeat; how to make defeat serviceable in the evolution of character—that is the prime lesson for the universal human heart. And that lesson God teaches us in His dealings with His servant in the wilderness and in Mt. Horeb.

The dry bed of the brook Kishon at the foot of Carmel runs red with the blood of 450 priests of Baal. The king sits down at command of the prophet to a sacred end sacrificial banquet on the top of the same mountain. But the prophet does not feast. He prays. He unlocks the windows of heaven with the key of faith. At first token of approaching storm he bids the king to hasten his return to his palace lest the gushing water courses impede the progress of his chariot.

One of the most significant acts of Elijah's life is related in a single verse. "He ran before Ahab to the entrance of Jezreel." He had rebuked the king, but now he throws the full weight of his personal and official character on his side by acting as his herald. The queen, from her lattice, saw the chariot coming, and Elijah running before. Though she knew what that generous and patriotic deed signified, it failed to soften her heart. Jezebel gave Elijah his choice of exile or death. It dawned upon the prophet's mind that a race can not be reformed in a day. The scene on Carmel had been grand, but it was an incident merely in the reformation. The trend of three generations of idolatry could not be changed simply by the people vociferating, "The Lord, he is God!" Savonarola had to learn the same lesson twenty-five centuries later in Florence. It was human for Elijah to be shocked by the incomplete character of his reformation. The cowardly thing for him to have done, however, would have been to have remained and died. He did the courageous thing when he put himself beyond the reach of the murderous queen.

At length, Elijah stood where Moses had stood six centuries before, and, like him, witnessed in the mount of of God the majesty of Jehovah. Nature, in her various features, forces, and moods, is both nurse and medicine for the mind distressed. In the tumult of the storm Elijah regained his equilibrium. But these phenomena were not a sedative merely. They were an allegory also. Wind, earthquake and fire are after all, not the best symbols of God. Professor Moulton has well said: "The exquisite rendering of the margin reminds us that no voice was yet heard. The servant knew, by long communion, when his Lord passed by. He waited, and he learned that force such as seemed triumphant in apostate Israel was doomed to fail, for it was not of God. And in the whisper, whose vivid contrast typified the seeming impotence of right in the strife with might, he knew that his God was near." By this allegory Elijah was taught that his further work was to be gradual. After that fiery manifestation which made Carmel the rival of Sinai, there was to be a silent, continuous, and powerful operation, the final and aggregate results of which would be greater and more endurable than those of any moral cataclysm.

The Teacher's Lantern.

History does not yield a finer instance of patriotism than Elijah running before Ahab's chariot. The prophet honored of God—the reformer of Israel—the executioner of false prophets—utterly oblivious of self, in full view of court and people, takes his place as the herald of his sovereign, and as he runs he cries, "Prepare ye the way of the king." Though he has had occasion to rebuke the monarch, on his repentance and reformation, Elijah throws the full weight of his personal and official character on Ahab's side.

From this page three thousand years old there comes a lesson for our own day. In the spirit of Elijah one may run before the chief magistrate of his nation. Not truculently, but in the sense of casting the full weight of his moral influence in support of the office and officer.

It is psychologically true that a nation can not be reformed in a day. Savonarola and many others have learned that truth to their sorrow. Things are ever doing, never done. Life is flux, not crystal. Men are only contriautors to the flow—some good, some evil, some larger, some smaller. The best one can do it to cast the largest possible saline influence into the stream. So did Elijah.

If Elijah had stood the shock of discovery that his reformation was thus incomplete, we should be inclined to accept the Jewish legend that he really was an angel and not a man. His despondency proves his humanity. He was a man of our nature as St. James says. As Shakespeare once thought himself no poet, and Raphael thought himself no painter, so now Elijah thought himself no prophet; and in the bitterness of his grief cried, "I am not better than my fathers."

It would have been cowardly for Elijah to have staid and died at the hand of Jezebel. It is cowardly to put down the extinguisher upon the lamp of life to feel "the last grand rush of darkness on the spirit."

It has been said that only such a man as Elijah can measure the colossal despondency of Elijah's heart.

This incident is a foregleam of the Messianic way of dealing with minds distressed. The broom-tree, most welcome bush of the desert, was the prophet's shelter. The two angel-served meals with the nap intervening, was the preparation for his ordeal. So Jesus Himself made men comfortable in their bodies first. That is the approved current method.

There are times when looking up a Colorade canon is more religious than going to a prayer-meeting. Byron understood the sanitary influence of nature when he said,

"There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
There is society where none intrudes
By the deep sea and music in its roar."

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

INDIGESTION

"I was troubled with stomach trouble. Thedford's Black-Draught did me more good in one week than all the doctor's medicine I took in a year."—MRS. SARAH E. SHIRFIELD, Ellettsville, Ind.

Thedford's Black Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Thedford's Black Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.

THEDFORD'S
BLACK-DRAUGHT

More sickness is caused by constipation than by any other disease. Thedford's Black-Draught not only relieves constipation but cures diarrhœa and dysentery and keeps the bowels regular.

All druggists sell 25-cent packages.

"Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine to regulate the bowels I have ever used."—MRS. A. M. GRANT, Sneads Ferry, N. C.

CONSTIPATION

Supervisors' Notice of APPOINTMENT OF Judges & Clerks Of Election.

OFFICER OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., AUG. 13, 1904.

The Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Judges and Clerks of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland for the year 1896, hereby give notice of the names and post-office address of each person so selected as Judges and Clerks, and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Elections intendes each of said persons to represent, respectively.

The law make it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be preferred to them in writing against any person so selected and to remove any such person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable to discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

Frank Sharpless, Democrat, Judge of Election, Swanton; Sheridan Stottlemeyer, Republican, Judge of Election, Beckman.

Sames L. McRobie, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Swanton; Alfred B. Mason, Republican, Clerk of Election, Beckman.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

Milford E. Frazee, Democrat, Judge of Election, Friendsville; Selathial Savage, Republican, Judge of Election, Friendsville.

Jos. E. Friend, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Kendall; Burbridge Thomas, Republican, Clerk of Election, Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

Leonard B. Kurtz, Democrat, Judge of Election, Grantsville; Gust Durst, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville.

Lewellyn Blocher, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Grantsville; Henry Latham, Republican, Clerk of Election, Keyser.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

Edwin Fazenbaker, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bloomington; Henry Barnard, Republican, Judge of Election, Bloomington.

Wm. Moorehead, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bloomington; Floyd Duckworth, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

Josiah Smearman, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; A. P. Enlow, Republican, Judge of Election, Hoyes.

Clarence Diehl, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Accident; M. H. Lohr, Republican, Clerk of Election, Cove.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

J. T. Weimer, Democrat, Judge of Election, McHenry; M. H. Frankhouser, Republican, Judge of Election, Cranesville, W. Va.

Wm. J. Bowman, Democrat, Clerk of Election, McHenry; Frank Glotfelty, Republican, Clerk of Election, McHenry.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

Jos. H. Smithman, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Jas. O. Cleveland, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

A. Y. Hinebaugh Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; W. S. Friend, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

D. H. Ridder, Democrat, Judge of Election, Gortner; Jas. Aronholt, Republican, Judge of Election, Wilson, Grant county, W. Va.

J. A. Shaffer, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Gortner; Geo. W. Harvey, Republican, Clerk of Election, Gormania, W. Va.

Election District Number Nine—Johnsons.

Patrick Hoye, Democrat, Judge of Election, Frostburg; Thomas Layman, Republican, Judge of Election, Frostburg, Allegany county.

Floyd Crowe, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Frostburg, Allegany county; Jas. R. McKenzie, Republican, Clerk of Election, Frostburg, Allegany county.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

Emil F. Droege, Democrat, Judge of Election, Deer Park; Isaac A. Paugh, Republican, Judge of Election, Deer Park.

Michael J. Garrett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Deer Park; J. B. Shockey, Republican, Clerk of Election, Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

Albin Fazenbaker, Democrat, Judge of Election, Barton; Salem V. Broadwater, Republican, Judge of Election, Merrill.

David Warnick, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Barton; David P. Hansell, Republican, Clerk of Election, Lonaconing.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

Jas. Harrison, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bond; Dennis Dietrich, Republican, Judge of Election, Bittinger.

Oliver Buckle, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bittinger; Edward S. Brenneman, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

C. H. Pool, Democrat, Judge of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.; Robert C. Wilson, Republican, Judge of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.

George J. Pool, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.; Burt Wilson, Republican, Clerk of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.

Eliction District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

Daniel A. Vaughn, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Jos. T. Glotfelty, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

J. O. Browning, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; Samuel Lawton, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland

EDMUND JAMISON, Pres.,
C. M. MILLER,
E. E. SOLLARS,
Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett County, Md.

CHAS. A. DEFFINBAUGH, Clerk.

L. A. RUDISILL,
REAL ESTATE, LOANS, INSURANCE,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.
LIFE, ACCIDENT, HEALTH AND FIRE INSURANCE.
I sell Farms, Dwelling and Business Houses, Hotels, Lots, Coal, Timber and Oil Lands anywhere in Garrett county, Maryland. - - - -
Special attention given to Renting and Selling Mountain Lake Park, Loch Lynn and Oakland property.
I have some attractive Bargains in Houses and Lots in Loch Lynn.
OFFICE IN THE NEWS BUILDING.

BAUMGARTNER'S BIG BARGAINS!
5c SUGAR BOWLS, CREAM PITCHERS, THREE PAPERS PINS, ½ GAL. TIN BUCKETS, CAKE PLATES, AND LOTS MORE. 5c
Come around and see what 5 and 10c will do.
THE LITTLE MAN.

The Boy Makes the Mule Go,
And the Mule Makes the Cart Go.
WITH OUR NEW PROCESS
We Make the Bread Go!
Because It Is Best.
A Trial Will Convince You.
OAKLAND MODEL STEAM BAKERY,
HENRY LAUER, Proprietor.

YOU SAVE $40

In purchasing a Writing Machine when you buy the New Model
WELLINGTON.
A practical business-like Typewriter at a reasonale price.
$60.00.
A strictly high-grade, up-to-date machine, combining all the best features of other Typewriters with many vital advantages of its own. The writing is always in sight, the alignment is always perfect, they are built for hard work and plenty of it; are simple in construction and are very rapid. Do not buy a TypeBriter of any kind until you investigate the WELLINGTON.
N. S. HEINDEL, Agent,
OAKLAND, - MD.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

CANCER CURED
permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1520 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

L. E. HANSON,
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland
PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

MAGIC REMEDY
...Diarrhoea, Cramps, ...Stomach, Colera Morbus ...or Flux, in a few minutes ...positive cure. Keep a ... will save many ... pot... your ...25c; by Mail, ...mailing case.
...PREPARED BY BLAINE ...N. F. W. VA.

NOTICE.

The undersigned hereby gives notice to the general public not to trust or harbor my wife, Mary Ann Bittner, who left my bed and board without just cause or provocation, nor my three minor children, who accompanied her, they being Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, as I will not be responsible for any debts she, the said Mary Ann Bittner, nor they, the said Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, may contract in my name.
JEREMIAH BITTNER.
Friendsville, Md., August 5th, 1904. 23-3t

CUPID'S COURT OF CLAIMS

By Epes W. Sargent

Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure

Paul Preston settled himself comfortably in his seat in the chair car. Then he carefully polished his eyeglasses and put them in his pocket. He had no reading matter with him and he found that it rested his eyes to remove the glasses. To his nearsighted vision the scenery then became a blur. Like most absentminded men, he was given to introspection, and once the glasses were off the other occupants of the car ceased to distract his attention.

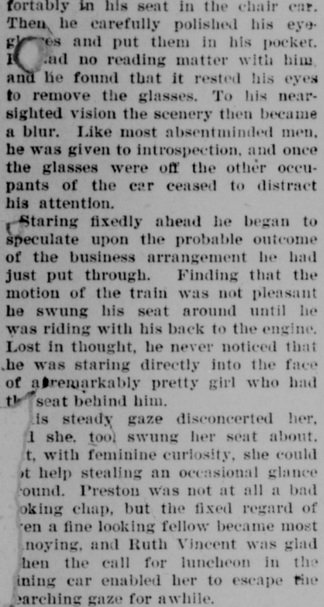
Staring fixedly ahead he began to speculate upon the probable outcome of the business arrangement he had just put through. Finding that the motion of the train was not pleasant he swung his seat around until he was riding with his back to the engine. Lost in thought, he never noticed that he was staring directly into the face of a remarkably pretty girl who had the seat behind him.

His steady gaze disconcerted her, and she, too, swung her seat about. But, with feminine curiosity, she could not help stealing an occasional glance around. Preston was not at all a bad looking chap, but the fixed regard of even a fine looking fellow became most annoying, and Ruth Vincent was glad when the call for luncheon in the dining car enabled her to escape the searching gaze for awhile.

Preston's stare was so steady and undemonstrative that she could not very well complain to the conductor, but it was none the less unpleasant. As the ducky waiter brought the first course of her luncheon she caught herself hoping that the rude man would not take his place opposite her at the table and so spoil the meal for her.

But Preston had no intention of visiting the dining car. He was not even aware of the call, so deeply immersed in thought was he. Not until the porter, in his perpetual cleaning up of the car, touched him on the shoulder did he rouse himself with a start.

"Yo' book, sah?" he asked, holding out a magazine. Preston fished out his eyeglasses, looked at the cover, and with a puzzled expression admitted that it was his. It was very strange. He did not remember providing himself with reading matter when boarding the train, yet this was clearly his. He replaced his glasses, dropped the magazine into his lap, and in a minute was again lost in thought.



"SEE, HERE IS MY NAME."

For ten minutes he was left alone. Then Ruth Vincent, returning from the dining car, gasped to find her magazine appropriated. It was bad enough to be stared at, but for him to calmly appropriate the magazine, behind the covers of which she had been concealing her annoyance, was unpardonable. She leaned forward with an "I beg your pardon."

But Preston was in Cleveland, going over the details of his business trip. She raised her voice without avail and finally leaned farther forward and touched his arm.

"Eh? What is it?" he cried as he suddenly became aware that he was being addressed.

"May I trouble you for my magazine?" she said coldly.

"Why, certainly" he said cordially. "Keep it as long as you like. I shan't need it until we get to town."

"You will pardon me," she said acidly. "It is my magazine."

"Is it?" he asked. "Why, bless me, I thought it was mine. Yes," after a pause. "It is mine, don't you know," and with eager fingers he felt for his eyeglasses. "Yes," he said again, after a scrutiny of the cover. "See, here is my name."

He pointed to a name scrawled upon the cover. Her lip curled with fine scorn. "It's a very unique excuse," she said, "but it happens that the name was written there some time ago, and I do not think it happens to be yours. The gentleman to whom this belongs is out west somewhere, and I had the loan of it from his sister. I am taking it to her now."

Preston suddenly became aware that the girl was very pretty. He sat up straighter and began to be interested. "Well, well," he exclaimed cheerfully, "I am glad that you are a friend of my sister. Lonesome work, traveling alone, isn't it?"

Miss Vincent gasped. "See here," she said decidedly, "you have been very annoying ever since we left Washington. This subterfuge of taking my magazine and pretending that it is yours is very clever, but I must decline to hold any further conversation with you. Unless you immediately turn your seat around and refrain from addressing me or even staring at me I shall appeal to the passengers. There are some men in the car."

The stress she placed upon the "men" made Preston wince, but he would not give up so easily. "Let me show you," he said, drawing some papers from his pocket, "that I am really Paul Preston."

"Will you turn around," she demanded sharply, "or will you force me to make a scene?" Preston sank weakly back in his seat and wheeled it about until it faced the forward end of the car. The Pullman was one of those built with bay windows, and tiny strips of looking glass were so placed between the windows as to enable him to see behind him. Preston watched the clean cut profile attentively.

This young woman interested him. He was not much used to feminine society. What with his self absorption and his nearsightedness he was scarcely fitted to be a ladies' man, and he had permitted his business to completely absorb him. Now he glued his eyes to the glass and vainly regretted that he had found himself in a situation from which he was unable to extricate himself. His sister Mabel had been visiting in Washington. He must have given her the magazine and she in turn have loaned it to a friend. It would be easy enough to find out from her to whom it had been loaned, but meanwhile the state of affairs was decidedly unpleasant. He had been accused of flirting, a thing he most cordially detested, and this resolute young woman absolutely refused to permit him to make any explanation.

When the train reached New York he took one of the downtown ferries, going direct to his office, and it was not until dinner time that he met the members of his family. Then, to his surprise—and hers—he met Ruth Vincent formally. It was an awkward moment, and if he had felt ill at ease that afternoon his revenge was ample. Miss Vincent was profuse in her apologies, he was elaborate in his explanations, and it was not until dessert was reached that they felt that a treaty of peace had been effected.

It was not until two weeks after that that the final treaty was entered into, and Ruth promised that she would become Mrs. Preston and see that his absentmindedness did not lead him into further trouble.

Now when he travels she accompanies him, and you could not induce him to lay claim to any periodical unless she first assures him that it is all right. He says that having made one very satisfactory mistake he has no desire to spoil the record. Ruth, though laughing, knows that had it not been for the contretemps he would never have noticed his sister's guest sufficiently to fall in love with her.

"Stonewall" Jackson.

In "The Life of Margaret J. Preston" the author tells us much about that lady's brother-in-law, "Stonewall" Jackson. His attention to minor points of conduct is shown in his manner of taking his Sunday nap. Jackson was at the time in command of a military school.

His long continued suffering from dyspepsia had induced a predisposition to drowsiness, which he was very likely to yield to when sitting for a length of time quiet or unoccupied. Especially in church would this infirmity beset him, although most strenuously and conscientiously resisted. Still he could not be persuaded to relax his military habit of sitting in a perfectly erect posture, thus rendering the unwilling nod all the more apparent.

Some one playfully pleaded with him to lean back in the pew, so that he would be less conspicuous and the cadets opposite him in the gallery would be in less danger of being injured by his example; at least, that he would cease to be a source of amusement to them.

His reply to this badinage was: "I will do nothing to superinduce sleep by putting myself at ease or making myself more comfortable. If, however, in spite of my resistance I yield to my infirmity, then I deserve to be laughed at and accept as punishment the mortification I feel."

Making Fire Indian Fashion.

"How do the Indians make a fire without matches?" asked a boy who loved to "play Indian." Most of us have heard the answer to this: "The Indians used a flint and steel, as our own fathers and mothers did a hundred years ago, and before they had flint and steel they used rubbing sticks." We have all read about bringing fire out of two sticks by rubbing them together, but I find that most persons look upon this as a sort of fairy tale, or if they believe it to be true they think it so difficult as to be worth no second thought. All woodcrafters, I find, are surprised and greatly interested to learn that not only is it possible but easy to make a friction fire if you know how. I have taught many boys and men to do it, and some have grown so expert that they make it nearly as quickly as with an old fashioned sulphur match. When I first learned from Mr. Walter Hough, who learned from the Indians, it took me from five to ten minutes to get a blazing fire—not half an hour, as some books have it. But later I got it down to a minute, then to thirty-one seconds, from the time of taking up the rubbing sticks to having a fine blaze, the time in getting the first spark being about six seconds.—Ernest Thompson Seton in Country Life In America.

Women Are as Courageous as Men

By Mrs. FRANK LESLIE

IT is the accepted idea of the world that courage is a masculine attribute almost exclusively, and that all women are timid creatures, needing all sorts of protection and support, shelter and encouragement from man, who, according to St. Paul, "is the head of the woman."

PERHAPS HE IS, BUT I MUST SAY HE DOES NOT ALWAYS KEEP AHEAD.

Now, my own theory is that this idea, set up in the dark ages, when woman was either a slave or a servant to man, has, like many other respectable ideas, become outgrown and antiquated. The last fifty years have developed the nature and capacities of woman with a good deal of the instantaneous transformation seen in a pantomime, or, to put it more prettily, the effect upon a garden of roses, which in one hour of hot sunshine develop from half blown buds into flowers of glorious and fragrant maturity.

NOW, ONE OF THE ERRORS WHICH TIME HAS THUS FAR PERPETUATED AND NOW IS READY TO ABJURE AND CONTRADICT IS THIS OF THE COWARDICE OF WOMEN AND COURAGE OF MEN AS DISTINCTLY OPPOSED TO EACH OTHER.

I was present when a sweet little curly haired thing, a girl of some twenty years, seized a savage bloodhound by the neck and choked him off her pet kitten, which he had chased into the house—that is, I don't suppose her tiny dimpled hands were really capable of choking him, but he was so impressed by the dauntless spirit behind them that he dropped the kitten and ran. When his master was told of the exploit he turned pale and exclaimed: "My God! That dog has torn a man to pieces before now!"

THE STRONGEST SPRING OF ACTION IN A WOMAN'S NATURE IS LOVE, AND THE PERFECTLY RECKLESS COURAGE SHE WILL SOMETIMES DISPLAY MUST HAVE ITS ROOT IN LOVE. She must feel the need of saving or serving some one whose life is dearer to her than her own, or, like Joan of Arc or Charlotte Corday, she must love her country better than herself and despise the death awaiting her in its defense.

In fact, the truth is that MAN'S COURAGE IS MATTER OF CALCULATION, and so may be served to order, may be indulged or restrained, may be sold to the highest bidder, and if a higher appear may be transferred and resold without injuring its quality in the least. This is not to be taken as an ill natured hit at mankind, but a simple statement of fact as relating to mercenary troops and soldiers of fortune, and I only point out the fact as opposed to that other fact just mentioned—namely, that woman's courage springs only from the personal feeling of the moment and has its root in love.

BUT, AFTER ALL, IT IS MORE IN THE MORAL THAN THE PHYSICAL WORLD THAT WOMAN'S COURAGE IS MOST CLEARLY SHOWN, AND ALSO MAN'S COWARDICE, AND IN NO DIRECTION MORE PLAINLY THAN IN MATTERS OF THE HEART.

For instance, if poverty—deep, dire poverty—comes, it is woman's courage that meets it and makes the best of it; it is she who dares to show herself to the world, to their own world, in the garb and equipage and occupations of poverty.

Perhaps THE MAN BREAKS DOWN UTTERLY, for men are far more prone to break than bend, AND THEN nine times out of ten THE WIFE FINDS COURAGE AND ABILITY to take up the laboring oar that he has dropped and becomes the breadwinner of the family. And with what brave and strong resolution is that labor accomplished, even when the frail physique seems crumbling beneath the strain!

IN OTHER WAYS, TOO, IS THERE A DISAGREEABLE TRUTH TO BE TOLD OR A CAUTION GIVEN OR A WARNING CONVEYED IN SOCIAL OR MORAL MATTERS. WHO HAS THE COURAGE TO DO THESE THINGS—IS IT A WOMAN OR A MAN?

The Relation of Railroad and Telegraph to Our Body Politic

By JAMES M. BECK, Former Assistant Attorney General

IN view of the centralizing tendencies of steam and electricity our country will eventually consider the propriety of such an amendment to the constitution as will grant to transportation companies the right to transact their business throughout the country under the protection of A FEDERAL CHARTER. Such a law would unquestionably go far to obliterate state lines and create a government more strongly centralized than the wildest dream of Alexander Hamilton. But neither Hamilton nor Jefferson ever conceived the possibility of the railroad or the telegraph.

THROUGH THEIR CENTRIPETAL TENDENCIES NO LONGER IS THERE A GROUP OF STATES UNITED WITH A SLENDER THREAD OF FEDERAL POWER, BUT A NATIONAL ORGANISM WHOSE ARTERIES ARE THE RAILROADS AND WHOSE SENSITIVE NERVES ARE THE TELEGRAPH WIRES, AND THIS ORGANISM CAN NO MORE BE DIVIDED INTO SEPARATELY VITAL PARTS THAN YOU COULD DIVIDE THE HUMAN BODY.

Why There Is No American School of Painting

By ALPHONSE MARIA MUCHA, French Artist

AMERICA IS TOO YOUNG yet to have developed an artistic side. There are painters here, and very good ones too. But they are not American painters. Although born here, they are European, generally French. They study abroad and are formed there, so that their best efforts are in reality only copies. AT THE PRESENT RATE OF DEVELOPMENT, HOWEVER, THE REAL AMERICAN PAINTER WILL BE PRODUCED WITHIN FIFTY YEARS, AND THEN HE WILL CREATE FOR HIMSELF. HE WILL HAVE ORIGINALITY. HE WILL BE AMERICAN.

The second generation will witness an American renaissance. But the country is too young yet. It will have to be waited for.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Carey's Magnesia Flexible Cement Roofing for Flat or Steep Surfaces

Is suitable for all classes of buildings as it affords thorough fire protection and is a non-conductor of heat and cold. It will last the lifetime of the roofboards. It is fire-proof and is rated the same as metal or slate roofs. Call or write for samples and prices.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,

Agents for Garrett County, Oakland, Md.

First National Bank

OF GRANTSVILLE, MD

Now Open for Business.

EQUIPPED WITH A

Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe and Vault.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound banking.

Deposits by mail and all correspondence given prompt attention.

We Solicit Your Account.

Paid-up Capital, - - $25,000
Liability of Stockholders, 25,000
Total Liability, - $50,000

PAYS 3 PER CENT.

on time deposits. Interest computed and paid semi-annually.

DIRECTORS.

C. H. JENNINGS,
U. M. STANTON,
G. C. KELLER,
ELI STANTON,
W. A. HITCHINS,
J. S. HERSHBERGER,
FRANK WATTS

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - President.
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President.
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier.

The Up-to-Date Grocery,

First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.

Exclusively a Grocery Store.

CASH OR PRODUSE—One price to everybody and that the lowest consistent with a complete line of High-Grade Groceries.

Everything New, Clean and First-Class.

Fresh Vegetables on THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS.
Largest Line of CRACKERS in Oakland—Fresh Every Week.

W. H. BARTLETT.

THOS. LITTLE.

This is the season of year to make changes, and I will make a GREAT REDUCTION in the prices of

China and Porcelain Ware.

I have a large stock of this goods and they must go at the remarkably low price of 10c each. Many of these pieces are cheap at 25c. But I have concluded to sell all at the low price of 10c each.

They consist of Decorated, Gold Trimmed Meat Plates, large and small, Bakers, Nappies, Pitchers, Bowls, Cups and Saucers, large and small plates, just the thing for every day use.

Also a Fine Line of Imported China at Less than Cost.

Come Early and get the Choice Pieces.

THOS. LITTLE.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines $1; each additional insertion after first, 25 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, AUG. 25, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

New York.

For Vice-President:

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,

Indiana.

For Congress:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

Allegany County.

WESTERN farmers report that there is nothing in the crop outlook to foster discontent or a desire for a "change."

NEW YORK OUTLOOK

An alarm has been sounded by the New York World on the Democratic outlook in the State of New York. In substance it is that while the Republicans are thoroughly organized, the Democrats have done nothing. This it true, but it is only part of the truth. The Democrats are not only not organized but in the city of New York where the votes must come from to give them a majority, if they are to have one, the Democratic leaders are fighting each other rather than the Republicans. The row between McCarren and Murphy is growing fiercer daily, with no prospect of a settlement. The Parker managers begin to see that Dave Hill let them into a bad hole when he formed an alliance with McCarren against Murphy. He did this in order to secure a Parker delegation so the National Convention. In order to get McCarren's support he had to promise him the chairmanship of the Executive Committee of the Democratic State Committee.

Advices from the State at large all agree in saying that the Republicans are united and confident. Charles M. Pepper, the well known traveling newspaper correspondent, who is an observer merely and not a partisan, has just finished a tour of the State. He found few so-called gold Democrats for Parker who had not returned to the party four years ago. He reports less enthusiasm for Parker than he found for Bryan in the campaign of 1896, and thinks that the present outlook is in favor of the State going Republican. This accounts for the Democratic alarm and for the offer of large sums of money in Wall street even on Roosevelt carrying the State, with no takers.

UNDER President Roosevelt's administration the prestige of American diplomacy is recognized throughout the world.

MR. BRYAN also promised that if elected he would not be a candidate again. So far, the promise has been kept.

SELDOM has more cold truth about the "safe and sane" Democracy or a keener analysis of its intellectual or moral untrustworthiness been compressed into a paragraph than by Thomas E. Watson in these words:

Do the Democratic leaders suppose for one moment that the voters of this country are going to forget the history of the last eight years? Do they imagine for a moment that when they stand in the attitude of confessing so colossal a blunder as they made upon the money question they are going to be trusted on any other question? I again ask, did they know what they were talking about during those eight years, or were they simply deceiving the American people? Perhaps they were ignorant upon the money question. If so, how will they go about convincing the voters that they are wiser today than they were yesterday? But perhaps they knew that the Republicans were right and were simply misleading the people. If so, how will they go about satisfying the voter that they are honester today than they were yesterday? It seems to me to be the most amazing piece of effrontery for the Democratic party to go before the American people and proclaim that for eight years they have been wrong and the Republicans have been right, and at the same time demand that the crowd which has been wrong shall be put in the places of those who have been right.

DEMOCRATS admit that the Republican policies have proved beneficial to the country but they want the privilege of administering them.

THE same party that is denouncing President Roosevelt as a "War Lord" today denounced Abraham Lincoln as a tyrant and an enemy of the Republic forty years ago.

Collier's Weekly is one of the papers which tries to maintain a conservative, independent position. The fame of its editor is world wide and his serious judgment is as sound as his sarcasm and humor. The following concerning Mr. Parker's telegram, which forms the leading editorial in the current issue of Collier's under the head of "Hysteria," should be read by every fair-minded voter:

There is coming to pass in regard to the Parker telegram about what was to be expected. It matters not whether they are for the Judge's election or against it, ordinary, clear headed Americans must suffer a reaction after being worked into excitement over allegations that are absurd. They must come to see the facts in the more or less clear light of common sense. They observe the part played by Mr. August Belmont in the present campaign. They read that Senator McCarren receives a salary of $20,000 a year from the Standard Oil Company. Whether that be true or not, it is certain that the Senator is a very "smooth" man. They know something of the history of the adroit Blue-Eyed "Billy" Sheehan and a good deal more of the history of David Bennett Hill. The principles of Bourke Cockran are not shrouded in mystery. These men form the group nearest to Judge Parker; most likely to know and influence his councils; most likely, were he President, to compose or suggest his Cabinet. Now, men of this stamp secured the nomination of Judge Parker at St. Louis, acting as his spokesmen. Certain promises and compromises were necessary to obtain that prize. When the nomination was secure, and could not be taken away, without putting the Democratic party in the position of seeming to reject a man because he favored gold, the Judge sent his telegram. He was immediately hailed by that part of the press which is primarily interested in markets as a hero who had been willing to sacrifice the Presidency to his duty. Such idiocy must have its rebound. Bryan's cross of gold metaphor, which drove another class of people into frenzy, had its reaction, although even it, fallacious as it was, had a much soldier foundation than the childish story that to offer back a nomination when it could not possibly be withdrawn without absurd disaster was the bravest deed ever perpetrated in American politics. Inanities of that kind never pay. The people may become excited for a moment, but then they settle down to contemplate with disgust the spectacle they have made. Judge Parker played good politics, or he did not. Those who tried to turn him into a hero did all they could to turn him into an ass. The newspaper which is trying to prove that it forced him to send the telegram is not doing him any more harm than the others which are still hailing him as Casabianca. If the Democrats wish to carry New York, not to talk of any Western State, they had better get busy and show that Judge Parker is less of a plutocrat and more of a Democrat than Theodore Roosevelt."

JUDGE PARKER says that the laws are sufficient but the failure to curb the trusts rests with "officials charged with the enforcement of the law." That reads likea slap at Grover Cleveland, when his record for enforcement of anti-trust laws is recalled.

REPUBLICANS propose to use patience, generosity and the helping hand in aiding the Filipinos to equip themselves for self government. The Democrats propose to allow them to return to the rule of the bolo.

BELMONT AND THE CANDIDATE

August Belmont, who is running the trust branch of the Democratic campaign, has a room at the National Democratic Headquarters, and it is announced that he will occupy it daily during the campaign, neglecting his business interests at great sacrifice in his zeal for Parker's election.

"Augey," as he is known in New York, "spoke a piece" at a recent Democratic rally at Hempstead, Long Island, and created a genuine sensation in New York City by declaring that during the past eight years the country had been "drifting away from the Constitution." That was the first intimation anybody had that in "Augey's" opinion the Constitution protected trusts and such peculiar financial operations as he had been connected with in the past in his efforts to develop the railway interests of the country.

When suspicious Democrats from the West, who have suffered in their pockets, because of some of Belmont's proceedings, drop into headquarters and ask what he is doing there, they will be told by Chairman Taggart that "he is pulling the country back to the Constitution," and this information will doubtless give them great comfort. "It is to laugh."

JUDGE PARKER admits that his election would mean a four year's conflict between a Democratic President and a Republican Senate, with the prospect that no desirable legislation could be enacted. Do the people want such a change?

THE gold standard of currency can never be "irrevocably" fixed until the Democratic party, in convention assembled, endorses the Republican record and agrees not to attempt to tinker with it. That action has not been taken.

THE WAY TO ELECT PARKER

The Democratic National Committee is offering a reward, we understand, to any one who will name the best way to carry the country for Mr. Parker. We claim the reward with the following suggestion: Get all the savings bank depositors of the United States to vote for him.

There are more than 7,000,000 savings bank accounts in the country. Whoever can get those depositors to vote for him has a "cinch" on the election. In the elections of 1896 and 1900 Mr. Parker voted to Bryanize the savings of those depositors—that is, to make every dollar on deposit worth a fifty-cent piece. The depositors themselves voted to keep 100 cents of value in every dollar of their savings, and they elected McKinley and established the gold standard so firmly that even Mr. Parker now "regards" it as being an actual fact, though he has not told us what he BELIEVES about it as a PRINCIPLE.

All that Mr. Parker needs to do is to induce those savings bank depositors, whose deposits he voted to cut in half, to give him their unanimous vote and he will be as certain of election as was McKinley.

IF Judge Parker is elected President, he will, of course, retire at the end of one term to make room for Mr. Bryan who is already reorganizing his silver forces for the purpose of taking charge of the organization again in 1908.

WHAT DID HE MEAN?

The Democratic candidate for Vice-President likewise admires the St. Louis platform. This is not surprising for he had a hand in making it, although, we hope, not a decisive part in the formulation of its doctrines.

But what in the world does Mr. Henry Gassaway Davis mean when he says that the St. Louis "declaration of principles" is sane, safe and sound? Here is one of those principles:

"We denounce protection as a robbery of the many to enrich the few."

Does Mr. Davis believe that is a sound, safe and sane principle? If he does, what did he mean when he declared to the contrary in his last important speech as a United States Senator? It will be found on page 1767 of Volume 14 of the Congressional Record:

"I am for a tariff that will yield sufficient revenue for the economical and proper expeditures of the government, and in that tariff I believe incidental protection to our own industries is right and proper. It has been so regarded from the foundation of the government; it ought to be so now."

How can it be so regarded now, if protection is the robbery of the many to enrich the few, as is declared in exactly those words by the platform which Mr. Davis admiringly regards sane, safe and sound?

A Fresh One From Brown.

A story is told of a certain local young lady who left town recently and fearing a train robbery put her pocketbook and all her valuables in her stocking when she retired in the sleeping car. The next morning when the train arrived at her station she was in such a hurry that she forgot to produce her pocketbook. When the young lady alighted from the train the Pullman porter asked her for the ticket check he gave her the night before. The check was in her pocketbook and the pocketbook was in her stocking. The train was ready to pull out and the porter had her return ticket and she had the check for it. The girl got the pocketbook and the ticket and this ends the story.—Kingwood Argus.

Hump Back

SCOTT'S EMULSION won't make a hump back straight, neither will it make a short leg long, but it feeds soft bone and heals diseased bone and is among the genuine means of recovery in rickets and bone consumption.

Send for free sample.
SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists,
409-415 Pearl Street, New York.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

SANDBAGGED AND ROBBED

Charles Barnard, of Lonaconing, the Victim of Tramps.

A young man claiming Lonaconing as his home and known to be Charles Barnard, a miner by occupation and until recently employed as a machine operator in a mine near Flemington, West Va., was sandbagged and robbed of $43 and a watch at the water station in Oakland last Thursday night. Barnard, in a semi-conscious condition, was discovered about midnight by a peddler who claims that he is a discharged invalid soldier of the Spanish-American war, who notified the officers. An investigation was made and Barnard was found tied hand and foot with a gag in his mouth. After recovering his speech he stated that he had been approached by two negroes and a white man at the water station, one of whom asked him the time and another for some tobacco while the third asked if he had any money. He was then struck on the head and bound. No trace of the robbers has been discovered.

Barnard's injuries were of a slight nature and he went on to his home Friday afternoon.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The past week at the Park has witnessed many fine entertainment, lectures delivered by eminent platform talkers and extraordinary musical features.

Last Thursday was Lutheran day and many members of that church as well as other organizations from points east and west came on the special trains operated by the Baltimore and Ohio for their accommodation. The speakers were all present except Hon. George L. Wellington, of Cumberland, whose business engagements at home precluded his attendance. The exercises opened at one o'clock when a large audience almost filling the auditorium was present. The addresse of welcome was made by Dr. Davidson and was responded to by Rev. Dr. Butler, of Washington. Rev. Dr. Young, of Cumberland, delivered an address on "The Lutheran Church and the Bible, and President Heffelbower, of the Gettysburg College spoke of "the Church's Oldest College." The first service closed at 2.30 o'clock.

The second service opened at 4 o'clock, Rev. T. B. Yeakley, of Clarksburg, W. Va.. Missionary Secretary of the Allegany Conference, spoke of the "West Virginia Field." Rev. Dr. Butler, of Washington, followed in an address on "Our Church."

The closing address was made by Rev. F. R. Wagner, of Frostburg, who presented some of the introductions of the church. Rev. Dr. Manns, of Cumberland presided.

All felt that an auspicious beginning had been made and expressed a desire that annual reunions be held. There seemed to be a general sentiment that future reunions should be held at some point accessible by both the West Virginia Central and B. & O. railroads, possible at Piedmont, Keyser or Rawlings.

Monday was "Recognition Day" and was devoted to out door work entirely, no services being held in the auditorium until the afternoon when a lecture on "Why Men Love Women" was delivered by Rev. Shem, of Washington. In the evening Mrs. Geilow, of Georgia, a gifted writer of the South, read from her own writings some of her negro dialect stories. As an artist in her line Mrs. Geilow proved to be entertaining to a high degree.

The lecture on Tuesday evening by Dr. Green, of Chicago, on "Civic Bactereology" was without a doubt the strongest ever delivered from the platform. His audiense was large and entirely appreciative.

Last night Durant, the magician, entertained a large crowd with his feats.

Prof. A. G. Sines, of the Parkersburg Business College, who spent Sunday with his family here, return home Monday morning to resume his duties.

Rev. and Mrs. Howard, of Kingwood, who spent the week with friends, left for their home Monday morning.

The movement in real estate at the Park has not been as heavy in years as it is at this time. A number of lots have been sold which will be improved at an early day. Others have purchased lots with buildings already erected. These will be torn down and modern structures built on the present sites.

Monday night Prof. Richardson's stable was set on fire by his colored man who went to bed smoking. He fell asleep and the coal from his cigarette set fire to his bedding which in turn fired the stable. The man was roused by the smoke and flame in time to get water and extinguish the flames, which did slight damage to the building. The bedding and clothing of the man was almost entirely burned up.

We expect a great outpouring of people here on Monday next, which will be Grand Army Day and the last day for the Chautauqua this year.

A CHANCE FOR YOUNG MEN.

Education Offered to Twelve Young Men Who Will Work.

When the next year of the Maryland Agricultural College begins, September 15, the new dormitory, containing 52 rooms, capable of accommodating 108 students will be finished. These rooms will all be furnished with new furniture. They will be heated by steam heat and lighted by electricity. There will be a lavatory furnished with shower baths, bath rooms and sanitary fittings for the convenience of students. In this same building will be a spacious auditorium for public functions and social gatherings. A large drill hall and gymnasium equipments will be fitted up under the auditorium. The old building will be refurnished and thoroughly repaired. All rooms will be freshly plastered, and supplied with metal ceiling and new floors. In fact our new home will be a revelation to those who have not yet seen it, and the new scholastic year will open with more hopes for the Maryland Agricultural College than it has ever known in its past history.

It has been decided to offer twelve young men who earnestly desire to be educated, an opportunity to avail themselves of this great blessing by paying for the same in the only currency at their command; such power to render service such as they can readily give. Young men are wanted who realize that there is dignity in any honorable labor. These young men will act as waiters in the dining room and janitors in the halls. They will have every facility for instruction and every comfort and accommodation enjoyed by any other student. They will, on entering, sign a regular contract to perform every duty they assume in an orderly manner. Thousands of young men in the north have secured their education by just such means, and are today among the most honored citizens. There are many of just such young men in Maryland. It is only the weakling who shuns opportunities of this character. Every self respecting man must yield the higher admiration for the young man who, not having the means, is willing to pay in the currency of his strength of body and vigor of mind and heart for this preparation for his life work. In these young men we want well settled purpose of life; a strict sense of obligation to every duty assumed; and at least to have completed the eighth grade in some graded public school.

R. W. SILVESTER,
College Park, Md., Aug. 16, 1904.

BLOOMINGTON.

Mr. Augustus Wilson and Miss Guelda Wilt were married at the home of Miss Wilt on last Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. Rev. Howard, of this place, was the officiating minister.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rowe and little son returned on Monday from a pleasant visit to relatives at Hyndman, Pa.

Miss Florence Howard, youngest daughter of Rev. Howard, has secured the free scholarship at St. Mary's Academy.

Mr. James Wilson, Weighboss at the Buxton dump, and his two children are down with typhoid fever.

The remains of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Munsie, of Savage were buried in the Bloomington grave yard on last Thursday.

Although hundreds of gallons of blackberries in this vicinity have been picked, preserved and canned for winter use the crop still remains more than equal to the demand and of the finest quality.

Evidence in a case of Bastardy was taken by 'Squire Fazenbaker on last Saturday.

Mr. Aden Duckworth, one of the most prominent republicans and influential farmers of this district is reported as lying very ill with stomach trouble at his home near town.

Rev. Snedegar of the M. E. church, this charge, is away on a visit to relatives in Virginia.

The proceeds from the festival held by the Ladies' Aid Society in the school house on Tuesday evening was very gratifying and satisfactory to its officers and members. Miss Pearl Wolf carried off first honors in the ring contest, Miss Nero Coffman being a close second.

Mr. Robert Morehead, Jr., is getting material on the ground for the erection of a dwelling house on his father's place near the Pattison mine.

Mr. James Brooks and his son Dr. Harry Brooks, of New York city, summering at Mountain Lake Park, came down on last Monday to view the old landmarks around our town, which was once their home and to renew friendley ties between old time friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Andrew Mullen, now the oldest living resident of our town since the death of Mr. Kemp last week, has been somewhat indisposed for the last two weeks.

Mr. N. U. Bond, of Bond Bros., Bond, Md., the genial and popular lumberman of this district, was entertained by friends last Sunday.

Mr. Russie Miller, the painter, narrowly escaped being seriously injured on last Saturday while painting the roof of Mr. George Warnick's store room. The ladder on which he was standing slipped and gave way precipitating him from the roof to the ground, a distance of about thirty-five feet. A porch roof broke the fall and no doubt prevented very serious consequences to the young man.

Miss Margaret Murphy, a charming young lady of Baltimore, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mullen.

Mr. E. K. Brydon, of the police force, Baltimore, is spending a few days with his brother, Mr. Wm. A. Brydon.

Messrs. Hugh Tate and Ross Raley, of the Finishers, Cumberland, were in town last Sunday and Monday. On Monday the boys gave a chicken dinner and had as their guests of honor Messrs. Clarence Howard and Edward Devine. Everything on the table had been prepared and cooked by Tate and Raley. Chickens, the main feature of the bill of fare, were of the spring variety and were fried and served to the "queen's taste."

If all the drunken brag, bluster and profanity emanating on Tuesday night from a certain crowd of young men who are fast becoming notorious on account of their conduct had been solar plexus and knock-out blows would have required the services of half a dozen doctors to attend the injured.

BITTINGER.

A number of our resident sugar manufacturers were summonsed last week to appear before Magistrate Boyer of Salisbery, to testify as to the purity of the sugar made in their respective camps, some large dealers having brought a charge that some sugar shipped from this section was adulterated.

Mrs. T. B. Wiley and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Silas O. Wiley, were on a shopping expedition to Jennings last week.

Mr. Peter Opel, who has suffered a long siege of typhoid fever, is able to be about again. There are two members of his family in the clutches of the same disease.

Mrs. Samuel J. Brennemen is among the ailing at this time.

Mr. F. M. Bittinger has been suffering from an attack of quinsy for a few days. Dr. Boyer, of Accident, lanced the gathering on Monday.

Mr. Albert Brenneman who has leased F. M. Bittinger's coal mine equipments, has begun to get out for the fall trade.

Misses Newcomer and Sower, of Washington county, are spending a few days here the guests of Miss Amanda Ellithorpe.

Messrs. Jno. L. Beachy & Bros. are repairing the premises of the coal mine recently purchased by them on Cherry Creek, and will begin operations early in the fall.

The oats crop is being harvested, but not without much difficulty, much of the grain having fallen, owing to the extra heavy growth of straw.

THIRTY YEARS AGO.

The Frostburg Journal of last week in its reminiscenses of thirty years ago said:

A Garrett county farmer told a Frostburger that he "had a hen at home that could crack walnuts." Frostburger was skeptical, and farmer challenged him with a bet of $20. Up went the money. Next day farmer brought in his wife whose name, elaborated, was "Henrietta."

As the Journal went to press a telegram from Shade Mills announced that "Long John Chaney would pass that point at 7 o'clock next morning en route to Frostburg to welcome the grand entree of the Great Southern Combination Show.

Coal Shipped from Oakland.

Last Saturday a car of thirty tons of coal from the mine owned and operated by Mr. E. Z. Tower, was loaded in the B. & O. yards here and on Monday taken east en route to Lickdale, Pa., where Mr. Tower has secured a market for his product. The coal was hauled from the mine in wagons and the job was bossed by Oscar Notes, Mr. Tower's chief of staff.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

For Sale.

A cottage at Mountain Lake Park, Md.; 12 rooms, kitchen and attic; is used as a boarding house, and has good patronage; splendid location, near Auditorium. Also, 10 acres of good land one-half mile south of Mt. Lake Park, all cleared except 1½ acres. For further particulars address or call on F. P. ARNOLD, Mt. Lake Park, Garrett county, Md. 49-26t

Bargains at Cheap John's.

He is selling out his whole stock at cost to take charge of a store east. Croquets sets, base ball goods, toys of all kinds, etc. 1t.

The Garrett National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, - $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, - 15,000.00

What are Bucket Bowls?

They are big diameter bowls, filled with complicated parts to help them skim decently. They are dangerous-expensive-hard to wash.

TUBULAR DAIRY SEPARATORS

Have no inside contraptions. Just a simple tubular bowl—with one small piece to take out. It is, by test—the closest skimmer known to science. Can be washed clean in five minutes. Examine the Tubular—look into the bowl—read the catalog I'll give you.

J. E GNAGEY, Accident, Md.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Miss Norine Robinson, of Washington D. C., is here visiting the Misses Bartlett.

Merchant William Moody, of Bloomington, was a business visitor to Oakland Tuesday morning.

Mrs. W. H. Spedden, of Fairmont, spent yesterday in Oakland visiting relatives and friends.

Mrs. W. R. Mealy, who has been on a visit to her old home at Big Otter, West Va., has returned to Oakland.

Mr. B. Frank Ross, of Riverside, O., visited relatives in Oakland a few days this week, returning home yesterday morning.

County Treasurer E. A. Weimer is moving his household goods into his new home, recently completed, on Oak street to-day.

Misses Evelyn B. Jordan and Louise Gregory, of Brunswick, are here this week as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. V. V. Washburne.

Miss Anna Speir, of Cumberland, who has been spending a few weeks with Miss Mary Humbird, returned home yesterday afternoon.

Messrs. John H. Thomas, Jefferson Frazee, and David Taylor, all of Selbysport District, were business visitors to Oakland Tuesday.

Wesley Durst, Esq., who has been a resident of the county for many years, living near Avilton, has moved with his family to Sutton, West Va.

Mrs. Thomas Coddington, who spent several days at Terra Alta last week visiting her daughter, Mrs. Browning, returned home Sunday evening.

Miss Mayme Gesner, of Annapolis, who visited Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sincell at their home in Oakland for a few week, returned home Tuesday morning.

Mr. Fred. C. Reis, of the Reis Hotel, Accident, came up to Oakland Monday and remained here transacting business until Tuesday noon when he returned home.

Messrs. John T. and Edwin L. Mitchell went from here to Somerset county, Pa., Tuesday to look after some business interests. They expect to be absent until tomorrow.

Misses Edith and Bessie Curtis, of New York, who have been visiting the Misses Robinson, left Oakland yesterday for Cumberland where they will remain a few days with friends before returning to their home.

Rev. J. H. Lucas, D. D., pastor of the M. P. Temple, Fairmont, West Va. will preach at Wesley Chapel, near Mountain Lake Park, on next Sabbath afternoon at 3. 30 o'clock, to which service all will receive a cordial welcome.

The carnival company which exhibited here all last week, departed Sunday morning for Fairmont, West Va., where a week's engagement will be filled. The carnival people were greatly disappointed by the slim audiences accorded them by our citizens.

Mr. Preston B. Englar, editor of the Carroll Record, Taneytown, Md., who is stopping at the Park with his family, was in Oakland Saturday and made this office a fraternal visit, being accompanied by Mr. E. W. Getzendanner, of Cumberland, who is engaged with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in a position of trust.

Mr. Charles Brown, of Grantsville, Md., was in the office a few moments Friday and said he had been ill at Somerset several months, but that he was on his way home. We are sorry he didn't stay long enough for our usual chat.—Meyersdale Commercial.

Mrs. Ed. M. Spedden and three children of Crellin, Md., are in the city for over night, the guests of the editor and family, on Knotts avenue, stopping off while en route to New Martinsville, W. Va., where they will spend a couple of weeks with relatives.—Grafton Sentinel.

Mrs. J. G. Robinson and her two daughters, Miss Grace Robinson of Baltimore, and Mrs. M. C. Hinebaugh, of Oakland, who were injured by the upsetting of their conveyance at Conneway's Tower last Wednesday afternoon, have almost recovered from their injuries.

Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Kelso, of Kingwood, who spent last week in Oakland and out at Mr. Kelso's old home near the Park, returned to Kingwood on Monday from which point they will depart about September 1st for Oklahoma City, where Mr. Kelso will continue his law practice.

Mr. Charles W. See, of Grafton, well known in Oakland a number of years ago when he was employed as superintendent at the Oakland Hotel, was in Oakland Tuesday for a few hours, having come up here from Deer Park, where he is visiting Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Garrett, to see his many old time friends.

We publish today the second and final instalment of Miss Anderson's writings on her trip to Scotland, and England. The letter today treats of Edinburg, Scotland, and is an interesting paper from start to finish. Miss Anderson is an entertaining writer and many favorable comments have been passed concerning her compositions.

Hon. Wm. M. O. Dawson, Republican candidate for Governor of West Virginia, passed through Oakland Monday morning on train No. 3 en route to Parkersburg. In conversation with Mr. Dawson he stated to the editor that things politically in West Virginia are in good shape and that the State will give a substantial Republican majority for both local and national candidates.

Among the visitors to Oakland Monday were Hon. S. A. Kendall of Kendall, this county, Cashier O. C. Crane, of the Terra Alta Bank, and Frank Watts, cashier of the Citizens' National Bank, Frostburg, Md., who attended meeting of the directors of the Garrett Leather Company, in connection with the local members of the board and Senator Palmer, of Hutton.

M. J. Miller, of near Grantsville, Md., passed through town Tuesday morning, having returned from a fortnight's visit to the big show at St. Louis. The young man is a grandson of Samuel S. Miller, familiarly known as "Posey" Miller, whose estate in the southern end of this county is widely known for the picturesqueness and general beauty of its surroundings during the summer months.—Meyersdale Commercial.

Burglary.

The house of a family named Warner, living near Johnson's, Garrett county, was entered Wednesday night and robbed of small quantities of meat, butter and a pair of pantaloons, a pocket of the latter containing $9. Some shooting of burglars seems to be needful.—Frostburg Journal.

FRUIT FOR ST. LOUIS FAIR.

The Maryland Horticultural Society Asks for Garrett County Varieties.

Maryland Day at the St. Louis Fair will be September 12th, and it is the desire of those having charge of our State's interests to have as fine a show upon that date as possible. In this connection the Maryland Horticultural Society will send a car load of choice fruit, and the wish is that each county shall contribute.

As Vice President for Garrett county, I have been asked to secure an exhibit from our county, and take this means of letting the wish be known generally.

May I not ask that each farmer will examine his orchards, apple, plum, peach, etc., and see whether he has not at least one variety worthy of representation and if so, pick carefully by hand not less than a dozen specimens of each variety, (giving the name), wrap them each separately in soft paper, and send them with my name in care of one of the leading merchants of Oakland, on Tuesday, September 6th.

Each exhibitor will be given credit for his exhibit but I shall reserve the right to reject any not coming up to the required standard of perfect fruit.

I earnestly hope that all will take an interest in this matter, and that we may secure an exhibit worthy of our county.

Yours truly,
W. McCulloh Brown,
Vice Pres. Md. Hort. Society

El Poryenir, The Great West Magazine

The new magazine with the attractive Spanish name, the August number of which has reached us, is both attractive and interesting. Its field, which it is covering in a remarkably able and attractive manner, is a broad one. It may be summed up from the introductory page: "History, from a country abounding in fact, more interesting than the wildest fiction; life on ranch and range, in fastnesses of mountains, and on the limitless plains; Adventures, Failures and Successes in search for the wealth of the Rockies; The Making of Farms, Gardens, Homes. Cities in the midst of arid land—Life in the West in all phrases—find true expression, by word and picture, in its pages. Verse, Stray Thoughts, Topics of the Day; Books and Writers of the West; Wild Animals and Birds of Mountain and Plain; all lend interest and attraction."

Special features of the August number are: "Texas and her Liberator, Sam Houston," by Hon. Alva Adams; "Some Phases of National Irrigation," by Hon. Frank W. Mondell; "George Simpson, Pioneer, Scholar, Poet," by John Dowd King: Illustrated descriptive articles on notable section of Wyoming, Texas and Colorado. The editorial pages are thoughtfully written. The two main topics, "Source of Political Corruption," and "Law and Order in Colorado," are to the point and are well worth reading. The lighter sides, book reviews, stories, poems, are equally good in their way. For the thinker, and the man seeking reliable information about the West, as well as for him who wants some good general reading on topics of Western interests this new magazine has much to commend it.

In order to extend rapidly the circulation list a special offer of a trial subscription for four months for 25 cents, stamps or silver is made, and the magazine may thus be had by sending to El Porvenir, Denver, Colo.

Public Sale of Personal Property.

I will offer at public auction at my barn in the town of Oakland, on Wednesday, Sept. 7th, 1904, at 11 a.m. six horses, six-seated carriage, six-seated canopy-top wagon, 1 Dayton, 1 surrey, 3 top-buggies, 6 run-a-bouts, 2 ladies phaetons, 1 drag, 1 cart, douale sleigh, 2 single sleighs, 4 sets double carriage harness, 5 sets single buggy harness, 2 wagons, 1 dump cart, 1 pair of bobsleds, 1 set double wagon harness, 1 plow, 1 harrow, and other articles usually connected with stables. Terms of Sale—On all sums over $5 a credit of six months will be given with approved security, with interest from day of sale; under $5, cash on day of sale; no property to be removed until terms are complied with.

Ann Sweeney.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Baptist Churdh Services.

Rev. W. H. Faust, of Deer Park, will preach at Elder Hill Sunday morning at 11 o'clock his subject being "Saving Others." In the Thayerville Baptist church the same afternoon at three o'clock he will preach from the text "God Will Wipe Away our Tears."

Mt. Lake Park Circuit Services.

There will be preaching at Wesley Chapel next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. Dr. Lucas, of Pittsburg, and at Deer Park Sunday night at 7.45, by the pastor, Rev. Henry E. Friend.

Lutheran Church Services.

Services at St. Mark's Lutheran ch. as follows: Prayer service every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.: Sabbath School, 9:30 a. m.; Christian Endeavor, Sunday, 7:00 p. m.; Preaching services next Sabbath at 8 p. m.

Preaching in Deer Park Lutheran church next Sabbath at 11 A. M.

DEER PARK JOTTINGS.

Again, Mr. Editor, we are seated at our desk, scribbling to your newsy paper, and in our own unsophisticated language will give your readers some of the news and happening of Deer Park, after a silence of some weeks, owing to duties pertaining to our present vocation and in our "jottings" shall only give the pleasant happening, and leave the unpleasant to oblivion.

The first that claims our attention is the celebration of the 85th birthday of our aged and esteemed friend, the venerable Rev. Wm. E. George, on Wednesday last. His four children being present, viz: Theophilus, of Barton, Allegany county, Md., Mrs. John L. Fitzwater, of Beckman; A. Frederick, of Swanton, and Alex. Charles, of this place. Mrs. George, mother of above named children was 81 years old the 21st of June last, and on the 5th of June last they celebrated the sixty-first anniversary of their wedding. The combined ages of the parents and children is 370. There are twenty grand and eleven great-grand children living. Some of their children died in England before coming to America and quite a number of their grand children have died in this country. I can't close the synopsis of the family history of this devoted couple without a personal reference to Rev. Mr. George's health. When I last mentioned his condition we had little hopes of his recovery, but we are glad to state to his many friends both in Garrett and Allegany, that at this writing he is out again, but we don't hear him singing with the birds, but as we pass the gate of his quiet and peaceful home, we hear him at his family altar sending up his petition to a Throne of Grace.

Our young friend, Mr. Isaac H. Cormany and sister, Mrs. Welling, of Washington, D. C., accompanied by a young lady friend, Miss Alice M. Yeatman, of same city, are sojourning for a few weeks at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Cormany, of this place. Isaac is one of the trusted employes of the Interior Department, and we find him thin and pale owing to his close attention to the clerical duties of his office, but we hope our mountain ozone may be a means of drawing out the malarial diseases of tide water localities.

Rev Joseph Lee, wife and two daughters, who has spent some weeks at the home of Mrs. Lee's mother and brother, at Englewood, south of Grantsville, called and spent a few days as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Engle and other relatives of this place, returning to their home at Wheeling Monday.

Mr. J. H. Tarbell, the artistic landscape photographer, is still domiciled at Fairview Cottage and it is our pleasure to state that his work as an artist is far in advance of the ordinary photographers, as is fully attested by some fine views taken for the writer. We certainly congratulate our talented friend from the Empire State of this great American continent, on the magnificent views from all over this land, many of which are noted views of our own Garrett with its lofty mountains and beautiful valleys. Notably the highest point on the great backbone of the Alleganies, his photograph of "Eagle Rock" eclipses all of his wonderful collection of out door scenes.

Our young friend, Rev. W. H. Faust of the Baptist church, preached one of his usual interesting sermons in the Union church at 11 a. m., Sunday last, from the text "It is Finished," the last words of Jesus on the Cross; and again at 8 p. m., in the Memorial church at Oakland from the text "Weighed in the Balances and Found Wanting."

Rev. Dr. Hatcher, of Richmond, Va., was the guest of Rev. Faust for a few days and accompanied him on a drive to Elder Hill, Friendsville, Hoyes and Thayerville, and was delighted with our mountain scenery. Ecomiums were paid by this D. D. to the hospitality of the citizens enroute especially to the matrons and their fair daughters for the rich viands that so delight these gentlemen of the cloth. We hope the Virginia divine will come again to our mountain county from the lowlands of his native heath and we promise him that that the chicken will be just as tender and fat in the future as in the past, so come again. A greeting of all the hospitality of good citizens await you.

Our young ladies and gentlemen have been having delightful outings. Last week they were invited down to Lake Brown and were most hospitably entertained at the home of ex-Senator Browning, Assistant Fish Commissioner for Western Maryland. Many socials were given throughout the week at Friendly Hall. On yesterday they took in the famous lecture at Mt. Lake Park, "Why men love Women."

Ex-'Squire Crane of Loch Lynn, was a pleasant visitor to our sanctum this evening and is looking in the best of health. We are glad our friend is enoying this blessing, after passing through one of the most severe ordeals of his life—the loss of a good wife—man's best friend in this life.

Our two annual visitors from Ohio are with us again, Messrs. Adams and Blackstone. They have been coming to our mountain top for some years past, getting relief from attacks of hay fever and asthma. They are two of the substantial farmers of the Buckeye State and are genial companions.

All our citizens regardless of party are speaking words of praise for our mutual friend of all, the nominee for Vice-President, Hon. H. G. Davis and we don't wonder as we thtnk of the many acts of kindness shown all his trusted employees and as we look out of our office window and behold the broad acres of meadow land and again as we look at his late summer home, where his kind and genial smile and grace of manners bid welcome to all friends of both the great political parties. Here Grant and wife were dined; here Cleveland and bride were sumptuously entertained; here. Harrison was feasted: here Bayard, Blaine, Pendleton and many governors of states in the persons of Jackson, Lloyd, of Maryland, Cambell of Ohio, and other notables not forgetting his cousin, Senator Gorman of Maryland, Camden of West Virginia, were at some time recipients of his generous and unassuming hospitality; and we don't wonder that high and low, rich and poor, laud him as the friend of all alike. We close by saying personally he is one of God's noblemen, and we shall call him the Gladstone of America, "The Grand Old Man."

With best wishes to all your readers, I again sign

More Anon.

Dixon & Kelso

Will Sell Bargains in

FRUIT JARS AND JELLY GLASSES

AS FOLLOWS:

Mason's Pints, per dozen, - - - - 45c.
" Quarts, " - - - - - - 49c.
" Half-Gallons, per dozen, - 59c.
Jelly Glasses, 25 to 30c doz., as to size.

We also have an immense stock of

STONEWARE,

To Sell at 8c per Gallon.

Have contracted with two large peach growers for

Several Thousand Baskets of Peaches,

for this season, and can furnish this delicious fruit for the next two months.

Will exchange any of the above for good produce at market price.

Yours, respectfully,

DIXON & KELSO.

The Mountain State BUSINESS COLLEGE

Gives a training that turns unused talent into a money making power. Does it quickly, thoroughly, cheaply. Full and complete courses in BOOK-KEEPING, PENMANSHIP, TELEGRAPHY, SHORTHAND and TYPE-WRITING. $110 pays tuition, board and room-rent for five months. Skilled teachers. Large attendance. Healthful study halls and recitation rooms. Modern and convenient furniture. The M. S. B. C. has a National reputation and its graduates are sought after by business men everywhere. Now is the best time to begin a course. No vacation. Individual instruction. Our new Art Catalogue will be had for the asking. Address, A. G. SINE, President, PARKERSBURG, WEST VA.

BUILDING, PAVING, PRESSED FACE. BRICKS VITRIFIED FOR FOUNDATIONS, VITRIFIED FOR SEWERS, STREET PAVING BLOCKS.

Best Quallty for Building, Casing, Sidewalks and Streets.
Beautiful Shades, Red, Light Granate and Mixed Colors.

Capacity 80,000 Daily. Prompt Shipments.

QUEEN CITY BRICK & TILE COMPANY
—AND—
CUMBERLAND GRANATE BRICK COMPANY,
Cumberland, Maryland.

Lot $3 and $3.50 pants for $2.25.

Lot Clothing cut to half price.

Lot Straw Hats, your choice for 25 and 40c.

$1.50 Lace Curtains, 90c.

50c Lace Curtains, 35c.

Lot 50c Caps, 25c.

Lot 25c Caps, 15c.

50c Shirt Waists, 40c.

Lot Women's Shoes, 75c.

Lot Oxfords, 50c.

WATCH OUR WINDOWS NEXT WEEK.

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

MARYLAND DAY,

Monday, September 15th,

AND

LOUSIANA PURCHASE DAY,

Wednesday, September 14th,

AT THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATE

Excursion tickets on sale

Saturday, September 10th, via

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R.

Tickets good in coaches only, and valid returning ten days.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R.

POPULAR SEASHORE EXCURSIONS.

Atlantic City,

Cape May, Ocean City, Sea Island City, N. J., Ocean City, Md., and Rehoboth Beach, Del.,

July 16 and 28, August 11 and 25, and September 8.

At following very low rates from OAKLAND:

Only $8.50 Round Trip, tickets good in coaches only.

Only $10.50 Round Trip, tickets good in Pullman cars when accompanied by regular Pullman ticket.

All tickets good returning 16 days, including date of sale.

Stop-overs allowed on return trip at Philadelphia and Washington.

Ask Ticket Agents for pamphlet giving detailed information.

Mr. Miggs' Mitigator

By CAROLYN WELLS

Copyright, 1903, by Carolyn Wells

EZRA MIGGS, as any one might surmise from his name, was an inventor, and if his name is unknown to scientific fame it is only because his inventions were of that indefinite sort which are interesting in the extreme, but which never seem to be of any practical use.

His experiments, which were often conducted before large and intelligent audiences, were always successful and as phenomenal and marvelous as those of liquid air, but absolutely useless.

But at last Ezra Miggs invented something which he felt sure must be a boon to all mankind from Indus to the pole, and in the exuberance of his joy and satisfaction over his new achievement he ran at once to the home of his fiancee, Miss Mabel Hooper, to describe the new invention to her and to enjoy her loving and enthusiastic congratulation, for as Miss Hooper was a sympathetic young woman and had never been engaged before she took a deep and absorbing, if somewhat ignorant, interest in all Mr. Miggs' inventions and looked upon her betrothed as something better than a Franklin and a little wiser than a Lavoisier.

"I'VE INVENTED A MITIGATOR!"

And so it happened that when Mr. Miggs burst enthusiastically into her presence exclaiming, "My dear Mabel, I've invented a mitigator!" she beamed gladly and responded:

"Oh, Ezra, I so hoped you would!"

"You see, Mabel," he went on, "the usefulness of an invention depends entirely on the number of people it affects. Now, is there any one in the whole world who is not affected by excessive heat or cold?"

"No one," said Miss Mabel in a tone that would have carried conviction to the most bigoted controversialist.

"Then," said Mr. Miggs triumphantly, "if I mitigate the fierceness of winter's cold and of summer heat, which by my new invention I have proved myself capable of doing, am I or am I not benefiting mankind to a vast, an incalculable extent?"

"You are!" said Miss Hooper as fervently as before. And she gazed adoringly at her lover as though she would look through his eyes into the master mind behind them.

"And the machine," went on Mr. Miggs, appreciating her adoration, but unable during the stress of his present intellectual excitement to respond to it, "is so small, so convenient and so accurate in its perfect mechanism that I may already look upon it as a practical and therefore financial success."

"And when may I see it tested?" asked Miss Hooper, who had learned by experience that this question was now due.

"Whenever you like," replied Mr. Miggs radiantly. "Shall we say tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow is just the day! I am giving an afternoon tea, and as the weather is so bitterly cold I feared the attendance would be small. But if you could—well—that is—how does the invention work?"

"Oh, it is applicable to all areas or localities. Suppose I hang it on your front veranda tomorrow afternoon. It will automatically mitigate the cold in the atmosphere and the air will become warmer and the thermometer rise as if a new sun had diffused a gentle radiance all about."

"Oh, that will be fine! And then all my friends will come, especially Miss Boynton, who never ventures out in cold weather, and I want her particularly because she will bring her brother, and men are always scarce at a tea."

About 3 o'clock the next day Mr. Ezra Miggs hung a small box not unlike a pocket camera on the outside wall of Miss Hooper's house.

That young woman watched the performance with interest and gazed in silent awe as Mr. Miggs adjusted dials and set registers among the complicated machinery.

At last the inventor declared the mitigator was in working order, and he and Miss Hooper went back into the house to await results.

It was an unusually cold day, with a fierce northeast wind which blew like liquid ice and left the atmosphere raw and penetrating.

After waiting half an hour Mr. Miggs proudly escorted Miss Hooper out of doors again, fully confident of the success of his invention. Nor was he disappointed. The air, though still cold, was soft and pleasant; the wind had calmed down to a brisk breeze, and it was simply a fresh, bracing winter day.

"Is it warm enough?" asked Mr. Miggs anxiously. "We don't want to overdo it and get July weather, you know."

"It is fine!" cried Miss Hooper, clapping her pretty hands. "And it is just as I like it. But Miss Boynton is so delicate and so afraid of a chill! Suppose we let it get a trifle warmer."

"Very well," assented Mr. Miggs. And they returned to the house, and then the guests began to arrive for the tea.

"How warm it's growing?" and "How the weather has moderated!" exclaimed every one as they entered. And Miss Hooper smiled with inward satisfaction as she greeted Miss Boynton and her handsome brother.

But as the Hooper furnace had been urged to its utmost during the frigid morning hours it had now reached a point where it was impossible to check it. The rooms were growing unbearably warm, and Miss Hooper called Ezra Miggs to her and begged him to stop mitigating the cold weather or they would all be baked alive.

"Why, Mabel, dear," he replied, "my machine mitigates heat as well as cold. I will bring it inside, reverse the indicators, and soon it will mitigate the heat of these rooms to a pleasant temperature. Have no fear. I will watch it carefully and not allow the house to grow too cold."

The mitigator worked like a charm. Hung unnoticeably on the drawing room wall, it soon reduced the temperature of the house to the most desirable degree, and all were comfortable once more—all, that is, save Ezra Miggs.

Although his invention was proving itself a marvel of practical usefulness, he was plunged into depths of deepest woe, and this because Mr. Boynton, whom Miss Hooper had expressed such anxiety to have present, was monopolizing the attention of that charming lady to a marked degree. He hung over her chair and plied her with merry banter, to which she responded with coy and bewitching demeanor.

As Mr. Miggs watched them he felt his angry passions rise, and in defiance of Dr. Watts' dictum his hands felt evilly motioned toward Mr. Boynton's deep and expressive eyes.

But Ezra Miggs was not an inventive genius for nothing. He knew that he must not give way to his temper and make an exhibition of himself in a lady's drawing room, and yet the fires of jealousy and anger surging up in his heart were well nigh uncontrollable. So like a flash he conceived the clever idea of mitigating his own fury with his own mitigator.

The rooms, now at a proper temperature, no longer needed the assistance of the machine, and Ezra, without attracting attention, took it from the wall and placed it, with the cooling adjustment still going, in his inside breast pocket.

HE PLACED IT IN HIS INSIDE BREAST POCKET.

The effect, though gradual, began at once, and after a few moments Mr. Miggs could look calmly on while his betrothed flirted desperately with another and a handsomer man. This was well, and, able now to rejoice fully in the success of his great invention, Ezra Miggs gave himself up to the gayety of the occasion and chatted entertainingly.

After the tea was over and the last guest had shaken hands and gone out into the pleasant, balmy dusk Mr. Miggs, by virtue of his presumptive connection with the family, stayed behind to dinner.

He was enthusiastic over the virtues of his mitigator, and Miss Mabel was even more flattering than usual, for she knew that she had neglected Ezra during the afternoon and felt a trifle guilty.

But for a wonder Mr. Miggs paid little attention to her kindly speeches and seemed more interested in conversing with her father and mother.

Miss Mabel was a little annoyed at this; but, still remembering Philip Boynton, she redoubled her efforts to be fascinatingly attractive. To no avail, however, for, though Ezra answered her with utmost politeness, he seemed to have no especial regard for her.

Later in the evening the young couple found themselves alone in the dimly lighted music room.

"I can't bear it, Ezra!" said Miss Hooper, almost sobbing, as she flung her fluffy pompadour against his gardenia. "What has changed you so? Don't you love me any more?"

Ezra Miggs started as a man who has suddenly awakened to a fact.

"Why, Mabel," he said, "I don't believe I do. I can't explain it, but somehow I don't feel the slightest affection for you. I admire you, of course; I recognize your beauty and grace, but I must confess I don't love you."

"Oh," wailed Miss Hooper, "it's all because of that horrid Philip Boynton! I wish he hadn't come! I wish—I wish I were dead!"

"No, Mabel, no," said Mr. Miggs, smoothing her hair gently; "no, it isn't because of Mr. Boynton. I know it isn't, and I'll tell you how I know."

Mabel listened to the account of how Mr. Miggs' jealous rage was lessened and finally extinguished by his wonderful mitigator, and as the narrative neared its end she raised her head with a sudden inspiration.

SHE THREW THE MACHINE ON THE FLOOR.

"Ezra Miggs," she cried, "where is that miserable mitigator?"

"Here," he answered, slapping his breast pocket. And with a mad dive Miss Hooper extricated it and waved it aloft.

"I see it all!" she exclaimed. "The horrid, horrid thing! It is this that, resting against your heart, has mitigated your love for me! But it shall never do so again!" And, throwing the delicately wrought machine on the floor, she brought down her Cuban heel upon it with all the precision and muscular force of an expert in physical culture.

Ezra Miggs looked dazed at first; but, relieved from the influence of the machine, his affection was returning with unmitigated fervor, and he clasped Miss Hooper to his heart with no words but those of forgiveness and love.

Swans' Eggs and Thunder.

A beautiful white swan sat patiently on her nest in a zoo.

"She's a-settin'," her keeper said. "There's seven eggs under her, and they'll all be ready to hatch out by the time the next thunderstorm comes up."

"Thunderstorm?" said the visitor. "What has a thunderstorm got to do with it?"

"It'll hatch out the eggs," the keeper explained. "Swans' eggs are so bloomin' hard that nothin' short of a good clap of thunder will burst 'em. It's a well understood fact among naturalists that young swans are never hatched except during thunderstorms. Did you ever examine a swan's egg? Why, hang it, it's as hard as a rock!"

Considerably impressed, the visitor sought out the superintendent of the zoo.

"Your bird keeper," he said, "tells me that swans' eggs are so hard that it takes a thunderclap to hatch them. Is this true?"

"It is a tradition," the superintendent said gently. "Many persons think it true. You and I, however, would just call it a tradition—an odd, pleasant, interesting tradition."—Washington Post.

Ceremony of Introduction.

There can be no question as to the safeguard thrown around society generally by the ceremony of introduction. The man or woman of the world who has become possessed of the proper savior faire may speak to whom he or she pleases, because it is never his or her pleasure to speak to the wrong person, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

But the introduction is an essential, and the introducer should be held responsible. Nothing so evidences the proper knowledge of the correct as one's way of introducing—the younger to the older, the maid to the matron, the man to the lady. These are correct as well as that the distinguished guest should always have others presented to him or her, not he presented to them.

Names should always be most distinctly pronounced, as much embarrassment results and sometimes great mistakes. It is pleasant to mention a mutual acquaintance also in making introductions.

Arizona Kicklets

What the Active Editor of the Kicker Has to Say These Hot Days.

IT has been ascertained that the cliff dwellers of this territory didn't know what a cocktail was, and the mayor of Lone Jack thinks of calling a public meeting to express sympathy for them.

Captain Calhoun, who hung about this town as long as he could borrow money to live on and then went over to Utah, is no more on earth. They didn't like his looks and they hanged him.

Mayor Jim White caught us on Apache avenue the other day without our guns and started in to make us eat dirt, but at his fifth shot our coat tails turned the corner, and we were safe. We seldom stop to argue matters when we haven't backing.

OUR COAT TAILS TURNED THE CORNER, AND WE WERE SAFE.

Forty different attempts have been made in the last four years to get us bounced out of the postmastership of Giveadam Gulch, but still we cling. This proves that the postmaster general knows a good thing when he sees it.

A grizzly bear was seen within six miles of the town last Wednesday by Major Roberts. As the major hadn't had but three drinks that afternoon he can't believe that he mistook a street car for a bear.

There is no doubt that 40,000 single women could find husbands in Arizona within a week, but if we were a woman and one of the 40,000 we think we should hang to our job in the east.

People have called us a bad man, and yet in the last seven years we have never even hinted that our esteemed contemporary had a wooden leg and was cross eyed and baldheaded. We think that shows praiseworthy consideration.

The Lone Jack Recorder says that our lecture on the discovery of America is a flat failure. We beg to differ. We have delivered it in fourteen towns and got out of each one alive. That is the true test of a lecture in this country.

Two quack doctors and three shyster lawyers pulled up stakes and left Giveadam Gulch last week in search of pastures new. When the people of a town will neither quarrel nor fall sick somebody has got to go.

The only thing happening last week to shock high society was the elopement of Mrs. Davison with a railroad man from Tucson, and the shock of that didn't last over half an hour. Our people never let anything worry them very long before discovering that it was for the best.

Four members of the vigilance committee went looking for Joe Moss last Friday night, but Joseph borrowed a horse and got out of town in time to spoil a good thing. Mr. Moss has little ways that the town does not appreciate, and he will do well to hunt another residence.

The mayor of Pine Hill was presented with a $25 gold watch the other day as a token of the esteem in which he is held by his fellow citizens. He was forced to turn around the same evening and pay out $40 for drinks to show that he appreciated the sentiment. The boys try to work this little game on us now and then, but it doesn't go.

The number of men who want to wipe us off the face of the earth has increased to sixteen without any particular effort on our part, and from present appearances we judge that we shall have an early spring and lots of it. We are always on duty every hour in the twenty-four. M. QUAD.

No Expert.

"Has Mr. Gassy become sufficiently expert to feel safe in running his automobile?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "When he hits anybody he can go so fast that it is impossible to read the number on his machine."—Washington Star.

Improving Her Looks.

Patience—What a fright that Miss Antique is with those automobile goggles on.

Patrice—I know it; but they improve her looks all the same!—Yonkers Statesman.

The Maiden Could Keep No Secrets From Him

THE girl laid her fair head on the man's breast and heaved a terrible sigh of anguish.

"Oh, George," murmured she, "I really have not meant to deceive you!"

"Deceive me?" said he in gentle surprise.

"Yes. I have kept things from you—one in particular that you ought to know. Time and again I intended to make a clean breast of it and tell you everything, but somehow my resolution failed, and"— Here the speaker completely broke down, and the young man did his best to soothe the spontaneous agony of his fair companion.

"There, there," he said reassuringly. "Never mind, I don't want to know. I can trust you."

"Oh, George," she sobbed, "you have been so good to me! You have given me your undivided love, while I all the time have been concealing a most awful secret."

The man laughed slightly. It was intended to encourage the girl.

"Don't tell me you have discovered my secret."

"No, no," he said quickly. "I am totally ignorant."

"Thank heaven!" she exclaimed. "But I will—yes"—a little nervous laugh here—"tell you. We have been engaged for three months."

The man nodded.

"All this time you have kept nothing from me. All your thoughts, projects, hopes, ambitions, you have unburdened to me, while I have been harboring up this awful fact that has been eating into my heart."

The man gives the gentle figure a responsive caress.

"Tell me now, darling, all about it."

"Are you prepared, George?"

"Yes. I can bear anything," he replied resolutely.

"And you promise—you won't hate and despise me?"

"You must trust me," he replied after a pause.

"George?"

"Yes, dear."

"I—I—I can't run an automobile." The speaker burst into a torrent of tears that the young man took pleasure in stemming, and then they were both very happy, for they knew there were no secrets between them.

Pity the Druggist.

The druggist's night bell rang furiously, and, with a much ruffled temper, the worthy dispenser came down in his pajamas and opened the store door.

"I want a bottle of ginger ale, please," requested the complacent individual who stood without.

For a moment the druggist was inclined to be personal, but then he reflected that since he had come down he might as well do business.

"Twenty cents, please," he said. "Five cents will be allowed on the bottle when returned."

Two hours later he was awakened by another ring. Again he descended, to find the same complacent customer at the door.

"Here's your bottle," he remarked. "Gimme my 5 cents."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Deep Reasoning.

"But," said Mr. Meekly, "if you insist upon getting another new gown I'll have to go without a new suit this fall."

"Well, you're such a dear, unselfish thing," began his extravagant wife.

"Yes," he interrupted, "but I should think you'd be unselfish occasionally."

"But I think I am unselfish in that I don't attempt to deprive you of the pleasure of being the unselfish one."—Philadelphia Press.

How to Do It.

Mrs. Noopop—My baby cries all night. I don't know what to do with it.

Mrs. Knowitt—I'll tell you what to do. As soon as our baby commenced to cry I used to turn on all the gas. That fooled him. He thought it was broad daylight and went to sleep.—Trained Motherhood.

Patience and Perseverance.

"I am afraid that your son lacks patience and determination."

"He does, eh?" said Farmer Corntossel. "Well, you jes' ought to see Josh colorin' a meerschaum pipe."—Washington Star.

Worried.

Cholly—Did you feed him?

Stableman—Yes, sir.

Cholly—How awkward. The doctor told me to exercise on an empty stomach!

Tribulation.

On summer evenings on the lawn
It's always lots of fun.
We sit and talk of many things
And watch the setting sun.
But when I want to listen most
To everything that's said
Some one is sure to say to me,
"Come, dear, it's time for bed."
—St. Nicholas.

Announcements of Reduced Fares Authorized via B. & O. R. R., Summer Season—1904.

ATLANTIC CITY AND SEASHORE: Special Low Rate Excursions from all points east of the Ohio River on June 30th, July 14th and 18th, August 11th and 25th, and September 8th.

BOSTON, MASS.: National Encampment, G. A. R., August 15-20. One fare for the round trip. Tickets on sale August 13th to 15th, good returning August 20th, inclusive.

LOUISVILLE, KY.: Knights of Pythias, Biennial Encampment, August 16-19. One fare plus $1.00 for the round trip. Tickets on sale August 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th, good returning until August 31st, inclusive.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.: Triennial Conclave, Knights Templar. September 5-9. One fare for the round trip to Chicago or St. Louis added to fares tendered therefrom (Chicago $50.00; St. Louis $47.50). Dates of sale to be announced later.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.: Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F. September 19-25. One fare for the round trip to Chicago or St. Louis added to fares tendered therefrom (Chicago $50.00; St. Louis $47.50). Dates of sale to be announced later.

TORONTO, ONT.: Friends' General Conference, August 10-19. One fare plus $2.00 for the round trip. Tickets on sale August 9th to 11th, good returning until August 31st, inclusive.

For additional information concerning rates, routes, time of trains, etc., call on or address ticket agents Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR, ST. LOUIS.

Three THROUGH Trains DAILY

Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars, VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RATES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS

From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

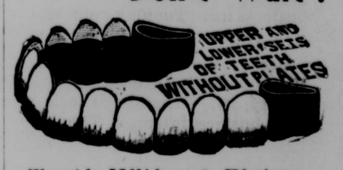
GRANULATED Fertilizer Lime! FOR FARMERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

C. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—21t

Now is the Time! Don't Wait!



Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY, First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.

Residence on North Third street. Office in McComas Building.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO. FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

An Old Hero In a New Role

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

September 28-30, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

THE extensive intrenched lines maintained around Petersburg in the summer of 1864 by the Confederates, being only twenty miles distant from Richmond, promised adequate defense for their threatened capital on the south and west sides of James river. On the east and north, however, the safety of Richmond against Grant's attacks depended upon mud and muscle, on the earthworks extending from Drewry's bluff, seven miles below the city, across to the swamps and the Chickahominy bottom lands, and the men in gray behind them. In the hope that the latter might prove to be few in number at that stage of the game and that the works could be carried by storm and the river crossings seized before help could be rushed to the danger point from Lee's Petersburg defenses, a movement to capture them was begun the night of Sept. 28.

Two large Confederate batteries or forts commanded the James river roads leading from Grant's position down the James to Richmond. The most powerful, Fort Harrison, crowned a hill and mounted sixteen guns. Off to the Federal right of Fort Harrison, as it would be approached by assailing forces, stood Fort Gilmer, connected with the former by infantry parapets and intrenched field artillery, and on the left a similar system of defenses extended from Fort Harrison to the river bank and commanded the bridges.

Fort Harrison formed the key to the Confederate line. For the desperate work of storming it the divisions of General George J. Stannard and Charles A. Heckman of the Eighteenth corps were selected by Grant. Stannard was to lead in person and had been named for the post of honor and danger by the general in chief. With his brigade of Vermont militia he had given the country a new hero by turning the tide at Gettysburg on July 3, 1863.

When Stannard learned that Grant had selected his division to head the storming column he said to the general: "I am told that I must lead this attack and have come to protest in behalf of my poor division, which has led every assault of the Eighteenth corps from Cold Harbor until now and is fought down to the skeleton of a division. I will go freely wherever you send me, but it is inhuman to give my men more than their share of these forlorn hopes." Grant replied firmly, "General Stannard, we must carry Fort Harrison, and I know you will do it." It called for higher courage to voice that protest than to charge the guns. After hearing Grant's reason for the choice the gallant soldier set to work to win success.

The brigade of General Hiram Burnham, the hero of the capture of Marye's heights in 1863, led off in the column, preceded by skirmishers especially armed for the purpose with the new Spencer repeating rifles. When the column dashed from the shelter of a pine woods into the open space in front of the fort the Confederate guns opened at 1,400 yards range. In front of the assailants lay a stretch of low bush land beyond a wide bare slope defended near the crest by abatis and a deep ditch. Crowning all were Fort Harrison's frowning parapets. Adjacent to the fort the Confederates had planted batteries to sweep the approaches, and their gunboats in the James also had range on the ground.

Preceded by the skirmishers, whose Spencers kept up a steady fire, Stannard's line moved slowly forward, exposed to a plunging fire of musketry and shell, until it reached the base of the hill. A brief halt for alignment, and then a dash at double quick up the steep slope where the stars and stripes were planted on one of the traverses of the work. General Burnham leaped the parapet at the head of his men and was killed by a bullet. The commander of the Spencer riflemen, Colonel Donahue, stepped into Burnham's place as leader of the line and was instantly shot down. Stannard rode boldly at the head of a brigade and seemed to bear a charmed life, but three of his aids went down by his side. Another brigade leader, Colonel Stevens, was shot down at the close of the charge. The only officer in the division above the rank of lieutenant colonel was the heroic Stannard. Over 50 commissioned officers and 500 men had gone down.

And, after all, the fort was barely tenable for the brave captors, for it was open on the reverse side and exposed to recapture from the enemy's reserve line. To guard against a counter assault the skirmishers formed a cordon around it and stood off the enemy while the elated victors built a new parapet across the open space.

General Heckman's division followed Stannard's a short distance, then turned aside to assault Fort Gilmer. While the storming column was leaping the parapets of Fort Harrison a body of men was seen entering Fort Gilmer from the north, and General Ord, the commander of the expedition, supposed this to be Heckman's men, whereas the newcomers were Confederates rushing to the defense. Ord detached portions of Stannard's troops to attack the bridges on the James and cut off the enemy's retreat. Being speedily wounded, he summoned Heckman to take supreme command, thus delaying the attack on Fort Gilmer and leaving to Stannard the brunt of the work in defending what he had so gallantly won.

Meanwhile Stannard's men gained a respite from attack through the arrival of the Tenth corps to storm Fort Gilmer. While the brigades were forming for the charge the fort kept up a steady fire, and General Birney, who led a brigade of colored troops, ordered the colonel of the Seventh United States to send "four companies deployed as skirmishers and attack the fort that is firing." Captain Julius A. Weiss received the order to lead this unique forlorn hope. "What!" said he. "Take a fort with only a skirmish line! I will try." The four companies deployed mustered on the spot nine officers and 150 men. The space charged over was 500 to 700 yards wide, with no shelter of any kind for the assailants. A Confederate who saw the charge from the fort said: "The enemy came on cautiously at first. Finally they came with a rush. Our guns fired shrapnel at first, but soon began to hurl canister."

Captain Weiss says that forty to fifty men went down in the rush across the plain and the survivors struggled on to the ditch. Many were killed at the edge of the moat, but after a short breathing spell fifty or sixty brave blacks scaled the parapet by making human ladders of their comrades. At a signal this brave handful made a concerted dash, but were met with a galling fire from the muskets which almost touched their breasts. Half of the stormers lay dead or helpless in the ditch. The gallant few on the wall were repulsed. Then the Confederates tossed burning shells over the wall upon the survivors, and Weiss surrendered to save further useless slaughter. Only one of this band escaped. Many of the captured had been wounded, and fifty-five died as prisoners.

Under cover of the diversion made by Weiss a full brigade of colored troops charged and took a line of trenches, with a loss of one-third of its number. But these sacrifices were useless. Nothing remained in the hands of the Federals at the close of the day but the ground where Stannard clung around Fort Harrison. This emboldened the enemy to try to regain what they had lost. During the forenoon of the 30th the Confederate gunboats on the James tossed nine inch shells into Stannard's line, and two field batteries wheeled in front of the newly built parapet and opened fire. At 12:30 a column of Confederates burst from behind a screen of woods 400 yards away and dashed for the right angle of the work. It happened that Stannard had stationed his Spencer riflemen at that critical point. The light batteries in the fort were without ammunition and the heavy guns useless at short range, so salvation depended upon muskets and the men behind them. The Spencer rifles mowed down the front line of Confederates in swaths. The survivors ran back to the sheltering wood, but a second line came on with fiercer yells and in a rush which carried to the edge of the ditch. Again the slaughter was fearful, and the survivors threw down their guns.

GENERAL STANNARD IN THE DEFENSE OF FORT HARRISON.

The repulse of these charges used up all the ammunition for the Spencers. Stannard paced the rampart with his sword in one hand, his hat in the other, encouraging his men to fight to the end. Fortunately a wagon load of Spencer cartridges reached the fort in the nick of time, although the horses were shot down in their traces, and the Spencer rifles were ready for the third and last Confederate charge. While repulsing this attack Stannard stood erect on the walls, and a bullet which shattered his right arm sent him headlong to the ground like a stone. His men, being engrossed with repulsing the foe then advancing along the whole front, did not learn of their leader's fall until the Confederates had turned their backs upon the work for good. Then their wild cheers were arrested by the startling rumor sent along the line in whispers, "Stannard is killed!"

But the hero was only an arm missing—an arm as the price for Fort Harrison, which was held by its captors to the end of the war.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

When Young Archibald Was Roused

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis

"He is too lazy even to flirt with me!"

It was Miss Hattie Graham, U. S. A., traveling with her father in the east and just at that time at a hotel in Smyrna, who spoke the above words with contempt in every inflection. Six weeks previously they had met young Archibald Weston, son of Sir Wallace Weston, who was also traveling, or, rather, dawdling, over the country. He had been friendly for an Englishman; but, although David Graham was a millionaire and entitled to "Hon." before his name and Miss Hattie was under twenty, handsome, vivacious and an heiress, there hadn't been the slightest attempt even at a flirtation. Young Weston was a good looking fellow of twenty-four and not at all a cad, but it was too much trouble for him to flirt or make love. He was languid, he was lethargic, he was a droner and a dreamer. He would reply, "Aw, yes," and "Aw, no," and now and then "doncher knaw," but he would sooner listen than talk and sooner sit in a deck chair, with a pipe in his mouth, and gaze at the moon or at the clouds than to promenade the deck with one of the best looking girls he had ever seen. He said she was, but he said so to himself and yawned after saying it.

Miss Graham was not flinging herself at any man's head, and she wasn't dying for a flirtation, but it was a new thing in her experience to find a man bored with her presence. She could see many good points in the Englishman, but on the whole she had a feeling of contempt and showed it plainly. He on his part took no pains to conceal the fact that he didn't care much what her opinion was. One night while steaming among the islands she was in the mood to speak her mind.

"Mr. Weston, you are young, rich and in good health, and you ought to be making a mark in the world for yourself. Instead of that you are a drone in the hive. Even to live from day to day seems to bore you. Do you think it possible that even an earthquake would arouse you from your morbid indifference for ten minutes?"

HE DELIBERATELY HURLED THE STICK AGAINST AT THE BIG ROCK.

"Bah Jove, Miss Graham, but I couldn't really say, doncher knaw," he drawled in reply, thus making the longest speech she had ever heard from his lips.

It happened that young Weston's route was the same as the Grahams', but he did not reach Smyrna with them. He overslept at the hotel at Bondroun and missed the steamer and "happened" to catch one three days later. His arrival at the hotel at last had been carelessly announced to Miss Hattie by her father and had called forth the remark befitting the man and the occasion.

"No, not much hustle to him," replied the father as he looked in a disgusted way at his ill tasting cigar.

"Hustle!" exclaimed the girl. "Why, I'll wager that if he stays in Smyrna for a week he won't move a hundred feet from the hotel. I wish I could bribe a boy to explode a cannon firecracker under his chair."

Had she wagered she would have lost. Three days later, when father and daughter drove out to the foothills of the mountain range to the east to see the tomb of Xerxes or somebody else of equal renown, they were followed in a second carriage by young Weston. True, the scenery had no interest for him, and the flies permitted him to dose most of the way, but he actually got out of the carriage when the tomb was reached and put up his eyeglass to study the epitaph. He did more. He got a lunch basket and a bottle of champagne from his carriage and with a great effort forced himself to say:

"Now then, doncher knaw, luncheon goes with this."

So did something else—something not put up at the hotel and brought along. The three were picking at the luncheon when four Turkish brigands, who had the necessary amount of fleas, dirt and rags to render them romantic, came out of the bushes and made the scoop of the season, two millionaires and a good looking girl and not a shot fired nor a hand raised. The vehicles drove off with a great clatter to give the victims the impression that the drivers feared for their lives or liberty, and the captives were ordered to get up and walk. It was all very sudden, and the outlook was a bad one, but instead of hysterics Miss Hattie gave her attention to young Weston. Here was something that ought to arouse him and make good the record of his race, but he was not aroused—that is, he was only aroused enough to remark:

"They might have waited till we had finished our luncheon, bah Jove, but I suppose we'll have to go along with them."

And go they did. Mr. Graham fretted that he had not been prepared for the fellows, but young Weston was undisturbed. Even the brigands, who had gobbled up all sorts and conditions of men before, winked at each other and wondered what sort of fish they had landed this time. We all know how brigands work their rackets. They are out for the money and do not ill treat their captives. A walk of ten miles brought them to a wretched camp among the rocks and trees, and the captured were made as comfortable as circumstances would permit. The cooking was rude, the fleas plentiful and the demeanor of the brigands anything but high toned, and after a wretched night a palaver was called. The captives couldn't speak the Turkish language, and the brigands couldn't speak the English, but in an hour or two a satisfactory conclusion had been arrived at. It was to be $50,000 for the girl, the same for her father and a like sum for young Weston, all rated A1 and no discount for age, sex or previous condition. Letters were written to the American and English consuls in the city, and as the money could be easily raised it looked as if the captives would be restored after four or five days' detention.

On the second morning of their stay a peasant boy came into camp with a strange burden—strange to him and to the brigands. The contents of the basket were sticks of dynamite, which had in some way been lost on their journey to a marble quarry three or four miles away. The boy had brought his find to be examined and perhaps purchased, but as the brigands knew nothing of the stuff they had no use for it. The four sat around the morning campfire and handled the sticks and wondered over them, and strolling down that way from the huts on higher ground young Weston saw and recognized the dangerous explosive. Not only that, but he took a stick in his hand and sauntered back and said to Mr. Graham:

"Bah Jove, but I've an idea. You and Miss Graham keep within doors for a few minutes."

He turned away before he could be questioned, and walking back to within twenty feet of the fire he deliberately hurled the stick against the big rock at the brigands' backs. There was a flash, a roar, an earthquake, and a quarter of an hour later the dawdling young man opened his eyes to find Graham and his daughter bending over him. He had been hurled a hundred feet, but was only bruised.

"It must have gone off, doncher knaw," he said as he sat up.

"Yes, it did," replied Graham. "If you meant to wipe those brigands off the face of the earth you've done it, and we all came near going to."

"Bah Jove!"

"Well, Mr. Weston, you have experienced an earthquake," said Miss Hattie, "and can you tell me whether it actually roused you out of yourself?"

"It may have, Miss Graham—it may have, but I'll think the thing over after getting back to town and let you knaw, doncher knaw!"

Stage Drivers of Early Days.

Speaking of stage drivers reminds one of the glory of stages, which reached its crowning point when rival lines ran between Sacramento and Virginia City—six magnificent horses to each coach, the coaches the finest possible, the horses caparisoned with every ornament which could be added to enhance their beauty.

The driver, in a bearskin coat and cap, with bearskin gauntlets, was a sovereign in his way. No matter what the grade was, no matter how fierce the blizzard or how deep the snow, he carried things through on schedule time. He cared nothing for snowslides or high water, and his ruling idea was that he must make the station ahead of the opposition line.

In this work there were a dozen men, each with a personality of his own and all with a perfect art in their hands and their brains which made them sovereigns, and the locomotive that succeeded them did not very much increase the time which some of them made. Each had his friends, his champions; each was greatest in his sphere among a certain crowd, but they were altogether great. The like of them was never before and never will be again.—Salt Lake Tribune.

The Kaiser In the German States.

Outside Prussia, his own kingdom, the kaiser is, strictly speaking, a foreigner. Should he visit Hamburg he is a foreign guest of the burgomaster, who rules Hamburg as a monarch and is reckoned with the sovereigns of the German states. Similarly whenever the kaiser visits the courts of his allied sovereigns of Bavaria, Wurttemberg, Saxony and so on he is a guest, not a proprietor. His relations with these kings are only those of a chairman toward his fellow directors.

The kaiser only has free entree to the other states in his capacity of commander of the army, and he is able to travel anywhere as a general, but not in Bavaria, where he holds no such command. Bavaria is therefore to all intents and purposes foreign soil to the emperor, though it is included in the German empire.

The Pharmacist and His Careful Customer

"ARE you a registered pharmacist?" asked the stranger, walking into the drug store.

"Yes, sir," answered the druggist, indicating his certificate, which was neatly framed and hung in plain sight.

"And you are a graduate in pharmacy?" went on the stranger.

"There is my diploma."

The stranger inspected the diploma which hung alongside the certificate.

"You have a soda fountain, I see. Do you use pure fruit sirups and the best form of carbonated waters?"

"We do, sir. Here are the formulas and recipes, also affidavits from the people who compound these goods for me."

"And you handle none but the purest drugs and chemicals?"

"Yes, sir. Was there something you wished to"—

"Just a moment. I want to be sure I will get what I ask for. So often one makes a purchase in what seems to be a reliable place, and finds out later that he has been deceived. All the perfumery over there is absolutely reliable goods, is it?"

"Yes, indeed. Can I fix you up a few ounces, or would"—

"No, thank you. I merely wanted to assure myself that this is a trustworthy place before I make my purchase."

"We guarantee everything, absolutely."

"Well, I want a two cent stamp. I got one yesterday at the druggist's in the next block and it wouldn't stick to the envelope at all. I told my wife it was a shame and a disgrace the way some of our druggists are imposing on their customers, and"—

But the druggist had moistened the stamp, affixed it to the man's letter and was hurrying down the street to mail it for him.—Chicago Tribune.

Stutterers.

According to a current anecdote, the Hon. Joseph H. Choate met in the street not long ago a friend who is a confirmed stutterer. Buttonholing the ambassador to Great Britain as he was turning a corner, the unfortunate gentleman spoke as follows:

"I s-ss-ay, Ch-choate, c-c-can you g-g-g-give m-me, h-h-half an hour for f-f-f-f-five m-m-minutes' c-c-c-c-conversation?"

Another story is told by a well known cabinet officer. He reports the following conversation as taking place during a chance meeting between stutterers:

First Stutterer—Y-you w-w-want to try D-D-Doctor B-B-Brown, old c-c-chap, for that s-s-stuttering of y-y-y-yours.

Second—I-I-Is he a-a-a-ny g-g-g-good?

First—S-S-S-Shure; he's f-f-f-ine—b-b-best in the b-b-business; he-he c-c-c-cured m-m-me.—Harper's Weekly.

Cutting Down the Supply.

"Our boarding house keeper's husband is a carpenter and she finds him very useful just now."

"In what way?"

"Why, he planes off the roast beef and we get the shavings."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Consoling Him.

Patient—Besides, doctor, I suffer a lot with my eyes.

Doctor—Be patient, my dear sir. You'd probably suffer a good deal more without them.

The Divorce Mill.

Mrs. Sheekago—No, you wouldn't know my husband now; he has changed so much.

Friend—Yes, I understand he has changed six times since I saw you last.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Not Immune.

Jones—I see that Gaggsby was overcome by the heat yesterday.

Brown—That's strange. I supposed that his intimacy with hot air had rendered him immune.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Hard Luck.

"My gracious!" exclaimed the first flea. "What makes you so red?"

"Sunburned," replied the second flea disgustedly. "Some idiot clipped the dog I was summering on."—Philadelphia Press.

Fair Play.

The trap was sprung. Said little Tom: "Take that cat away, Effie, 'cos I don't want the mousie to get hurt. I'm going to keep it until it grows into a rat."—Brooklyn Life.

At the Asylum.

"There seems to be method in that man's madness."

"Yes. He's letting somebody else pay for the meat he eats."—Chicago Record-Herald.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT NOV. 29, 1903.

SOUTHWARD No. 3 P. M.	No. 1 A. M.	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2 NOON	No. 4 P. M.
3 15	7 00 lv	Cumberland ar	12 00	4 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June	10 51	6 01
4 47	8 27	Barnum	10 36	5 45
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 19
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 15
6 00	9 50 lv	Elk Garden	8 10	4 25
5 49	9 35 lv	Gorman	9 35	4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38	10 27	Thomas	8 38	3 53
7 10	10 55 ar	Davis	8 05	3 15
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 33	3 48
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 15
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 53	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 15	12 00 ar	Elkins	7 00 lv	2 15

No. 25 P. M.	No. 3 A. M.	No. 1 P. M.		No. 2 P. M.	No. 4 P. M.	No. 26 P. M.
3 50	6 30	2 30	lv Elkins ar	8 20	12 30	9 15
3 45	6 47	3 47	R.C. Jct	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 51	2 51	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 57
4 01	7 04	3 04	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10	7 15	3 15	ar Bel'g'n lv	7 35	11 45	8 35
					A. M.
	P. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.
	8 30	12 35	lv Elkins ar	9 55	2 00
	8 46	12 52	Beverly	9 39	1 44
	9 10	1 15	ar Hutt'e ar	9 15	1 20

No. 27. A. M.		No. 28. P. M.
8 00	lv Elkins	ar 4 45
8 58	Fishing Hawk	3 46
9 22	Glady	3 22
10 08	Burner	2 36
10 30	ar Durbin	lv 2 15
A. M.		P. M.

† Daily * Daily except Sunday. s Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily ..... 1.54 A. M
No. 3—Daily ..... 7.17 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday ..... 9.26 A. M
No. 55—Daily ..... 4.55 P. M
No. 1—Daily ..... 10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily ..... 12.27 A. M
No. *8—Daily ..... 6.04 A. M
No. 2—Daily ..... 6.31 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun ..... 5.12 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily ..... 4.34 P. M
No. 12—Daily ..... 8.32 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN, Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

THE Percheron Stallion

BLACK BRILLIANT

Will stand for the season of 1904 as follows:

Monday and Tuesday of each week at the Stable of P. F. Mellinger, Beckman.

Balance of week at the Stable of Amos H. Reckner, near Bittinger.

BLACK BRILLIANT is registered in the Percheron Stud-book of America, his number being 19258.

He is black with a few white hairs on forehead.

PEDIGREE:—Foaled May 22, 1895; bred and owned by Bond Bros. of Sugar Hill, Pa.; got by Fra Diavolo 16082, he by Fra Diavolo 5515 (2880), he by Brilliant 795, he by Brilliant 1899 (756), he by Coco II. (714), he by Vieux-Chaslin (513), he by Coco (712) he by Mignon (715), he by Jean-le-Blanc 739. Dam, Flora 18610 by Black Prince 1609.

Terms:—For Insurance, $10; $15 ten days on foot.

-2m AMOS H. RECKNER & CO

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD

CHEAP EXCERSIONS

TO THE

St. Louis World's Fair

EVERY WEDNESDAY IN

AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.

Only $14.50 Round Trip from OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.

2100 Madison Square, PHILA., PA.

Mention this paper.

COAL.

I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of

Bituminous Coal,

mined from my mine west of town.

Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.

Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be promptly filled.

E. Z. TOWER.

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,

Dixon Building,

Oakland, Maryland.

THE

SECOND NATIONAL BANK

of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital	$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits	250,000
Liability of Shareholders	100,000
Additional Security to Depositors	$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.

D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE"

TO THE

World's Fair, ST. LOUIS.

Three Through Trains Daily,

Vestibuled Throughout With Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars VIA CINCINNATI.

Season, Sixty-Day and Fifteen-Day

Excursion Tickets ON SALE.

Cheap Coach Excursions

Every Tuesday in June AT

Very Low Rates.

Ask ticket agents for Descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information.

HOME OF THE SCOTTS.

Miss Anderson's Description of Edinburgh, Scotland.

Edinburgh, the capital of Scotland, is a beautiful city. The visitors find many points of historical interest to entrance them.

A friend and myself upon arriving was simply lost in admiration as we gazed with delight upon the magnificent buildings and fine picturesque scenery.

Leaving Waverly station, which is said to be the largest in the empire, we wended our way toward Princess street, the pride of bonnie Scotland. On one side are the gardens and the Scott monument. The latter is truly a work of art and a fitting tribute to the great poet. The air was fragrant with the perfume of the flowers blooming in the gardens, the sun was shedding his genial rays, casting a brightness and warmth o'er all and as such is unusual at that season we indeed felt fortunate.

Our next step was to do the stores, which is ever dear and a great joy to the ladies, although my friend laughingly states, she might as well have had a stupid man with her, for all the interest I took in the magnificent blouses (shirt waists) displayed. Her one hobby was blouses and it was with great difficulty I pulled her away from such attractions. Our time was limited and I preferred exploring old castles, cathedrals, etc. I sympathize deeply with man, when he summons the courage to be dogged into shops (stores) with a woman. The shops are really very handsome, velvet carpets cover the floors and the great stairways. Mirrors everywhere and during the openings an orchestra, partly hidden behind potted palms and ferns pours forth sweet melodious strains, the sales ladies all robed in soft trailing gowns of black, as they glide back and forth exhibiting their goods, presents a fine scene.

I am told American ladies are a great annoyance to Scottish and English merchants; as they very often only go in to look around. A Regent street shop in London displays this sign—"Americans please note, this is not a museum." However, I notice in many of the Glasgow store windows, a notice cordially inviting visitors to enter and inspect goods, no pressing to buy. This is quite American and made me feel very comfortable.

Feeling the pangs of hunger we entered Jenner's Cafe on Princess street, and refreshed ourselves with a delightful lunch. Prices are very high; the butter was in little pats the size and thickness of our silver quarter dollars, and each one was a penny (2 cents).

From there we mounted the hill to Edinburg castle and obtained a full view of the city, which is indeed impressive, rising upward and crowned in the back ground by the picturesque columns on Calton Hill, Arthurs Seat and Salisbury Crags. These columns are termed Poverty and Pride, or The National Disgrace, owing to the fact they were never completed, for lack of money. Each column cost 1000 pounds ($5000). A wealthy American offered a fabulous price for them but it was not accepted. Besides these magnificent columns, stand the Nelson monument, upon which a large ball at one o'clock every day, automatically rises and instantaneously a great cannon at the castle, a mile away goes off, the ball then falls and magically disappears. We were standing on an elevated portion of the castle wall, right in front of a cannon (unloaded) watching the ball as it gradually appeared, when suddenly this awful report rang out quite near and frightened us to such an extent we never saw the ball go down.

After drinking in the beauties of nature, we entered the castle and are conducted through various portions—the prison, jewel rooms, ect., and then into a tiny little room, (hardly big enough to stir around with comfort) which the guide said was used as a bed room by Scotland's unfortunate queen, the "beautiful Queen Mary."

In this room her son, (afterwards James 1st of England, and 7th of Scotland) was born. From the window in this room, Queen Mary lowered her son in a basket, in order to escape from her husband, Lord Darnley. He was a wicked cruel man and met an untimely end, by the hands of Bothwell, a suitor for the hand of the queen, whom she married three months after the death of Darnley.

I saw the costly jeweled crown worn by the kings, when Scotland had their own ruler. The castle is now occupied by soldiers and hearing the bugle, which meant to arms, we perambulated into the esplanade and there we saw the drilling. It was a lovely and interesting sight.

From there we went to St. Giles Cathedral, it being of special interest during the covenanters time, it was in this church Jean Geddes threw her stool (in those days people carried their own seats to divine worship) at the Dean, saying, "Will ye dane to say mass at my lug?" that is Will ye dare to say mass at my ear?

This was followed by great rioting on the part of the people. The struggle against episcopacy in Scotland was alarming, and in 1637 a prayer book, prepared by Archbishop Laud, was ordered to be used.

One Sunday the Dean of Edinburg began to read prayers from it in St. Giles, when this old woman at once threw her stool at him. This stool and the old pulpit from which John Knox preached are to be seen at the Antiquarian museum. I saw many antiques in this building, among them a harp, used during Queen Mary's reign, for which the museum paid the fabulous sum of 900 pounds ($4500). They only bought it this year.

The art galleries, museums, gallery of statuary, botanic gardens, parks, libraries, ect., are beautiful beyond description. These buildings are well worth a visit, especially the Edinburgh museum. It contains many models of European building. St. Peters Cathedral of Rome, was particularly interesting.

My next and great desire was to visit Hollyrood Palace, but as was closed to visitors for three weeks during my sojourn there, owing to a great assembly which was on, I did not see how I was to accomplish or attain that pleasure.

As we entered the grounds of Hollyrood, a sentinel on duty turned many away and gruffly said to us, "no admittance." Paying no attention to him, I stepped inside the door and asked the guard, if is was possible for us to gain an entrance, stating I was an American. That country is very very nice to Americans and all visitors are treated with much attention and politeness. He then advised me to go to Parliament Square, see the head official and ask for a pass. Turning to my Glasgow friend, he said, "you hand your tongue lassie, or they will ken you are home bred and won't give it, let this young lady do the talking and I think she will get it."

We thanked him and proceeded to Parliament Square. Upon arriving there, a handsome, gallant polite Scotchman, listened with great attention to my request, and without the least hesitation, after ascertaining my name and address, he handed me a pass admitting 3. He having asked how many were in my party, and the hour we wished to go.

At 3 that afternoon we again heard the gruff, "no admittance," from a sentinel, but a different one. I held up my pass and we were allowed to go in.

We saw the palace at its best. It was magnificently decorated with flowers, palms, etc., in honor of the king's representative being a guest there. I then felt glad the Lord was in the city.

A guide took us through, explained everything and made it very interesting. We beheld with awe the remnants of the grand old tapestries, by which the walls were hung; the bed of King Charles 1st (grandson of Queen Mary); Queen Mary's bed room, all in the last stage of dilapidation. The massive walnut chairs, dressing table, her work box, etc., were in a good state of preservation, but the dainty velvet ones were completely worn away. The once elegant velvet bed spread, contained only a little patch here and there of its original material, the color gone though. These beds all have an elegant canopy, hung with at one time rich velvet draperies, but now anything but pretty to look at.

The guide showed us the secret stairway leading from the Abbey into Queen Mary's room and the small apartment in which she tried to save her secretary from death, but finding him he was dragged forth and killed by Lord Darnley, Douglas and others.

Our attention was called to a brass plate on the floor covering the blood stains which flowed from the unfortunate Rizzio, as he was brutally dragged out.

The Abbey with its tablets in memory of kings, queens, etc., is very interesting. In this old abbey Queen Mary was twice married. It is now unroofed, the walls being too old to sustain the weight, thus this portion of the palace is almost a ruin.

The banquet hall is immense; other apartments now used when the king or any royal visitor is in Edinburgh, are furnished nicely and kept in excellent order. It is one of the most interesting places in the city, and few go to Edinburgh without a visit to Hollyrood.

The next day we boarded a cable car and went to Porto Bello and Joppa, two noted coast towns. It was a pretty sight to watch the tide as it gently came in, covering the sand and shells. I gathered some pretty ones and treasure them highly.

It was with regret our visit ended. We entered a first-class carriage and after one hour's ride steamed into Glasgow.

The railway trains are made in small compartments. Each carriage, first-class, having six comfortable arm seats and carpet on the floor. I thought them very funny and many experience are chronicled of an amusing and sometime serious character.

On the London or long distance trains they have corridors which are really very nice.

Baggage was another source of worry to me. They do not adopt the checking system, such as we have, but with simply your name and address on it, it is hustled into the van (baggage car). Upon arriving at your destination, the first thing the passengers do is to make a scramble for the van and claim their baggage. Whatever you point out to the cabman you hire as yours, without any preliminaries whatever, he takes it and no one at the station questions his right. Yet strange to say few things are reported missing.

The station platforms are safer than ours. All are elevated, making impossible for persons to walk cross the track, thus accidents are avoided.

The river steamers are lovely and a sail to the numerous points of interest is indeed grand.

Taking a first-class passage on the Adder to Ireland, I stepped upon the steamer anticipating the pleasure and delight an Irish jaunting car would give me upon landing, and the natural beauties only Ireland can show. No grass so green, no tints so varied and lovely.

On the voyage we passed quite close to the Ailsa Craigs, with its myriads of sea gulls, and had a good view of the Arrow Peaks.

The channal was very rough. A storm arose, the boat pitched and tossed, the waves dashed madly and wildly, it rained very hard, making it impossible to go out on deck and I had to content myself with gazing upon the tempest tossed waves from the drawing room window, when ever I felt able to hold my head up. Nearly everybody on board was sea sick, myself among the number.

A storm at sea is a grand and glorious sight. I was not afraid but just the least bit startled when the ship gave a great lurch and I heard a great crash of falling dishes from the dining room below.

They tied the potted palms, etc., which adorn and added much beauty to the saloon. A fine orchestra was on board and listening to the sweet strains of music it partly drowned the noise of the tempest without, and made me forget thas I was sick.

The channel was rougher at that time than during my voyage across the Atlantic, but the ocean was unusually fine and calm, hardly an extra ripple upon the waves. The Columbia upon which I sailed to Glasgow is a magnificent steamer, and passengers have every comfort. I made the return voyage on the Numidian. It is also a very fine, comfortable steamer, and so steady, the motion is hardly perceptable, thus passengers escape sea sickness.

A dense fog settled over the ocean, which delayed us. At such times they travel dead slow in order to avoid accidents. An iceberg also floated down in close proximity to our steamer. We felt its chilly air two days before it was sighted.

I thoroughly enjoyed the trip and hope some day to again cross the ocean.

ANNA ANDERSON.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroal now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later thsn December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

Mortgagees' Sale

—OF—

Personal Property!

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Joseph E. Lint, William A. Lint and Joseph V. Lint to the undersigned mortgagees, dated the 11th day of February, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 37, folio 355, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under said mortgage we hereby give notice that on Saturday, the 17th Day of September, 1904,

at the hour of two o'clock P. M., at the farm of Andrew J. Frazee, on Frazee's Ridge, in Selbysport District, Garrett county, Maryland, we will offer at public auction to the highest bidder the following personal property, to-wit:

One Aultman & Taylor Steam Engine and Dixon Separator Threshing Machine and Two Bay Horses, being a portion of the property conveyed by said mortgage.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

JEFFERSON FRAZEE,
DAVID TAYLOR,
Mortgagees.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the Real Estate of Christian Orendorf, deceased.

No. 515 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23d day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause by Jacob S. Miller, Executor, to Christian C. Orendorf and Noah Orendorf, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $810.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.,
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:

E. E. FRIEND, Register.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the sale of the Real Estate of Daniel Smouse, deceased.

No. 482 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23rd day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four by the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause to Jane Smouse by Jacob S. Miller and Mortimer Smouse, Executors, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county once a week for three successive weeks before the 23d day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $3,000.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.,
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:

E. E. FRIEND, Register.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett County, to view the lands through whice the proposed new road is to be located, said road to be located in election district No. 4, beginning at or near the old mill race bridge on the Bloomington and Westernport road and running thence northwest through the lands of the Davis Coal & Coke Co., and to intersect the Michaels and Westernport road at a point known as Kight's water trough, and to discontinue the old road, the distance of the proposed relocation being about one mile, and examine whether the said proposed road should be relocated, will meet on the 10th day of September, 1904, for the purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said proposed location of said public road, and if so, to locate the same, and perform their duty in the premises.

MARCUS M. FAZENBAKER,
GEORGE T. MILLER,
THOMAS BURKE,
Examiners.

ROAD PETITION.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first insertion of this notice in one of the county papers of Garrett county, application will be made by the undersigned to the County Commissioners of said Garrett county for the appointment of viewers to view and lay out a public county road beginning at or near Forty Water Station on the B. & O. R. R., in District No. 1, and running thence through the lands of Thomas Nines, C. H. Sweitzer, Levi Sweitzer, Frank Sweitzer, Jerry Sweitzer, Simon Sweitzer and others, and to intersect the County road leading from Swanton to Beckman at or near the top of the hill near the place of J. D. Ashenfelter, a distance of about one mile.

CHAS. H. SWEITZER,
A. E. SWEITHER, SR.,
C. E. SWEITZER,
BENJAMIN SWEITZER, JR.

Proposals for Building Wrought Iron Bridge.

Notice is hereby given, that the County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, will receive sealed proposals until

Tuesday, the 13th Day of September, 1904,

at 1.30 o'clock p. m. at their office in the town of Oakland, Md., for the building of a low truss wrought iron bridge; the superstructure to consist of one span 74 feet long and 12 feet wide; said bridge to have a capacity of 100 pounds live load.

The bids submitted shall only be for the superstructure. Said bridge is to be erected over the Youghiogheny River near Swallow Falls, in Election District No. 14, according to plans and specifications to be seen in the County Commissioners' office. The County Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

By order of the Board.

A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., Aug. 24, 1904.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Sept. 13, 1904,

to transact business that may come before the Board.

By order of the Board.

A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,

Plumbing, Gas Fitting, Steam and Hot Water Heating.

Center Street, Keyser, W. Va.

PHONE 62.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

REAL ESTATE

In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity, and paseed in a cause in said Court standing as No. 1233 Equity wherein David Sloan is plaintiff and Jefferson S. Green is defendant, the undersigned Trustee was duly authorized to make sale of the real estate mentioned, and I hereby give notice that on

MONDAY,

The 5th Day of September 1904

at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M., in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, I will offer at public auction to the highest bidder all the following described real estate situate, lying and being in Election District No. 11 of Garrett county, State of Maryland, aforesaid:

All that lot, piece or parcel of ground known as in the sub-division of a tract of land called "Lochiel," and described as follows:

Lot No. 11

Beginning for the same at a stone pile standing at the end of 83 perches on the sixty seventh line of "Lochiel," said line being also the given line of a tract of land called "Savage Ridge," and running thence North 56½ degrees West, 76 perches to a bounded white oak tree standing on the west side of the Frostburg road, North 65¾ degrees West, 114 8-10 perches to the middle of the Savage River, then down and with the meanders of said river South 36½ degrees West, 9 perches, South 2½ degrees West, 6½ perches, South 30¾ degrees West, 26 perches, South 50½ degrees West, 19 perches, South 26½ degrees West, 21 perches, South 67½ degrees West, 30 perches, North 67 degrees West, 28 perches, South 32½ degrees West, 27 perches, South 14½ degrees East, 39 perches, South 34 degrees East, 30 perches, then leaving the river and running thence South 80 degrees East, 107 perches to a stake and stone pile on the North side of the Lonaconing road, then South 85 degrees East, 10 perches to the middle of the forks of the Lonaconing and Frostburg roads, then with said Lonaconing road South 6½ degrees East 19 perches, South 17 degrees East, 12 perches, South 4 degrees West, 10 perches, South 12 degrees West, 20 perches, then South 56½ degrees East, 41½ perches so a stone pile in the sixty-seventh line of "Lochiel," and with part of said line reversed North 33½ degrees East, 177 perches to the beginning, containing more or less, it being the same property which was conveyed by Thomas E. Green and wife to Jefferson S. Green by deed dated the 17th day of August, 1896, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 22, folios 246, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, Maryland.

Two Hundred and One-Fourth Acres,

Terms of Sale, as prescribed by the decree—Cash on day of sale.

Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN, Trustee.

The Keyser Preparatory Branch

OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.
A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.
Special instruction for public School Teachers.
Instruction in Music.
A Splendid New Building Provided by the State.
A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.

Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.

No Tuition in Commercial Department.

Small Tuition charged Students from other States.
Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.
Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.
For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal.

L. L. FRIEND, Keyser, W. Va.

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY.
THREE COURCES OF INSTRUCTION.
AGRICULTURAL. MECHANICAL. SCIENTIFIC.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements: bath-rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

New buildings with every modern improvement, and old buildings thoroughly renovated by opening of first session. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, with annual deposit, ($159) one hundred and fifty nine dollars, for scholastic year. Daily visit by physician to College. Catalog giving full particulars sent on application. Attention is called to the Short Course of ten weeks in Agriculture. Write for particulars.

Term Commences, Thursday, September, 15.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER, President, College Park, Maryland.

The Maryland School for the Deaf,

37TH SESSION.

Reopens September 14th, 1904.

Non-Sectarian. For the deaf and dumb and those whose hearing is too defective for attendance on public school. Speech and lip-reading taught, as well as grammar school and academic studies.

Location very healthful. Board and Tuition free to residents of Maryland.

Apply to

CHAS. W. ELY, Principal, Frederick, Md.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. CO.

TO THE

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS BIENNIAL ENCAMPMENT,

LOUISVILLE, KY.

VERY LOW RATES

For the Round Trip.

TICKETS ON SALE August 12, 13, 14, 15, good returning leaving Louisville not later than August 31st, 1904.

Stop-overs allowed at specified points in each direction.

Get details from Ticket Agent.

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.

Office and residence, Alder St., east of post office.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1904. NUMBER 26

OFFUTT'S.

Some Suit
—AND—
Skirt Savings.

Savings of a third or a quarter of our regular low prices — real savings that should prompt you to come quickly.

Probably we took too many for sure selling at full prices, but we bought with the intention of maintaining the reputation of the Suit Department as being the best place to buy good garments at low prices, and we're sure we have broadened that good reputation beyond all past season's limitations, for we've never before had such selling.

Lots of good choosings. Judge by the prices upon examination,

AT OFFUTT'S.

SORELY AFFLICTED FAMILY.

Two Members Die of Diphtheria and One Other in a Precarious Condition.

The family of Mr. J. P. Allen, a traveling salesman of Cumberland, who occupy during the summer months a nicely appointed cottage at Mountain Lake Park, has been invaded this week by the Grim Reaper who for his reward has claimed two of Mr. Allen's children, they being Eugenias, aged four and a-half years, and John, aged 10 years, while another child about about three yea.s old is in precarious condition as a result of the ravages of diphtheria with which all three of the children were stricken last Saturday but not until Sunday morning did the disease develop in its true form when physicians were hurriedly summoned and they did all in their power to alleviate the sufferings of the victims.

The little girl, Eugenias, died Monday morning at an early hour and after the body had been embalmed and encased in an hermetically sealed casket, was shipped to Cumberland on train No 46 the same day.

Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock the boy John, aged about ten years, passed away and his body was shipped yesterday morning on train No. 8 to the same city.

The surviving child of Mr. and Mrs. Allen, a daughter of three years, is in a very critical condition and last night its death was expected at any moment.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen have the sincere sympathy of their friends at the Park.

LETTER TO C. A. ASHBY, Crellin, Md.

Dear Sir: A man said: Send me 25 gallons. Generally I use 24; don't think it'll be enough.

Had 7 left.

Ordered 9 more for another job; 16 for the job.

Had 6 left.

This comes from Messrs. W A & F Bower, Methuen, Mass. They add: This has been our experience all this y[illegible]

New agents always have to go through it. After a little, they learn to guess better. Yours truly

29 F W DEVOE & Co

P. S. J. M. Davis & Son sell our paint.

Call for Your Letters

Mrs. Susie Stanley, May Stewart, Clara Cummings, Miss E. C. Shumaker, Lizzie Greatman, Dora Curtis, Mr. Jos. Wrine, E. L. Tsshiffley, R. J. Nicodemus, J. A. Witherall, Mitchell Johnson, F. H. Markwell.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

FRUIT FOR ST. LOUIS FAIR.

The Maryland Horticultural Society Asks for Garrett County Varieties.

Maryland Day at the St. Louis Fair will be Septemcer 12th, and it is the desire of those having charge of our State's interest to have as fine a show upon that date as possible. In this connection the Maryland Horticultural Society will send a car load of choice fruit, and the wish is that each county shall contribute.

As Vice-President for Garrett county, I have been asked to secure an exhibit from our county, and take this means of letting the wish be known generally.

May I not ask that each farmer will examine his orchards, apple, plum, peach, etc., and see whether he has not at least one variety worthy of representation and if so, pick carefully by hand not less than a dozen specimens of each variety, (giving the name), wrap them each separately in soft paper, and send them with my name in care of one of the leading merchants of Oakland, on Tuesday, September 6th.

Each exhibitor will be given credit for his exhibit but I shall reserve the right to reject any not coming up to the required standard of perfect fruit.

I earnestly hope that all will take an interest in this matter, and that we may secure an exhibit worthy of our county.

Yours truly,
W. McCULLOH BROWN,
Vice Pres. Md. Hort. Society.

Communicated.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Recently I read a communication in your paper from the pen of Mr. Jacob Brown, of Cumberland, who paid our community a visit a week or two ago, which he describes as pleasant to him but modestly conceals the pleasure these yearly visit afford all who have had the opportunity to meet him. Mr. Brown from the earliest days of his life has impressed all who know him with the many good qualties of his character, being kind and generous to all men and never forgetting to speak kind words of advice to old and young. He affords instruction in his conversation so kindly that no one else seems to do.

His yearly visits to this section are looked forward to as a treat to both old and young. He is always accompanied by one of his daughters and more pleasant ladies are seldom if ever met with.

Long may his pen pay tribute to old times and places is the sincere wish of A FRIEND.

CAPITALISTS FROM THE SMOKY CITY.

Party of Pittsburgers Visit Garrett County Coal and Lumber Properties.

BIG OPERATIONS COMMENCED

McMillan Lumber Company Will Established New Town in this County Along Line of West Virginia Central Railroad.

A large party of prominent Pittsburg capitalists and business men were here yesterday, en route home from Wilson, where they have been inspecting the properties of the McMillan Lumber Company, a Pittsburg corporation. The party traveled in a private car and dined at the Queen City last night. It was composed of the following gentlemen: W. E. McMillan, Phil F. Simons, J. Francis Horten, C. L. Stroub, H. H. Lang, J. Albert Odell, Robert Hawk, G. C. Pheiffer, A. F. Meyer, H. W. Collins, James H. Smith, W. W. Whitesell, Henry Erdman, R. E. Hayes, A. McMillan, F. O. McMillan, Alfred Gariside, William G. Gish, all of Pittsburg, N. U. Bond, Bond, and W. F. Hayward, of Bond, Md., and A. K. Smith of Appolla, Pa.

They spent Sunday on the property of the lumber company, which is composed of 1,200 acres of timber and 1,368 acres of coal, located between Wilson and Bayard on the W. Va. C. & P. R. R. The visitors were much pleased with the property, which is one of the best in this section of the country. Operations in both the timber and coal have already been commenced. The hum of the busy saw mill is being heard on all sides, while a big force of miners are at work digging out the valuable fuel deposits. One heading has already been made in the coal lands.

The company will begin at once the establishment of a new town on the W. Va. C. & P. Railroad. It will be known as McMillan.—Monday's Cumberland News.

BLOOMINGTON.

The new bridge across the Potomac river between this place and Buxton, to be erected conjointly by the counties of Garrett, this state and Mineral, of West Virginia, was commenced on last Monday morning. Mineral county as her share in the work has donated the bridge being one of the spans now between Westernport and Piedmont, which is to be replaced by a new structure on account of the old bridge being too small to accommodate the rapidly increasing traffic between the two places. Garrett will build the abutments and place the span in position, which is approximately estimated to cost $1,000. Commissioner Stump is in charge and is looking after the interests of the taxpayers in keeping down expenses.

Miss Minnie Walker, of Blaine, W. Va., was in town last week visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. Tibbets, father of Messrs. William and Freeland Tibbets, was the guest of his children.

The Pattison mine resumed work and shipment of coal last Monday.

Mr. Aden Duckworth's condition remains about the same.

Mrs. H. Lanham is very ill with typhoid fever.

The Buxton mine, which offers employment to nearly all of the mining population of the place, is on half time. This, of course, makes business very dull in and around our little "burg."

Mrs. Philip Fazenbaker, of near Savage, is spending a few weeks with relatives at Atlantic City.

The corner stone of the new M. E. church will be laid with imposing ceremonies next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Masons of Hiram Lodge A. F. & A. M., Westernport, will have matters in charge, assisted by the Jr. O. U. A. M. Order of this place and Westernport. A special train over the B. & O. on next Sunday afternoon will convey the membership of the two lodges to this place and return at the conclusion of the ceremonies.

Church Dedication.

The new Methodist Episcopal church, which is now nearing completion at Lake Ford, two miles southeast of Cranesville, W. Va., will be dedicated on Sunday, September 11th. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

CHURCH FAIR IN OAKLAND.

Large Attendance And Very Successful Result.

The bazar held last Wednesday for the benefit of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Oakland was a great success, $300 being realized. The weather was fine, and there was a large attendance from Oakland, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Terra Alta and other towns. There were a number of handsomely decorated booths in the beautiful grove of oak trees in which the bazar was held. The bazar opened at 3 p. m. and closed at 8 p. m.

The opening address was made by Rev. T. E. Goodwin, rector of the church. At 4 p. m. there was a concert in the hotel ballroom by the United States Naval Academy Orchestra, Prof Charles A. Zimmerman, director.

The following had charge of the booths:

Supper—Mrs. A. Hilebaugh, Mrs. Bowie Johnson, Mrs. J. L. Pollock.

Cake—Mrs. L. B. C. List.

Candy—Miss Virginia Johnson.

Fancy table—Mrs. Sliger, Miss Goldsborough.

Grab Bag—Miss Bell.

Jacob's Well—Miss Roberts.

Mrs. Stull had the fruit and flower booth, and was assisted by Miss Lambert, Miss Hume, Miss Goldsborough and Mr. Goldsborough, of Washington; Miss Law, of Pittston, Pa. The booth was a crescent with canopy top of white, with trailing green vines. The flowers were all the choicest hothouse varieties, as well as the garden blossoms.

Episcopalians in the State of Maryland will note with satisfaction the success of the church fair as an eloquent sign of the revived interest in the Protestant Episcopal Church of this place. During the present season the churches at Oakland and Deer Park have been well attended and the visitors have enjoyed hearty and well-rendered services. The unanimity and good feeling in the parish promise well for the future of the Episcopal church.

Friendsville Pic Nic.

Saturday, August 13th, was red letter day in the little Maryland city on the Yough, when a large excursion from Ursina, Confluence, Somerfield and other stations took advantage of the excursion rates. The train left the former station about 9:30 a. m. and the excursionists enjoyed the day in a most agreeable manner.

Base ball was one of the principal features of the day, but several other amusements were indulged in, more particularly the manly art of self-defense.

A balloon ascension was on the program, but owing to some accident the balloon burst, burning several very severely, among the latter being Mr Cover, of Connellsville, who had his face very severely scorched.

The base ball match for which a prize of fifteen dollars of our daddies were given, was won by the U. & H. A. C. by a score of 7 to 2 defeating a Pen-Mar aggregation of players.

The Friendsville residents did all they could to entertain their visitors. Among those to whom the excursion gave the most flattering enconiums, were Schlossnagle & Mitchell, proprietors of the Crawford hotel, who appeared to know all present and did all in their power to entertain and give them every comfort, and also C. L. Dean and W. D. Collier, who were also unremitting in their attentions.

A few incsdents of a very amusing character occurred. Among these were that of two enthusiastic rooters who bet five dollars with each other that the U. & H. A. C. would win, both betting on one side. When the game was over both sides claimed the stakes and their controversy was almost as exciting as the Somerset borough school imbroglio; the matter ended by both contestants donating both wagers to the corporation of Friendsville, to be expended as the officials might choose.

The train left at 9:30 p. m. and there was a miniature Manchuria all the way home, but the casualities were not very heavy. When some beligerant iggorota chief got obstreperous, his loved one, or more properly some one else's loved one, would kiss and caress him and soothe his angry passions. This proves that kisses are even more potent than music to soothe the savage breast.—Meyersdale Commercial.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Your Fall Clothing.

THE KAHN-FEINBERG CO., 650 Broadway, New York, whose line of samples was shown at our store on Monday and Tuesday, August 22nd and 23rd,

Will be on Exhibition during the Balance of the Fall and Winter.

You know the character of their work; if not, it will pay you to learn it.

500 patterns of Suitings, Trouserings and Overcoatings to select from. Perfect fit guaranteed. The Newest and Richest Foreign and Domestic Fabrics.

H. L. DAUGHERTY, Oakland, Md.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

Great Bargains at Sincell's.

We Want You to See Them.

"Vast" begins to describe them—but doesn't even suggest the variety—the quality—value so conspicuously present in them all.

You must simply see them for yourself to realize the size and magnificence of our shirt waists which we are offering at 98 cents. They are winners and we have about ten dozens, all sizes, from 32 to 44. We invite you to call and look at them whether you care to buy or not.

Our Clothing Department,

In the careful choice of our selection lies much of its value to the buyer.

Constant touch with the centers of manufactnre and a carefully gleamed knowledge of what Fashion demands—these little things make our stocks strong.

The choicest line we have ever had to offer in Clothing we have now on display at prices astonishingly low. The prices in the ready-mades run from $4.50 to $18.00; made-to-measure $15 to $50

Come and See for Yourself.

The very newest styles in

Women's Tailor-Made Suits

One-Third Off.

We must close up our stock and offer

Great Bargains

To the Public.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

To be held at White Church, (M.E.), Ryan's Glade, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 10 and 11.

SATURDAY EVENING, SEPT. 10TH.

7.30.—Devotional, conducted by the pastor.

7.40.—Convention called to order. Temporary organization.

7.45.—Words of welcome by the pastor, Rev. E. J. Westfall.

7.50.—Response by Prof. Ephraim K. Lee.

8.00.—Address by Rev. W. M. Poisal, of Baltimore, subject, "The Man Behing the Gun."

8.30.—"Our Difficulties and How to Overcome Them"—Conference conducted by State Supt. Nock.

8.50.—Offering and announcements.

9.00.—Query Box.

9.10.—Adjournment.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

9.30.—Sunday School Experience Meeting, conducted by Prof. Ephraim Lee.

10.30.—Convention Sermon, delivered by Rev. W. M. Poisal.

2.30.—Children's Meeting, conducted by State Supt. G. H. Nock. Addrrssed by Mr. S. T. Jones, Hon. G. S. Hamill and others.

7.30.—Sunday School Mass Meeting. Permanent Organization. Brief addresses. Stirring music. Parting words. Adjournment.

NOTES.

The exercises will be interspersed with music.

Speakers are requested to observe the time limit.

The sessions will begin promptly.

Pastors and Superintendents are requested to announce the convention.

Pray for God's blessing on the convention.

Everybody invited.

Notice.

I will operate my cider mill at Kearney every Friday until October 16th. After that date I will operate cider and apple butter mill daily except Saturday as long as apples may be brought.

Thanking the public for past patronage and soliciting a continuance of the same, I remain,

Yours most respectfully,
W. H. MUMAW.

MACADAM HIGHWAYS

The Cost and Construction of These Roads.

Among the men whose names will live as long as civilization exists is that of John L Macadam, the road builder. Not only has his name become a part of the English language, but the kind of road which he built has been adopted by all civilized nations. The ancient Romans built stone roads, but they were different from and vastly more expensive than the macadam roads of modern times. They built a substantial foundation of rock, sometimes several feet in depth, and then covered it with a pavement of large, flat stones.

This kind of road will outlast any other. Indeed some parts of the Appian way, the building of which was begun three centuries before Christ, are still in use and in good repair. It remained for John L. Macadam, a modern Englishman, to prove that the great expenditure of time and money required in the building of old Roman roads was largely wasted. He demonstrated that a smooth, hard, enduring road could be built of crushed stone a few inches in depth properly spread and compacted on a foundation of earth.

The main points in successful macadam road building are, first, that the foundation be properly constructed and drained; second, that the surface of the road be slightly curved, so as to shed water, and third, that the surface of the finished road be made hard and smooth and as nearly water proof as possible. The last of these qualities is secured by spreading on the stone in layers, beginning with a layer of the largest fragments and finishing with a layer of very fine crushed stone, with which some sand is often incorporated. Each layer is well compacted with a heavy roller.

Although the expense of building macadam roads is trifling compared with that of constructing a stone paved road like that of the Roman Emperor Appius Claudius, it is still so great as to form the principal obstacle to macadamizing modern highways. The cost of course depends largely on the case with which suitable stone may be secured. Where the material has to be transported by rail for a considerable distance the cost is greatly increased. Some of the Massachusetts highways have cost $8,000 to $10,000 a mile, while in some other states good macadam roads have been built for $1,500 to $3,000 a mile.

Some friends of the good roads movement hesitate to join in the demand for national aid because they are appalled by the enormous expense involved in macadamizing the entire road mileage of the country. These persons are laboring under a mistake. The national aid bills do not propose to construct any particular kind of road. They simply propose to "improve the public roads" and provide for "investigations and experiments" to determine the best kinds of road material and the best methods of road building." In a recent article Representative Brownlow says:

"My own individual opinion is that some of the principal thoroughfares ought to be macadamized. Well informed road experts have estimated that if one-tenth of the road mileage of the country were macadamized and the other nine-tenths were improved in other and cheaper ways, using the best local materials available, the cost of hauling the farm products of the United Stotes to market would be reduced to one-half."

If this estimate is correct the saving to the farmers would be enormous and would in a few years be sufficient to cover the entire expense of making the improvements. Besides lessening the cost of hauling good roads will bring to the people of the rural districts pleasures and benefits which cannot be measured in money.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Public Sale of Personal Property.

I will offer at public auction at my barn in the town of Oakland, on Wednesday, Sept. 7th, 1904, at 11 a.m. six horses, six-seated carriage, six-seated canopy-top wagon, 1 Dayton, 1 surrey, 3 top-buggies, 6 run-a-bouts, 2 ladies phaetons, 1 drag, 1 cart, douale sleigh, 2 single sleighs, 4 sets double carriage harness, 5 sets single buggy harness, 2 wagons, 1 dump cart, 1 pair of bobsleds, 1 set double wagon harness, 1 plow, 1 harrow, and other articles usually connected with stables. Terms of Sale—On all sums over $5 a credit of six months will be given with approved security, with interest from day of sale; under $5, cash on day of sale; no property to be removed until terms are complied with.

ANN SWEENEY.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

PLEASANT FIELDS OF HOLY WRIT

SAVE for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ,
I might despair. —Tennyson.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Third Quarter. Lesson X. 1 Kings xix. 19-18 September 4, 1904.

Copyright, Davis W. Clark.

Elijah Encouraged.

Elijah, the exile and fugitive, left his last companion behind him at the last outpost of his own country, Beersheba. He gave himself over to the mystery of the desert with its mirage for the eye and unearthly whisper for the ear. On he sped, until, at length, on the rim of the horizon, rose the thunder-smitten pile which marked afar one of the most sacred places of earth, Mount Sinai, towering like a beauteous dome in the azure. He had consciously reached the goal of his solitary journey.

The awesome loneliness of the mountain, only peopled with the stirring memories of the past, was the fit environment for the prophet's all-night vigil. He would naturally review the past. Measured by the calendar it was a short time since God called him out of Gilead into Samaria. But, measured by events and issues, it must have seemed an age. His task was the recovery of a backslidden nation. To accomplish this he had denied his countrymen the greatest boon of nature in the Orient, rain of heaven, and had, after a prolonged season of suffering, restored it. He had presided at the duel between Jehovah and Baal on Carmel in sight of a nation and its unworthy ruler. He had put four hundred infamous priests to death. No prophet before him had done greater works.

Great and pitiful must have been the prophet's strivings in his solitary cell, the mountain cave. He had lost himself and his clew to Providence. All his calculations were at fault. He had fully expected to lead a penitent people to Jehoyah's altar, but at that very moment he must needs himself become a fugitive. The bitter cup of defeat was pressed to his lips. Chagrin and vexation took posession of him. Yet he could not but know he had come to the Mountain of the Burning Bush. On this very spot God had once spoken to another, who, under trying circumstances, stood forth as the representative of Israel. God had spoken to Moses. Elijah here might expect to hear the same voice. The harp of the human soul was strung for the breath of the Divine Spirit. The prepared message as ever came to the prepared ear.

Jehovah's challenge came first. It is not necessarily a rebuke, as if God had said, "What are you, a prophet of Samaria, doing here in Arabia?" It is, perhaps, only intended to awaken him and lead him to give free utterance to the thoughts and feelings of his own heart. The reply is thoroughly human and natural. The prophet protests his jealousy for Jehovah. He could not brook a rival to God in the reverence and worship of the people. In a single dash he paints the dolorous nocturne of his times—covenant forsaken, altars thrown down, prophets slain, and the life of the last representative of pure worship sought by a cuuning murderess.

In response to his plaint, the prophet is called to the door of his retreat to witness a parable of nature. First came an irresistible hurricane, which leveled granite barriers. It was a synonym of invincible might. Mountains were rent and rocks broken in pieces. Certainly this must be God! Yet the prophet knows by intuition that though the scene is awful it is not the best revelation of God. He records that comparatively it is as if God was not in the wind at all. Next comes the earthquake. Stable old earth sways horizontally, and at the same time rises and falls. Certainly He who laid the foundations fo the earth only could remove them! But after consideration the prophet concludes also that even an earthquake is not an adequate revelation, and that compared to other forms, God is not in the earthquake at all. Next came fire. All the mountain was a living flame, as in the day when Moses had stood on the very spot. The prophet's night was turned to day. All the rocky scenery in its height and depths, stood revealed. But even the purest element of nature, so dispensible to man, was not the best revelation of God. So every element which could indicate the Divine presence in the might of His power had passed before the prophet as in a panorama, only to have the verdict passed, "God is not here." Following these commotions of nature came a period of stillness. The contrast was so marked that it was as if the very silence was vocalized. In comparison to noisy demonstration, the gentle stilling was like an articulated utterance. Just as God was not comparatively in wind, earthquake, or fire, so relatively He was in that "sound of soft silencing."

Elijah's difficulties are cleared up. He has caught again the clue of Providence. He will never drop that thread again until it leads him to the chariot of fire. This splendid scenic parable has a meaning for him personally. He was so be like that in his own course. Roar is subsided into whisper. After the cataclysms of his career, tempest, lightning, earthquake, there is to be a period of blissful communion—a deepening experience of the Divine within himself. Elijah had consciously reached the culmination of his career. It has been aptly said that in the cave of Horeb the old Elijah was buried. The child had conquered the man and had left his body in the cave.

Again the parable had its meaning as related to the national life. Storm, earthquake, or fire were indispensable as an initial means of reformation. But they were initial only. Comparatively speaking, God was not in them at all. They were only the means of making the nation more susceptible to the gracious and gentle whisper which was to follow. That whisper was the still small voice of justice and truth, which breathed through the prophets which succeeded him. God was so much more in their beneficent influence that in comparison he seemed to be not at all in the terrific and sanguinary methods of Elijah.

The Teacher's Lantern.

Alone! Alone! Alone! The "loneliness of Jesus" has been discoursed upon. The solitariness of Elijah should not be forgotten. But after all, the prophet's plaint has been that of many a gifted mind in every age. Genius must needs be solitary. It is its fate to be misinterpreted by stupidity.

The prophet painted his times in dolorous nocturne tints. When will men learn that the cause of God has never yet been left to perish anywhere? In the final analysis the gates of hell never prevail against the kingdom of heaven in any form that ever assumes.

The ardent reformer may think that tempest, earthquake, and fire are indispensible. If these are not raging he feels that nothing is doing. But the divinest Teacher has said the kingdom comes unobserved, and is as the leaven hid in the meal. He said, ironically, "Two swords are enough," indicating that no sword at all was necessary. The stillness of education is after all the mightiest force in the social evolution.

The humanness of Elijah has marked illustration. Wonder is he was ever taken for an angel. St. James well says he was a man of nature. His reply to the Divine Challenge indicates utter despair over existing conditions and a carnal zeal which would call down fire upon opposers. He utters a tacit reproof to God. As if God had been looking on too long without intervention.

A little boy who had overheard some higher criticism, said to his mother in the confidential hour of bedtime, "Mamma, is the still small voice in the Bible yet?" The sensible mother answered quickly and positively, "Yes, it is!" The little fellow said, "Well mamma, I was just going to say it doesn't matter even if they have taken it out; I have it in me!"

INDIGESTION

"I was troubled with stomach trouble. Thedford's Black-Draught did me more good in one week than all the doctor's medicine I took in a year."—MRS. SARAH E. SHIRFIELD, Ellettsville, Ind.

Thedford's Black Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Thedford's Black Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

More sickness is caused by constipation than by any other disease. Thedford's Black-Draught not only relieves constipation but cures diarrhœa and dysentery and keeps the bowels regular.

All druggists sell 25-cent packages.

"Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine to regulate the bowels I have ever used."—MRS. A. M. GRANT, Sneads Ferry, N. C.

CONSTIPATION

Supervisors' Notice of APPOINTMENT OF Judges & Clerks Of Election.

OFFICER OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., AUG. 13, 1904.

The Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Judges and Clerks of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland for the year 1896, hereby give notice of the names and post-office address of each person so selected as Judges and Clerks, and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Elections intendes each of said persons to represent, respectively.

The law make it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be preferred to them in writing against any person so selected and to remove any such person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable to discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

Frank Sharpless, Democrat, Judge of Election, Swanton; Sheridan Stottlemeyer, Republican, Judge of Election, Beckman.

Sames L. McRobie, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Swanton; Alfred B. Mason, Republican, Clerk of Election, Beckman.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

Milford E. Frazee, Democrat, Judge of Election, Friendsville; Selathial Savage, Republican, Judge of Election, Friendsville.

Jos. E. Friend, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Kendall; Burbridge Thomas, Republican, Clerk of Election, Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

Leonard B. Kurtz, Democrat, Judge of Election, Grantsville; Gust Durst, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville.

Lewellyn Blocher, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Grantsville; Henry Latham, Republican, Clerk of Election, Keyser.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

Edwin Fazenbaker, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bloomington; Henry Barnard, Republican, Judge of Election, Bloomington.

Wm. Moorehead, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bloomington; Floyd Duckworth, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

Josiah Smearman, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; A. P. Enlow, Republican, Judge of Election, Hoyes.

Clarence Diehl, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Accident; M. H. Lohr, Republican, Clerk of Election, Cove.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

J. T. Weimer, Democrat, Judge of Election, McHenry; M. H. Frankhouser, Republican, Judge of Election, Cranesville, W. Va.

Wm. J. Bowman, Democrat, Clerk of Election, McHenry; Frank Glotfelty, Republican, Clerk of Election, McHenry.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

Jos. H. Smithman, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Jas. O. Cleveland, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

A. Y. Hinebaugh Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; W. S. Friend, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

D. H. Ridder, Democrat, Judge of Election, Gortner; Jas. Aronhoit, Republican, Judge of Election, Wilson, Grant county, W. Va.

J. A. Shaffer, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Gortner; Geo. W. Harvey, Republican, Clerk of Election, Gormania, W. Va.

Election District Number Nine—Johnsons.

Patrick Hoye, Democrat, Judge of Election, Frostburg; Thomas Layman, Republican, Judge of Election, Frostburg, Allegany county.

Floyd Crowe, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Frostburg, Allegany county; Jas. R. McKenzie, Republican, Clerk of Election, Frostburg, Allegany county.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

Emil F. Droege, Democrat, Judge of Election, Deer Park; Isaac A. Paugh, Republican, Judge of Election, Deer Park.

Michael J. Garrett, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Deer Park; J. B. Shockey, Republican, Clerk of Election, Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

Albin Fazenbaker, Democrat, Judge of Election, Barton; Salem V. Broadwater, Republican, Judge of Election, Merrill.

David Warnick, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Barton; David P. Hansell, Republican, Clerk of Election, Lonaconing.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

Jas. Harrison, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bond; Dennis Dietrich, Republican, Judge of Election, Bittinger.

Oliver Buckle, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bittinger; Edward S. Brenneman, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

C. H. Pool, Democrat, Judge of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.; Robert C. Wilson, Republican, Judge of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.

George J. Pool, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.; Burt Wilson, Republican, Clerk of Election, Blaine, Mineral county, W. Va.

Eliction District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

Daniel A. Vaughn, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; Jos. T. Glotfelty, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

J. O. Browning, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; Samuel Lawton, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland

EDMUND JAMISON, Pres.,
C. M. MILLER,
E. E. SOLLARS,

Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett County, Md.

CHAS. A. DEFFINBAUGH, Clerk.

L. A. RUDISILL,

REAL ESTATE, LOANS, INSURANCE,

Mountain Lake Park, Md.

LIFE, ACCIDENT, HEALTH AND FIRE INSURANCE.

I sell Farms, Dwelling and Business Houses, Hotels, Lots, Coal, Timber and Oil Lands anywhere in Garrett county, Maryland. - - - -

Special attention given to Renting and Selling Mountain Lake Park, Loch Lynn and Oakland property.

I have some attractive Bargains in Houses and Lots in Loch Lynn.

OFFICE IN THE NEWS BUILDING.

BAUMGARTNER'S BIG BARGAINS!

5C SUGAR BOWLS, CREAM PITCHERS, THREE PAPERS PINS, ½ GAL. TIN BUCKETS, CAKE PLATES, AND LOTS MORE. 5C

Come around and see what 5 and 10c will do.

THE LITTLE MAN.

The Boy Makes the Mule Go,
And the Mule Makes the Cart Go.

WITH OUR NEW PROCESS

We Make the Bread Go!

Because It Is Best.

A Trial Will Convince You.

OAKLAND MODEL STEAM BAKERY,
HENRY LAUER, Proprietor.

YOU SAVE $40

In purchasing a Writing Machine when you buy the New Model

WELLINGTON.

A practical business-like Typewriter at a reasonale price.

$60.00.

A strictly high-grade, up-to-date machine, combining all the best features of other Typewriters with many vital advantages of its own. The writing is always in sight, the alignment is always perfect, they are built for hard work and plenty of it; are simple in construction and are very rapid. Do not buy a TypeBriter of any kind until you investigate the WELLINGTON.

N. S. HEINDEL, Agent,
OAKLAND, - MD.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

CANCER CURED

permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1520 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

L. E. HANSON.
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland

PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

MAGIC REMEDY

Cures Diarrhœa, Cramps in the Stomach, Colera Morbus, Dysentary or Flux, in a few minutes. A positive cure. Keep a bottle handy; it will save many a doctor's bill and possibly your life. At dealers, 25c; by Mail, 30c—in safety mailing case.

KEYSTONE COMPY BLAINE W. VA.

NOTICE.

The undersigned hereby gives notice to the general public not to trust or harbor my wife, Mary Ann Bittner, who left my bed and board without just cause or provocation, nor my three minor children, who accompanied her, they being Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, as I will not be responsible for any debts she, the said Mary Ann Bittner, nor they, the said Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, may contract in my name.

JEREMIAH BITTNER.

Friendsville, Md., August 5th, 1904. 23-3t

His Flower Fairy

By KATE M. CLEARY

Copyright, 1904, by Kate M. Cleary

They were not there when he had left the room.

Percival Craig, the new rector of St. Sebastian's, paused with his hand on the back of the swivel chair which he had been about to give a preparatory twirl before sitting down.

"Another evidence of personal good will," he murmured, his fair, expressive face brightening almost boyishly with gratification. "Verily, my lines seem to have fallen in pleasant places."

One would have conceded that fact, knowing how cultured the minds, how generous the hearts and how high the standard of rectitude among the parishioners of St. Sebastian's. The pastor preceding the present incumbent had grown old in their service. While he had been beloved, it was pleasant to the congregation to welcome the advent of a younger man, one whose opinions, although progressive, were free from the taint of irreverence and whose family connections were all that the most fastidious among them could desire.

This morning, the first that Craig had deliberately settled down to work in his study, he had been called to the door for a few minutes. Now, on his return he found things precisely as he left them, except that on the ponderous tome open upon his desk lay a slender sheaf of hyacinths, heliotrope of hue, freshly cut and fragrant.

"Mrs. Mason!" The footsteps passing through the hall ceased. "Step here, please!"

His housekeeper, ruddy cheeked and gray haired, looked in at the door.

"Did you put these flowers here, Mrs. Mason?"

"Not I, sir!"

"Maybe Ellen did," he hazarded.

"She's been washing windows upstairs this hour back, sir," returned Mrs. Mason. And, muttering something about her custards, she disappeared.

"Strange!" commented the Rev. Percival. But the pleased smile still lingered around his mouth when he had put the delicate spikes in water and was reading the solemn looking book.

Before the hyacinths had faded there was another floral surprise for the new

"I DIDN'T WANT YOU TO—TO KNOW 'TWAS ME!" SHE SOBBED.

rector. This time it was a rose that lay on the printed page—a pink, softly growing, velvety rose—that made him think of Alys Ward. He had met her a few times since coming to his new parish, and he found himself most persistently haunted from the first by her demure beauty and pretty, graceful ways.

He rang the bell.

"Has any one called to see me this morning, Mrs. Mason?"

"No one, sir." Mrs. Mason regarded him admiringly. He was a fine representative of the church militant. That straight, soldierly figure, square shoulders and proudly carried head would have looked well leading a regiment.

For several days after the finding of the rose instead of loitering in the dining room to read the morning papers Mr. Craig brought them with him directly to the study. The rose drooped. He shook the loosening petals in the big book. There was no odorous successor. But one morning he was summoned to the bedside of a hypochondriac acquaintance who was undergoing one of his periodical attacks of dissolution. Striding absentmindedly into the study on his return, he stopped short, his nostrils assailed by a perfume elusive as exquisite.

"Violets!" he exclaimed. "Violets!"

Violets there were—a blue drift of them across the open pages of the learned book.

This time, in the absence of Mrs. Mason, he interrogated Ellen—and with more success.

"Sure, 'tis a slip uv a colleen do be after bringin' them!" declared Ellen, who was fresh from the Emerald Isle and a new acquisition in the clerical household. "Her name do be Ward, they tell me. She lives in the great house beyant."

"That will do," said the Rev. Mr. Percival hastily. But he did not read in the wide volume that day. Instead he sat a long time looking dreamily at the violets and wondering—oh, the most marvelous things!

Although he had been much flattered by women, he had scant share of conceit. So at the close of his reverie he sighed. He could attribute to naught save pure neighborliness the gifts of the girl to whom his love had gone out almost at first sight. Nevertheless, when the violets were withered, on two successive mornings he left the house with much ostentation and soon thereafter noiselessly let himself into the hall. On the second morning there was a flurry of white by the study table as he abruptly entered the room, then a fall and a cry of pain. Instantly he sprang across the floor—to pick up the slim little lassie of six, who lay with a bunch of lilies of the valley clasped tightly in her tiny fingers.

"I didn't want you to—to know 'twas me!" she sobbed. "I always brought them to old Mr. Snowdon. Mrs. Mason used to let me in. And he never knew 'twas me. He used to tell me the fairies or—or maybe just one fairy—brought them to him. And I'd laugh and laugh. Ouch!" She colored hotly with the pain. "My foot got hurted!"

"I'll carry you home," Percival assured her tenderly. "You liked Mr. Snowdon (who, by the way, was the predecessor of the Rev. Mr. Craig), you liked him very much?"

"Yes. Maybe I'll like you, too, some time. Alys—she's my sister—says you are most—most—I forget. It was a long word. But it means nice. Tommy Brown says Mr. Snowdon only pretended he didn't know about me being the fairy. Isn't Tommy a horrid boy?"

"Horrid!" assented Percival Craig. "Don't be frightened, Miss Alys!" For she had come flying down the steps at sight of him and his burden.

"Fairies always get well quickly," he assured little May. "I intend coming to see you every day until you can come to see me.'

"Do," begged the child from the shelter of her sister's arms. "But you won't ever think I'm a real fairy now."

Alys laid her on the sofa and went out to telephone the doctor.

"Oh, yes; I will if you help me to get my wish. Good fairies always help mortals."

"What is your wish?"

"I want you to coax dear Alys to marry me and have you for flower girl."

"That's easy. Alys will do anything for me," declared May complaisantly. "Say—I remember that word now. It was at-tractive."

"Good little fairy!" cried Craig and hastened off. In his study he gently picked up the blossoms she had insisted on leaving. He recalled the look in Alys Ward's eyes when she had taken May from him, and his pulse thrilled. "Good little sister!" he said. "Dear little fairy flower girl!"

Decide What You Will Do.

An engineer who starts to build a bridge and then keeps finding better places to put his piers and wondering whether he has selected the best location or not will never get the bridge across the river. He must decide, then go ahead and build the bridge no matter what obstacle he may strike. So it is with the builder of character. He must decide finally what he will do and then make for his goal, refusing to look back or be moved from his course.

Tens of thousands of young people with good health, good education and good ability are standing on the end of a bridge at life's crossing. They hope they are on the right way, they think they are doing the right thing, and yet they do not dare to burn the bridge they have just crossed. They want a chance for retreat in case they have made a mistake. They cannot bear the thought of cutting off all possibility of turning back. They lack the power to decide conclusively what course they will take.—O. S. Marden in Success.

Very Ancient Jokes.

When Themistocles was trying to get money out of the Ondrians for the Greece defense fund and told them that the Athenians would come with two great gods, persuasion and necessity, the Andrians replied that the Athenians were well off with two such serviceable gods, but they had two gods who always dwelt in their country—poverty and impossibility.

Cyprus' bitter jest about the fishes to the wretched Ionians, who had declined his overtures, and then after the taking of Sardis wanted to come to terms, has too much cruelty to be humorous. "Say," said the insulting victor, "that a piper, seeing fishes in the sea, were to pipe to them, thinking they will come out to the land, and when he was disappointed of his hope took a net and inclosed a great multitude of the fishes and drew them to land, and seeing them flopping about said to the fishes, 'Cease dancing to me, since you would not come out and dance when I played.'"—Westminster Review.

Queer Scenes In St. Paul's.

At one time the naves of English churches were the resorts of idle loungers, the gentry affecting much to walk to see and to be seen in the various edifices. But the scenes which took place in "Paul's walk," in St. Paul's cathedral London, became a scandal. The cathedral was termed "at once a thoroughfare, a market and a fashionable promenade." From an act passed in the reign of Queen Mary dealing with this abuse it would seem that beer, bread fish and flesh were vended there horses, mules and cattle driven through the building, and, according to an old writer, the midst of the cathedral was the scene of "all kinds of bargains meetings, brawlings, murders, conspiracies and the font for ordinary payments of money." It should be mentioned that no difference was made when the service was going on.

How to Be Well Dressed

By Mme. EMMA CALVE, Operatic Singer

TO be well dressed, really well dressed, a woman should so dress that she herself and not her clothing attracts attention. A DRESS, with its complementary adjuncts of hat, gloves and umbrella, IS THE PICTURE FRAME. THE WOMAN IS THE PICTURE, and if the frame be too garish, or even without excessive brightness in the coloring, too obtrusive, it must of necessity, in my opinion, be in bad taste. A woman should be dressed so that her clothes become a part of her, and she should choose them so that she forgets them when she has them on. Nothing is more objectionable both to the wearer and her friends than the self consciousness of clothing many women make apparent.

I THINK THAT THREE WOMEN OUT OF FOUR PAY FAR TOO MUCH ATTENTION TO THE FASHIONS. WOMEN WHO DRESS ACCORDING TO THE FASHION MERELY AND WITHOUT THE EXERCISE OF THEIR OWN INDIVIDUALITY MUST NECESSARILY ACHIEVE UNSATISFACTORY RESULTS.

Fashion should be used as you would use a lorgnette in a theater—that is to say, when necessary only, and not all the time. Fashion is very much like fire in one respect. It is the best of servants, but the worst of masters.

A WOMAN SHOULD ADAPT THE FASHIONS TO HERSELF AND NOT HERSELF IN SLAVISH IMITATION TO THE FASHIONS. Even in stuffs this is important. How often have I seen small slips of women staggering under heavy cloths and velvets merely because a tall and stately woman looks perfection in them! How often, on the other hand, have I seen big women crushed into dresses which must hurt them, and which hurt the eye of anybody with a sense of the artistic even more!

No woman should pay too little attention to her dress, but her chief object should be to attain that acme of perfection in it which makes her look as though she never thought about her dress at all.

THE PERFECT DRESS IS ONE WHICH HAS NOT BEEN CREATED YET. I like the fashions of today and think that they approach true beauty nearer than those of earlier days. We have become enfranchised of the awful custom which made women hide themselves as much as possible in their dresses, and we have learned, though we have taken years to learn, that THE WOMAN'S FORM IS A THING WHICH SHOULD BE CLOTHED FOR ITS BETTER SHOWING, not dissembled—no crinolines, no puffed out shoulders, no abnormal shapes and waists crushed into nothing.

I like the fashions of the day because they carry out my theory that woman's dress should be a picture frame and not a method of concealment, bunched in here and tightened there, built upon framework and altogether made in such a way as to make of the woman in it a mere artificial thing of basket work or whalebone.

A WELL DRESSED WOMAN SHOULD BE A WOMAN WELL DRESSED FIRST OF ALL—BUT FIRST OF ALL, YOU UNDERSTAND, THE WOMAN, THEN THE DRESS. A FRAME, NO MOTTER HOW EXQUISITE OF ITSELF, WHICH TOOK AWAY ATTENTION FROM THE PICTURE WOULD BE INARTISTIC. AND SO IT IS IN DRESS. DO NOT FOLLOW THE FASHIONS NOR LET THEM FOLLOW YOU, BUT GO HAND IN HAND WITH THEM IN HARMONY.

Evils of Modern Society And Their Correction

By JOHN D. LONG, Former Secretary of the Navy

THE real truth is not that the world has outgrown the simple precepts of Jesus, but that IT HAS NEVER REACHED THEM in their height or depth. We have never attained to the perfect practice of that simplest Christian rule—to love those that hate us, to love our neighbor as ourselves, to be pure in spirit.

Brutalities and crimes, drunkenness and misconduct are not confined to the lower classes, but they break out among young men and women who have had the opportunity of benefiting by our boasted education.

THERE ARE CORRUPTION, BRIBERY AND EMBEZZLEMENT BY OUR PUBLIC SERVANTS. THE SACRED TIES OF DOMESTIC LIFE ARE DISREGARDED. THE TEMPLE OF THE LORD IS INVADED BY MERE BIRDS OF PREY, WHO SHOULD BE WHIPPED OUT OF IT WITH LASHES OF SCORN.

To correct these evils is our work. The remedy is not in the effort of labor or capital to promote its material interests; it is not in the efforts men make to better their conditions by theories of social organization. These things will, under natural laws in a free country, work out their only salvation.

THE VITAL NEED IS THE RELIGION OF JESUS; IT IS CHRIST IN THE INDIVIDUAL MAN, REVERENCE FOR THE GREAT FUNDAMENTAL PRECEPTS OF THE MASTER, THEIR INCORPORATION INTO ACTUAL DAILY LIFE AS CONTROLLING SPRINGS OF ACTION.

Both Japan and Russia Are In the Wrong

By OSCAR S. STRAUS, Member of the Hague Peace Tribunal

IF the questions at issue between Russia and Japan were submitted to The Hague tribunal, THAT BODY WOULD DECIDE AGAINST BOTH NATIONS because they are battling for the control of a third nation. I believe that The Hague tribunal will yet have to be invoked to settle this war. I believe further that the war will bring such destruction on victors as well as vanquished that all nations will look upon warfare as the greatest of terrors.

DO NOT LOSE HOPE. THE TIME WILL COME SOON WHEN THE WAR DRUMS WILL BE HEARD NO LONGER IN THE LAND.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

Carey's Magnesia Flexible Cement Roofing for Flat or Steep Surfaces

Is suitable for all classes of buildings as it affords thorough fire protection and is a non-conductor of heat and cold. It will last the lifetime of the roofboards. It is fire-proof and is rated the same as metal or slate roofs. Call or write for samples and prices.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,

Agents for Garrett County, Oakland, Md.

First National Bank

OF GRANTSVILLE, MD

Now Open for Business.

EQUIPPED WITH A

Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe and Vault.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound banking.

Deposits by mail and all correspondence give prompt attention.

We Solicit Your Account.

Paid-up Capital, - - $25,000
Liability of Stockholders, 25,000
Total Liability, - $50,000

PAYS 3 PER CENT.

on time deposits. Interest computed and paid semi-annually.

DIRECTORS.

C. H. JENNINGS,
U. M. STANTON,
G. C. KELLER,
ELI STANTON,
W. A. HITCHINS,
J. S. HERSHBERGER,
FRANK WATTS

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - President.
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President.
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier.

The Up-to-Date Grocery,

First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.

Exclusively a Grocery Store.

CASH OR PRODUSE—One price to everybody and that the lowest consistent with a complete line of High-Grade Groceries.

Everything New, Clean and First-Class.

Fresh Vegetables on THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS.
Largest Line of CRACKERS in Oakland—Fresh Every Week.

W. H. BARTLETT.

THOS. LITTLE.

This is the season of year to make changes, and I will make a GREAT REDUCTION in the prices of

China and Porcelain Ware.

I have a large stock of this goods and they must go at the remarkably low price of 10c each. Many of these pieces are cheap at 25c. But I have concluded to sell all at the low price of 10c each.

They consist of Decorated, Gold Trimmed Meat Plates, large and small, Bakers, Nappies, Pitchers, Bowls, Cups and Saucers, large and small plates, just the thing for every day use.

Also a Fine Line of Imported China at Less than Cost.

Come Early and get the Choice Pieces.

THOS. LITTLE.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$ 1.25
One copy six months.....75
One copy three months.....40
One copy one month.....15
Single copies.....05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

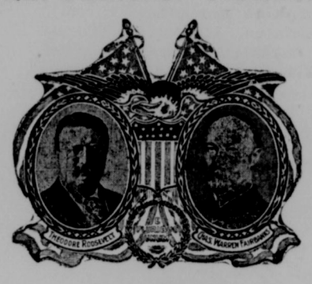
REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 1, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.



For President:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

New York.

For Vice-President:

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,

Indiana.

For Congress:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

Allegany County.

SAVING THE CONSTITUTION.

When the Democrats face a national campaign in which they are unable to present a united front on the real live issues that are engaging the public they fall back upon their old occupation of saving the "Con-sti-tution." Money, tariff, imperialism, trusts, are the chief questions on which this campaign will hinge, but on none of them is the party united, and so the cry is again raised that the dear old Constitution is in danger and must be rescued at all hazards.

The Parker Democrats of New York City have formed the Parker Constitution Club, whose object is to rally the friends of constitutional government and save the Federal Magna Charta from the dangerous assaults now being committed upon it by President Roosevelt and the wicked Republicans. Of course the Democratic party is the great custodian of the "Con-sti-tu-tion." When President Lincoln was doing his best to preserve the Union and the Constitution, the Democratic party in national convention assembled in Chicago, on August 29, 1864, denounced Lincoln as a usurper, demanded that the assaults on the Constitution cease, and highly

"Resolved, That this convention does explicity declare, as the sense of the American people, that, after four years of failure to restore the Union by the experiment of war, during which, under the presence of a military necessity of a war power higher than the Constitution, the Constitution itself has been disregarded in every part, and public liberty and private right alike trodden down, and the material prosperity of the country essentially impaired, justice, humanity, liberty and the public welfare demand that immediate efforts be made for a cessation of hostilities."

The Democratic party all over the country joined this "Constitutional Club" in 1864, and demanded that the war stop and the slave states be allowed to proceed with their program of disrupting the Union and smashing the Constitution; emphazing their membership in said club by casting nearly 2,000,000 votes against Abraham Lincoln.

These zealous guardians of the Constitution that then traduced Lincoln as the usurper, now eulogize him as a great and good patriot. Later, they denounced Gen. Grant as a czar and another despoiler of the Constitution but today they admit he was the great apostle of peace and the coworker of Lincoln in saving the Union and the Constitution.

Still later, they held up the gentle William McKinley as an autocratic "Emperor," trampling upon the Constitution, whom now they confess to have been a safe and prudent president and most loveable man.

But they are again playing the same old racket, and now it is Roosevelt the "lawless" that they are denouncing for his awful disregards of this same Constitution. He is dangerous, reckless, a rough rider, a trampler upon constitutional safeguards and the liberties of the people!

Hence the Parker "Con-sti-tutional" Club of New York.

One of the peculiar things about this Democratic party is its utter lack of the sense of the ludicrous. What it espounsed in one campaign it repudiates in the next with as much coolness and composure as if it had always been the original ouly and consistent political organization instead of the greatest tumbler that ever came wabbling along in the march of human events.

THE free trader may beat about the bush with his theories and dogmas, but he cannot escape the fact that our prosperity has come under the protective tariff system and our hard times under low tariff.

WORTHY OF SUPPORT.

The Republican party is worthy of support because:

It has fulfilled every government obligation.

It has made it possible for the United States to borrow money cheaper than any other country on earth.

It has never advocated a policy that would tarnish the good name of the country.

It has kept inviolate and entire the honor of the flag.

It has always stood for the protection of American industries.

It has always opposed free trade.

It has always been a debt-paying, not a debt creating party.

It benefits all classes, laborer, farmer, producer, manufacturer, and every citizen that desires to make an honest living.

It prefers to encourage the manufacturer of new products in the United States rather than import them from abroad.

It looks upon the whole world as its legitimate market.

It recognizes no sectional lines, but benefits all parts of the country, North, South, East, West.

It never did believe in a 50-cent dollar, and saved the country from that calamity.

It does not believe in fomenting class hatred.

It does not want American workmen to try to live on the low wages paid in Europe.

It believes that free trade labor is not as well paid as protected labor.

It does not believe in war, but when war must be fought it makes it short, sharp and decisive.

It believes in subordinating partisanship to patriotism.

It believes in the encouragement of American commerce.

It believes that international treaties have the force of law.

It is opposed to the alienation of any part of American territory.

It never made an unfortunate investment in real estate.

It believes in the annexation of Hawaii in spite of Democratic opposition.

It believes in discussing real issues without creating fictitions ones.

It believes in the expansion rather than the diminution of territory.

It prefers prosperity to panic.

It believes that the best money in the world is none too good for the people of the United States.

It has passed every anti-trust law ever enacted by federal legislation.

It honors the army which with honor upholds the American flag.

It is the missionary not the miser of liberty.

It believes that the farms and foundries of the country need the boundless markets of the Orient.

It prefers to lend money to other nations rather than borrow from them.

It never declared that any war in which the country was engaged was a failure.

It does not believe in furling the flag in the face of the enemy.

It has placed the currency of the country on a sound basis.

It has rescued ten millions of people from the imperial and despotic rule of Spain.

It has increased both the domestic and foreign demand for the products of the shop and farm.

It has secured the control of the Pacific which will be the theatre of the world's greatest commercial activity in the immediate future.

It is the only party with definite principle and beliefs.

It has no apologies to make for past mistakes, nor does it take its principles second-hand from its opponents.

It is the party of progress, hope and aspiration

It looks to the future, not to the past, does things rather than talks about them.

THE protective tariff insures the greatest possible good to the greatest possible number.

JUCGE PARKER AS A LEADER.

If Judge Parker takes the stump as the National Democratic Committee desires, it will be interesting to follow his discussion of the issues of the campaign. The Democratic Convention at St. Louis avoided the financial issue because the delegates could not agree on a financial plank, but that convention did take positive position on the tariff, Philippines, the trusts and other questions. This was more than Judge Parker did in his speech of acceptance. In that dignified utterance Judge Parker was uncertain, at times apologetic regarding the issue of the campaign. On the tariff he said: "I am for tariff revision but there need be no fear because my party cannot do anything to revise the tariff because of a Republican Senate." What further contribution on the tariff can Judge Parker make if he goes on the stump? Will he stand with his party and denounce Republican protection as robbery, as one of the greatest evils of the age and still admit that he and his party can and will do nothing to change this, if he should be elected?

On the trust question Judge Parker was still more equviocal and uncertain, almost justifying the declaration of Bryan that his nomination nullified the trust planks in the St. Louis platform. Judge Parker in his speech of acceptance justified the complaint of trusts and said the common law was enough to deal with them; the courts could apply the common law, nothing more in law was needed, but if he was mistaken in this view, he was willing to be convinced of that mistake and act accordingly.

Is this the great man who has been nominated by the Democratic party because of his superior wisdom, his judicial balance, his far-seeing judgment and his incorruptible spirit? He was heralded as a leader who would lead, and yet on every question before the people to be discussed in this campaign, he has been halting and uncertain in his first expression, accepting the nomination. His party has boldly blazed the way but he as leader has given no expression on any one question that would indicate that he had a conviction beyond that he could as President fill the office with dignity.

Judge Parker has already made his utterance on the tariff, the trusts, the Philippines question and other questions and he has on all assumed the attitude of the young school teacher who said he believed the world was flat as the patrons of the school desired. That is the leadership of Judge Parker. He is the meekest follower in the Democratic ranks.

AGRICULTURE finds a near, sure market, under the protective system, which preserves the home market to the home producer.

A WISE POLICY FOR A BIG NATION.

We are the most continental of all the continental peoples and have the moss diversified products. The United States should maintain a continental policy. Free trade is adapted only to insular nations.

While a protective tariff might at the outset, right after its adoption, increase prices, the resulting activity and the abundant home production under protection, tend constantly to reduce the price of manufactured articles as industry becomes better organized. As a result, the country becomes wealthier, both absolutely and relatively; absolutely, because the aggregate of home produced commodities is vastly increased, and relatively because wages are kept above the European level. Under free trade or a tariff for revenue only, we have to send our gold out of the country to pay for imported goods and to compete with the entire world in disposing of our own products at home, thus lowering our wages to the level of those paid to the cheap labor of Europe.

The protective tariff enables our country to develop industries of which others countries, if it were not for protection, would enjoy a practical monopoly. Although not profitable in the United States unless protected, these industries are important to our national independence and development should not be allowed to become extinct.

We are not selfish in our prosperity; we are glad to share it with the competent workingmen of other nations. But we insist that they shall pack up and come here, is they want to share it, for we will not send it across the water to them as free trade would do.

The constantly increasing tide of immigration ought to be an object lesson on the tariff, to the undecided American voter, or the voters who is harkening to the voice of the free trade siren. What does it mean? It means that under free trade and low tariffs abroad such poor wages are paid, they are compelled to come to America, where the workingman is protected by the tariff and paid good wages.

You could not convince any of these intelligent immigrant workingmen that free trade would be a good thing for this country. They know by experience. We ought to know by experienee, as we had a bitter dose of Democratic tariff in the second Cleveland administration.

WISE ADMINISTRATION, NOT NEW LEGISLATION.

What the country needs is not new legislation, but continued wise administration of existing laws. The Democratic party seems intent upon changing the laws, although their present leaders are far from agreeing upon the kind of changes to be made. But they all agree that they must try to get in and change something. That kind of argument is not likely to go far with the thoughtful voters of this country.

In order to have wise administration of existing laws, and to make sure that there will be no change that would prove detrimental to the business interests, is it not probable that the majority of the intelligent electorate of this country will conclude to keep the Republican party in power? The Republicans passed the existing monetary laws, which placed the finances of the country upon a basis that makes our system the equal of any in the world. What the country wants is not a further experiment with new financial legislation, especially of the Bryan kind, but continued wise administration of the existing law.

The Republican party put the present tariff law on the statute books. It undoubtedly has brought prosperity to the nation. The country does not want new tariff legislation, such as the Democrats propose, to unsettle business, disturb existing conditions, scare the manufacturers, curtail employment of labor, withdraw capital from investment and circulation. The country, on the other hand, wants continued wise administration of the trriff law.

The Republican party established the law under which we are governing the Philippines, and which has been sanctioned by the United States Supreme Court, to whose decision every man in this land must bow. The country does not want new laws in the Philippines, such as proposed by the Democrats, which will undo the patient labor of American hands in the past four years; which will set at naught the sacrifice of American lives already made and which will set back the progress of the Filipinos indefinitely.. The country wants continued wise administration of the present laws.

Well, there is one sure way to get it. It is a way open to every American voter. If he votes the Republican ticket next November he can help the continued wise administration of existing laws. If he votes the Democratic ticket and the Democrats should win, he will have assisted in opening Pandora's box.

A great deal can be done in the administration of a law. A hostile President, and his cabinet officers, can go a long way towards nullifying, offsetting and crippling existing law, if that law does not agree with their policies. The Democratic party could not possibly get full control of the Government in this election. No matter what might happen, a Republican Senate is elected and will see to it that no detrimental change is made in the laws that the Republican party has placed on the statute books. But a Democratic President and cabinet ought not to be put into office for the ministration of the Republican laws, which would be hateful to them.

What is the use of frightening the busy industries of the country, through the election of a Democratic President or House with the suggestion that perhaps the next election might give the free traders power to do what they want to do? What is the use of menacing the financial stability of the country safely assured under existing conditions, with the fear that next time a Bryan Secretary of the Treasury might be a possibility? What is the use of encouraging the Filipinos to resistance to existing law, in the hope that perhaps another election would put their Democratic friends in power and enable them to haul down the American flag for good and all? What's the use?

THEREFORE ROOSEVELT.

When the people wanted coal, he got them coal; therefore Roosevelt.

When the people wanted an isthmain canal, he got them the Panama canal; therefore Roosevelt.

When Great Britain and Germany endeavored to ignore the Monroe doctrine, he called them down; therefore Roosevelt.

When men were wanted for the Spanish war, he organized the rough riders; therefore Roosevelt.

When the time came to fulfill William McKinley's promises of aid to Cuba, he carried the Cuban reciprocity bill; therefore Roosevelt.

When matters in the postal department needed investigation, he forced the investigation; therefore Roosevelt.

When the time came to enforce John Sherman's anti-trust law, he enforced it; therefore Roosevelt.

When it is necessary to speak "right out in meeting" he does so; therefore Roosevelt.

When there is work to be done on behalf of the whole American people, he does it; therefore Roosevelt.

When the time came to assume William McKinley's burden of responsibility, and to carry out his policy, he did both; therefore Roosevelt.

When the necessity arose to recognize the rights of our colored fellow citizens, he recognized them; therefore Roosevelt.

When the people of New York city sent him to Albany, as assemblyman, to protect their interetts, he protected them; therefore Roosevelt.

When the people of the State of New York called him to the governor's chair, he made one of the best governors the state ever had; therefore Roosevelt.

When his party nominated him for the presidency on the platform they had adopted, he did not dodge, or seek to dodge, any of its planks; therefore Roosevelt.

When his party nominated him to stand on a platform of gold, he did not wobble on one of silver, with gold trimmings of his own, as does his opponent; therefore Roosevelt.

THE estimation in which the people of the counties of Maryland hold the question of good roads is being fully demonstrated, and the efforts of the projectors of the new law for State aid to road building is receiving its reward in the earnestness with which five or six counties of the State, led by Prince George's county, are already taking steps to avail themselves of the State fund appropriated for model road building. Montgomery, Allegany, Harford and Caroline counties have all indicated their interest in the building of one or more pieces of model road within their boundaries, and these counties Allegany and Harford are arranging for the preparation of plans, specifications and estimates upon certain roads in order to obtain the State-aid and go forward with the road-building as soon as the necessary funds become available.

Prince George's county, through its Board of Road Commissioners, has the honor of being the first county to petition to have plans, specifications and estimates made for the survey and building of scientifically-constructed roads under the provisions of the new road law, but the interest shown by the people of this section has been closely rivalled by the people of Allegany county in the neighborhood of Cumberland, Frostburg and Lonaconing; and by the residents of Pylesville and of Forest Hill, Harford county. Montgomery County early evinced a decided interest in the new law, and after the recent issue of the pamphlet published by the Highway Division of the Maryland Geological Survey, describing the new law, the Board of County Commissioners took under consideration the building of a piece of road under its provisions, but as yet no decision has been reached. Caroline County, through its Roads Engineer, Mr. William D. Uhler, has expressed its desire to construct a State road at an early date.

For the Prince George's and Allegany roads, for which applications have been received for the drawing up of the plans, specifications, and estimates by the engineers of the Maryland Geological Survey, the surveys will begin in three or four weeks, as soon as enough applications from the residents along the routes have been received to thoroughly organize the work. The Board of Road Commissioners of Prince George's County have requested that seven pieces of roads be placed upon the files of the Highway Division of the Maryland Geological Survey, on three of which roads it is requested that five miles be surveyed and reported upon with regard to plans, specifications and estimates.

The Sorriest Fellow.

The editor of an exchange hits the right spot when he says; "The sorriest fellow on earth is the fellow who will sit around and cuss his own town. If I lived astride the north pole, I would call it home, and be ready to boost it up. If I could not see anything nice about it, I would say that my ice bill didn't come high. I would not stay in a town I had to cuss—not while the world is as big as it is now.

Subscribe for The Republican

Young Plants

Every farmer knows that some plants grow better than others. Soil may be the same and seed may seem the same but some plants are weak and others strong.

And that's the way with children. They are like young plants. Same food, same home, same care but some grow big and strong while others stay small and weak.

Scott's Emulsion offers an easy way out of the difficulty. Child weakness often means starvation, not because of lack of food, but because the food does not feed.

Scott's Emulsion really feeds and gives the child growing strength.

Whatever the cause of weakness and failure to grow—Scott's Emulsion seems to find it and set the matter right.

Send for free sample.

Scott & Bowne, Chemists, 409 Pearl St., New York
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

BALLAST TRAIN BADLY WRECKED

Resulting in Serious Injury of Six Italian Laborers.

A ballast train collided with a local freight train that had stopped at Crabtree station, three miles west of Piedmont, on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, Friday afternoon, and seriously injured six Italians, besides bruising, cutting and slightly injuring about fifteen others. The freight train had stopped and a flagman had been sent back, but the engineer of the ballast train, which was being pushed in the the same direction that the freight train had been going, failed to see the flagman's signal and crashed into the freight with great force. Men and rock ballast were hurled through the air. Ten of the injured were taken at once to the Keyser Hospital, where six were found to have sustained broken limbs. One Italian had a very serious compound fracture of one leg, which the physicians deemed wise to amputate, but the man refused to allow the leg to be taken off. Four have broken legs. One had his arm broken in two places and another has his back injured. Four of the ten taken to the hospital were given medical attention and departed for their home near Piedmont. The men who were only slightly injured were attended by physicans in Piedmont.

BITTINGER.

Our little village was honored last week by a number of prominent personages from the outside world. We note them as follows: Rev. G. A. Royer and wife of Clear Springs, Md.; Rev. H. H. Flick, of Manchester, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Lohr, of Oakland; Mr. C. M. Beachy, wife and family, of Springs, Pa.; Mrs. Chas. Fadley and children, of Jennings, Md.

Messrs. Meyers & Bittinger pulled into this section with thrashing outfit last Monday afternoon, and began their seasons work in this territory at Mr. John Stark's.

Miss Sallie Ralston was visiting friends at Swanton part of last week.

Miss Eliza Ralston went to Oakland for a short visit prior to the opening of the fall school term.

Messrs. John L. Beachy & Bros. purchased a long earned "critter" this week and will press this little beast into service in their mine.

The Washington county young ladies who spent a brief but pleasant vacation as the guests of Miss Amanda Ellithrope, returned to their homes Friday.

Dr. R. H. Boyer, of Accident, was a caller in the western part of town Sunday evening.

PRINCLY HEART GONE AGAIN

Euiwha Of Korea Met His Latest Conqueror In Maryland.

A special telegram from Columbus, Ohio, to yesterday's Baltimore Sun says "that the susceptible Prince Penkeel Euiwha, known as Prince Yee, of Korea, is in love again. This time the object of his adoration is Miss Mary Buttles, the pretty 16-year-old daughter of a prominent family of this city. The Prince, while he was a student at Deleware, Ohio, had several heart affairs, and at one time his love for a pretty Cincinnati girl was broadly published. Since leaving Delaware he has been studying with a private tutor at Salem, Va., and met Miss Buttles and her mother at Mountain Lake Park, Md. At the Park Prince Yee was most devoted in his attention and just before Miss Buttles returned home he gave an elaborate dinner in her honor.

Licenses to Wed.

In Cumberland yesterday marriage licenses were issued to the following Garrett countians:

Andrew George McKenzie and Maud May Croft, Avilton, Garrett county, Md.

William Henry Koch, of Oakland, and Bertie Olive Wilson, of McClellantown, Fayette county, Pa.

A Home and Day School.

BRIAR-BEND SEMINARY,

AT MT. LAKE PARK, MD.,

In the Alleghany Mountains,

will be re-opened (D. V.)

On September 14th, 1904

Full course of study. Music, Vocal and Instrumental. French, Latin and Bible Study. Certificates admit to leading colleges without examination.

A Home for Motherless Girls; Climate Unrivaled for Health; Only four visits from a Physician in thirteen years.

Applications received for service in exchange for tuition. Refererences quired.

The Garrett National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, - $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, - 15,000.00

The Tubular the Easy Way.

Don't hang to the idea that hard work brings the best results. Do good work—but make it easy.

TUBULAR SEPARATORS

get all the cream—cause you less work and worry—are perfectly safe—give you more satisfaction than the old kinds they have left so far behind. See the machines! Come get a catalog.

J. E GNAGEY, Accident, Md.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Mr. Chas. E. Hilleary, of near Gorman, was a business visitor to Oakland yesterday.

Mrs. Felix Elliott, of Kingwood, was in Oakland a few hours Tuesday visiting friends.

Messrs. E. H. Sincell and N. U. Bond went to Pittsburg last night on a business trip.

Mr. S. F. Herr, of the Schley Hotel, was in Baltimore several days last week on business.

County Commissioner Jacob Stump, of Bloomington, was a visitor to Oakland yesterday.

Mrs. Henry Lauer went to Washington Sunday night to visit relatives for an indefinite time.

Mr. John M. Dulaney, of Baltimore, was in Oakland yesterday evening and this morning on business.

Mr. Calvin Anderson, of near Wilson, left Oakland last night for Pittsburg where he went on business.

Mr. George D. Browning, the merchant of Swallow Falls, was a business visitor to Oakland Tuesday.

Mr. George Aronhalt, of near Wilson, was in the city yesterday on business and while here made this office a pleasant visit.

Miss Goldie Krantz, of Adamstown, Md., who was the guest for two weeks of the Misses Sincell, returned home Monday morning.

Mrs. John W. Davis and little son Ralph went up to Terra Alta yesterday afternoon to remain a few days with relatives and friends.

New steps leading from the entrance of the school house grounds to the front door of the school building in Oakland, were completed Tuesday.

Miss Cleo Krantz, of Adamstown, Md., arrived here yesterday evening and will take charge of the ladies furnishing department in H. C. Sincell & Co.'s this morning.

Ex-Senator Ravenscroft, who is convalescing rapidly from his recent illness to typhoid fever, went to Baltimore Monday evening returning to Oakland yesterday.

James Chisholm, Esq., of near Gormania, who spent a week or two with friends and relatives near Swallow Falls, returned to his home via Oakland last Monday afternoon.

Mr. H. L. Daugherty visited Baltimore on business last week, returning to Oakland Saturday morning. Mr. Daugherty was accompanied by his wife and two children.

Misses Evlyn B. Jordan and Louise Gregory, of Brunswick, Md., who visited Mr. and Mrs. V. V. Washburne in Oakland a week or ten days, returned to their homes yesterday morning.

Mr. L. A. Rudisill, the Mountain Lake Park real estate man, is offering some rare bargains in property at that town. See his advertisement in another column of this paper for particulars.

Arrangements are being made to move the central office of the Garrett County Telephone Company from the first floor of the Ravenscroft building to a room on the second floor of the same.

Mrs. Mattie Kean, of Baltimore, who visited her sister here, Miss Mollie Porter, left for her home yesterday. She was accompanied by Miss Annie Mitchell, of Belair, who was also the guest of Miss Porter.

Rev. E. Lawrence Hunt, pastor of Washington Heights Presbyterian church, Washington, D. C., will preach in the Oakland Presbyterian church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. All will receive a cordial welcome to this service.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Dixon, of Oakland, left here yesterday morning for Cincinnati, O., where they will remain a day or two and then go on to St. Louis to visit the Fair. They expect to return to Oakland within two weeks.

Miss Katharine Manges and her sister, Mrs. Smith and little son, left on train 4 this morning for York, Pa., where Miss Katharine has a school and where Mrs. Smith lives. Mrs. Manges accompanied them for a visit in York and York county for a month or six weeks.

Mr. C. E. Ellithorpe, of Bittinger, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Amanda and her two friends, Miss Newcomer and Miss Sower, of Washington county, who were the guests of Miss Ellithorpe at her home for a week or two, visited Oakland last Friday and Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Fay, of Washington, D. C., are here on a visit to their daughter, Mrs. Jerry O. Browning at their residence on Second street. Mr. Fay, a former editor of the Mountain Democrat, is well known throughout the county and at present occupies a position in one of the departments at Washington.

Mrs. Chris Felty and little daughter Hazel, of Connellsville, Pa., are in the city for the day, the guests of Mrs. Felty's sister, Mrs. D. Grant Smith, on West Washington street. They will leave this evening for their home, having been on an extended visit to relatives at Oakland and other points east.—Grafton Sentinel.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gnagey, of Accident, left that point Tuesday of this week for West Milton, Ohio, where they will reside in the future. Mr. Gnagey is a son of Mr. John E. Gnagey, the veteran merchant of Accident, where he is well known and where he leaves many friends to regret his departure, but whose well wishes for success follow him.

Rev. William T. Sines of down-the-river country, was in town Tuesday afternoon on business. A very successful revival of a week's duration was closed at Pine Grove church, of which Mr. Sines is the pastor, on Monday night, resulting in nine accessions to the church—the German Baptist Brethern. Rev. Sines was assisted in the meetings by Rev. Albert Arnold, of near Eglon.

A letter received a few days ago from Mr. Hermann Creutzberg, who left here some months ago and went to Pocatello, Idaho, where he was connected with a gold mining company, states that he has been moved from the above place to another camp 11,000 feet above sea level. He says that the company has some good claims and will make a shipment this week of the ore.

Rev. H. H, Flick, of the Lutheran church at Manchester, Md., who formerly so successfully served the Accident charge of this county, preached at Deer Park last Sabbath morning and in Oakland in the evening to large and delighted congregations. He leaves on Thursday afternoon for Cumberland where he expects to meet Mrs. Flick and his daughter, Miss Maude, who have been on a visit to friends in Somerset county, Pa., and accompany them to their home in Manchester.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

OFFICER WOUNDS TWO HORSES

In an Endeavor to Stop Men Who Were Disturbing the Peace Saturday Night.

Last Saturday night or early Sunday morning the town was thrown into an uproar by five pistol shots fired in rapid succession by Officer Broderick at a number of men who were passing along Second Street in a conveyance drawn by two horses, the property of Mr. Chas. A. Ashby, of Crellin, who, the officer alleges, were disturbing the peace, and not obeying his command to halt he fired upon them, two of the bullets taking effect in the horses. One of the animals received a bullet in the fleshy part of its hind leg and the other was shot just above the hoof.

The men, it seems, are employes at the Crellin mill and came down to Oakland that evening where they imbibed pretty freely in the cup that cheers. At midnight they started home and the officer asserts raised a disturbance by their loud talking and whooping. He commanded them to halt and not heeding his injunction he opened fire with the result above stated.

Monday morning Mr. Ashby, the owner of the horses, came to Oakland and had two warrants issued for the arrest of Broderick. One charging him with assault with intent to murder and the other with cruelty to animals. Sheriff Frantz placed the man under arrest and this afternoon at two o'clock he will be given a hearing before Justice Gonder upon the charges.

OLD FIDDLERS IN A CONTEST.

The far Famed Browning Family not Outdone Carried Off Most Honors.

A contest among the "old fiddlers" of Garrett county and the adjoining counties of Pennsylvania and West Virginia was held at Kolb's Opera House, in Friendsville, on last Saturday evening, which was participated in by about 30 contestants, most of whom came from the mountains and glades of Garrett.

The contest was conducted by J. W. Whorton, of Oakland, and A. T. Kimmell, of Thayerville, both of whom are lovers of the old-fashioned music. About 20 contestants were entered for honors, among whom were several of the far-famed Browning family descendants of Meshack, author of "Forty-four Years of the Life of a Hunter," and the pioneer settler of this section of the State. This family is noted for its musical talent, especially on the violin, and it has repeatedly attended these contests in the past and invariably carried off the best of the prizes. There are five brothers, and each plays his part to perfection.

They play for the country dances and balls for many miles around and love it as much as they do to hunt or fish.

The contest at Friendsville was presided over by three disinterested judges, who at the close gave their decisions, and the prizes were then awarded. The contestants were classed as to age. Those over 50 years of age constituted first class. Each player was required to play "Opera Reel," "Billie in the Lowland" and one other tune of his own selection. The second class was of those under 50 years of age and each player was required to play "Mountain Hornpipe" and one other tune of his own selection. Upon the rendition of the three selections the judges were required to decide.

The prizes consisted of musical instruments of various kinds and the contests were spirited from start to finish.

Many other musical features were included in the program, and the contest was largely attended from the town and surrounding section of country. Several of these interesting events will be held in Garrett and its adjoining counties during the fall and winter.

The awards were as follows: Fiddlers over 50 years old—First, John F. Browning, second Stephen Browning. Under 50—First, Abel Browning, second Abel DeWitt. Dancing—Jeremiah Bitner.

Sunday School Convention.

The county Sunday School Convention, under the auspices of the Maryland Sunday School Union, will be held in Ryans Glade M. E. church, September 10th and 10th, 1904. Every Sunday School is entitled to send two delegates. Pastors and Superintendents are members by virtue of their office. Every Sunday School in the county and every Sunday School worker is earnestly requested to attend this convention.

Delightful Trip To California.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., will hold their annual meeting at San Francisco, Cal., September 19-25, and for this occasion the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. will sell excursion tickets from August 28th to September 9th, at Very Low Rates for the round trip, valid for return to October 23rd, 1904.

Stop-overs on going trip at St. Louis, Chicago, Memphis and New Orleans will be allowed; also at any point in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Assiniboia, Alberta and British Columbia within going transit limit of October 10th, 1904.

Baltimore & Ohio Ticket Agents have full details.

FINED $100 AND COSTS.

Mr. L. T. Yoder Assessed That Amount for Operating a Livery Stable Without License.

Mr. L. T. Yoder, proprietor of the Mountain Lake Park Hotel and also the owner of the water works system at the Park, was arrested last Saturday at his hotel by Officer May upon a warrant charging him with running a livery stable at the Park without having secured a license from the Community officers authorizing him to conduct such an establishment.

When the officer went to make the arrest Mr. Yoder, it is alleged refused to go with him and in order to take him before Justice Kerfoot a carriage was was secured and in it Mr. Yoder was carried to the temple of justice—the Assembly Hall. Arriyed there another obstacle was encountered in the way of a steep and long flight of stairs leading from the ground to the building. The officer was here compelled to carry and drag his prisoner up the stairway and into the presence of the Court.

Mr. Yoder asked for a continuance of the case which was granted until yesterday afternoon when the hearing took place. The Community was represented by Mr. Thayer and Mr. Yoder had as his counsel Mr. Peddicord. A mass of testimony on both sides was presented and at the conclusion of the case upon which the arrest had been made the Justice in accordance with the ordinance, imposed a fine of $100 and costs. An appeal to the Circuit Court was entered by Mr. Peddicord.

WILL INSTAL WATER SYSTEM

Community Vacates Mr. Yoder's Franchise and Will Put In System of Its Own.

At a meeting of the Mountain Lake Park Community last Tuesday the franchise granted Mr. L. T. Yoder a number of years ago for the installation of a water system in the Park was vacated and notice served upon Mr. Yoder to that effect.

Mr. Yoder it is said, has violated his agreement with the officers of the Community in not supplying a sufficient quantity of water for the Park, although he has a system of pipes laid along all the streets of the town and connections made with the mains into almost every house.

It is the purpose of the Community to issue bonds with which to instal the new system. The source of supply will likely be taken from artesian wells or from the lake.

Gnegy—Englehart Nuptials.

St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran church at Accident was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday, Aug. 24, at 11 a. m., when Prof. J. S. Gnegy, of Red House, and Miss Clara V. Englehart, of Accident, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Geo. A. Royer, of Clearspring, Md., assisted by Revs. W. H. Reimer, of Accident, and H. H. Flick, of Manchester, Md.

Miss Anna Englehart and Mr. Herman Englehart, sister and brother of the bride, acted as maid of honor and best man, and Miss Tillie Englehart and S. C. Gnegy acting as bridesmaid and groomsman. The organ presided over by Miss Leonore Royer attended by Mr Alvin Englehart. Messrs. E. B. Boyer of Accident, and Jeff T. Smearman acted as ushers. The bride was beautifully attired in cream habutai silk, and carried brides roses. The maid of honor and bridesmaid were dressed in cream silk mull and carried white and pink carnations respectively. The groom and his attendants were attired in the conventional black.

The church was nicely decorated, the bridal party standing under an arch during the ceremony.

More than one hundred guests witnessed the ceremony, after which about sixty specially invited relatives and friends of the bride and groom repaired to the home of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. William Englehart, where a feast had already been prepared to which justice was done after congratulations had been tendered. At four p. m., they departed in a shower of rice for Oakland from where they departed Thursday morning on train 3 for St. Louis. They will reside in the Bowman Cottage just north of Oakland. The presents were many and useful.

Sunday Church Services.

At Deer Park Rev. W. H. Faust, pastor of the Baptist congregation, will preach both morning and evening. At 11 o'clock his subject will be "The True God." In the evening the subject will be "Orpah."

In the Loch Lynn United Brethren church at 7.30 p. m., Rev. W. R. Cunningham, the pastor, will preach. All will receive a cordial welcome.

In St. Paul's M. E. church in Oakland Rev. Dr. H. Scott, the pastor, will preach both morning and evening.

Rev. E. Manges, pastor of St Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, will preach Sunday morning at 10.30 and in the evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Manges will also conduct services at Crellin Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Dixon & Kelso

Will Sell Bargains in

FRUIT JARS AND JELLY GLASSES

AS FOLLOWS:

Mason's Pints, per dozen, - - - - 45c.
" Quarts, " - - - - - 49c.
" Half-Gallons, per dozen, - 59c.
Jelly Glasses, 25 to 30c doz., as to size.

We also have an immense stock of

STONEWARE,

To Sell at 8c per Gallon.

Have contracted with two large peach growers for

Several Thousand Baskets of Peaches,

for this season, and can furnish this delicious fruit for the next two months.

Will exchange any of the above for good produce at market price.

Yours, respectfully,

DIXON & KELSO.

The Mountain State BUSINESS COLLEGE

Gives a training that turns unused talent into a money making power. Does it quickly, thoroughly, cheaply. Full and complete courses in BOOKKEEPING, PENMANSHIP, TELEGRAPHY, SHORTHAND and TYPEWRITING. $110 pays tuition, board and room-rent for five months. Skilled teachers. Large attendance. Healthful study halls and recitation rooms. Modern and convenient furniture. The M. S. B. C. has a National reputation and its graduates are sought after by business men everywhere. Now is the best time to begin a course. No vacation. Individual instruction. Our new Art Catalogue can be had for the asking. Address, A. G. SINE, President, PARKERSBURG, WEST VA.

BUILDING, PAVING, PRESSED FACE. BRICKS VITRIFIED FOR FOUNDATIONS VITRIFIED FOR SEWERS. STREET PAVING BLOCKS.

Best Quallty for Building, Casing, Sidewalks and Streets.
Beautiful Shades, Red, Light Granate and Mixed Colors.
Capacity 80,000 Daily. Prompt Shipments.

QUEEN CITY BRICK & TILE COMPANY
—AND—
CUMBERLAND GRANATE BRICK COMPANY,
Cumberland, Maryland.

Great Big Bargains.

$1150 cash will buy Sunny-Slope Cottage, at Mountain Lake Park; 6 rooms and summer kitchen, furnished throughout, with porch commanding superb view; four lots, 50x120 feet each; out-buildings; good well; strawberry patch; garden; large lawns; flower beds; walks, etc.

$75 will buy Lot No. 241, on corner Hazel Glade Drive and Park front; worth $300.

$50 will buy Lot No. 242, adjoining above; worth $200.

$75 will buy Lot No. 219, on corner D street and Park front; worth $225.

$50 will buy Lot No. 218, adjoining above; worth $200.

$50 will buy Lot No. 220, fronting on D street, and

$50 for Lot No. 221.

No Building Conditions on these Lots.

Apply to
L. A. RUDISILL,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

CANCER CURED

permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1520 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

New Goods, Just Opened.

The Latest Things Out In

Pongees, Draperies, Satteens, (these are beauties). Seersuckers, Granite Cloths, Flannelettes, Sacking, Chambrays, etc.

We have them,
You want them,
Come get them.

The Latest Things Out In

Hats, Caps and Shoes,

and Men's and Boys

CLOTHING.

Also fine line Clothing Samples,

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

MARYLAND DAY,

Monday, September 15th,

AND

LOUSIANA PURCHASE DAY,

Wednesday, September 14th,

AT THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATE

Excursion tickets on sale

Saturday, September 10th, via

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R.

Tickets good in coaches only, and valid returning ten days.

An Order of the Court

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1903, by Charles W. Hoole.

A DOT of red which seemed to be pasted like a wafer on the black darkness at the southern end of the veranda bore witness that my landlord was enjoying his single hour of leisure in all the twenty-four—between 11 o'clock and midnight. The sight was gratifying. I had feared that the chill of the evening might have driven him to some inaccessible warm corner of the house and that I should miss the pleasure of taking a yarn of his to bed with me.

Prudently pausing at the foot of the steps, I lighted a cigar of my own in order to escape smoking one of his, and then I took a seat beside him and tilted my chair against the clapboards.

"When you were marshal of Circle City," said I and left the rest to him.

He chuckled softly, and then there was a silence while he pretended to be waiting for an inspiration. In reality he had prepared his story, as I knew as soon as he began to speak. Even a genius like Peter Conley will trip over his introduction unless he has thought it out in advance.

"When I was marshal of Circle City," said he, "there was a real estate gang that ran the whole town, and a crooked old billygoat named George Warren ran the gang. One day Sam Cleve, who was Warren's most confidential agent, came to me and said that he wanted me to look up a young fellow that had dropped into town a couple of days before and was stopping at the Gladstone hotel.

"'We suspect that he's a lawyer from Topeka,' said Cleve, 'and that he's got legal papers to serve on Mr. Warren in the Creamer case.'

"I put a couple of my men on the hunt, and they reported in the course of the afternoon that the tip was straight. The man at the Gladstone was Byron Willett of Topeka, and he had brought an order of court that was intended to stop Warren in a mighty important matter.

"When I had heard the facts I strolled around to Warren's house and found one of the old man's most trusted servants sitting under a tree in the front yard with a Winchester across his knees. He wasn't very cordial even to me, and you can bet that no stranger could have so much as leaned against the gatepost without getting perforated.

"Warren himself was stowed away in the room where he usually lay low when a process server was on his trail, and he seemed to be particularly sore about this present affair.

"'Jim Creamer is trying to stop me from putting up a gas house opposite his property,' said he. 'The yellow dog is bound to hold on to it, and he's got an injunction from some fool judge in Topeka. Now, we've got to have that piece of real estate, and we've got to have it at our own terms. It ought to be understood in this town that I fix the value of property, and I've let Jim Creamer know what his figure is. It's $6,500, and that settles the matter.'

"At a fair valuation Creamer's property was worth about $20,000, but Warren had him surrounded and could put up all kinds of objectionable buildings on the adjacent lots.

"Pretty tough, you'll say; but that was no business of mine. Warren had put me and the party into office, and another election was coming along.

HE WAS SITTING WITH A WINCHESTER ACROSS HIS KNEES.

"'Well, Mr. Warren,' says I, 'what do you want me to do about it?'

"'You get that document away from Willett,' says he, 'and you do it without violence. I don't want this man laid up. I've got a notion that I'd like to have a talk with him before he goes back to Topeka. They say he's the slickest young lawyer in the state, and it's likely we may want him. Our operations are spreading out, and we can use good men in various parts of the state. Now, it's up to you, Conley,' says he in conclusion. 'I want to see this cuss personally, and you've got to make him safe.'

"I says, 'All right, Mr. Warren,' and then I went back to the central police station to think it over.

"Within a few minutes I got a note from Warren in which he said that he'd made up his mind to have a talk with Willett the next afternoon at 4 o'clock. 'I've sent him word to that effect,' runs the note, 'and you must get his papers away from him before that time.'

"Later I got another note which said that Willett had refused to go to Warren's house for fear he'd be handled rough and that Warren was going to call at the hotel. This gave me a good idea of Willett as a prudent and far-seeing man, and it also showed me how set Warren was on having the interview.

"You'll say right away that this complicated the job because Warren might be served with the papers while on the way to the hotel by some pal of Willett's. But that was easily enough managed. Between 12 and 1 o'clock that night Warren went down to the Gladstone, going in by the way of the kitchen and up the back stairs to the room that had been engaged for him.

"Between that time and daybreak I had one of my men crawl into Willett's

"THE DOOR OPENED, AND IN WALKED WILLETT."

room from the fire escape and mouse around a bit, but he didn't find anything and mighty near got shot. So the matter stood square the next morning, with no advantage on either side.

"About 9 o'clock Willett started out for a walk, as he always did, and I and three of my men immediately began a hunt. We had been in the room next to his and had bored some holes through the partition so that we could see if he hid the document anywhere or went to look at it in its hiding place. Nothing of that kind had happened, but I had formed a few dim suspicions. While the man was dressing I made up my mind that the document was in his coat pocket, and when he was eating breakfast—which he ordered up—I noticed that he was busy sealing up a lot of letters which he had written the night before. Now about that time he made some rather slick motions, and it was a question whether he hadn't taken the document out of his pocket and put it into one of the letters, which were all in big envelopes. I didn't see him do it, but I had a feeling about it. If those were straight letters and not fakes, why didn't he take them out to the mail instead of leaving them in the basket on the table?

"When we got into his room, I went for those letters the first thing, while my men divided the place into sections and began the most almighty particular hunt that anybody ever saw. I opened the letters, one by one, very carefully, because if the document was there I wanted to get it in such a way that he wouldn't know it was gone. The job of opening and closing the letters took me nearly an hour, and the document wasn't there after all. My men hadn't found any signs of it, but they hadn't half finished, for you must understand that it was a big room with a lot of stuff in it, and we were dealing with it a piece at a time, as a man handles a pack of cards when he suspects that they're marked.

"In the midst of it the door opened, and in walked Willett, which was a great surprise to us, for we had set a lookout and had arranged a plan to stop him, though, as a matter of fact, we didn't expect him back, and so I suppose our sentinel went and took a drink and the gentleman from Topeka slipped by.

"'Well, upon my soul!' says he, reaching for his gun. 'What are you all doing here?'

"'Mr. Willett,' says I, tapping my badge, 'this is our lawful duty, and, though painful, we must do it. I'm the city marshal, so there's no occasion for you to draw iron. Ten silver spoons have been missed in this house, and one of the dining room help is suspected. For the sake of that poor girl's good name,' says I, 'we've got to make a search.'

"'Ten sliver grandmothers!' yells Willett. 'We'll see about this!' And he began to give me quite some language of one kind and another, especially after he noticed that I'd been fooling with his letters. 'The proprietor,' says he, 'won't stand for this.'

"'You go ask him,' I suggested.

"John Fynes, who ran the Gladstone, knew that Warren and his gang were back of the game, though he didn't know just what the game was. However, as Warren owned the hotel property and held a mortgage on the body and soul of Fynes, the exact nature of the business didn't cut much of a figure.

"Willett stalked away to see Fynes, and he didn't come back. What story the landlord threw into him I don't know, but it was good. Willett left the house in a tearing rage, and a couple of my men shadowed him. By and by one of them came back and reported to me that the gentleman from Topeka had called on a girl—a right nice girl he said she was—who was visiting some relatives in our city.

"'It seems he's engaged to her,' says my man.

"Meanwhile we'd taken that room all to pieces and put it together again, but it hadn't done us any good. It seemed likely to me that Willett had the paper on him. Of course we'd thought that probable from the start and had made our arrangements accordingly. As he was on his way back to the hotel about half past 2 my men arrested him on suspicion of being implicated in the matter of the spoons, and they took him to the station house, where he was searched from crown to heel. But he didn't have the paper.

"Well, of course that made the game clear. Willett had given the court order to somebody else, perhaps to the girl or one of her relatives, who was to call at the room after Warren got in there and serve the document on him. So I said to Warren: 'It's all right. My men will arrest anybody that comes on to this floor during your interview, and I'll be right outside the door as a last line of defense.'

"This was after we'd released Willett with our apologies for suspecting him in the affair of the spoons. One of my men walked on each side of him all the way from the station to the hotel.

"It was just 4 o'clock when he arrived, so mad that his face was a picture of premeditated murder. In fact, he tried to hit me as he went by me into his room, but I was under orders and avoided violence.

"Warren was on hand promptly, and, after a word of praise and another of caution addressed to me at the door, he went along in.

"I was feeling pretty chipper. It was a moral sure thing that Willett didn't have a harmful document on his clothes and a double sure thing that it wasn't in the room. Moreover, I had arranged so that it couldn't get in by any possible way.

"In about a minute Warren came to the door and called me in. 'You've got him crazy!' he whispers. 'It's all right.'

"So it was. And I meant that it should stay that way. Calling me into the room looked like a trick of Willett's, and therefore I set my back against the door and had a gun very handy.

"'Marshal,' says Willett, 'you've been making some serious accusations against me, and now it's my turn. I charge you with stealing a letter from my table.'

"'Not guilty,' says I. And then, 'Do you happen to know how many there were?'

"'Ten,' says he.

"I had thought he'd add one and try to stick me for the eleventh which had never existed.

"'There's but nine now,' says he and began to count 'em.

"By jimmyneddy, there were eleven, and before we could stir he'd ripped

SERVING WARREN WITH THE INJUNCTION.

the last one open and had served Warren with the injunction that was inside it.

"'You think you're pretty smart,' said he to me, 'but you're a back number. What you don't know would be a liberal education. I fixed those letters up for you. I knew you'd get into my room and hunt high and low. I knew you'd open the letters first. So I gave you time to do it and seal 'em all up, and then I came back here with another just like 'em in my sleeve. While I was chinning with you I dropped the letter into the basket where you'd already searched. Savey? Now you can go back to your cage.'

"'Mr. Willett,' says Warren, 'I'm surprised that a lawyer of the bar of our state should descend to such disgraceful trickery, and in order that you may not be tempted again I'm going to hire you to work for an honest man—me.'

"'You can't bribe me to be false to my client, Mr. Creamer,' says Willett firmly. 'But in any other little matter of business,' says he, 'I'm a practicing attorney, and the man for your money.'"

A Nice Way.

He—I wish I had the key to your heart. She—Indeed! What would you do with it? He—Insert it in wedlock, give one turn and throw it away forever.

Opposite Effects.

"Doesn't that new brass band make your blood curdle?"

"No. It makes it boil."—Detroit Free Press.

An Old Favorite

THE CREED OF MERCY

By Samuel Taylor Coleridge

PROFESSOR GEORGE E. WOODBURY, the eminent critic, says of Coleridge: "The poetic genius of Coleridge, the highest of his many gifts, found brilliant and fascinating expression. His poems—those in which his fame lives—are as unique as they are memorable, and, though their small number, their confined range and the brief period during which his faculty was exercised with full freedom and power seem to indicate a narrow vein, yet the remainder of his work in prose and verse leaves an impression of extraordinary and abundant intellectual force."

O WEDDING-GUEST! this soul hath been
Alone on a wide, wide sea;
So lonely 'twas, that God Himself
Scarce seem-ed there to be.

O sweeter than the marriage-feast,
'Tis sweeter far to me,
To walk together to the kirk
With a goodly company!

To walk together to the kirk,
And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends,
Old men, and babes, and loving friends
And youths and maidens gay!

Farewell, farewell! but this I tell
To thee, thou wedding-guest!
He prayeth well who loveth well
Both man and bird and beast—

He prayeth best who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us
He made and loveth all.

An Old Favorite

NO TIME LIKE THE OLD TIME

By Oliver Wendell Holmes

THERE'S no time like the old time,
When you and I were young,
When the buds of April blossomed
And the birds of springtime sung;
The garden's brightest glories
By summer suns are nursed;
But, oh, the sweet, sweet violets,
The flowers that opened first!

There's no place like the old place,
Where you and I were born,
Where we lifted first our eyelids
On the splendors of the morn,
From the milk-white breast that warmed us,
From the clinging arms that bore,
Where the dear eyes glistened o'er us,
That will look on us no more.

There's no friend like the old friend,
Who has shared our morning days;
No greeting like his welcome,
No homage like his praise!
Fame is the scentless sunflower,
With gaudy crown of gold;
But Friendship is the breathing rose,
With sweets in every fold.

There's no love like the old love,
That we courted in our pride;
Though our leaves are falling, falling,
And we're fading side by side,
There are blossoms all around us,
With the colors of our dawn,
And we lived in borrowed sunshine
When the light of day is gone!

There are no times like the old times,
They shall never be forgot!
There is no place like the old place;
Keep green the dear old spot!
There are no friends like the old friends,
May heaven prolong their lives;
There are no loves like our old loves—
God bless our loving wives!

An Old Favorite

THE TIME I'VE LOST IN WOOING

By Thomas Moore

THE time I've lost in wooing,
In watching and pursuing
The light that lies
In woman's eyes,
Has been my heart's undoing.
Though Wisdom oft has sought me,
I scorned the lore she brought me:
My only books
Were woman's looks,
And folly's all they've taught me.

Her smile when Beauty granted,
I hung with gaze enchanted,
Like him, the sprite,
Whom maids by night
Oft meet in glen that's haunted.
Like him, too, Beauty won me,
But while her eyes were on me—
If once their ray
Was turned away,
Oh! winds could not outrun me.

And are those follies going?
And is my proud heart growing
Too cold or wise
For brilliant eyes
Again to set it glowing?
No—vain, alas! the endeavor
From bonds so sweet to sever;
Poor Wisdom's chance
Against a glance
Is now as weak as ever.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroad now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later thsn December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

GRANULATED

Fertilizer Lime!

FOR FARMS.

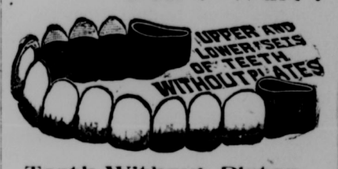
THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

C. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—21t

Now is the Time!

Don't Wait!



Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work

A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY,

First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.

FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R.

POPULAR SEASHORE EXCURSIONS.

Atlantic City,

Cape May, Ocean City, Sea Island City, N. J., Ocean City, Md., and Rehoboth Beach, Del.,

July 16 and 28, August 11 and and September 8.

At following very low rates from OAKLAND:

Only $8.50 Round Trip, tickets good in coaches only.

Only $10.50 Round Trip, tickets good in Pullman cars when accompanied by regular Pullman ticket.

All tickets good returning 16 days, including date of sale.

Stop-overs allowed on return trip at Philadelphia and Washington.

Ask Ticket Agents for pamphlet giving detailed information.

An Order of the Court

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1903, by Charles W. Hoyle

A DOT of red which seemed to be pasted like a wafer on the black darkness at the southern end of the veranda bore witness that my landlord was enjoying his single hour of leisure in all the twenty-four—between 11 o'clock and midnight. The sight was gratifying. I had feared that the chill of the evening might have driven him to some inaccessible warm corner of the house and that I should miss the pleasure of taking a yarn of his to bed with me.

Prudently pausing at the foot of the steps, I lighted a cigar of my own in order to escape smoking one of his, and then I took a seat beside him and tilted my chair against the clapboards.

"When you were marshal of Circle City," said I and left the rest to him.

He chuckled softly, and then there was a silence while he pretended to be waiting for an inspiration. In reality he had prepared his story, as I knew as soon as he began to speak. Even a genius like Peter Conley will trip over his introduction unless he has thought it out in advance.

"When I was marshal of Circle City," said he, "there was a real estate gang that ran the whole town, and a crooked old billygoat named George Warren ran the gang. One day Sam Cleve, who was Warren's most confidential agent, came to me and said that he wanted me to look up a young fellow that had dropped into town a couple of days before and was stopping at the Gladstone hotel.

"'We suspect that he's a lawyer from Topeka,' said Cleve, 'and that he's got legal papers to serve on Mr. Warren in the Creamer case.'

"I put a couple of my men on the hunt, and they reported in the course of the afternoon that the tip was straight. The man at the Gladstone was Byron Willett of Topeka, and he had brought an order of court that was intended to stop Warren in a mighty important matter.

"When I had heard the facts I strolled around to Warren's house and found one of the old man's most trusted servants sitting under a tree in the front yard with a Winchester across his knees. He wasn't very cordial even to me, and you can bet that no stranger could have so much as leaned against the gatepost without getting perforated.

"Warren himself was stowed away in the room where he usually lay low when a process server was on his trail, and he seemed to be particularly sore about this present affair.

"'Jim Creamer is trying to stop me from putting up a gas house opposite his property,' said he. 'The yellow dog is bound to hold on to it, and he's got an injunction from some fool judge in Topeka. Now, we've got to have that piece of real estate, and we've got to have it at our own terms. It ought to be understood in this town that I fix the value of property, and I've let Jim Creamer know what his figure is. It's $6,500, and that settles the matter.'

"At a fair valuation Creamer's property was worth about $20,000, but Warren had him surrounded and could put up all kinds of objectionable buildings on the adjacent lots.

"Pretty tough, you'll say; but that was no business of mine. Warren had put me and the party into office, and another election was coming along.

HE WAS SITTING WITH A WINCHESTER ACROSS HIS KNEES.

"'Well, Mr. Warren,' says I, 'what do you want me to do about it?'

"'You get that document away from Willett,' says he, 'and you do it without violence. I don't want this man laid up. I've got a notion that I'd like to have a talk with him before he goes back to Topeka. They say he's the slickest young lawyer in the state, and it's likely we may want him. Our operations are spreading out, and we can use good men in various parts of the state. Now, it's up to you, Conley,' says he in conclusion. 'I want to see this cuss personally, and you've got to make him safe.'

"I says, 'All right, Mr. Warren,' and then I went back to the central police station to think it over.

"Within a few minutes I got a note from Warren in which he said that he'd made up his mind to have a talk with Willett the next afternoon at 4 o'clock. 'I've sent him word to that effect,' runs the note, 'and you must get his papers away from him before that time.'

"Later I got another note which said that Willett had refused to go to Warren's house for fear he'd be handled rough and that Warren was going to call at the hotel. This gave me a good idea of Willett as a prudent and far-seeing man, and it also showed me how set Warren was on having the interview.

"You'll say right away that this complicated the job because Warren might be served with the papers while on the way to the hotel by some pal of Willett's. But that was easily enough managed. Between 12 and 1 o'clock that night Warren went down to the Gladstone, going in by the way of the kitchen and up the back stairs to the room that had been engaged for him.

"Between that time and daybreak I had one of my men crawl into Willett's

"THE DOOR OPENED, AND IN WALKED WILLETT."

room from the fire escape and mouse around a bit, but he didn't find anything and mighty near got shot. So the matter stood square the next morning, with no advantage on either side.

"About 9 o'clock Willett started out for a walk, as he always did, and I and three of my men immediately began a hunt. We had been in the room next to his and had bored some holes through the partition so that we could see if he hid the document anywhere or went to look at it in its hiding place. Nothing of that kind had happened, but I had formed a few dim suspicions. While the man was dressing I made up my mind that the document was in his coat pocket, and when he was eating breakfast—which he ordered up—I noticed that he was busy sealing up a lot of letters which he had written the night before. Now about that time he made some rather slick motions, and it was a question whether he hadn't taken the document out of his pocket and put it into one of the letters, which were all in big envelopes. I didn't see him do it, but I had a feeling about it. If those were straight letters and not fakes, why didn't he take them out to the mail instead of leaving them in the basket on the table?

"When we got into his room, I went for those letters the first thing, while my men divided the place into sections and began the most almighty particular hunt that anybody ever saw. I opened the letters, one by one, very carefully, because if the document was there I wanted to get it in such a way that he wouldn't know it was gone. The job of opening and closing the letters took me nearly an hour, and the document wasn't there after all. My men hadn't found any signs of it, but they hadn't half finished, for you must understand that it was a big room with a lot of stuff in it, and we were dealing with it a piece at a time, as a man handles a pack of cards when he suspects that they're marked.

"In the midst of it the door opened, and in walked Willett, which was a great surprise to us, for we had set a lookout and had arranged a plan to stop him, though, as a matter of fact, we didn't expect him back, and so I suppose our sentinel went and took a drink and the gentleman from Topeka slipped by.

"'Well, upon my soul!' says he, reaching for his gun. 'What are you all doing here?'

"'Mr. Willett,' says I, tapping my badge, 'this is our lawful duty, and, though painful, we must do it. I'm the city marshal, so there's no occasion for you to draw iron. Ten silver spoons have been missed in this house, and one of the dining room help is suspected. For the sake of that poor girl's good name,' says I, 'we've got to make a search.'

"'Ten silver grandmothers!' yells Willett. 'We'll see about this!' And he began to give me quite some language of one kind and another, especially after he noticed that I'd been fooling with his letters. 'The proprietor,' says he, 'won't stand for this.'

"'You go ask him,' I suggested.

"John Fynes, who ran the Gladstone, knew that Warren and his gang were back of the game, though he didn't know just what the game was. However, as Warren owned the hotel property and held a mortgage on the body and soul of Fynes, the exact nature of the business didn't cut much of a figure.

"Willett stalked away to see Fynes, and he didn't come back. What story the landlord threw into him I don't know, but it was good. Willett left the house in a tearing rage, and a couple of my men shadowed him. By and by one of them came back and reported to me that the gentleman from Topeka had called on a girl—a right nice girl he said she was—who was visiting some relatives in our city.

"'It seems he's engaged to her,' says my man.

"Meanwhile we'd taken that room all to pieces and put it together again, but it hadn't done us any good. It seemed likely to me that Willett had the paper on him. Of course we'd thought that probable from the start and had made our arrangements accordingly. As he was on his way back to the hotel about half past 2 my men arrested him on suspicion of being implicated in the matter of the spoons, and they took him to the station house, where he was searched from crown to heel. But he didn't have the paper.

"Well, of course that made the game clear. Willett had given the court order to somebody else, perhaps to the girl or one of her relatives, who was to call at the room after Warren got in there and serve the document on him. So I said to Warren: 'It's all right. My men will arrest anybody that comes on to this floor during your interview, and I'll be right outside the door as a last line of defense.'

"This was after we'd released Willett with our apologies for suspecting him in the affair of the spoons. One of my men walked on each side of him all the way from the station to the hotel.

"It was just 4 o'clock when he arrived, so mad that his face was a picture of premeditated murder. In fact, he tried to hit me as he went by me into his room, but I was under orders and avoided violence.

"Warren was on hand promptly, and, after a word of praise and another of caution addressed to me at the door, he went along in.

"I was feeling pretty chipper. It was a moral sure thing that Willett didn't have a harmful document on his clothes and a double sure thing that it wasn't in the room. Moreover, I had arranged so that it couldn't get in by any possible way.

"In about a minute Warren came to the door and called me in. 'You've got him crazy!' he whispers. 'It's all right.'

"So it was. And I meant that it should stay that way. Calling me into the room looked like a trick of Willett's, and therefore I set my back against the door and had a gun very handy.

"'Marshal,' says Willett, 'you've been making some serious accusations against me, and now it's my turn. I charge you with stealing a letter from my table.'

"'Not guilty,' says I. And then, 'Do you happen to know how many there were?'

"'Ten,' says he.

"I had thought he'd add one and try to stick me for the eleventh which had never existed.

"'There's but nine now,' says he and began to count 'em.

"By jimmyneddy, there were eleven, and before we could stir he'd ripped

SERVING WARREN WITH THE INJUNCTION.

the last one open and had served Warren with the injunction that was inside it.

"'You think you're pretty smart,' said he to me, 'but you're a back number. What you don't know would be a liberal education. I fixed those letters up for you. I knew you'd get into my room and hunt high and low. I knew you'd open the letters first. So I gave you time to do it and seal 'em all up, and then I came back here with another just like 'em in my sleeve. While I was chinning with you I dropped the letter into the basket where you'd already searched. Savey? Now you can go back to your cage.'

"'Mr. Willett,' says Warren, 'I'm surprised that a lawyer of the bar of our state should descend to such disgraceful trickery, and in order that you may not be tempted again I'm going to hire you to work for an honest man—me.'

"'You can't bribe me to be false to my client, Mr. Creamer,' says Willett firmly. 'But in any other little matter of business,' says he, 'I'm a practicing attorney, and the man for your money.'"

A Nice Way.

He—I wish I had the key to your heart. She—Indeed! What would you do with it? He—Insert it in wedlock, give one turn and throw it away forever.

Opposite Effects.

"Doesn't that new brass band make your blood curdle?"

"No. It makes it boil."—Detroit Free Press.

An Old Favorite

THE CREED OF MERCY

By Samuel Taylor Coleridge

PROFESSOR GEORGE E. WOODBURY, the eminent critic, says of Coleridge: "The poetic genius of Coleridge, the highest of his many gifts, found brilliant and fascinating expression. His poems—those in which his fame lives—are as unique as they are memorable, and, though their small number, their confined range and the brief period during which his faculty was exercised with full freedom and power seem to indicate a narrow vein, yet the remainder of his work in prose and verse leaves an impression of extraordinary and abundant intellectual force."

O WEDDING-GUEST! this soul hath been
Alone on a wide, wide sea;
So lonely 'twas, that God Himself
Scarce seem-ed there to be.

O sweeter than the marriage-feast,
'Tis sweeter far to me,
To walk together to the kirk
With a goodly company!

To walk together to the kirk,
And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends,
Old men, and babes, and loving friends
And youths and maidens gay!

Farewell, farewell! but this I tell
To thee, thou wedding-guest!
He prayeth well who loveth well
Both man and bird and beast—

He prayeth best who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us
He made and loveth all.

An Old Favorite

NO TIME LIKE THE OLD TIME

By Oliver Wendell Holmes

THERE'S no time like the old time,
When you and I were young,
When the buds of April blossomed
And the birds of springtime sung;
The garden's brightest glories
By summer suns are nursed;
But, oh, the sweet, sweet violets,
The flowers that opened first!

There's no place like the old place,
Where you and I were born,
Where we lifted first our eyelids
On the splendors of the morn,
From the milk-white breast that warmed us,
From the clinging arms that bore,
Where the dear eyes glistened o'er us,
That will look on us no more.

There's no friend like the old friend,
Who has shared our morning days;
No greeting like his welcome,
No homage like his praise!
Fame is the scentless sunflower,
With gaudy crown of gold;
But Friendship is the breathing rose,
With sweets in every fold.

There's no love like the old love,
That we courted in our pride;
Though our leaves are falling, falling,
And we're fading side by side.
There are blossoms all around us,
With the colors of our dawn,
And we lived in borrowed sunshine
When the light of day is gone!

There are no times like the old times,
They shall never be forgot!
There is no place like the old place;
Keep green the dear old spot!
There are no friends like the old friends,
May heaven prolong their lives;
There are no loves like our old loves—
God bless our loving wives!

An Old Favorite

THE TIME I'VE LOST IN WOOING

By Thomas Moore

THE time I've lost in wooing,
In watching and pursuing
The light that lies
In woman's eyes,
Has been my heart's undoing.
Though Wisdom oft has sought me,
I scorned the lore she brought me:
My only books
Were woman's looks,
And folly's all they've taught me.

Her smile when Beauty granted,
I hung with gaze enchanted,
Like him, the sprite,
Whom maids by night
Oft meet in glen that's haunted.
Like him, too, Beauty won me,
But while her eyes were on me—
If once their ray
Was turned away,
Oh! winds could not outrun me.

And are those follies going?
And is my proud heart growing
Too cold or wise
For brilliant eyes
Again to set it glowing?
No—vain, alas! the endeavor
From bonds so sweet to sever;
Poor Wisdom's chance
Against a glance
Is now as weak as ever.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroad now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later thsn December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

GRANULATED

Fertilizer Lime!

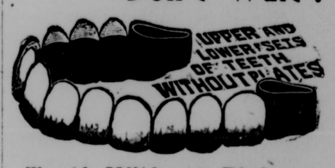
FOR FARMERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

C. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—21t

Now is the Time!
Don't Wait!



Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work

A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY,
First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R.

POPULAR SEASHORE
EXCURSIONS.

Atlantic City,

Cape May, Ocean City, Sea Island City, N. J., Ocean City, Md., and Rehoboth Beach, Del.,

July 16 and 28, August 11 and and September 8.

At following very low rates from OAKLAND:

Only $8.50 Round Trip, tickets good in coaches only.

Only $10.50 Round Trip, tickets good in Pullman cars when accompanied by regular Pullman ticket.

All tickets good returning 16 days, including date of sale.

Stop-overs allowed on return trip at Philadelphia and Washington.

Ask Ticket Agents for pamphlet giving detailed information.

Sheridan's Hurricane Fight

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

September 22-26, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

WHEN Sheridan sent the Confederate general, Jubal A. Early, "whirling up the valley" from the battlefield of Opequan (Winchester), Sept. 19, 1864, he let his foe escape "bag and baggage," guns and all. But in the hurricane battle which came as a swift sequel on Sept. 23, at Fisher's hill, the young commander opened up the gun capturing business, which gave the whole country no end of amusement throughout the exciting valley campaign. Early's army retreated from Winchester during the night following the battle of Sept. 19 and covered the twenty miles between that point and Cedar creek at a pace quite as lively as that of Sheridan's famous gallop when he rode down to save the day, just a month later.

In his retreat Early followed the old beaten path of the valley pike, a road which witnessed more wild army panics than any other thoroughfare in America, aiming for Strasburg, the next defensible position. Just south of Strasburg the Massanutten mountain narrows the wide Shenandoah valley to about four miles of breadth, and this is spanned by a ridge at right angles, the eastern extremity resting on the Shenandoah river and the northern base being bordered by a deep stream fitly termed Tumbling run. South of Tumbling run and fairly overhanging the stream Fisher's hill lifts its precipitous bluff. Here Early halted, with the hill protecting his right flank. The Federal cavalry division of General Wesley Merritt followed sharp on Early's trail from Winchester and on the morning of Sept. 20 struck his outposts along Tumbling run.

Sheridan's march up the historic pike from his victorious battlefield was what might be expected of a vigilant commander operating in a region noted for war surprises. The infantry corps of Wright, Emory and Crook followed in the wake of Merritt's troopers, and the cavalry divisions of James H. Wilson and Averell took the side roads on the right and left to guard the flanks. The whole of the 20th passed in getting the infantry to the front, and that night the Federal outposts were in the northern limits of the town of Strasburg and the Confederates in the southern portion. Early's army was weaker than when Sheridan met it on the Opequan by the 4,000 casualties suffered there. Besides he had lost General Rodes, killed; General Fitz Lee, wounded, and General Breckinridge detached for duty elsewhere. Yet he was confident of holding Sheridan off at Fisher's hill, for the guns he had posted there commanded the pike for a long distance, his flanks were guarded by cavalry, and the two days and nights of grace which Sheridan allowed him were used in fortifying his left flank, which rested in the broad valley on the west.

Sheridan occupied the whole day Sept. 21 in placing his three corps of infantry in position for assault. At nightfall he advanced his pickets through the town of Strasburg and drove the Confederate skirmishers back to the defenses of Fisher's hill. The morning of the 22d disclosed fresh defenses of earth, stone and abatis prepared during the night by Early's troops. Sheridan didn't trust to staff reports, but rode himself from one end of the picket line to the other. He found a height north of Tumbling run, which commanded Early's main position, and this was carried and held after a sharp fight. Guns were planted on the height after a night of tedious labor.

In spite of his success in gaining the height confronting Early's main position, Sheridan looked upon that ground as impregnable and decided to turn the enemy's left flank. By skillful maneuvering he threw Averell's cavalry division and Wright's infantry corps forward and at the same time dispatched Crook's command on a circuitous march of five miles, beyond Early's extreme left. When Early saw Averell and the Sixth corps advancing he gave up hope and ordered his troops to retire after nightfall. But the witching hour of sunset is favorable for sudden attacks, and just about that time Crook, who had moved unseen by the enemy, rushed his line forward and was over the enemy's trenches before his presence had been discovered.

The charge of Crook was immediately followed up by the Sixth corps, on Crook's left. Still to the left and on the ground before described as Early's right flank and main position, the Nineteenth corps descended the ravine of Tumbling run, literally scrambling over rough fields, stone walls, rocks and felled trees. Across the stream they plunged, up the precipitous height, Sheridan and his staff urging them on with shouts and gestures, crying: "Forward! Forward, everything!"

The excited cries of some officers, "Go on! Don't stop, but go on!" were useless, for it was Mission Ridge over again, in the sense that the men in the rush were under a headway that knew no stopping. The Confederates broke from the trenches and in their haste to get away left sixteen guns in position on the formidable hill which had been the stronghold. At nightfall Early's line was indeed retiring, but in confusion, and did not stop until it had passed beyond a narrow defile which in the darkness put an end to Federal pursuit.

When Grant heard of this second victory won by "Little Phil," he wrote to the hero, "Keep on and you will cause the fall of Richmond." The battle was not fought as planned, for Sheridan had sent his cavalry far to the right and left of the field to cut in behind Early and capture the entire force. This combination failed, however, as is often the case. But Averell was on the heels of Early the afternoon of the 23d, and, although the Federal infantry didn't come up to support the attack, Early took warning and kept on up the valley until he reached Port Republic, forty miles from the last battlefield. He would have continued retreating, but the news of his defeat at Opequan had reached Richmond and caused the return to the valley of Kershaw's infantry division, the absence of which had inspired Sheridan to take the offensive. This body of men joined Early at Port Republic, and he once more thought of trying conclusions with Sheridan.

The presence in the valley again of Kershaw's division of Confederates was discovered by General Wesley Merritt, who rode into Early's outposts near Port Republic on the 26th and found Kershaw's infantry in line. Merritt had been sent to Port Republic to make a demonstration with his troopers and lead Early to expect another attack on his direct front. But the infantry was slow in getting over the ground, having to wait for rations to be brought up from the Potomac, and Sheridan was not prepared for a renewal of the tactics so effective Opequan and Fisher's hill. He had set out originally with the intention of cutting off Early's line of retreat, and to this he adhered, sending General A. A. Torbert's cavalry division across the Blue Ridge, eastward, to ride around Early, recross the mountain by the pass at Waynesboro and strike Staunton, which was the base of all the Confederate operations in the valley. This move caused Early to squarely about face to meet the new danger up the valley. Meanwhile Sheridan had brought his main army forward to Harrisonburg, twenty miles down the valley, and Early was between two fires.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

SHERIDAN'S SOLDIERS RUSHING FISHER'S HILL.

TEAS THAT ARE WORTH FORTUNES

Twelve Hundred Kinds Are In China's Show at the World's Fair---The Most Populous Nation of the World For the First Time Makes an Exhibit Worthy of Her Greatness.

Many expositions of stupendous character make up the World's Fair of 1904. Each part is a vast and distinct show. Each building shelters many acres of wonderful things—wonderful because they are the choicest of their kind. Every nation on the globe is represented. Every state and territory is here with its best and making the most of its greatest opportunity.

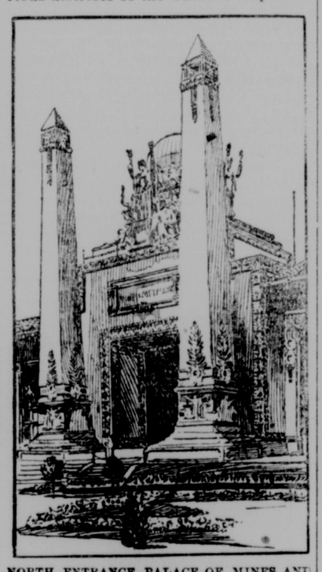
The fact that China has not been a large exhibitor at world's fairs gives to her great exhibit here a prominence quite exceptional. It is a wonderland of ingenious productions. We know China best by reason of her extensive exports of teas, which have found a vast market in the United States for generations. Her commercial interests therefore prompted her to make a display of teas that we should not forget.

In sealed glass jars China displays in the Liberal Arts Palace some 1,200 kinds of tea. Young Hyson and Old Hyson have a string of tea relations longer than the genealogical chain of a Plymouth Rock. They are neatly selected "chops," in the language of the tea farmer, and these classes do not embrace medicinal teas, which are quite another lot in the rather modest number of 400.

The teas exhibited vary in price from a few cents a pound to some rare and exclusive kinds that are worth their weight in gold, the tea in the latter cases being placed on one side of the scales and pure gold on the other—that is to say, the tea of this expensive kind is worth about $20 gold an ounce. Only a very small quantity of this exclusive leaf is exhibited, and it is grown in carefully guarded tea plantations or gardens right under the shadows of the great wall of China. Its cultivation is prohibited for any use save for the imperial family of China and a few of the favored high officials.

Mention has been made of the word "chop" in connection with tea, and it may be interesting to the everyday reader to know what the word actually signifies. The tea leaf is grown in various districts of the Chinese empire on large areas of ground which are often mistaken for single plantations. This is hardly ever the case, as the large tracts are very often owned by hundreds of different men, whose individual plots of ground bearing the tea plants are carefully mapped out, so that each individual owner may cultivate and pick his own crop of tea. Each owner likewise markets his own tea and puts his own special mark, or "chop," on the packages. Hence the term "chop" signifies an individual growth or picking of tea by one owner. In an area of tea land of, say, a thousands acres, all apparently under one ownership, there may be some forty, fifty or more owners of the plantation and consequently a like number of "chops" of tea.

It must not be imagined that all these different owners of the tea get the same price for their commodity—far from it, as each of these individual tea growers has his own secrets for improving the quality and flavor of tea. Take, for instance, the Amoy and Fuchau districts, whence most of the tea for the United States comes. The owners of "chops" of tea varying from 10 to 200 chests of 56 pounds each bring samples of their goods to the various foreign merchants for sale. These latter turn the Chinese tea growers over to the good offices of the foreign or American professional tea taster, who passes on the goods as to price. The tea taster has the samples infused, not boiled, in his presence and passes upon the quality, flavor, twang and manner of curing, fixing a price accordingly, from which there is never any variation and which the tea grower must accept or go elsewhere to dispose of his wares. In a single tract of tea land like the one cited above the price has ranged from 14 cents, the lowest, to 48½ cents, the highest, per pound among sixty-one different tea producers. A matter of great moment that also figures in the price of tea is that very often tea from the same district will have the various "chops" blended together in order to produce special flavors.



NORTH ENTRANCE PALACE OF MINES AND METALLURGY, WORLD'S FAIR.

The Bowser Cat

Mr. Bowser Works Out a Scheme to Do Away With Him, but the Feline Gets Wise and In the End Fools the Old Man.

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]

ON several occasions during the last year Mr. Bowser has shown the family cat that he was no true friend of his and that, did chance offer to do it safely, he would do him a mortal injury. Particularly has this been the case when he has had an argument with Mrs. Bowser and got the worst of it, and the cat has plainly rejoiced over the fact.

It was only a few weeks since, as Mr. Bowser sat on his doorstep alone in the gloaming, that the cat, who had just been licked in the back yard in a fight with a bobtailed heavyweight, came through the house to exhibit an injured optic and three or four spots where the fur had been raked off his body. Having put up the best scrap he could and not having quit until the referee pronounced him knocked out, he naturally expected sympathy, but was promptly and sadly disappointed.

HE SAT ON THE DOORSTEP.

"Look here, you old reprobate," said Mr. Bowser as the cat rubbed against his leg, "you have been in a fight and had seven bells knocked out of you, and I'll be hanged if I ain't glad of it! Durn your old yaller orbs, but you are no prize package or trading stamp around here, and you want to know it."

The cat understood and retreated, but had his revenge two evenings later when Mr. Bowser declared that Jonah instead of Daniel was cast into the lions' den and had to take it back on the family Bible. There was a suspicion in the mind of the cat that something would be doing, and he kept his eye out for squalls, and until the other evening he dodged all dangers. Then Mr. Bowser came home to announce that he was going a-fishing next day, and after dinner he got out a tangle of hooks and lines and sat down at the dining room window to straighten them out. While he was at work Mrs. Bowser ran into the home of a neighbor and the cat stretched out under the table to dream of mice on toast and cream fresh from the country. He was realizing that life was worth the living when he heard Mr. Bowser saying to himself:

"Yes, sir, I'll get square with that old cat if it takes a leg."

The cat sat up and saw that the way through the kitchen to the back door was clear, but as Mr. Bowser began to swear at the fish lines he presently concluded that it was a false alarm and lay down again. Five minutes later the grocer's wagon drove up with a late order, and as the cook had gone upstairs Mr. Bowser met the boy and said:

"All right about the things, sonny, but don't you want to earn a dime?"

"Sure, Mike!" was the reply.

"I've got a blamed old cat around here I want taken off and lost. If you'll take him a mile away and dump him out I'll give you a dime."

"Is Mrs. Bowser home?" cautiously inquired the lad.

"No, she's out. That's why I want you to take the cat now. He'll be missed, of course, but I shall depend on you to keep mum. It's one of the meanest cats in town, but of course Mrs. Bowser feels for him. I'll get an old peach basket, and we'll tie a cloth over the top."

The cat heard everything, but he did not bolt for the back yard. He realized that this was a conflict between himself and Mr. Bowser and that he must toe the scratch and win if he could. He therefore made not the slightest objection to being roughly dumped into an old basket and the cook's apron tied over it.

"That'll do nicely," observed Mr. Bowser when all was ready, "and now you can take him along."

"Are you down on the cat?" asked the boy as he pocketed the money.

"I am. He's an old nuisance. I've wanted to knock his head off for the last year. When a cat thinks he can get the better of me I want to 'show him that he isn't in it. Hurry up, now, and be sure you drive far enough."

Some cats would have called out a lament at leaving the house where they were born and reared and had good times, but the Bowser cat uttered no sound. He was having thoughts, but there were no tears in his eyes. He was a cat who had seen the beginning and the end of the war with Spain, and the ride of four blocks to the grocery had no terrors for him. The boy had to stop for another order, and he was a long time getting ready to go on, so long that the cat finally concluded that the time was ripe to show his hand.

Of a sudden, as the boy threw the last box in over the tailboard, something came out of the peach basket. Something also dropped into a box wherein reposed a dozen eggs and broke seven of them. Something further threw yolks of eggs over the boy as it shot under his arm and dropped to the ground. It was the Bowser cat. He was four blocks from home and the victim of a foul conspiracy, but he was not daunted. He took to the sidewalk, and boys and dogs took after him, but he was a winner from the start. He dodged dogs, slid past boys and took flying leaps over baby carriages and tricycles and in three minutes was back at the house.

"I gave him warning long ago," said Mr. Bowser to himself as the wagon drove away with the cat—"I gave him warning of what would happen, but he refused to heed it. When a yaller eyed cat thinks he can get the best of me he's got to stay out late o' nights. He's being jogged off to the suburbs, with his heart thumping and his old eyes glaring, and there'll be dogs around when he is dumped out. Mrs. Bowser will miss him and wonder and"—

HE SHOOK HIS FIST IN A VIGOROUS WAY.

Something came through between the pickets of the front fence. The window was up, and Mr. Bowser had the tangle of lines on his lap and his spectacles on his nose, and he was flanked on each side by two flowerpots. Of a sudden something struck him full in the breast, and the force of the blow and the fright sent him off his chair. At the same instant three of the pots struck the floor with a crash, to scatter dirt to the far end of the room, and three of the fishhooks sought out tender and juicy spots in Mr. Bowser's anatomy.

"For heaven's sake, but what was that?" he yelled as he scrambled up and danced around just as Mrs. Bowser came in. "Here—here"—

"What is it?" she asked.

"Thunder! Darn it! O-u-och! Git these fishhooks out!"

"Can't I leave the house for three minutes without something happening?" severely demanded Mrs. Bowser as she worked away at the hooks.

"I tell you something flew in at the window and knocked me over. Look at these flowerpots! See all that dirt! Look at this tangle!"

"It was the cat coming back," she quietly replied.

"The—the cat!"

"Yes. He got out of the basket and came home, and I don't think he'll go away again. There—the hooks are out."

She went upstairs, and Mr. Bowser sauntered out into the back yard. Seated on the fence and calmly and complacently looking down on him was the cat.

"Durn your hide!" whispered Mr. Bowser as he shook his fist in a vigorous way.

But the cat slowly winked his eye and grinned, and Mrs. Bowser appeared at the back window and said:

"When a cat has got the best of you, why don't you give up and let him alone? Something awful will happen to you if you keep on."

M. QUAD.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT NOV. 29, 1903.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	SOUTHWARD No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	NORTHWARD No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15	7 00 lv	Cumberland ar	12 00	7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June	10 51	6 01
4 47	8 27	Barnum	10 36	5 45
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 19
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 15
6 00†	9 50† lv	Elk Garden	†8 10	†4 25
5 48†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	†4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 23
6 38†	10 27†	Thomas	†8 38	†3 53
7 10	10 55† ar	Davis	†8 05	†3 15
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 33	3 48
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 15
7 20	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 15†	12 00† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	2 15

No. 25 P. M.	No. 3 A. M.	No. 1 P. M.		No. 2 P. M.	No. 4 P. M.	No. 26 P. M.
3 30†	6 30†	2 30† lv	Elkins ar	†8 20	12 30	†9 15
3 45	6 47	3 47	R.C. Jct.	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 51	2 51	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 57
4 01	7 04	3 04	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10†	7 15†	3 15 ar	Belf'n'te lv	†7 35	11 45†	†8 35
					A. M.
P. M.	P. M.			P. M.	P. M.
†8 30	12 35†	lv	Elkins ar	†9 55	†2 00
8 46	12 52		Beverly	9 39	1 44
9 10†	1 15†	ar	Hutt'e ar	†9 15	1 20

No. 27. A. M.		No. 28. P. M.
8 00† lv	Elkins	ar †4 45
8 58	Fishing Hawk	3 46
9 22	Glady	3 22
10 08	Burner	2 37
10 30† ar	Durbin	lv †2 15
A. M.		P. M.

† Daily * Daily except Sunday. s Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily ..... 1.54 A. M
No. 3—Daily ..... 7.17 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday ..... 9.26 A. M
No. 55—Daily ..... 4.53 P. M
No. 1—Daily ..... 10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily ..... 12.27 A. M
No. *8—Daily ..... 6.04 A. M
No. 2—Daily ..... 6.31 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun ..... 5.12 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily ..... 4.34 P. M
No. 12—Daily ..... 8.32 P. M

* No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN
Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR,

ST. LOUIS.

Three THROUGH Trains DAILY

Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars, VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RATES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS

From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

Sheridan's Hurricane Fight

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

September 22-26, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

WHEN Sheridan sent the Confederate general, Jubal A. Early, "whirling up the valley" from the battlefield of Opequan (Winchester), Sept. 19, 1864, he let his foe escape "bag and baggage," guns and all. But in the hurricane battle which came as a swift sequel on Sept. 23, at Fisher's hill, the young commander opened up the gun capturing business, which gave the whole country no end of amusement throughout the exciting valley campaign. Early's army retreated from Winchester during the night following the battle of Sept. 19 and covered the twenty miles between that point and Cedar creek at a pace quite as lively as that of Sheridan's famous gallop when he rode down to save the day, just a month later.

In his retreat Early followed the old beaten path of the valley pike, a road which witnessed more wild army panics than any other thoroughfare in America, aiming for Strasburg, the next defensible position. Just south of Strasburg the Massanutten mountain narrows the wide Shenandoah valley to about four miles of breadth, and this is spanned by a ridge at right angles, the eastern extremity resting on the Shenandoah river and the northern base being bordered by a deep stream fitly termed Tumbling run. South of Tumbling run and fairly overhanging the stream Fisher's hill lifts its precipitous bluff. Here Early halted, with the hill protecting his right flank. The Federal cavalry division of General Wesley Merritt followed sharp on Early's trail from Winchester and on the morning of Sept. 20 struck his outposts along Tumbling run.

SHERIDAN'S SOLDIERS RUSHING FISHER'S HILL.

Sheridan's march up the historic pike from his victorious battlefield was what might be expected of a vigilant commander operating in a region noted for war surprises. The infantry corps of Wright, Emory and Crook followed in the wake of Merritt's troopers, and the cavalry divisions of James H. Wilson and Averell took the side roads on the right and left to guard the flanks. The whole of the 20th passed in getting the infantry to the front, and that night the Federal outposts were in the northern limits of the town of Strasburg and the Confederates in the southern portion. Early's army was weaker than when Sheridan met it on the Opequan by the 4,000 casualties suffered there. Besides he had lost General Rodes, killed; General Fitz Lee, wounded, and General Breckinridge detached for duty elsewhere. Yet he was confident of holding Sheridan off at Fisher's hill, for the guns he had posted there commanded the pike for a long distance, his flanks were guarded by cavalry, and the two days and nights of grace which Sheridan allowed him were used in fortifying his left flank, which rested in the broad valley on the west.

Sheridan occupied the whole day Sept. 21 in placing his three corps of infantry in position for assault. At nightfall he advanced his pickets through the town of Strasburg and drove the Confederate skirmishers back to the defenses of Fisher's hill. The morning of the 22d disclosed fresh defenses of earth, stone and abatis prepared during the night by Early's troops. Sheridan didn't trust to staff reports, but rode himself from one end of the picket line to the other. He found a height north of Tumbling run, which commanded Early's main position, and this was carried and held after a sharp fight. Guns were planted on the height after a night of tedious labor.

In spite of his success in gaining the height confronting Early's main position, Sheridan looked upon that ground as impregnable and decided to turn the enemy's left flank. By skillful maneuvering he threw Averell's cavalry division and Wright's infantry corps forward and at the same time dispatched Crook's command on a circuitous march of five miles, beyond Early's extreme left. When Early saw Averell and the Sixth corps advancing he gave up hope and ordered his troops to retire after nightfall. But the witching hour of sunset is favorable for sudden attacks, and just about that time Crook, who had moved unseen by the enemy, rushed his line forward and was over the enemy's trenches before his presence had been discovered.

The charge of Crook was immediately followed up by the Sixth corps, on Crook's left. Still to the left and on the ground before described as Early's right flank and main position, the Nineteenth corps descended the ravine of Tumbling run, literally scrambling over rough fields, stone walls, rocks and felled trees. Across the stream they plunged, up the precipitous height, Sheridan and his staff urging them on with shouts and gestures, crying: "Forward! Forward, everything!"

The excited cries of some officers, "Go on! Don't stop, but go on!" were useless, for it was Mission Ridge over again, in the sense that the men in the rush were under a headway that knew no stopping. The Confederates broke from the trenches and in their haste to get away left sixteen guns in position on the formidable hill which had been the stronghold. At nightfall Early's line was indeed retiring, but in confusion, and did not stop until it had passed beyond a narrow defile which in the darkness put an end to Federal pursuit.

When Grant heard of this second victory won by "Little Phil," he wrote to the hero, "Keep on and you will cause the fall of Richmond." The battle was not fought as planned, for Sheridan had sent his cavalry far to the right and left of the field to cut in behind Early and capture the entire force. This combination failed, however, as is often the case. But Averell was on the heels of Early the afternoon of the 23d, and, although the Federal infantry didn't come up to support the attack, Early took warning and kept on up the valley until he reached Port Republic, forty miles from the last battlefield. He would have continued retreating, but the news of his defeat at Opequan had reached Richmond and caused the return to the valley of Kershaw's infantry division, the absence of which had inspired Sheridan to take the offensive. This body of men joined Early at Port Republic, and he once more thought of trying conclusions with Sheridan.

The presence in the valley again of Kershaw's division of Confederates was discovered by General Wesley Merritt, who rode into Early's outposts near Port Republic on the 26th and found Kershaw's infantry in line. Merritt had been sent to Port Republic to make a demonstration with his troopers and lead Early to expect another attack on his direct front. But the infantry was slow in getting over the ground, having to wait for rations to be brought up from the Potomac, and Sheridan was not prepared for a renewal of the tactics so effective Opequan and Fisher's hill. He had set out originally with the intention of cutting off Early's line of retreat, and to this he adhered, sending General A. A. Torbert's cavalry division across the Blue Ridge, eastward, to ride around Early, recross the mountain by the pass at Waynesboro and strike Staunton, which was the base of all the Confederate operations in the valley. This move caused Early to squarely about face to meet the new danger up the valley. Meanwhile Sheridan had brought his main army forward to Harrisonburg, twenty miles down the valley, and Early was between two fires.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

TEAS THAT ARE WORTH FORTUNES

Twelve Hundred Kinds Are In China's Show at the World's Fair---The Most Populous Nation of the World For the First Time Makes an Exhibi Worthy of Her Greatness.

Many expositions of stupendous character make up the World's Fair of 1904. Each part is a vast and distinct show. Each building shelters many acres of wonderful things—wonderful because they are the choicest of their kind. Every nation on the globe is represented. Every state and territory is here with its best and making the most of its greatest opportunity.

The fact that China has not been a large exhibitor at world's fairs gives to her great exhibit here a prominence quite exceptional. It is a wonderland of ingenious productions. We know China best by reason of her extensive exports of teas, which have found a vast market in the United States for generations. Her commercial interests therefore prompted her to make a display of teas that we should not forget.

In sealed glass jars China displays in the Liberal Arts Palace some 1,200 kinds of tea. Young Hyson and Old Hyson have a string of tea relations longer than the genealogical chain of a Plymouth Rock. They are neatly selected "chops," in the language of the tea farmer, and these classes do not embrace medicinal teas, which are quite another lot in the rather modest number of 400.

The teas exhibited vary in price from a few cents a pound to some rare and exclusive kinds that are worth their weight in gold, the tea in the latter cases being placed on one side of the scales and pure gold on the other—that is to say, the tea of this expensive kind is worth about $20 gold an ounce. Only a very small quantity of this exclusive leaf is exhibited, and it is grown in carefully guarded tea plantations or gardens right under the shadows of the great wall of China. Its cultivation is prohibited for any use save for the imperial family of China and a few of the favored high officials.

Mention has been made of the word "chop" in connection with tea, and it may be interesting to the everyday reader to know what the word actually signifies. The tea leaf is grown in various districts of the Chinese empire on large areas of ground which are often mistaken for single plantations. This is hardly ever the case, as the large tracts are very often owned by hundreds of different men, whose individual plots of ground bearing the tea plants are carefully mapped out, so that each individual owner may cultivate and pick his own crop of tea. Each owner likewise markets his own tea and puts his own special mark, or "chop," on the packages. Hence the term "chop" signifies an individual growth or picking of tea by one owner. In an area of tea land of, says a thousands acres, all apparently under one ownership, there may be some forty, fifty or more owners of the plantation and consequently a like number of "chops" of tea.

NORTH ENTRANCE PALACE OF MINES AND METALLURGY, WORLD'S FAIR.

It must not be imagined that all these different owners of the tea get the same price for their commodity—far from it, as each of these individual tea growers has his own secrets for improving the quality and flavor of tea. Take, for instance, the Amoy and Fuchau districts, whence most of the tea for the United States comes. The owners of "chops" of tea varying from 10 to 200 chests of 56 pounds each bring samples of their goods to the various foreign merchants for sale. These latter turn the Chinese tea growers over to the good offices of the foreign or American professional tea taster, who passes on the goods as to price. The tea taster has the samples infused, not boiled, in his presence and passes upon the quality, flavor, twang and manner of curing, fixing a price accordingly, from which there is never any variation and which the tea grower must accept or go elsewhere to dispose of his wares. In a single tract of tea land like the one cited above the price has ranged from 14 cents, the lowest, to 48½ cents, the highest, per pound among sixty-one different tea producers. A matter of great moment that also figures in the price of tea is that very often tea from the same district will have the various "chops" blended together in order to produce special flavors.

The Bowser Cat

Mr. Bowser Works Out a Scheme to Do Away With Him, but the Feline Gets Wise and In the End Fools the Old Man.

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]

ON several occasions during the last year Mr. Bowser has shown the family cat that he was no true friend of his and that, did chance offer to do it safely, he would do him a mortal injury. Particularly has this been the case when he has had an argument with Mrs. Bowser and got the worst of it, and the cat has plainly rejoiced over the fact.

It was only a few weeks since, as Mr. Bowser sat on his doorstep alone in the gloaming, that the cat, who had just been licked in the back yard in a fight with a bobtailed heavyweight, came through the house to exhibit an injured optic and three or four spots where the fur had been raked off his body. Having put up the best scrap he could and not having quit until the referee pronounced him knocked out, he naturally expected sympathy, but was promptly and sadly disappointed.

HE SAT ON THE DOORSTEP.

"Look here, you old reprobate," said Mr. Bowser as the cat rubbed against his leg, "you have been in a fight and had seven bells knocked out of you, and I'll be hanged if I ain't glad of it! Durn your old yaller orbs, but you are no prize package or trading stamp around here, and you want to know it."

The cat understood and retreated,

HE SHOOK HIS FIST IN A VIGOROUS WAY.

but had his revenge two evenings later when Mr. Bowser declared that Jonah instead of Daniel was cast into the lions' den and had to take it back on the family Bible. There was a suspicion in the mind of the cat that something would be doing, and he kept his eye out for squalls, and until the other evening he dodged all dangers. Then Mr. Bowser came home to announce that he was going a-fishing next day, and after dinner he got out a tangle of hooks and lines and sat down at the dining room window to straighten them out. While he was at work Mrs. Bowser ran into the home of a neighbor and the cat stretched out under the table to dream of mice on toast and cream fresh from the country. He was realizing that life was worth the living when he heard Mr. Bowser saying to himself:

"Yes, sir, I'll get square with that old cat if it takes a leg."

The cat sat up and saw that the way through the kitchen to the back door was clear, but as Mr. Bowser began to swear at the fish lines he presently concluded that it was a false alarm and lay down again. Five minutes later the grocer's wagon drove up with a late order, and as the cook had gone upstairs Mr. Bowser met the boy and said:

"All right about the things, sonny, but don't you want to earn a dime?"

"Sure, Mike!" was the reply.

"I've got a blamed old cat around here I want taken off and lost. If you'll take him a mile away and dump him out I'll give you a dime."

"Is Mrs. Bowser home?" cautiously inquired the lad.

"No, she's out. That's why I want you to take the cat now. He'll be missed, of course, but I shall depend on you to keep mum. It's one of the meanest cats in town, but of course Mrs. Bowser feels for him. I'll get an old peach basket, and we'll tie a cloth over the top."

The cat heard everything, but he did not bolt for the back yard. He realized that this was a conflict between himself and Mr. Bowser and that he must toe the scratch and win if he could. He therefore made not the slightest objection to being roughly dumped into an old basket and the cook's apron tied over it.

"That'll do nicely," observed Mr. Bowser when all was ready, "and now you can take him along."

"Are you down on the cat?" asked the boy as he pocketed the money.

"I am. He's an old nuisance. I've wanted to knock his head off for the last year. When a cat thinks he can get the better of me I want to show him that he isn't in it. Hurry up, now, and be sure you drive far enough."

Some cats would have called out a lament at leaving the house where they were born and reared and had good times, but the Bowser cat uttered no sound. He was having thoughts, but there were no tears in his eyes. He was a cat who had seen the beginning and the end of the war with Spain, and the ride of four blocks to the grocery had no terrors for him. The boy had to stop for another order, and he was a long time getting ready to go on, so long that the cat finally concluded that the time was ripe to show his hand.

Of a sudden, as the boy threw the last box in over the tailboard, something came out of the peach basket. Something also dropped into a box wherein reposed a dozen eggs and broke seven of them. Something further threw yolks of eggs over the boy as it shot under his arm and dropped to the ground. It was the Bowser cat. He was four blocks from home and the victim of a foul conspiracy, but he was not daunted. He took to the sidewalk, and boys and dogs took after him, but he was a winner from the start. He dodged dogs, slid past boys and took flying leaps over baby carriages and tricycles and in three minutes was back at the house.

"I gave him warning long ago," said Mr. Bowser to himself as the wagon drove away with the cat—"I gave him warning of what would happen, but he refused to heed it. When a yaller eyed cat thinks he can get the best of me he's got to stay out late o' nights. He's being jogged off to the suburbs, with his heart thumping and his old eyes glaring, and there'll be dogs around when he is dumped out. Mrs. Bowser will miss him and wonder and"—

Something came through between the pickets of the front fence. The window was up, and Mr. Bowser had the tangle of lines on his lap and his spectacles on his nose, and he was flanked on each side by two flowerpots. Of a sudden something struck him full in the breast, and the force of the blow and the fright sent him off his chair. At the same instant three of the pots struck the floor with a crash, to scatter dirt to the far end of the room, and three of the fishhooks sought out tender and juicy spots in Mr. Bowser's anatomy.

"For heaven's sake, but what was that?" he yelled as he scrambled up and danced around just as Mrs. Bowser came in. "Here—here"—

"What is it?" she asked.

"Thunder! Darn it! O-u-och! Git these fishhooks out!"

"Can't I leave the house for three minutes without something happening?" severely demanded Mrs. Bowser as she worked away at the hooks.

"I tell you something flew in at the window and knocked me over. Look at these flowerpots! See all that dirt! Look at this tangle!"

"It was the cat coming back," she quietly replied.

"The—the cat!"

"Yes. He got out of the basket and came home, and I don't think he'll go away again. There—the hooks are out."

She went upstairs, and Mr. Bowser sauntered out into the back yard. Seated on the fence and calmly and complacently looking down on him was the cat.

"Durn your hide!" whispered Mr. Bowser as he shook his fist in a vigorous way.

But the cat slowly winked his eye and grinned, and Mrs. Bowser appeared at the back window and said:

"When a cat has got the best of you, why don't you give up and let him alone? Something awful will happen to you if you keep on."

M. QUAD.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY,
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT NOV. 29, 1903.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†12 00	†7 15
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	6 43
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 20
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 08
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June	10 51	6 01
4 47	8 27	Barnum	10 36	5 45
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	5 37
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 19
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 15
6 00§	9 50† lv	Elk Garden	†8 10	†4 25
5 48†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	†4 43
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	4 37
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 27
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 14	4 23
6 58†	10 27†	Thomas	†8 38	†3 53
7 10	10 55† ar	Davis	†8 05	†3 15
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 23	3 48
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 15
7 20	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 12
7 22	11 07	Bretz	7 52	3 07
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 05
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 31
8 15†	12 00§ ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	2 15
	NOON

No. 25	No. 3	No. 1		No. 2	No. 4	No. 26
P. M.	A. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
3 30§	6 30†	2 30†	lv Elkins ar	†8 20	12 50	†9 15
3 45	6 47	3 47	R.C. Jct	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 51	2 51	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 57
4 01	7 04	3 04	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10§	7 15†	3 15 ar	Bel'g'n	lv †7 35	11 45†	†8 35
					A. M.

	P. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.
	†8 30	12 35†	lv Elkins ar	†9 55	†2 00
	8 46	12 52	Beverly	9 39	1 44
	9 10§	1 15†	ar Hutt'e ar	†9 15	1 20

No. 27.		No. 28.
A. M.		P. M.
8 00§ lv	Elkins	ar †4 45
8 58	Fishing Hawk	3 46
9 22	Glady	3 22
10 08	Burner	2 37
10 30§ ar	Durbin	lv †2 15
A. M.		P. M.

† Daily * Daily except Sunday. § Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R.R. TIME TABLE
IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—	Daily	1.54 A. M
No. 3—	Daily	7.17 A. M
No. 71—	Daily except Sunday	9.26 A. M
No. 55—	Daily	4.53 P. M
No. 1—	Daily	10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—	Daily	12.27 A. M
No. *8—	Daily	6.04 A. M
No. 2—	Daily	6.31 A. M
No. 72—	Accom daily except Sun	5.12 P. M
No. 46—	Express, daily	4.34 P. M
No. 12—	Daily	8.32 P. M

* No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN, Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR,

ST. LOUIS.

Three THROUGH Trains DAILY

Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars, VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RATES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS

From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD

CHEAP EXCERSIONS

TO THE

St. Louis World's Fair

EVERY WEDNESDAY IN

AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.

Only $14.50 Round Trip from OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.
2100 Madison Square, PHILA., PA.
Mention this paper.

COAL.

I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of

Bituminous Coal,

mined from my mine west of town.

Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.

Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be promptly filled.

E. Z. TOWER.

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

THE

SECOND NATIONAL BANK

of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital	$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits	250,000
Liability of Shareholders	100,000
Additional Security to Depositors	$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE"

TO THE

World's Fair, ST. LOUIS.

Three Through Trains Daily,

Vestibuled Throughout With Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars VIA CINCINNATI.

Season, Sixty-Day and Fifteen-Day

Excursion Tickets ON SALE.

Cheap Coach Excursions

Every Tuesday in June AT

Very Low Rates.

Ask ticket agents for Descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information.

UNUSUAL NUMBER OF BIG STORMS

Vulcan, Mercury and Venus in Conspiracy to Deluge Us Next Month.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks, the St. Louis weather prophet, makes these predictions for September.

First storm period extends from the 4th to the 10th. Quite a combination of disturbing causes bear on this period, namely: Vulcan, Mercury, Venus and Earth. It is plainly evident to every careful student of our storm diagrams that this is a period in which very general and perhaps violent disturbances are reasonably to be expected. It is also quite apparent that this period promises to run into a continued spell of threatening and stormy weather. In addition to all the causes named from about September 5 to 15 is an annual period in which the Earth passes a maximum of magnetic and electrical disturbances. As early as the 6th look for growing warmth, falling barometer and other decided indications of approaching storms. About the 7th to the 10th wide-reaching and severe storms of rain, thunder and wind will sweep over most parts of the country. This is a time when dangerous equinoctial gales and hurricanes are more than probable in all the gulf and South Atlantic coast regions. Very warm weather will precede and attend these storms, and tornadic developments will be most natural over many inland sections.

The second storm period, which, is central on the 11 and 12th, is so directly connected with the declining first period that we may as well consider as one. We believe that disturbances will bridge over the interval between them, and that the general perturbations will not cease until after the 12th. At the winding up of these disturbances, a rushing high barometer and cold, northwesterly gales will come out of the northwest, attended with frost in northerly sections. On and touching the 9th and 10 seismic disturbances will be reported from many parts of the earth, and dangerous equinoctial tempests will be encountered on many seas.

Third storm period runs from the 19th to the 21st. The result at this period will depend upon the character of the disturbances at previous September periods. During the last half of August and the first half of September, violent solar energy will accumulate around the earth's equatorial regions. If this energy should find vent in very heavy storms to this third storm period, the chances are that disturbances will be compartively moderate at this time. But if warm, placid weather with only light perturbations should leap up to this time, the cumulative forces will reach a climax between the 16th and 26th of September.

Fourth storm period is central on the 23rd, 24th and 25th. In every probability, some of the most general and violent disturbances of the month will transpire within forty-eight hours of noon on the 24th. The last stages of these disturbances from the northwest will bring touches of early snow, with high barometer, cold winds and frosty nights.

Fifth storm period is central on the 29th, reaching from the 27th into October. Under the influence of this period September will come to its close growing decidedly warmer, the barometer will be falling in the Western states, with areas of cloudiness and rain. By the 30th well-defined storms will be noted in the West, which will advance eastward over the country during the 1st and 2nd days of October. Change to cooler and rising barometer in the West as September ends.

Public Sale of Personal Property,

I will offer at public auction at my barn in the town of Oakland, on Wednesday, Sept. 7th, 1904, at 11 a.m. six horses, six-seated carriage, six-seated canopy-top wagon, 1 Dayton, 1 surrey, 3 top-buggies, 6 run-a-bouts, 2 ladies phaetons, 1 drag, 1 cart, douale sleigh, 2 single sleighs, 4 sets double carriage harness, 5 sets single buggy harness, 2 wagons, 1 dump cart, 1 pair of bobsleds, 1 set double wagon harness, 1 plow, 1 harrow, and other articles usually connected with stables. Terms of Sale—On all sums over $5 a credit of six months will be given with approved security, with interest from day of sale; under $5, cash on day of sale; no property to be removed until terms are complied with.

ANN SWEENEY.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

ONLY $4.00 TO WASHINGTON AND RETURN, ONLY $4.50 TO BALTIMORE AND RETURN,

Saturday, September 17, via BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD,

Special train will leave Oakland at 12 night, affording an opportunity to spend all day Sunday among the attractions of either Capital or Monumental City. 2t

CHRONOLOGY OF THE PRESIDENTS

Prepared by the Venerable Jacob Brown, Nestor of the Local Bar.

There has of late been considerable discussion of the age question as relating to the Presidency of the United States, caused by the advanced age of the Democratic candidate, Hon. H. G. Davis. In the early years of our government the Vice Presidency was regarded with more interest and importance than in later years. In was called the stepping stone for the Presidency, meaning, that there was but one step from the second to the first office of the United States.

It might be of some interest to many persons to be reminded of the ages of the different Presidents when they were chosen, beginning with the father of our country.

Washington was born in 1732 and was elected in 1789 and 1793; John Adams was born in 1735 and was elected in 1796; Thomas Jefferson was born in 1743 and was elected in 1800 and 1804; James Madison was born in 1751 and was elected in 1808 and 1812; Jame Monroe was born in 1758 and was elected in 1816 and 1820; Jno. Q. Adams was born in 1767 and was elected in 1824; Andrew Jackson was born in 1767 and was elected in 1828 and 1832; M. Van Buren was born in 1683 and was elected in 1836; Wm. H. Harrison was born in 1773 and was elected in 1840; James K. Polk was born in 1795 and was elected in 1844; Z. Taylor was born in 1784 and was elected in 1848; Franklin Pearce was born in 1804 and was elected in 1852; Jame Buchannan was born in 1790 and was elected 1856; Abraham Lincoln was born in 1809 and was elected in 1860 and 1864; U. S. Grant was born in 1822 and was elected in 1868 and 1872; R. B. Hayes was born in 1822 and was elected in 1876; J. A. Garfield was born in 1822 and was elected in 1880; Grover Cleveland was born in 1837 and was elected in 1884 and 1892; Benj. Harrison was born in 1836 and was elected in 1888; Wm. McKinley was born in 1843 and was elected in 1896 and 1900.

The accidental Presidents so called, those who came to the office on account of the death of the President while in his office were:

John Tyler, born 1790, ascended to the office 1841; Millard Filmore, born 1800, ascended to the office 1850; Andrew Johnson, born 1809, ascended to the office 1865; Chester Arthur, a man of middle age, ascended to the office, 1881; Theodore Roosevelt, about 43 years old, 1901.

One who has become an octogenarian certainly knows or ought to know the disadvantages of old age and on the other hand its advantages if there be any. The purpose of this paper is not to criticise, but to furnish what seems to be relevant and useful facts to such as may need or wish them. I have no wish to disparage the candidacy of ex-Senator Henry G. Davis on account of his age, for I have a more kindly feeling for him on account of friendly relations which have existed for 50 years or more.

From this record it appears that Wm. H. Harrison was the oldest man to be elected President —at 67 years— but he only served one month. Buchannan was the next oldest—66 years. His term expired after he had reached his 70th year.

John Adams lived the longest of all the Presidents. He died July 4, 1826, at the great age of 91. Jefferson died on the same day, aged 83 years. President Monroe also died on the glorious Fourth, 1831 Our present executive is the youngest man who has reached the great executive chair. General Grant was the youngest man to be elected at the age of 46. The President who lived the shortest time after his service, was James K. Polk. He survived only six weeks.

J. B.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE"

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR, ST. LOUIS.

Three THROUGH Trains DAILY

Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars, VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RATES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS

From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

FARMERS' MONTH AT WORLD'S FAIR

Biggest Department of the Great Exposition Ready For the Inspection of the Army of Men Who Made Its Creation Possible.

Now that crops have been or are being laid by, the farmer prepares for his trip to the World's Fair, a treat that has long been promised him and for which he has patiently waited. No exposition has offered so many inducements for the farmer's presence as this one at St. Louis, nor has any previous exposition given the prominence and space to the subject of agriculture.

August and September are ostensibly the farmer's months at the Exposition, for it is at this season that the agriculture exhibits are the freshest and best. Products of the new crops are pouring into the booths from every state in the Union, and additions are constantly being made to the gorgeous display.

Headquarters for visiting farmers may be found in every state section of the great Agriculture Palace, but for their special convenience there has just been completed a Grange House, situated in the south end of the building. It is equipped with a reception room, ladies' retiring rooms and check rooms, where parcels may be left free of charge. Here will be kept a list of moderate priced rooms to aid visiting farmers and their families in procuring accommodations.

The largest building on the grounds is the Palace of Agriculture, covering twenty acres, while the Palace of Horticulture near by covers about a third as much space. These two immense structures are filled with exhibits of the farm, garden and orchard of the most extensive and elaborate character, every state in the Union and most of the principal countries of the world being represented.

Agriculture is given more prominence than any other department at the Exposition, the paramount importance of this great industry having been fully appreciated from the very beginning of the World's Fair movement.

About seventy acres of ground are covered by the agriculture and horticulture department at the Fair, large outdoor spaces being devoted to this industry. Outside there are growing crops, trees and flowers, an instructive six acre farm maintained by the United States Government Plant Industry, and gardens in all parts of the grounds.

There are more exhibits in the Agriculture building than in any other section of the Exposition. This building is considered by many people the most interesting part of the World's Fair. The exhibits in the palaces of Agriculture and Horticulture constitute a display vast enough and instructive enough to occupy the attention of visitors for many days. Nothing to compare with them was ever attempted before. They are the climax of several decades of educational work which is placing farming on a high plane and is making scientific agriculture a pleasing reality.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE MONUMENT, WORLD'S FAIR.

The conspicuous role played by agriculture at the World's Fair should bring untold benefits and wealth to the farming community of the world and impress all farmers with the importance and dignity of their calling.

Passing through these colossal buildings, studying the attractive exhibits and fascinated with the bewildering encyclopedia of rural life which is spread out before his eyes, the World's Fair visitor is impressed with the important part the farmer plays in the great world of industry, and every farmer who views these interesting exhibits is given a new pride in his vocation if filled with inspiration and impressed with new ideas in harmony with the progressive strides that farming has been making for the past few years. The visit will give an insight into up to date farming on the most approved plan and will bring new hopes and blessings to the farm.

How properly to rotate crops, how to get the best results from fertilizing and irrigation, how to protect crops and fruit from the ravages of insects—all these and many more things of vital interest to farmers and fruit growers are taught at the World's Fair.

Mortgagees' Sale —OF— Personal Property!

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Joseph E. Lint, William A. Lint and Joseph V. Lint to the undersigned mortgagees, dated the 11th day of February, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 37, folio 355, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under said mortgage we hereby give notice that on

Saturday, the 17th Day of September, 1904,

at the hour of two o'clock P. M., at the farm of Andrew J. Frazee, on Frazee's Ridge, in Selbysport District, Garrett county, Maryland, we will offer at public auction to the highest bidder the following personal property, to-wit:

One Aultman & Taylor Steam Engine and Dixon Separator Threshing Machine and Two Bay Horses,

being a portion of the property conveyed by said mortgage.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

JEFFERSON FRAZEE,
DAVID TAYLOR,
Mortgagees.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the Real Estate of Christian Orendorf, deceased.

No. 515 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23d day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause by Jacob S. Miller, Executor, to Christian C. Orendorf and Noah Orendorf, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $810.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.,
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:

E. E. FRIEND, Register.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the sale of the Real Estate of Daniel Smouse, deceased.

No. 482 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23rd day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four by the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause to Jane Smouse by Jacob S. Miller and Mortimer Smouse, Executors, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county once a week for three successive weeks before the 23d day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $5,000.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.,
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:

E. E. FRIEND, Register.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett County, to view the lands through whice the proposed new road is to be located, said road to be located in election district No. 4, beginning at or near the old mill race bridge on the Bloomington and Westernport road and running thence northwest through the lands of the Davis Coal & Coke Co., and to intersect the Michaels and Westernport road at a point known as Kight's water trough, and to discontinue the old road, the distance of the proposed relocation being about one mile, and examine whether the said proposed road should be relocated, will meet on the 10th day of September, 1904, for the purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said proposed location of said public road, and if so, to locate the same, and perform their duty in the premises.

MARCUS M. FAZENBAKER,
GEORGE T. MILLER,
THOMAS BURKE,
Examiners.

ROAD PETITION.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first insertion of this notice in one of the county papers of Garrett county, application will be made by the undersigned to the County Commissioners of said Garrett county for the appointment of viewers to view and lay out a public county road beginning at or near Forty Water Station on the B. & O. R. R., in District No. 1, and running thence through the lands of Thomas Nines, C. H. Sweitzer, Levi Sweitzer, Frank Sweitzer, Jerry Sweitzer, Simon Sweitzer and others, and to intersect the County road leading from Swanton to Beckman at or near the top of the hill near the place of J. D. Ashenfelter, a distance of about one mile.

CHAS. H. SWEITZER,
A. F. SWEITZER, SR.,
C. E. SWEITZER,
BENJAMIN SWEITZER, JR.

Proposals for Building Wrought Iron Bridge.

Notice is hereby given, that the County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, will receive sealed proposals until

Tuesday, the 13th Day of September, 1904,

at 1.30 o'clock p. m. at their office in the town of Oakland, Md., for the building of a low truss wrought iron bridge; the superstructure to consist of one span 74 feet long and 12 feet wide; said bridge to have a capacity of 100 pounds live load.

The bids submitted shall only be for the superstructure. Said bridge is to be erected over the Youghiogheny River near Swallow Falls, in Election District No. 14, according to plans and specifications to be seen in the County Commissioners' office. The County Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

By order of the Board.

A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

OFFICE OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO., OAKLAND, MD., Aug. 24, 1904.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Sept. 13, 1904,

to transact business that may come before the Board.

By order of the Board.

A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,

Plumbing, Gas Fitting, Steam and Hot Water Heating.

Center Street, Keyser, W. Va.

PHONE 62.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity, and paseed in a cause in said Court standing as No. 1253 Equity wherein David Sloan is plaintiff and Jefferson S. Green is defendant, the undersigned Trustee was duly authorized to make sale of the real estate mentioned, and I hereby give notice that on

MONDAY, The 5th Day of September 1904

at the hour of 11 o'clock A. M., in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, I will offer at public auction to the highest bidder all the following described real estate situate, lying and being in Election District No. 11 of Garrett county, State of Maryland, aforesaid:

All that lot, piece or parcel of ground known as in the sub-division of a tract of land called "Lochiel," and described as follows:

Lot No. 11

Beginning for the same at a stone pile standing at the end of 83 perches on the sixty seventh line of "Lochiel," said line being also the given line of a tract of land called "Savage Ridge," and running thence North 56½ degrees West, 76 perches to a bounded white oak tree standing on the west side of the Frostburg road, North 63½ degrees West, 114 8-10 perches to the middle of the Savage River, then down and with the meanders of said river South 36½ degrees West, 9 perches, South 2½ degrees West, 6½ perches, South 39½ degrees West, 26 perches, South 30½ degrees West, 19 perches, South 26½ degrees West, 21 perches, South 67½ degrees West, 30 perches, North 67 degrees West, 28 perches, South 32½ degrees West, 27 perches, South 14½ degrees East, 39 perches, South 34 degrees East, 50 perches, then leaving the river and running thence South 89 degrees East, 107 perches to a stake and stone pile on the North side of the Lonaconing road, then South 85 degrees East, 10 perches to the middle of the forks of the Lonaconing and Frostburg roads, then with said Lonaconing road South 6½ degrees East 19 perches, South 17 degrees East, 12 perches, South 4 degrees West, 10 perches, South 12 degrees West, 20 perches, then South 56½ degrees East, 41½ perches so a stone pile in the sixty-seventh line of "Lochiel," and with part of said line reversed North 33½ degrees East, 177 perches to the beginning, containing

Two Hundred and One-Fourth Acres,

more or less, it being the same property which was conveyed by Thomas E. Green and wife to Jefferson S. Green by deed dated the 17th day of August, 1893, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 22, follos 246, etc., one of the Land Records of said Garrett county, Maryland.

Terms of Sale, as prescribed by the decree —Cash on day of sale.

Conveyancing at cost of purchaser.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN, Trustee.

The Keyser Preparatory Branch OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.
A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.
Special instruction for public School Teachers.
Instruction in Music.
A Splendid New Building Provided by the State.
A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.
Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.
No Tuition in Commercial Department.
Small Tuition charged Students from other States.
Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.
Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.
For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal,

L. L. FRIEND, Keyser, W. Va.

The Maryland Agricultural College COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY.
THREE COURCES OF INSTRUCTION.
AGRICULTURAL. MECHANICAL. SCIENTIFIC.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements: bath-rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

New buildings with every modern improvement, and old buildings thoroughly renovated by opening of first session. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, with annual deposit, ($150) one hundred and fifty nine dollars, for scholastic year. Daily visit by physician to College. Catalog giving full particulars sent on application. Attention is called to the Short Course of ten weeks in Agriculture. Write for particulars.

Term Commences, Thursday, September, 15.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER, President. College Park, Maryland.

The Maryland School for the Deaf, 37TH SESSION,

Reopens September 14th, 1904.

Non-Sectarian. For the deaf and dumb and those whose hearing is too defective for attendance on public school. Speech and lip-reading taught, as well as grammar school and academic studies.

Location very healthful. Board and Tuition free to residents of Maryland.

Apply to CHAS. W. ELY, Principal, Frederick, Md.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. CO.

TO THE

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS BIENNIAL ENCAMPMENT,

LOUISVILLE, KY.

VERY LOW RATES

For the Round Trip.

TICKETS ON SALE August 12, 13, 14, 15, good returning leaving Louisville not later than August 31st, 1904.

Stop-overs allowed at specified points in each direction.

Get details from Ticket Agent.

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.

Office and residence, Alder St., east of post office.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1904. NUMBER 27

GOOD INDICATIONS OF OIL APPARENT

In the Well Now Being Drilled at Finzel in This County.

CONSIDERABLE GAS ESCAPING

Hole Has Been Sunk to a Depth of Over Fifteen Hundred Feet and Stratas of Sand Beneath Which Oil is Always Found Passed Through.

Last Saturday upon his visit to Oakland Mr. Patrick E. Finzel, of Finzel, this county, who is manager of the Piney Run Oil and Gas Company, which corporation is now engaged in putting down a well for oil near Finzel, exhibited to a number of gentlemen a bottle of borings taken from the well which gave off a decided odor of crude oil and was to all appearances equal to borings taken from holes in well developed oil and gas fields. In consequence of the undisputed evidence of the existence of oil in the territory under control of Mr. Finzel his many friends in Oakland are highly gratified.

The well is down to a depth of about fifteen hundred feet and there is considerable gas escaping from the hole. Nearly every strata of sand covering oil producing beds in the West Virginia and Pennsylvania fields have been passed through and at the depth of about twenty one hundred feet the Gordon sand is expected.

The derrick and outfit in general is built substantially. The tools weigh more than a ton and the hole is being bored at the rate of about 25 feet per day. Mr. Finzel stated that the engine will shortly be replaced by a larger and heavier machine and then it is expected that more rapid progress will be made.

Should oil or gas in paying quantities be struck, and this is indeed probable, other wells in the same territory will be drilled as fast as men and materials can be secured to do the work.

Legal Holiday Monday.

By proclamation Governor Warfield has proclaimed Monday next as a legal holiday—it being the anniversary of the battle of North Point, when the British invasion was so successfully resisted by the Americans at Baltimore. The day is known locally as "Defenders' Day," and until this year was observed as a holiday only in Baltimore.

HIS FOOT SHOT OFF WHILE HUNTING.

Accident Befalls Rev. A. R. Snedegar, M. E. Minister at Bloomington.

GUN ACCIDENTALLY DISCHARGED

And Load of Shot Took Effect in the Divine's Left Foot—Amputation Was Performed at the Keyser Hospital.

With the fall season for hunting coming in accidents of a more or less serious nature due to the careless handling of shot guns may be expected as a natural consequence, the first to occur in this section having taken place near Bloomington, this county, last Friday morning about 11 o'clock.

The victim was Rev. A. R. Snedegar, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Bloomington, a mile or two west of Piedmont, who, in company with Mr. Harry Baird, a young man of that town, were going through the woods on the outskirts of the village, when the gun carried by the latter was accidentally discharged, the load of shot entering Mr. Snedegar's left ankle and foot, lacerating it so badly that it was found necessary to amputate the foot and a portion of his leg, the operation being performed at the Keyser hospital the same evening to which place he was accompanied by Dr. H. M. Kemp, of Bloomington, who was assisted in the work by the hospital corps of physicians.

Mr. Snedegar is unmarried, a native of Virginia and about thirty-seven years of age. He has been stationed at Bloomington as pastor of the church there for about two years where he is held in high esteem by his parishioners as well as by members of other denominations. He has a brother residing at Roanoke, Va.

NOTICE.

Change in Business.

The firm of Jno. W. Haney & Sons having sold its milling business, plant and feed store at Friendsville, Md., to The Friendsville Milling Company, hereby gives notice that all persons knowing themselves indebted to the above named firm must call and make settlements of their accounts on or before Oct. 1st, 1904. All accounts remaining unsettled at that date will be placed in the hands of an officer for collection.

JOHN W. HANEY & SONS,
22-4t Friendsville, Md.

OFFUTT'S.

Some Suit —AND— Skirt Savings.

Savings of a third or a quarter of our regular low prices—real savings that should prompt you to come quickly.

Probably we took too many for sure selling at full prices, but we bought with the intention of maintaining the reputation of the Suit Department as being the best place to buy good garments at low prices, and we're sure we have broadened that good reputation beyond all past season's limitations, for we've never before had such selling.

Lots of good choosings. Judge by the prices upon examination,

AT OFFUTT'S.

JUST LIKE THROWING GOOD MONEY AWAY

Children of Henry G. Davis Object to His Making Big Contributions.

NO RESULT TO BE OBTAINED.

Ex-Senator's Contribution to Be Limited to $50,000.—Col. John T. McGraw, of Grafton, Will Manage Campaign In West Virginia

It was ascertained yesterday from a most reliable source at Elkins, corroborated by a number of people in position to know, that Hon. Henry G. Davis, Democratic nominee for vice president, and his brother, Col. Thomas B. Davis, of Keyser, W. Va., a millionaire several times over, who was the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Second district four years ago, have each contributed $50,000 to the Democratic campaign fund for all purposes and that will be the limit of their contribution. It has always been believed by persons knowing the Davises intimately, that ex-Senator Davis would not be a heavy contributor. His daughters, Mrs. Elkins, wife of Senator Elkins, who dislikes the fact that his aged father-in-law has been burdened with campaign responsibility, and Mrs. Arthur Lee are opposed to their father putting large sums in the campaign and are known to have so expressed themselves. His only son, John T. Davis, now ill with typhoid fever, objects to his father making contribution such as has been published that he would likely make. Four years ago John T. Davis spent large sums in four counties hoping to aid his uncle Tom in his race for Congress, but no results were obtained at all, Col. Davis being defeated by a large vote. Since then the Davises have little faith in politicans judiciously spending money and they are very cautious about handing it out. Some Democrats contend that Col. John T. McGraw, who will handle the funds in West Virginia is more interested in carrying the legislature that he might go to the United States Senate, than anything else, and the Davises so believing, are averse to putting up big sums and getting secondary consideration.

Col. Tom Davis is now quite ill at his home in Keyser with kidney trouble, and while his condition is not really dangerous, his friends are apprehensive on account of his age. His nephew, Harry G. Buxton, a banker of Keyser, and a special favorite of his uncle, is also quite ill. Much sympathy is expressed for the Davises on account of these afflictions.

Since ex-Senator Davis made such a poor impression when he delivered his speech of acceptance at White Sulphur Springs, almost breaking down, every effort is being made to prevent anything that savors of a repetition and his movements and conversation are carefully guarded.

The Republicans claim the party's prospects in West Virginia are the best, that the voters are lining up solidly and men making an investigation declare that they cannot find a man who will vote the Democratic ticket. The fact that Mr. Davis is from West Virginia will have no effect on the Republican vote. Another thing to be considered is that Hon. Nathan B. Scott desires to return to the United States Senate. He is a man of great wealth and it is claimed if necessary can match Mr. Davis dollar for dollar. The Republicans contend that the Democratic politicians of West Virginia do not know how to spend money judiciously when they get hold of it.

Fell From Bridge at Blaine.

Mrs. E. G. Blackburn, of Kitzmillersville, had the misfortune a few evenings ago to fall from the West Virginia abutment of the Potomac river bridge connecting Blaine and the former town and break her leg.

Mrs. Blackburn had been at Harvey's store in Blaine and was returning to her home when owing to the darkness of the night she missed the footpath leading to the bridge and fell fromthe abutment to the river bed, a distance of ten feet or more where she laid until her cries attracted the attention of passersby who went to her help.

Call For Your Letters.

Mrs. Ella Stevenson, Mr. Harry Berchard, Miss Hazel Kimmell.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

MR. BRYAN SAYS ONE X MARK IS ENOUGH

Reiterates Opinion As To The Votes for President.

WHAT WILL THE DEMOCRATS DO?

Declares Officially That It Is Not Necessary To Place Mark Beside Each Elector's Name—Decision Will Aid Republicans.

The printed instructions prepared by Attorney General William Shephard Bryan, Jr., for the guidance of judges of elections, and also for the voters, were received by the Supervisors of Elections today. The directions given by Mr. Bryan for marking and counting the ballots in reference to Presidential electors are in line with his opinion as at first given in newspaper interviews, and are to the effect that a cross-mark after the names of the Presidential candidates must be counted for all the electors of the party voted for.

Mr. Bryan's official pronouncement is as follows:

The voter must make with an indelible pencil his cross-mark (X) opposite the name of each candidate for whom he wishes to vote, with the exception of candidates for the office of Presidential elector. The voter may vote for Presidential electors by making a cross-mark (X) in the square opposite the name of each of the persons (not more than eight in number) for whom he wishes to vote. He may also vote for the eight candidates for Presidential elector of any political party by making his cross-mark (X) in the square opposite the surnames of the candidates of the party of his choice for President and Vice-President. For example, a voter wishes to vote for the candidate of the Democratic party for Presidential electors; he can do so by making a cross-mark (X) in the square opposite the name of each one of the eight Democratic candidates for Presidential elector; he can also, if he prefers, make his cross-mark (X) in the square opposite the names of Parker and Davis, the Democratic candidates for President and Vice-President, and have his ballot counted for each one of the Democratic candidates for Presidential elector, grouped under the names of Messrs. Parker and Davis. (Art. 33, Sec. 50.)

The Attorney General is directed by Sections 114 and 114A of Article 33 of the Code (the general election law) to prepare these instructions, which are therefore regarded as having the force of law.

The question now is: What are the Democratic leaders and lawyers who differ with Mr. Bryangoing to do about it? A number of these hold that the amendments to the election law, as passed last winter, require that a cross mark must be placed after the name of each elector intended to be voted for, and that a mark simply placed opposite the names of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates is emblem voting and contrary to the whole spirit and text of the remainder of the election law. A number of consultations have been held, but no satisfactory way of overcoming, setting aside or evading Mr. Bryan's decision as framed in his instructions has yet been devised.

The part of Section 50 of Article 33, which has occasioned the dispute, reads as follows:

"The surname of the candidates of each political party for the office of President and Vice-President shall be placed above the group of candidates for election (electors) of such party. There shall be left at the right of the surname of the candidates for President and Vice President, so formed as to include both names, and to the right of the name of each elector, a sufficient clear square in which each voter may designate by a cross (X) his choice for electors."

When the law was first passed its sponsors thought the provision for a square opposite the surnames of the Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates has been left out, and it was supposed that it would have a serious effect on the Republican fortunes in counties where there is a large illiterate vote, for the reason that many negroes could not properly mark their ballots.

Lutheran Church Services.

Services at St. Mark's Lutheran ch. as follows: Prayer service every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.; Sabbath School, 9:30 a. m.; Catechize, Saturday 2 p. m.; Christian Endeavor, Sunday, 7:00 p. m.; Preaching services next Sabbath at 10:30 a. m.

Preaching in Deer Park Lutheran church next Sabbath at 8:00 p. m.; Catechize at 7:00 p. m.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

PLEASANTS PENNINGTON SHOT WHILE HUNTING.

Accidental Discharge of Shotgun Inflicted Bad Wound.

WAS HUNTING WITH HIS FATHER

In the Woods between Deer Park and Mountain Lake Park—Condition Favorable And Is Thought That He Will Recover.

Mr. Pleasants Pennington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Josias Pennington, of Baltimore, former residents of Oakland, but for a number of years summer residents of Deek Park, met with a serious accident Monday morning while out gunning with his father in the woods between Deer Park and Mountain Lake Park.

The two gentlemen had stopped for a few minutes and the younger Pennington was resting with the muzzle of the gun against his right side when the trigger became entangled in a vine and exploded the charge the entire load taking effect in his side tearing away the flesh and muscles down to the abdominal covering and extending two inches below and three inches above the ribs. The wound bled profusely and it was feared that the young man would succumb before medical aid could reach him.

He was taken as soon as possible to his home at Deer Park where Dr. Mitchell, of Philadelphia, Dr. H. W. McComas, of Oakland, and Dr. Lininger, of Deer Park rendered surgical aid to the young man, who is about sixteen years of age.

While his wound was very serious his condition is favorable at this time and it is thought that he will recover. The accident was a very severe shock to his parents and his many friends at Deer Park, where he spent most of the summer.

DR. DANIEL O. M'KINLEY DEAD

Life-long Resident of Salisbury Passed to His Reward on Saturday.

Dr. Daniel O'Connell McKinley, who was born and spent his entire life in Salisburg, and who for more than twenty years successfully practised the profession of dentistry at that place and in all parts of Garrett county, died of catarrh of the stomach at his residence on Jerusalem street in that borough, Saturday morning at 3 o'clock, aged about 68 years.

Deceased, many years ago, was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Newman.

Dr. McKinley was one of Salisbury's most highly esteemed and respected citizens. He was a Christian gentleman, and for many years was an active and constant member of St. John's Reformed church of Salisbury. In politics he was a Republican, and his entire life was actively spent in the furtherance of the best interests of his native town.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and were conducted by his pastor, the Rev. Homer S. May, assisted by the officers and members of the Salisbury lodge of Knight of Pythias, of which order he was a respected adherent for many years. His remains, followed by a a large concourse of mourning friends and relatives, were laid to rest in the I. O. O. F. cemetery. Peace to his ashes.—Meyersdale Republican.

Subscribe for The Republican

ENDED HIS LIFE WITH KEEN BLADE.

Untimely End of Mr. Charles Brown, a Prominent Citizen of Grantsville.

SLASHED HIS THROAT WITH RAZOR

At His Sister's Home Near Grantsville Last Wednesday Evening and Died the Following Morning—Was Prominent in Politics.

Mr. Charles Brown, a man well known throughout Garrett county owing to his work in political campaigns of the Republican party and as a writer upon topics of a public local character in the press of the county, died at the home of his sister, Miss Maggie Brown, near Grantsville, last Thursday morning about ten o'clock from self-inflicted injuries the preceeding evening.

Mr. Brown, a man of commanding appearence and good address, jovial, kind-hearted and affable, had for several months preceeding his death been a great sufferer from nervous and digestive disorders which developed a homicidal mania with him. Recently he went from Baltimore, where he was employed in the Custom House, to visit his wife at Somerset, Pa., and from thence he came to this county where he was the guest of his cousin, Mr. Ross Compton, until a few days before he took his life, when he went to visit his sister, a maiden lady, who resides in a little cottage within sight of the town of Grantsville. Here on Wednesday evening he went to the room set apart for his use and securing his razor went to the yard surrounding the house and cut his throat from ear to ear, inflicting such deep gashes as to almost entirely sever his windpipe. As soon as his condition was discovered physicians were summoned from Grantsville and everything possible done to save or prolong his life. The wounds were closed but on Thursday morning at ten o'clock death ensued.

Mr. Brown was born in this county about fifty-six years ago. He married a Miss Stutzman, whose father was superintendent of public instruction in Somerset county, Pa., for many years. He leaves besides his wife, four children, two sons and two daughters, all of them grown and one daughter married, who resides at Hanover, Pa. His wife and other children live at Somerset, Pa.

Mr. Brown was a member of one the oldest families of Garrett county, all of whom are highly respected in the communities in which they reside. He was a nephew of the venerable Jacob Brown, of Cumberland, and a cousin of ex-Sheriff Austin Brown, of Oakland.

For many years the deceased was an employe in the Custom House at Baltimore and during the administration of Governor Lowndes was custodian of the Maryland State Normal school buildings in Baltimore. His pleasant demeanor made him a great favorite and it is not believed that he had an enemy in the world.

His funeral took place from the home of his sister at Grantsville last Friday afternoon, which was largely attended by relatives and friends. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Schimp, of Salisbury, Pa. The interment was made in the Grantsville cemetery among the ashes of the generations of his family that have preceeded him the grave. May he rest in peace!

WE HAVE THE LATEST

In Styles and Best in Quality to Show you in SHOES

...A FULL LINE OF...

DOROTHY DODDS

Just received: light and heavy weight soles, Blucher and Bal Cut, Patent and Dongola.

WALK-OVERS

Talk for themselves. A look, a try-on, a sale. We only ask the pleasure of showing the line and we know the goods will do the rest.

H. L. DAUGHERTY, ... Oakland, Md.

NATIONAL CAPITAL CHAT.

A Large Fleet Of Warships Now At Washington.

This is the season of outings, trial trips and commissions for Government employees, on scientific errands, combined with pleasure. There are many things which needs investigating during the summer, in order that reports may be made forthcoming for the next session of the Congress. Work must be inspected; reforms must be instituted; information must be collected, and many affairs need regulating. One of the Civil Service Commissioners, Mr. Cooley, is touring the west, making a study of Civil Service as applied to Indian schools and reservations. By direction of the President Mr. Carroll D. Wright, of the Bureau of Labor, is in Colorado, making a study of the civil war in that State. Mr. Gifford Pinchott, the wealthy young man who runs the Bureau of Forestry in the Department of Agriculture, for the love he has for forest trees, is in Oregon, where he has been urging the transfer of supervision of forest reserves from the Land Office to his own. He says President Roosevelt's idea is that public lands should be devoted to the best possible use, and the object of his trip through the far West is to ascertain what is the best purpose to which lands may be devoted. This he admits, depends upon the point of view, whether one is a lumberman, a live stock man, a miner or a farmer. Another man will soon be sent West, perhaps into the Black Hills, to discover, if he can, how to fix wireless telegraph instruments to forest trees in such a manner that if the trees catches fire the wireless will make that fact known. The ornithologist, the enthomologist and the botanist are also searching out the waste places of the land in the interest of science, and for the benefit of mankind.

With the coming of autumn, and the fall of the mercury in the thermometer, there will be the usual activity in scientific circles. Announcement is made, here in Washington, of an early gathering of weather-sharps, possibly one hundred in number, who will discuss the art of forecasting and devise ways and means for discovering the secrets of nature. There is much interest just now, in these circles, in the remarkable phenomena of the past few weeks—cyclones in St. Louis, Minneapolis, and in Chautauqua county, New York, none of which could be predicted, and all of which caused loss of life, as well as an immense amount of property. The recent discovery at Cambridge, Mass., of spots on the moon, supposed to be caused by vapor or smoke, as the result of volcanic action, causes considerable speculation. What connection they have with cyclones and thunder showers on this earth is one of those things not yet ascertained. While in convention the weather forecasters will try to determine what problems ought to be studied at the new cobblestone station, now building, not far from Washington, on an eminence called Mt. Weather, in Virginia. It is also announced that they will try to have meteorology added to the list of studies in the colleges and high schools of the country.

Col. Boddle, one of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, has just returned from an outing in the Canal zone of Panama. He was delighted and surprised to find that mercury in the zone never got above 80 degrees, while it is frequently as high as 98 in Washington. He hunted in vain for mosquitoes; and when it rained all he needed was an ordinary $2 umbrella. He says Colon is a pleasant place to live in; that the health of the people is very good, no yellow fever, no smallpox, no typhoid fever, no diptheria, hardly anything of that nature worth mentioning. Work on the canal is getting on "very nicely." Experts think that not more than 10,000 men can be profitably employed at any one time on the work; that they should contract to remain two years; that under favorable circumstances it will take eight years to build the canal, unless an epidemic should occur, or unforeseen difficulties "crop up," or there should be a change in public sentiment in the Unitad States. If none of these things happen, and the South is willing to spare enough colored men to do the work, Col. Boddle is very sanguine that the canal will be speedily built.

Here in Washington it looks as if Judge Parker's pronouncement on the Philippines question would give satisfaction to his friends. Dr. W. A. Croffut, President of the Anti-Imperialist League, declares the Judge's position on the subject to be so nearly similar to that of the Republican platform as to be of little consequence. The ascertion that the Filipinos ought to have their independence as soon as they are "property qualified for it," it is regarded by Anti-Imperialists as quite inadequate to the situation. They claim that all people can govern themselves better, than any other people can govern them, and they contrast Judge Parker's views with those of Lincoln, and prefer Mr. Lincoln's.

A gentleman of this city was asked in Edinburg, Scotland, if Washington is an "Inland town." The reply was that it is some two hundred miles from the sea, but manages to have a very respectable navy-yard. Just now there is a squadron of battleships in the harbor of this city, under the command of Rear Admiral Sand. It has on board six hundred midshipmen who are doing the Navy Yard, fondling the big guns, seeing the town, and having the time of their life. The squadron makes a formidable appearance and includes the battleships Massachusetts and Texas, the monitors Florida, Arkansas and Nevada, the torpedo-boat destroys Lawrence, Macdonough, Trupton, Whipple, Worden, Hopkins and Hull, and Admiral Farragut's old flagship the Hartford. This is the largest fleet of war ships that ever visited Washington.

An agitation is going on in this city in favor extensive playgrounds for children to be provided with gridirons gymnasinns, and bowling alleys, as well as sanitary accommodations. Washington is already a city of parks while nearly every private residence has a good sized yard both in front and rear. No city in the Union needs playgrounds for children less than Washington. There is too much playing already, and it will be good thing when children are taught to do something useful. That Boston has playgrounds, where the conditions are very different, and the population is crowded, is no reason why a city of wide streets, innumerable parks, and nearly one hundred thousand shade trees, should go to the expense of buying seven more fields of playgrounds.

THE PARKER CANVASS LAGS.

It is well nigh two months since Parker and Davis were nominated, and yet their campaign can hardly be said to be started.

This is partly due to the factional bickerings of Tammany and anti-Tammany in New York. Tammany was bitterly opposed to Parker's nomination. Up-state Democrats were for Parker, and they overwhelmingly instructed the state delegation for him. The Democrats from most of the other states also took pleasure in humiliating Tammany and the nomination of Parker was crammed down the Tammany throat with great glee.

Since the nomination, the New York campaign has lagged because Tammany has sulked. Threats were made that Boss Murphy was to be further humiliated, and he has in turn defied the Hill-Sheehan-Belmont combination. This brought matters to a standstill, for without Tammany the Democrats can do nothing. They can squelch Tammany in state and national conventions, but they are absolutely helpless to carry New York or the presidency without the active help of Tammany. Hence the Parker bosses are now brought to Boss Murphy's feet and they are obliged to concede him all that he asks. It is humiliating for the Times, the World, the Evening Post and the other virtuous reformers to have to knuckle to Tammany which they have been denouncing as the most corrupt and villanious political organization on earth. Yet without Tammany Parker has not the ghost of a show.

Another cause of the delay in getting the Parker campaign started is the utterly disorganized condition of the Democrats. The Bryan men every where had the organization of the party, but when the reorganizers under the lead of Hill. Belmont and the trust magnates captured the St. Louis convention and nominated Parker, the party suddenly faced about, accepting creeds that four years ago it had denounced. Hence the party everywhere had practically to be organized over again, and this is a slow and tedious job, especially under a candidate that arouses no more enthusiasm and confidence than has followed the nomination of Judge Parker.

But little over two months remain until the election, and the problem of figuring out an electoral majority that will elect Parker is nearly as far from solution as ever. McKinley had 137 majority. Even without New York, he had a majority of 101. It is difficult to see by what combination of states this majority can be wiped out in 1904.

Notice.

I will operate my cider mill at Kearney every Friday until October 16th. After that date I will operate cider and apple butter mill daily except Saturday as long as apples may be brought.

Thanking the public for past patronage and soliciting a continuance of the same, I remain,

Yours most respectfully,
W. H. MUMAW.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

PLEASANT FIELDS OF HOLY WRIT

SAVE for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ,
I might despair. —Tennyson.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Third Quarter. Lesson XI. 2 Kings ii, 1-11, September 11, 1904

Copyright, Davis W. Clark.

Elijah Taken Up Into Heaven.

To the few isolated events of Elijah's career one was to be added which would surpass them all, even in their surprising scenic effects. He who had set the Lord's house in order with such a masterful hand found it a comparatively small matter to put his own in readiness. He was intent upon conserving the reform which he had inaugurated. This could be best done by confirming the faith of the young men preparing for the prophetic office. They were the hope of national godliness. So Elijah undertakes a last visitation of the prophet-communities at Bethel, Gilgal, and Jericho. With heroic purpose he sought to rivet these sons of prophets to the law and to the testimony. There is something touching in the firm adhesion of Elisha to Elijah in this closing scene. It reminds us of Ruth's "Entreat me not to leave thee." If, as has been suggested, Elijah was putting his successor to a final test, his tenacity must have been very reassuring. He saw that he was "steadfastly minded."

It is an instinctive impulse on the part of the dying to bestow a last gift, the value of which it is bestowed, so Elijah said, "Ask what I shall do for thee before I be taken away from thee." Elisha's wise choice reminds us of Solomon's. He gives the prophet another assuring token of his fitness to be his successor. He asks for what pertains solely to his success in his holy calling—a double portion of Elijah's spirit. Not twice as much as Elijah had. That would be incongruous. Not an evangelical spirit which would be twice as good as the legal spirit. Subsequent events do not sustain such a contrast. But it is as if Elisha had said, "If you wish to bestow a part gift, which shall serve at once as a memorial of your affection and be helpful to me in my career, recognize me as your eldest son by giving me the double portion which falls to the eldest son by law; give me, for example, twice as much of the prophetic spirit as comes to any one of the fifty of your younger sons on yonder hilltop."

Elijah answered: "You have done hard in asking, for the matter is not one of explicit revelation to me. However, we will put it into the Lord's hands in this way: I do not know how I am to quit the earth, whether visibly or invisibly. If in the former manner, so that you see me when I am taken from you, take it as the Lord's own token that your request is granted, and that a double portion of prophetic spirit is yours."

Any attempt at minute description of Elijah's translation leads to exaggerated rhetoric. Human language can not depict the scene. It was a theophany. The Lord's minister on this occasion, as on so many others, was a flaming fire—"a chariot of fire and horses of fire and parted them both asunder: and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven."

"My father! my father! (thou) chariot of Israel and (thou) horseman thereof!"—an epitaph without a tomb stone! Committed to the immortal custody of the sacred Scriptures, it has survived many a panegyric "sculptured in the rock or graven with an iron stylus on a sheet of lead forever." The first exclamation is expressive of that tender relationship subsisting between the prophet in the air and the prophet on the earth. It is as if Elisha had said: "Ah! I see thee! Thou art then my father and I the eldest of thy prophetic sons. By the Lord's own token name is now the double portion of the eldest son."

The remainder of the epitaph tells with Oriental picturesqueness what the Tishbite was to Israel. The chariot was the strongest arm of Eastern military service, corresponding to our modern artillery. It was usually built of oak, covered sometimes with metal. As many as three poles and as many spans of horses were hitched abreast; from the hubs hooked blades extended. Imagine such a deadly engine, driven at full speed into the ranks of an enemy! No wonder in ancient times "some trusted in chariots."

Such a chariot was Elijah. With irresistable power he had hurled himself into the ranks of idolatry. The merciless blades of his wheels dyed the Kishon with the blood of four hundred bestial priests. The track of this awful chariot left no trace of two blasphemous captains and their fifties. Yet, more through that immaterial something called the "spirit of the times," he rode with fear or favor. The timorous guards at the doors of the ivory palace at Jezreel lowered their weapons as this chariot of wrath swept into the very throne-room to announce to guilty royalty God's righteous judgments. On Carmel's top, in Naboth's vineyard, in Ahaziah's sick-chamber—everywhere and always—Elijah was the dread, implacable Nemesis of idolatry.

The Teacher's Lantern.

"Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World" was the winning title of a book which appeared thirty years ago. It proved a somewhat deft collection of popularly known conditions. The Bible better deserves that title. Among the many incidents it contains, perhaps there is not one which leads us closer to the boundary of another world than the translation of Elijah. It has been described as the most glorious, significant, joyful event which the world before the time of Christ had seen.

How often the dying, out of consideration for their loving watchers, entreat them to leave them a while for the sake of rest, and as often do the watchers respond in terms like Elisha's strong asservation, "As the Lord liveth and as thy soul liveth I will not leave thee," and to the very boundary of another world the living go with the dying.

The human heart craves certain evidence of a world beyond this fitful existence. It is quick to detect the analogies of nature. But these are insufficient on the death of friends or one's own approaching dissolution. Cicero reasoned well of immortality, but his reasoning was powerless to assuage his grief when his loved daughter Tullia died. "Mournful marbles!" is the natural exclamation after one has walked the length of the gallery of inscription in the Vatican, looking only at the side upon which the Roman sepulchral inscriptions are set up. It is an anthetic reproduction of the blank despair of the human mind without revelation.

The ascension of Elijah breaks in upon this natural, impenetrable gloom, superinduced by the greatest mystery and sorrow of human experience—a vivid, irresistible argument for the existence of another world.

This ascension accentuates the value of the human body. The modern tendency to depreciate the physical frame is germane to that figment of ancient philosophy which asserts that evil inheres in material substances. The inference is that the spirit's separation from the body is emancipation. The tendency now is to assert the immediate reclothing of the spirit with a body suited to its new sphere.

Over against the morbid depreciation of the human body which marked an earlier theology, there is a late and healthful tendency to assert the wholeness of man, and to appreciate the body as an integral part of that wholeness. The reciprocal influence of mind upon body and body upon mind is better understood. Physical culture, Delsarte, calisthenics, dietics, sanity in ventilation, sleep, and recreation. The tabooing disease and kindred matters as subjects of conversation, the refusal to morbidly consider symptoms and petty ailments—all this tends to the reductions of disease and the promotion of longevity and happiness. The Bible, when it pictures Moses, Elijah, and Jesus entering heaven in their bodies gives us the apotheosis of the human body.

LETTER TO F. A. THAYER.
Oakland, Md.

Dear. Sir: A gallon saved is $4 or $5 earned. Devoe saves 2 or 3 gallons in 10. How much is it worth a gallon?

A gallon sayed saves the painting too; and both together cost $4 or $5—$4 where labor is dear.

Our agents in Bridgeport, Conn, Hubbell & Wade Co, tell us: "There are a great many workingmen's houses here. They used to paint lead-and-oil and take ten gallons. We have been selling them ten gallons Devoe lead-and-zinc, and have had, in every instance, two gallons returned." The proportion is often higher than that; We have known it five in ten; but that is exceptional.

This is the explanation: Devoe is ground by machinery, and is ground fine; lead-and oil is mixed by hand, and isn't ground at all. Yours truly

29 F W DEVOE & CO

P. S. J. M. Davis & Son sell our paint.

Delightful Trip To California.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., will hold their annual meeting at San Francisco, Cal., September 19-25, and for this occasion the Baltimore and Ohio R. R. will sell excursion tickets from August 28th to September 9th, at Very Low Rates for the round trip, valid for return to October 23rd, 1904.

Stop-overs on going trip at St. Louis, Chicago, Memphis and New Orleans will be allowed; also at any point in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Assiniboia, Alberta and British Columbia within going transit limit of October 10th, 1904.

Baltimore & Ohio Ticket Agents have full details.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

BAUMGARTNER'S BIG BARGAINS!

5C SUGAR BOWLS, CREAM PITCHERS, THREE PAPERS PINS, ½ GAL. TIN BUCKETS, CAKE PLATES, AND LOTS MORE. 5C

Come around and see what 5 and 10c will do.

THE LITTLE MAN.

THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK
of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital	$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits	250,000
Liability of Shareholders	100,000
Additional Security to Depositors	$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

L. E. HANSON,
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland
PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD
CHEAP EXCERSIONS
TO THE
St. Louis World's Fair
EVERY WEDNESDAY IN
AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.
Only $14.50 Round Trip from
OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Beware of Counterfeits. Refuse all Substitutes.

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.
2100 Madison Square, PHILA., PA.
Mention this paper.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
The "Nation's Highway"
and "SHORTEST ROUTE"
TO THE
WORLD'S FAIR,
ST. LOUIS.

Three THROUGH Trains DAILY
Vestibuled throughout with
Pullman Sleeping Cars,
Observation Cars and Dining Cars,
VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY
EXCURSION TICKETS
ON SALE
AT
VERY LOW RATES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS
From all Stations Announced
From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

ONLY $4.00 TO
WASHINGTON AND RETURN,
ONLY $4.50 TO
BALTIMORE AND RETURN,
Saturday, September 17, via
BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD,
Special train will leave Oakland at 12 night, affording an opportunity to spend all day Sunday among the attractions of either Capital or Monumental City. 2t

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

The Man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

COAL.

I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of

Bituminous Coal,

mined from my mine west of town.

Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.

Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be promptly filled.

E. Z. TOWER.

MAGIC REMEDY
Cures Diarrhoea, Cramps in the Stomach, Colera Morbus, Dysentary or Flux, in a few minutes. A positive cure. Keep a bottle hand: it will save many a doctor's bill and possibly your life. At dealers 5c. by Mail, 10c. Prepaid. Sending case.
DEVORE & NOIR PLAINE
NEW YORK PHILA. W. VA.

NOTICE.

The undersigned hereby gives notice to the general public not to trust or harbor my wife, Mary Ann Bittner, who left my bed and board without just cause or provocation, nor my three minor children, who accompanied her, they being Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, as I will not be responsible for any debts she, the said Mary Ann Bittner, nor they, the said Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, may contract in my name.

JEREMIAH BITTNER.
Friendsville, Md., August 5th, 1904. 2t-3t

INDIGESTION

"I was troubled with stomach trouble. Thedford's Black-Draught did me more good in one week than all the doctor's medicine I took in a year."—MRS. SARAH E. SHIRFIELD, Ellettsville, Ind.

Thedford's Black Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Thedford's Black Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

More sickness is caused by constipation than by any other disease. Thedford's Black-Draught not only relieves constipation but cures diarrhoea and dysentery and keeps the bowels regular.

All druggists sell 25-cent packages.

"Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine to regulate the bowels I have ever used."—MRS. A. M. GRANT, Sneads Ferry, N. C.

CONSTIPATION

A Matter of Encouragement

By Hubert McBean Johnston

Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure

I pulled the sail in a bit and headed her more up into the wind. The breeze had freshened in the last ten minutes. Detestable, isn't it, how the wind comes around to keep a fellow busy just when he's reaching an interesting stage? I had my nerve up, and I'm sure if it had kept off another five minutes I'd have had the whole matter arranged. And the worst of it is I don't think Phyllis minded a bit. Really, I believe that girl cares more for good sailing than for—well, for what most girls do. I guess that's why I like her.

"Confound it!" I said it under my breath, but my mouth must have moved.

Phyllis laughed. I really believe the little vixen knew what I was thinking

"WHY," I GASPED, "DID YOU HEAR WHAT HE SAID?"

about. She brushed back a luxuriant lock that had somehow strayed across her mouth.

"It is a nasty wind, isn't it?" said she in mock sympathy.

"'An ill wind'"—I quoted, watching her weave the wisp of hair into place.

"And the lucky one this time?" she questioned.

"Your hair," I replied. "If I had as much nerve as that lock you've just put back"— I stopped. Phyllis was looking awfully stern. "Er—that is—you know"—

Phyllis tossed her head.

"If any one else ever ventured"— she began. Then another golden ringlet did the very same thing. Phyllis has the most wonderful hair.

"An answer to your challenge!" I cried. "If it hadn't been for that I'd have"—

Then we both laughed.

"You wouldn't have dared," said Phyllis.

That's just like her. She never throws down the gauntlet unless she's positive I can't pick it up. She knew very well I couldn't leave the tiller.

"Phyllis," I answered truthfully enough, "there are times when I'd dare anything for just—for just what the hair got. But a man can't take liberties without encouragement like a bit of hair can."

"No," said Phyllis dryly. But she wasn't angry. There was an odd little softness about the corners of her mouth—the most adorable mouth that ever was made—and somehow it seemed to me that her eyes were brighter than usual. It may have been that the fresh sea air was responsible for the color of her cheeks, but I am inclined to doubt it.

"What does a man call encouragement?" she asked quizzically.

But I was not such a goose. I knew very well what she would say about girls who acted that way, so I didn't tell her. Besides, she would have wanted to know how I knew.

"I can't just tell you," I replied. "Most girls seem to know without being told."

Such a whimsical little smile as Phyllis gave me!

"I'm afraid I'm not one of the 'most girls,'" she said. "I'm sure if I only knew"—

"Hello, you two spoons!" shouted a rude, coarse voice right behind us. "Haven't you eyes for any one but yourselves? Here we've been sailing alongside you for the last five minutes and never a look out of either of you."

Darcy Graham can be the most vulgar man in the world when he likes, and Grace Rawshaw is just as bad. I think that must be what attracts them to one another.

"Hello yourselves!" I grunted. "I guess we could have seen you if we'd wanted to very bad."

"Nice, amiable man, ain't he?" queried the irrepressible Darcy solicitously. "How do you get along with him, Phyllis? Now, if I were you"— Grace put her hand over his mouth, and I tacked. I really had no desire to hear the rest of it, and I felt certain the misguided chump would finish the sentence if he got half a chance. I don't think Phyllis wanted to hear it either.

"Idiotic beast!" I commented. "I'm glad there was no one around to hear him."

Phyllis was looking very prim.

"So that's the way you feel about it?" she said coldly.

I thought she must be joking. Such a change in front was inconceivable. And the worst of it was I couldn't catch even the suspicion of a laugh in her voice. She was serious as a judge pronouncing a death sentence, and, by Jove, that's just about how it sounded to me.

"Why," I gasped, "did you hear what he said? He called us spoons—'you two spoons,' mind you!"

"Well," sniffed Phyllis, "he's only repeating what every one else at the hotel has been saying for the last week. All the difference is that he's not afraid to say it to our faces."

Phyllis looked straight ahead of her and held her chin very high—the dearest, straightest, squarest little chin. There's no nonsense about Phyllis' chin. It's the most honest chin on earth, I think.

"But, dear," I protested, "I don't want people to say that."

The second word slipped out without either of us noticing it. But Phyllis did not seem to be satisfied. She turned her head the other way. Hang it all, anyway; handling a boat handicaps a fellow.

"I don't care about myself, you know, Phyllis, but I don't want them to say that about you. You see, a man's different. You're a girl, and it cuts more odds."

Phyllis turned her head ever so slightly.

"And besides," I went on, "we never did, anyway."

"Merely a lack of proper encouragement, doubtless," said Phyllis icily.

"Not altogether," I objected. "Sometimes a fellow"—

"Doesn't want to," she finished for me. "I see."

There was no help for it. I simply had to. I turned the bow up into the wind and let the sail flap whichever way it wanted. Sitting behind her, I reached around and took her hands.

"Phyllis," I whispered soberly, "it isn't that. You know as well as I do it isn't that."

Phyllis didn't answer. I thought I detected a sob, but I couldn't see her face. She kept it the other way. When I got her head back on my shoulder her eyelashes were a bit wet.

"The hair had the nerve," said I.

"The hair was not bred a gentleman."

"Breeding has its disadvantages," I returned gloomily.

"Encouragement is intended to offset them."

"Yes," said I, "but I have had none."

Phyllis' lips, luscious as the ripest cherry, hung temptingly near. I hesitated and lost. Phyllis buried her face on my coat, and somehow her arm half crept across my shoulder. I thought I heard her whisper something.

"What is it?" I interrupted, bending over to catch the answer.

And then she repeated it.

"I said there were different kinds, Jack," murmured the little rogue.

Would Take No Chance.

A traveling man who had been on a business trip through northern Texas while east of Greenville had occasion to hire a buggy to go across the country, and with the buggy there was thrown in by the livery stable a negro, who, the traveling man says, was about the color of anthracite. The two traveled across the muddy roads for miles upon miles, and all was going well when suddenly the negro rose in the buggy.

"Look a-dah!" he shouted.

The drummer looked barely in time to see an ordinary cottontail rabbit cross the road like a streak of gray. The negro prepared to get out.

"What are you doing?" demanded the drummer, catching at the lines as they fell. The negro got out. Then he carefully turned every one of his ragged pockets inside out, backed up to the place which the cottontail had crossed and walked across the imaginary line backward. Then he climbed into the buggy again.

"Dah," he said. "Ain' gwine let no rabbit gib me no bad luck dis trip. No, sah!"—Galveston Tribune.

Winning His Consent.

"Put yourself in my place, young man. Would you want your only daughter to marry a penniless youth?"

"Put yourself in my place, sir. Would you want to remain a penniless youth when there were rich men's daughters to marry?"

"You confess that you'd marry my child simply for her father's wealth?"

"And you confess that you withhold her from me simply because of my poverty?"

"What other reason do I need?"

"What other reason could influence you?"

"This talk is quite useless."

"Quite."

"We have nothing to gain by it."

"Absolutely nothing."

"You take it philosophically."

"Why shouldn't I? Your daughter and I were quietly married a month ago."

"Good gracious!"

Old Letters.

There is but one thing to do with old love letters—in fact, with all old letters, love or otherwise—and that is to burn them.

Letters are personal, the thoughts, the wishes of the moment. Letters are seldom of historical interest. If so, it is an easy matter to preserve those.

An old letter is seldom of interest while life is granted to the writers, and but a cause of misery after death has claimed either. Should both writer and the one addressed be taken from the world the old letters are either carelessly paraded or left to mold in a corner of the attic.

When a letter—the ordinary letter, which is but an exchange of personal thought, hopes or dreams—is answered it is time to burn it. It will then never be read by curious eyes nor will it serve as a bitter suggestion of a happier past.—Pittsburg Press.

Which End of Is Uppermost?

By Mrs. FRANK

EVERY stick has two ends.

So has every fact and every truth. So has every trait and every action, and it is one of the most amusing diversions to find out what the other end looks like.

NOTHING IN THE WORLD IS SO INTERESTING TO A MAN AS HIS OWN SELF. I know a very handsome man who has an album filled with pictures of himself at different ages and in different costumes and who declares, with a somewhat brutal frankness, that it is to him by far the most interesting collection of pictures the world could produce.

Another man, far from handsome, but very bright, cynically proclaims that he lives to the glory and for the advancement of Mephistopheles or Iago or by whatever name you choose to supply his real name.

* * *

Well, then, granted that the most captivating study of mankind is himself, I WILL SUGGEST TO MY FRIENDS PINING FOR AMUSEMENT THE LITTLE GAME OF HUNTING UP "THE OTHER END" OF THEIR OWN PET VIRTUES, and if they have any faults or can get some friend to point out one or two they may solace themselves by discovering that every fault has its alternative virtue.

For instance, our friend M. I., who lives for his own glory and advantage, is only the other end of the man who lives to spread abroad some great discovery and advantage to the world, which becomes incidentally glory and advantage to himself.

The "lovely woman who stoops to folly" for love's sake is one who is HOLDING THE SCEPTER OF WOMANHOOD BY THE WRONG END and misusing the noble virtue of love and self sacrifice. The lawyer who sells his gift of eloquence and defends the criminal who pays him is only holding by the wrong end that weapon which is mightier than sword or pen—the tongue of the ready speaker.

* * *

When you ran and helped grandmamma up the steps and seated her so prettily in the easy chair and brought her some tea and waited upon her, as she said, "like an angel," it was very filial and sweet and affectionate and dear, wasn't it? At any rate, you felt yourself very good while you did it and were not surprised at her praise and petting, but didn't you know, in the depths of your deceitful little heart, that a nice young man was looking on and that he declares sweetness, docility and domesticity a woman's chiefest of charms?

NOW COMES THE LITTLE GAME. THAT ACTION HAD TWO ENDS, ONE OF THEM ALL ABLOOM WITH THE FAIR LILIES OF WOMANLY VIRTUE AND THE OTHER CARVED INTO THE SIMILITUDE OF A GRINNING IMP OF FALSEHOOD AND PRETENSE. WHICH END REALLY WAS UPPERMOST?

A queer thing about this is that very often we see one end of the staff while the world cries out at the other. Did you never find yourself blushing and ashamed at praise and laudation and popularity bestowed most lavishly upon some action which the world considers very self denying and generous when YOUR OWN CONSCIENCE told you the motive was to gain this very laudation or perhaps money or position or some other price?

And were you never astonished and grieved at finding yourself accused of just these same base motives when really you had for once lost sight of tiresome self and been working purely and simply for other people?

WELL, IT WAS IN BOTH CASES BECAUSE THE WORLD GOT HOLD OF THE WRONG END OF THE STICK, WHILE YOU KNEW MORE ACCURATELY WHICH END YOU REALLY HELD.

America Has Too Many Women Teachers

By Rev. HERBERT B. GRAY, Warden of Bradfield College, England

I AM credibly informed by the master of a well known secondary school in New York that not more than 7 per cent of the male teachers stay in the profession more than five years, and not more than 5 per cent make it their life's vocation. The result is that even in the secondary schools in the cities THERE HAVE BEEN A GRADUAL DWINDLING AND ELIMINATION OF MEN TEACHERS AND AN UNHEALTHY PREPONDERANCE OF WOMEN TEACHERS.

* * *

I think that it is not straining a point to say that THE PREPONDERANCE OF FEMALE TEACHERS in the higher or secondary schools—I say of set purpose preponderance and not presence—HAS AN EFFEMINATING EFFECT ON THE CHARACTER OF AMERICAN BOYHOOD.

There is a tendency for women teachers when dealing with boys of such advanced age TO INSTILL UNCONSCIOUSLY, NO DOUBT, SENTIMENTAL VIEWS OF FACTS rather than to derive the principles of conduct from them.

What Our Navy Should Be

By the Hon. PAUL MORTON, Secretary of the Navy

THE NAVY OF THE UNITED STATES OUGHT TO BE A FIRST CLASS FIGHTING MACHINE. IT OUGHT TO BE THE MOST FORMIDABLE ONE IN EXISTENCE. Its military efficiency must receive the most watchful care, and after the proper ships and weapons have been provided it should be the study of those in charge to see that the ships are handled right.

There should be unlimited maneuvering and target practice, that the gunners may shoot straight, while AN ESPRIT DE CORPS FROM THE ADMIRAL DOWN TO THE TAR SHOULD BE THE ACME OF CO-OPERATION.

The Mountain State BUSINESS COLLEGE

Gives a training that turns [illegible] into money [illegible] quickly, thoroughly, [illegible] and complete courses in BOOK-KEEPING, PENMANSHIP, TELEGRAPHY, SHORTHAND and TYPEWRITING. $10 pays tuition, board and room-rent for five months. Skilled teachers. Large attendance. Healthful study halls and recitation rooms. Modern and convenient furniture. The M. S. B. C. has a National reputation and its graduates are sought after by business men everywhere. Now is the best time to begin a course. No vacation. Individual instruction. Our new Art Catalogue can be had for the asking. Address, A. G. SINE, President, PARKERSBURG, WEST VA.

The Boy Makes the Mule Go,
And the Mule Makes the Cart Go.
WITH OUR NEW PROCESS
We Make the Bread Go!
Because It Is Best.
A Trial Will Convince You.
OAKLAND MODEL STEAM BAKERY,
HENRY LAUER, Proprietor.

Carey's Magnesia Flexible Cement Roofing for Flat or Steep Surfaces

Is suitable for all classes of buildings as it affords thorough fire protection and is a non-conductor of heat and cold. It will last the lifetime of the roof-boards. It is fire-proof and is rated the same as metal or slate roofs. Call or write for samples and prices.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,
Agents for Garrett County, Oakland, Md.

First National Bank
OF GRANTSVILLE, MD
Now Open for Business.
EQUIPPED WITH A
Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe and Vault.
Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound banking.
Deposits by mail and all correspondence given prompt attention.
We Solicit Your Account.

Paid-up Capital, - - $25,000
Liability of Stockholders, 25,000
Total Liability, - $50,000
PAYS 3 PER CENT.
on time deposits. Interest computed and paid semi-annually.
DIRECTORS.
C. H. JENNINGS, U. M. STANTON, G. C. KELLER, ELI STANTON, W. A. HITCHINS, J. S. HERSHBERGER, FRANK WATTS
OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - President.
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President.
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier.

The Up-to-Date Grocery,
First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.
Exclusively a Grocery Store.
CASH OR PRODUSE—One price to everybody and that the lowest consistent with a complete line of High-Grade Groceries.
Everything New, Clean and First-Class.
Fresh Vegetables on THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS.
Largest Line of CRACKERS in Oakland—Fresh Every Week.
W. H. BARTLETT.

THOS. LITTLE.
This is the season of year to make changes, and I will make a GREAT REDUCTION in the prices of
China and Porcelain Ware.
I have a large stock of this goods and they must go at the remarkably low price of 10c each. Many of these pieces are cheap at 25c. But I have concluded to sell all at the low price of 10c each.
They consist of Decorated, Gold Trimmed Meat Plates, large and small, Bakers, Nappies, Pitchers, Bowls, Cups and Saucers, large and small plates, just the thing for every day use.
Also a Fine Line of Imported China at Less than Cost.
Come Early and get the Choice Pieces.
THOS. LITTLE.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$ 1.25
One copy six months..... .75
One copy three months..... .40
One copy one month..... .15
Single copies..... .05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 5 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 8, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

New York.

For Vice-President:

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,

Indiana.

For Congress:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

Allegany County.

THE Democratic speakers are as inconsistent in their anti-expansion attitude as their tariff history shows them to be with the policy of free trade. They claim to be the exponents and guardians of Jeffersonian principles and yet place themselves in direct opposition to his recorded opinions on the subject of expansion.

When Jefferson was the American Minister at Paris in 1786, he gave expression to his views on the future policy of the United States as to expansion in the following words:

"Our confederacy must be viewed as the nest from which all America, North and South, is to be peopled. We should take care, too, not to think it for the interest of that great continent to press too soon on the Spaniards. These countries can not be in better hands. My fear is that they are too feeble to hold them till our population can be sufficiently advanced to gain it from them piece by piece. (Writings of Jefferson, edited by H. A. Washington, vol. 1, pp. 517-518)."

Among all the wild charges ever made by the anti-imperialists against the Republican Party for their policy of expansion, there is nothing half as strong as these words of Jefferson who wanted to take all of the countries of America from the Spaniards and do it piece by piece, a war of conquest for dominion over territory that would extend from the lakes to Cape Horn.

Jefferson's attitude was endorsed by the people of the United States. In 1801, at his first election he received but 73 out of 138 electoral votes, but four years later, after the course pursued by his administration in the acquisition and government of Louisiana was submitted to the people, he was re-elected by 162 out of 176 electoral votes, showing that expansion did not frighten the people who had witnessed the formation of the constitution, and who had discussed every word and line of that immortal document.

Jefferson exercised more imperial power in Louisiana after the purchase than ever McKinley was charged with exercising in the Philippines, and yet both Louisiana and the United States survived and is this Summer celebrating the centennial of that purchase with the greatest Exposition conceived by man.

QUOTATIONS FROM REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN TEXT-BOOK, 1904.

"We each and all owe a duty to the community and to the State. It is a positive duty, and that aid in securing good laws and their faithful enforcement. We are not menaced by foreign foes. We have no fears of alien attack. We have nothing within to dread except the indifference of the intelligent citizen to the discharge of his civic obligations."—Hon. C. W. Fairbanks, at Freehold, N. J., June 27, 1903.

"I would like to impress upon every public man, upon every writer in the press, the fact that strength should go hand in hand with courtesy, with scrupulous regard in word and deed, not only for the rights, but for the feelings, of other nations."—President Roosevelt, at Waukesha, Wis., April 3, 1903.

"It is foolish to pride ourselves upon our progress and prosperity, upon our commanding position in the international industrial world, and at the same time have nothing but denunciation for the men to whose commanding position we in part owe this very progress and prosperity, this commanding position."—President Roosevelt, at Cincinnati, Ohio, September 20, 1902.

"Whether the standrad be low or high, whether they be the standards of the hour's expediency or the standards of civilizations' progress, time only can tell; but that they shall be the latter, the work of Theodore Roosevelt, as President of the United States, is more weighty than that of any one, of any score of all his detractors put together."—Hon. Elihu Root, at New York, Feb. 3, 1904.

"Our opponents ask the people to trust their present promises in consideration of the fact that they intend to treat their past promises as null and void."—President Roosevelt's speech accepting 1904 nomination.

"The present phenomenal prosperity has been won under a tariff made in accordance with certain fixed principles, the most important of which is an avowed determination to protect the interests of the American producer, business man, wage-worker, and farmer alike."—Roosevelt.

"The duties of peace are (with us always, those of war are but occasional; and with a nation as with a man, the worthiness of life depends upon the way in which everyday duties are done. The home duties are the vital duties."—President Roosevelt at Sherman statue unveiling, Oct. 15, 1903.

"There are many qualities which we need alike in private citizens and in public man, but three above all—three for the lack of which no brilliancy and no genius can atone—and those three are, courage, honesty, and common sense."—President Roosevelt at Antietam, Md., Sept. 17, 1903.

"Whenever even a single schedule is considered some interests will appear to demand a change in almost every schedule in the law, and when it comes to upsetting the schedules generally the effect upon the business interests of the country would be ruinous."—President Roosevelt at Minneapolis, April 4, 1903.

"It is a good lesson nations and individuals to learn never to hit if it can be helped, and then never to hit softly. I think it is getting to be fairly understood that that is our foreign policy."—President Roosevelt at San Francisco, Cal., May 13, 1903.

"It would be hard to find in modern times a better example of successful constructive statesmanship than the American representatives have given to the Philippine Islands."—President Roosevelt at Providence, R. I., August 23, 1902.

In his speech accepting the nomination of the Populist party for the presidency, the Hon. Tom Watson drove home some rather startling facts to the Democrats who have supported the Democratic national ticket in the past two presidential campaigns. That is, they were calculated to be startling to the Democrats and to cause them to put on their thinking caps. Among other things he said this:

"The mass of the Democratic party feel outraged at the way in which their leaders have sold them to Wall Street. I do believe that the six and a half million who followed Bryan with cheers on their lips and warm conviction in their hearts can now be delivered like cattle to the Clevelandites who knifed the ticket or bolted in 1896. I believe that the great majority of the men who voted for Bryan are men of conviction; I can but hope they will realize that I am fighting their battle now."

Mr. Watson was calling attention of the 6,500,000 Bryan democrats to the way they had been sold out at St. Louis. It was evident of course to every one that the silverites were in control at the St. Louis convention of the democracy. By a vote of 35 to 15, in the committee on resolutions, the gold plank proposed by the eastern conservatives was stricken from the draft of the platform that the committee was engaged in drawing.

By some that was considered a very crafty stroke of politics. Mr. David B. Hill of New York thought so; he put his finger alongside his nose and said to himself, in effect, "Now we will not offend the 6,500,000 men who followed Bryan, and without whose votes we can not hope to win." Then, twenty-four hours later, when the convention was ready to adjourn, having adopted the platform and made the nomination for president, and when in fact hundreds of delegates had left the town, along came the gold telegram of Judge Parker. "Fine" said Mr. Hill, "that saves the sound money vote of the east. We are catching them coming and going."

Such politics as that makes even a Populist sick. Mr. Watson says he and the 6,500,000 Democrats who believe in silver, as the Republicans believe in gold; who have the courage to fight for silver as the Republicans have the courage to fight for gold, will not stand for such double dealing.

Mr. Watson in his speech of acceptance, paid the Republican Party a tribute for its courage. He said—but here are his words:

"We are bound to admit that the Republican Party has a creed, is willing to fight for it, is willing to cling to it in defeat and continue to struggle for it until victory comes again. BUT WHY ANY HUMAN BEING SHOULD IN THE YEAR 1904 VOTE THE NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC TICKET IS SOMEMHING THAT PASSES MY UNTUTORED COMPREHENSION."

All of which brings the voter back to the proposition that if he wants to be honest with himself he will have to view the Democratic party, under its existing management, as a double dealing, insincere outfit of politicians, who are "all things to all men" for the sake of votes. The Populist party is the real Democratic party of today. The Republican Party is the party of sound money, industrial progress and courage. The Democratic organization seems largely the party of David B. Hill, August Belmont, and a platform of "We need the offices."

There is no question that many thousands of sincere Democrats, who honestly entertain the views expressed by the Chicago and Kansas City platforms, will agree with Mr. Watson. Other thousands of Democrats, who have come to take a different view of the political issues set forth in those platforms, will see that the present organization of the Democracy does not represent them any more than it does the others, and will align themselves with the Republicans.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

The work of threshing has begun in this section, with reports of a fair average yield. Up until this writing T. B. Wiley is reported to have had the largest average yield of oats. His entire crop taken from about nine acres, averaged above 50 bushels to the acre. Throughout this section wheat, oats and buckwheat promises fair; corn will also be a good crop, should we escape the revages of early frosts.

Mr. Daniel J. Brenneman, a well-to do farmer, living on Manadier's Ridge, about three miles south of this place, was kicked by a colt early last week, sustaining a broken arm. The accident happened while Mr. B. was in the act of hitching his team, preparatory to doing some hauling. Dr. Bevans of Grantsville, was called and rendered surgical attention.

Rev. Peter Brenneman, with his brother Elias and their friend Gideon Yoder, of Iowa, are visiting relatives here. The Reverend Mr. Brenneman preached in the Amish church near here last Sabbath to a large and appreciative congregation. This gentleman and his brother have been in the west for more than a quarter of a century and are here viewing the scenes and haunts of their boyhood days, they being natives of this section and descendents of the prominent and well known family of Brennemans whose numerous posterity are spread over this county.

Mr. G. W. Engle came up from Baltimore last Saturday for a week with his family and friends.

Where are the politicians? It is dull and dry and everybody keeps a more irritating silence than did the Judge who thinks he's "Gwine ter git thar".

5000 bushels buckwheat wanted by The Friendsville Milling Company, Friendsville, Md.

Consumption

The only kind of consumption to fear is "neglected consumption."

People are learning that consumption is a curable disease. It is neglected consumption that is so often incurable.

At the faintest suspicion of consumption get a bottle of Scott's Emulsion and begin regular doses.

The use of Scott's Emulsion at once, has, in thousands of cases, turned the balance in favor of health.

Neglected consumption does not exist where Scott's Emulsion is.

Prompt use of Scott's Emulsion checks the disease while it can be checked.

Send for free sample.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists,
409-415 Pearl Street, New York.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

DEER PARK JOTTINGS.

After a delightful visit of one week among the beautiful hills and valleys of West Virginia, I am again seated in our sanctum on the bright sixth day of September scribbling to your many readers, and I feel sure you, and many of your readers, will pardon me if I give you items of my observations in visiting and attending a reunion of the "McNeill Rough Riders," at the old historic town of Romney, on the south branch of the Potomac, made famous by a fight between Major McDonald, of the C. S. A., and General Lew Wallace, of the U. S. A., in the early days of the war, and when we say war, all know what war we mean.

Suffice this as preface and I will give "jottings by the way," on this, to me, the most joyful of all the reunions we have had since 1893. On Monday, the 29th of August, we attended the G. A. R. reunion at Mountain Lake Park, and was favored with that masterly address of Jahu Dewitt Miller, at 11 o'clock a. m., on "Our Country," and at 3 p. m. an audience of at least five thousand was held with delight, drinking in every word that fell from the lips of that genius of war, the gallant Jack Crawford, the unlettered poet scout of the wild and wooly west. An attempt to even give a synopsis is impossible.

At 4.30 I started to meet No. 46, so as to reach Keyser, where a comrade was waiting with a team to convey me to his own beautiful home on Patterson Creek, some eleven miles southeast from Keyser, and at 9 o'clock p. m. a hearty greeting awaited us at this hospitable home, and the lady who presides over this home was a young miss of some sixteen summers, when we, as McNeill Roughs, was often entertained by her good mother and father on the South Branch Valley, in Hardy county, Virginia, and this noble woman is now the wife of this same comrade, Mr. James W. Cunningham, of Company F, Seventh Regiment, Rosser's Brigade. To speak of this joyous meeting after almost forty years, is more than I can do in a short sketch to a newspaper, but suffice it to say and that from the lips of this grand matron, the mother of two manly boys and one lovely daughter, that was the first of that spartan band that she loved to speak of to her husband as her soldier boys, I should be the first to visit her in all the years that has passed since those terrible days of strife and bloodshed.

From here this same kind friend, mine host, took me to Romney, stopping on the night of the 30th at the home of my comrade, Mr. George H. Johnson, on the South Branch, and there greeted by his wife, and she the sister of the lamented Captain George Sheets, of the famous Ashby's Cavalry. Then again across the river to the home of my warm personal friend, Mr. Frank Turley. After a hearty shaking of hands with the lady of this house, who I knew as a girl, we wended our way down the river over the same road that I, as one of sixty-four men, had escorted Generals Crook and Kelly, together with Major Melvin, of Kelly's staff, on the morning of the 21st of February, 1864—forty years ago the 21st of next February.

Time as it has flitted away could not be realized that this was the first time since that memorable morning that I had passed over this, to me, of all our daring raids, was the most impressed on my memory. But I weary you, suffice it to say. At Romney we met twenty-five of our old boys and many other comrades who wore the gray and some who wore the blue, and there in the old Hampshire Court House we had a love feast that can't be described. Next day, the 1st inst., we went to Burlington, in Mineral county, and joined the Confederate camp of all the old soldiers of both armies in a reunion that will live in history, for there we met Major Hunter of General John B. Gordon's staff, who is employed by the government in gathering statistics on the part of the south for the purpose of writing an unbiased history of the Civil War, and he and others gave us grand addresses. Major Hunter paid eulogies on McNeill's command, and said the capture referred to was one of the most daring exploits of any war in the history of the world, and was followed by many of the comrades of the different commands, and a closing address by Hon. Thomas R. Carscadden, of Keyser, who paid tribute to the valor of the south, although he was a close friend of Mr. Lincoln and the federal cause, and was heartily cheered.

From Burlington we again returned to our friends, Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham, and, to our surprise, next morning, the 2nd inst., a trip was planned to a picnic and tournament at Hanging Rock, six miles east of Romney, and in company with our old comrades, Harlan P. Tabb and James W. Mason, we again crossed the mountains of Middle Ridge to the lovely valley of the South Branch, and there with the green sward spread with all the rich viands of this hospitable valley, we were most kindly greeted and entertained by Mr. Fox, a member of Company F, Seventh Regiment, Rosser's Brigade, and as we watched the gallant knights and their graceful riding we said to a young friend we often went up this valley. I think riding as graceful as these young knights and especially after the fight at Springfield, and again after the fight at Green Spring, and last I said when we took Crook and Kelley on this side the river, and I think over this same spot. He said they had their rings hung on the same path that we marched on that morning, as his father was along with us and located this spot as on the line of march. And that man was Mr. Herod, living near this tournament.

We returned again by Romney and at 8.30 arrived at Mr. Cunningham's, having traveled over thirty miles that day and on Saturday, the 3rd, started for Keyser behind the same team that met us on Monday, and driven by the same genial host.

Reader, think of a friend who would make such a sacrifice for a comrade and he not of his immediate command. There are but few Jim Cunninghams in this selfish world, and after partaking of his kind hospitality and think of his driving me on the various trips of at least 150 miles, and for six days, and landing us back at Kayser, words cannot express my gratitude.

At Keyser I met many friends calling on Mr. John T. Sincell, brother of the editor of THE REPUBLICAN, found him the same genial Johnnie at of old, and after meeting a number of old Hampshire Democrats at the Court House, where they were holding a convention, we boarded No. 55 for Piedmont and then home on the evening accommodation.

Pardon, Mr. Editor, you don't blame me for letting my thoughts run away after such an outing and such friends to meet and greet you. No, I know you don't. It makes me feel forty years younger and I am a boy again, and let me say, I would not exchange the friends I have in the southland for all the wealth of Rockefeller, Morgan or Carnegie, or any of the multi-millionaires of this country. No, life is too short to sacrifice true friends for paltry pelf.

But I pause and say many of the local happenings are now stale, but will mention the sad accidental shooting of Mr. Pennington's son and only child the first of the week, and at this writing it seems from reports that there is but little hope, but will give you a more extended account later.

The suicide of Mr. Charles Brown was a severe shock to us all, as he was a warm personal friend of mine and a man that Garrett county could feel proud of.

Other items next week.

MORE ANON.

Subscribe for The Republican

CLEAN SWEEP IN VERMONT

Republicans Carry the State By Big Majorities.

EVEN GREATER THAN IN 1900

Returns Indicate That Charles J. Bell Will Receive Over 35,000 Plurality—All Other Republican Candidates Elected—Legislature Republican.

Vermont registered her approval of President Roosevelt and the Republican party Tuesday by giving a majority of over 35,000 for Charles J. Bell, the Republican candidate for Governor.

The entire Republican ticket was elected, including two Congressmen and an overwhelming majority of the members of the Legislature. It is the largest Republican majority for years and exceeds that given the ticket in 1900. Democrats failed to respond to the frantic cries of the Belmont-Parker combine and the vote for the Democratic candidates fell off at least 10 per cent.

Fair weather, the conditions considered most necessary to bring out the large vote desired by all parties, prevailed throughout Vermont. The fact that the election was the first to be held in an Eastern State this year gave it a national significance, as the disclosure of the respective Democratic and Republican strength, in a way, would be viewed as prophetic of the situation throughout the country on national issues.

The election was to choose State officers, two representatives, members of the State Senate and House of Representatives and various county officers.

There were four tickets for State officers, the Prohibition and Socialist parties both having nominated a full set of candidates.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

Great Bargains at Sincell's.

We Want You to See Them.

"Vast" begins to describe them—but doesn't even suggest the variety—the quality—value so conspicuously present in them all.

You must simply see them for yourself to realize the size and magnificence of our shirt waists which we are offering at 98 cents. They are winners and we have about ten dozens, all sizes, from 32 to 44. We invite you to call and look at them whether you care to buy or not.

Our Clothing Department,

In the careful choice of our selection lies much of its value to the buyer.

Constant touch with the centers of manufactnre and a carefully gleamed knowledge of what Fashion demands—these little things make our stocks strong.

The choicest line we have ever had to offer in Clothing we have now on display at prices astonishingly low. The prices in the ready-mades run from $4.50 to $18.00; made-to-measure $15 to $50

Come and See for Yourself.

The very newest styles in

Women's Tailor-Made Suits

One-Third Off.

We must close up our stock and offer

Great Bargains

To the Public.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

The Garrett National Bank

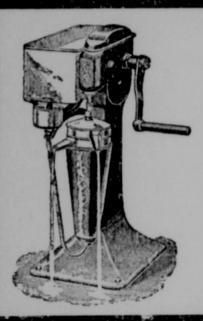
OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, - $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, - 15,000.00



NOT AN OIL CUP

Wouldn't it be pleasant not to have to dig dirt and gummy milk out of oil holes, oil tubes and oil cups on your separator?

TUBULAR SEPARATORS

Are self-oiling—don't have an oil hole, oil tube or oil cup about them. All gears are enclosed—turn in a mist of oil. They are safest—most durable—least expensive—easiest working gear known. Let me lift the cap and show them to you next time you're around. Get a catalogue.

J. E GNAGEY, Accident, Md.

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Miss Emma Swink is at Parsons visiting her sister.

Comparatively new cook stove cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. 2t*

Mrs. Davis, of Kingwood, is in Oakland visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Orr.

Mrs. Julius C. Renninger is at Eglon visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Scherr.

5000 bushels buckwheat wanted by The Friendsville Milling Company, Friendsville, Md.

Mr. William B. Miller, the contractor, of Deer Park, was a business visitor to Oakland Tuesday morning.

Dr. E. H. Bartlett, who went to the St. Louis fair several weeks ago, returned to Oakland last Thursday evening.

Mr. John C. Dunham, who visited his old home at Selbysport several days recently, returned home last Saturday.

Mrs. John C. Dunham went to her old home near Friendsville Monday to visit relatives and friends a week or two.

Mrs. Jessie Davis and daughter, of Morgantown, arrived here Tuesday to visit Rev. and Mrs. John M. Davis and other relatives.

Messrs. Edward W. Helbig, Charles Liller and Arthur Lawton, who spent ten days at Atlantic City, returned to Oakland Saturday morning.

Mr. Charles S. Miller, cashier of the Drovers' and Mechanics' National Bank, Baltimore, is here for a week's visit for the benefit of his health.

Miss Marguerite Davis, of Frostburg, is here visiting her grandmother, Mrs. S. M. Miller, at the Commercial hotel on Second street.

Mrs. J. William Watson and Miss Henrietta Mather, of Harrisville, W. Va., were the guests Tuesday and yesterday of Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell.

Mr. Henry Lauer, of the Oakland Bakery, went down to Baltimore Saturday and remained until Monday evening, when he returned home.

Capt. D. A. Litzinger spent several days with relatives at Oakland the past week, and took in the attractions at Mt. Lake Park on Grand Army Day.—Grafton Leader.

Mrs. Joseph Helbig and two children, accompanied by Mrs. Shipley, of Baltimore, who has been her guest for some weeks, returned from a visit to friends and relatives at McMechen, W. Va., recently.

County School Superintendent Edward A. Browning is at Rockville this week attending the Montgomery county Teachers' Institute, before which body he read an elaborate paper upon an educational topic.

Hon. F. G. Slone, of Wilmington, Ohio, who has been a regular visitor to Oakland for more than twenty consecutive years where he finds relief from hay fever, arrived here last Friday night and will remain several weeks.

Mr. James Mason, of District No. 8, who was at Romney last week attending a meeting of McNeil's Rangers, of which he was a member during the War, returned to his home Saturday morning. At Romney Mr. Mason met many of his old comrades and a very pleasant social time was spent by the survivors of the regiment.

Mr. W. A. Boddy, of Fairmont, arrived here last night for a visit of a few days.

5000 bushels buckwheat wanted by The Friendsville Milling Company, Friendsville, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Creed Dunnington, of Elkins, are here as guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Felty.

5000 bushels buckwheat wanted by The Friendsville Milling Company, Friendsville, Md.

Miss Prema Shartzer is spending a week at Eglon, where she is the guest of Miss Alma Scherr.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Sliger have as guests Mrs. Maud Porter, of Baltimore, and Mr. Lawrence Hitchens, of Frostburg.

Ex-Sheriff Lloyd Shaffer, of Aurora, was in Oakland last night where he took train No. 4 for Atlantic City and other points east.

Mrs. James O. Cleveland, who spent several days last and this week in Frostburg with relatives, returned to Oakland Tuesday evening.

Mr. Burt Wilson, of Wilson, is in Oakland today on business. He is accompanied by Mr. McMillan, one of the firm of the McMillan Lumber Company, operating near Wilson.

Dr. W. L. Davidson and family, of the Park, were Oakland visitors Monday. The Doctor left the Park Tuesday for points east but will return here some time next week when plans for next year's Chautauqua program will be mapped out.

Messrs. Patrick E. Finzel, of Finzel, and Chas. S. May, of Swanton, came up to Oakland last Saturday and in connection with Mr. Austin Brown, chairman, held a meeting of the Republican County Committee outlining plans for the campaign in this county this fall.

Mr. David Sloan, president of the Lonaconing Savings Bank, and Mr. D. Lindley Sloan, of the Cumberland bar, were in Oakland Monday where the latter, as trustee, sold at public auction the Jefferson S. Green farm, lying in District No. 11. The purchase price was $400.

Mr. John Getty, cashier of the First National Bank, of Grantsville, Md., drove over from that city on Sunday, and spent a couple of days with his relatives here, leaving here for Cleveland, Ohio, for a few days visit. He is enjoying a well earned vacation.—Meyersdale Republican.

Mr. John W. Haney, of Friendsville, accompanied by his son, Mr. Frederick Haney, were in Oakland Monday and Tuesday where the former closed a bargain with Mr. Truman W. Casteel for the purchase of the Fredlock farm, north of Oakland. Mr. Haney will take possession of his new purchase this fall.

Dr. John K. Mitchell, of Philadelphia, who arrived at Deer Park one day last week in company with Mrs. Mitchell, was in Oakland Tuesday. Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell will return to Philadelphia this week, their visit to their summer home being shortened owning to the ill health of one of their children.

The Mayor and Council advertise in this paper today for proposals for the erection of two sidewalks, one leading from Second street to Railroad street and the other along Second street, from Green street to the property line at the Oakland bakery. The contract was once awarded but the contractor for some reason failed to meet the requirements stipulated in the agreement, hence the re-letting of the work.

Mr. C. W. Swink is at Staunton and Covington, Va. on a business trip.

Miss Orlie Dunham was the guest of Miss Maize Prevost at Crellin several days last week.

Mr. Clarence F. Schroeder, of Grafton, spent yesterday in town visiting Mr. and Mrs. George O. Miller.

Messrs. John T. Harvey, of near Blaine, and Elisha Harvey, of near the White Church, were in Oakland yesterday on business.

Stewart Hamill will leave Oakland Saturday night for St. Louis where, after seeing the Fair, he will go on to Denver, Col., for a brief visit.

Mrs. M. L. Scott left this morning for eastern cities where she will purchase a large stock of fall and winter millinery goods for her store in Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman S. Heindel are receiving the congratulations of their many friends over the visit of the stork to their home Tuesday night when it left a handsome boy.

Rev. W. H. Faust, of Deer Park, announces services on Sunday as follows: Preaching at Thayerville Baptist church at 11 o'clock a. m., to which all are cordially invited.

Mr. George Brant, a leading lawyer of Chicago, and son of Mr. Daniel R. Brant, the first man to erect a dwelling house in Oakland, is at the home of Mr. John T. Harvey in District No. 13 on a visit.

Truman Turney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Turney, of Oakland, who went to Nevada about seven years ago where he engaged in cattle herding, arrived home Friday afternoon and will remain several weeks with his parents before returning.

Stephen Ashby, Esq., son of Mr. Ralph Ashby, of Crellin, who has been an inmate of the Keyser Hospital for a number of weeks, suffering with an attack of typhoid fever, arrived here last night on his way home. Mr. Ashby was employed prior to his illness as foreman by Du-Bois & Bond Bros., at their mill at Bond.

Mr. W. R. Mattox returned to Oakland from Frostburg Tuesday evening where he had been for several days with his family, one member of which, a son of twenty months, is lying dangerously ill with a complication of diseases. A telegram to Mr. Mattox last night from his wife stated that the little one was growing weaker and held out slight hopes for his recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Hostetler, who have been at the former's home at Accident during the summer, came up to Oakland yesterday morning and from here went to Terra Alta where they will visit relatives and friends until Saturday when they will return to Huntington, Pa., where Mr. Hostetler will complete his collegiate course in Juniata College.

Mrs. Henry Lauer, who went to Washington one day last week, underwent an operation in one of the hospitals of that city Monday morning for a complaint with which has been a great sufferer for a number of years. The operation was successful in every respect. Mr. Lauer who was in Washington Sunday and Monday returned to Oakland Tuesday morning.

From Meyersdale Commercial.

J. W. Beachy, son of the well known Aaron Beechy, of Grantsville, Md., passed through town Sunday on a few days visit to the old home. His father is not well is one reason for his visit and a desire to see the folks at home another. Mr. J. W. Beachy is a sales man for a Chicago house and handles "ladies ready to wear" goods. He expected to remain at Grantsville 'till today when he will return to his business.

Elder D. H. Bender and Mr. Miller, his brother-in-law, a student in the college at Goshen, Ind., were in the office a moment Tuesday. Elder Bender is the editor of the church paper at Elkhart, Ind., and was attending the church conference at Masontown, Pa. Being so near home he could not resist the temptation to spend a day or two there with his children and friends.

Mr. A. J. Folk of Keim, Pa., threshed from six acres 189 bushels of wheat, an average of 31½ bushels per acre, by the use of lime and manure. H. S. Yoder of Grantsville, Md., on the S. D. Yoder farm threshed from five acres 165 bushels of wheat, an average of 33 bushels per acre by the use of 200 pounds of bone and potash fertilizer per acre that is sold by S. D. Yoder, of Grantsville, Md., for $16 per ton.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Will Give a Smoker and Supper at the Oakland Sept. 16th.

Upon the occasion of the visit to Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias, of a number of the officers of the Grand Lodge of Maryland on the evening of September 16th, the members of the local lodge have arranged for a supper and smoker at the Oakland Hotel following the session of the lodge to be held that evening, for which invitations have been issued to all members of the organization.

PISTOL FELL TO FLOOR.

Rev. Father Mattingly Accidentally Shot by His Own Fire Arm.

Rev. Father Mattingly, pastor of the Catholic church at Hancock, was seriously wounded as the result of an accident at the church Monday night. A pistol he was carrying slipped from his hand, fell upon the floor and was discharged. The bullet passed through the calf of his leg. Though the wound bled profusely the injured priest was able to summon a physician.

Father Mattingly was removing the pistol from his study to his bedroom, carrying a lamp in one hand and the pistol in the other. While his injury is serious no bad results are expected to follow.

The injured priest is well known in Oakland and throughout Garrett county, having been stationed here for a number of years until relieved by Rev. Father Wunnenberg about three years ago when he was transferred to the charge at Hancock.

MR. T. A. LAMBERT PARALYZED.

Stricken at His Home Near Oakland Last Thursday.

Mr. Talmadge A. Lambert, of Washington, D. C., who owns a very commodious and well appointed summer home adjoining the farm of Mr. Truman W. Casteel on the Deer Park road, a mile northeast of Oakland, was stricken with paralysis last Thursday afternoon and for a few days his life was despaired of by his family and friends, but at this time he has recovered to some extent and now hopes are entertained for his ultimate recovery.

The stroke affected Mr. Lambert's left side in its entirety. He was unable until Tuesday to use any portion of the affected part of his body, when he recovered a slight use of his left foot.

Mr. Lambert is a prominent and well known attorney of Washington and has been a summer resident of Oakland for a great many years. He has one son and two daughters. The son, Mr. Wilton Lambert, married a daughter of Senator Arthur P. Gorman a few years ago.

CITY COUNCIL MEETING.

Business Transacted—Officer Broderick Resigned and His Successor Appointed.

The meeting of the City Council last Monday night was attended by all the members of that body with the exception of Councilman Dixon, who is absent from town. Clerk Dunham was in attendance.

The monthly bills for street work and incidental expenses were read and where no errors occurred ordered paid.

Policeman Broderick, who has been on the night force for over two years, tendered his resignation to Mayor McComas, to take effect immediately. The Mayor submitted the resignation to the Council which was accepted. Mr. Jerry O. Browning was nominated for the vacancy by the mayor and the nomination was confirmed unanimously by Council. The new official entered upon the discharge of of his duties Tuesday evening.

The water question which has been discussed at some length at previous meetings of the Council, was laid over until a special meeting to be held on Monday night, the 19th inst., when Mr. Yoder, who seeks the franchise to instal the system in Oakland, will be present.

Bids were ordered to be received for the erection of two sidewalks, advertisements for which will be found in another column of this paper today.

The question of relaying platforms out of repair and new platforms ordered to be laid by Council, was discussed at some length and Councilman Lawton was instructed to employ men to do the work. It has been almost impossible to secure mechanics to do this class of work owing to the building operations now being carried on in town, but matters have reached such a stage that something must be done immediately in this connection, hence the action of Council.

BEHIND ON THEIR CONTRACT.

Makers Unable to Deliver New Organ on Time.

The officials of St. Paul's M. E. church of Oakland, who some time ago contracted with a firm of organ builders for the installation of a new pipe organ in the church here by September 1st, have been advised by the manufacturers that it will be impossible for them to have the organ here during the present month, and in consequence great disappointment is being experienced by the churchgoers and officers of the congregation.

The instrument purchased by the board of stewards is to be built upon modern lines, rich in tone and finished to correspond with the interior of the church edifice. It will be placed back of the pulpit without the necessity of making any alterations to the building.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

Dixon & Kelso

...WE ARE...

HEADQUARTERS

...FOR...

PRIME PEACHES

Yours, respectfully,

DIXON & KELSO.

BUILDING, PAVING, PRESSED FACE. BRICKS VITRIFIED FOR FOUNDATIONS VITRIFIED FOR SEWERS, STREET PAVING BLOCKS.

Best Quality for Building, Casing, Sidewalks and Streets.
Beautiful Shades, Red, Light Granate and Mixed Colors.

Capacity 80,000 Daily. Prompt Shipments.

QUEEN CITY BRICK & TILE COMPANY
—AND—
CUMBERLAND GRANATE BRICK COMPANY
Cumberland, Maryland.

Great Big Bargains.

$1150 cash will buy Sunny-Slope Cottage, at Mountain Lake Park; 6 rooms and summer kitchen, furnished throughout, with porch commanding superb view; four lots, 50x120 feet each; out-buildings; good well; strawberry patch; garden; large lawns; flower beds; walks, etc.

$75 will buy Lot No. 241, on corner Hazel Glade Drive and Park front; worth $300.

$50 will buy Lot No. 242, adjoining above; worth $200.

$75 will buy Lot No. 219, on corner D street and Park front; worth $225.

$50 will buy Lot No. 218, adjoining above; worth $200.

$50 will buy Lot No. 220, fronting on D street, and

$50 for Lot No. 221.

No Building Conditions on these Lots.

Apply to
L. A. RUDISILL,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

New Goods, Just Opened.

The Latest Things Out In

Pongees, Draperies, Satteens, (these are beauties). Seersuckers, Granite Cloths, Flannelettes, Sacking, Chambrays, etc.

We have them.
You want them,
Come get them.

The Latest Things Out In

Hats, Caps and Shoes,

and Men's and Boys

CLOTHING.

Also fine line Clothing Samples,

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

Proposals for Building Sidewalks

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, for the erection of a sidewalk fronting the opera house block in Oakland, beginning at the corner of Green and Second streets and ending at the north property line of H. Lauer, and extending from the property line along said block to the wood curbing.

Proposals will also be received for the erection of a walk from Second street to Railroad street walk.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of N. S. Heindel, First National Bank building, Oakland, Md.

Proposals must be on file with the clerk of said Mayor and Council not later than six o'clock, September 19th, 1904, and endorsed on the back, "Proposal for erecting sidewalks."

By order of the Mayor and Council of Oakland.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

A Home and Day School.

BRIAR-BEND SEMINARY,

AT MT. LAKE PARK, MD.,

In the Alleghany Mountains,

will be re-opened (D. V.)

On September 14th, 1904.

Full course of study. Music, Vocal and Instrumental. French, Latin and Bible Study. Certificates admit to leading colleges without examination.

A Home for Motherless Girls; Climate Unrivaled for Health; Only four visits from a Physician in thirteen years.

Applications received for service in exchange for tuition. Refererences quired.

Bills payable monthly in advance.

BRIGGSY

.....By.....

ROBERT C. V. MEYERS

Copyright, 1903, by Robert C. V. Meyers

NEVER in his life had Briggsy felt queerer than when he saw Carter pick up the little grayish "wad" that had dropped from the "old man's" pocket as he drew out his bundle of keys in passing rapidly through the workshop. It was quicker than a flash. The "old man" was just taking a long step over a big splash of oil on the floor, and he didn't get his foot down on the other side of it before the money was in Carter's pocket and Carter was at work again as if nothing had happened.

A chill went up Briggsy's spine, and then he burst into perspiration all over. It was as if he had done the thing himself.

But this couldn't be the end of it. The "old man" would certainly miss his money the quicker because he always walked with his hands in his pockets. It was a wonder that he didn't miss it before he got out of the room, yet Briggsy saw the door close behind him.

"He'll be back; he'll be back in a minute," thought Briggsy. "And then what'll I do? If it was anybody but Cart! It would kill his sister. I couldn't give away Mamie's brother. Not me!"

The thought of Mamie suggested an interesting possibility, and as the minutes passed and the "old man" did not come back Briggsy had time to consider the matter. The gist of it was that Carter had not taken this money for himself, but for his sister.

Mamie was lame. She couldn't walk a step alone. But the doctor who had looked out for her case more or less since she was hurt had said that with the aid of a certain complicated machine to support her back she could walk pretty well. The machine cost $50, and that was a good deal of money to earn. Briggsy had sometimes thought of borrowing it, but never of stealing it.

Then he fell to thinking of Mamie as he was accustomed to see her evening after evening at her window as he and Cart reached home, smiling and making believe she liked to sit there forever sewing at the work for which she was paid such starvation prices, though, as she said, the work was not over fine and probably worth not much more than she received for it. That was the way with Mamie, always looking on the bright side and encouraging her brother, who was often gloomy and blamed himself for the accident which had injured her spine.

For Carter a year before, thinking to have some fun with Briggsy, whose room adjoined the tiny flat inhabited by Cart and his sister, tied a string across the stairs for tripping purposes. Mamie tripped instead of Briggsy and afterward spent months in bed, only supplementing that inactivity by sitting at her window later on, her limbs powerless.

Briggsy wondered if she were not sometimes as gloomy as Cart when nobody was by and she sewing there alone and seeing no end to her helplessness. And now there might be a chance for her to walk. And yet—

He bent over his work and filed and polished with feverish energy. When the day's duties were over he waited for Carter, for they usually went home together. Carter had a frown on his face, such a frown as settled there when he was in his "bluest" mood. They walked along in silence.

IT WAS QUICKER THAN A FLASH.

Mamie's going to get that thing that'll help her to move about," Carter all at once broke out.

"It costs $50, don't it?" asked Briggsy.

"Suppose it does!" snarled Carter. "I've got the money."

Briggsy nodded.

"I've saved up for a year," Carter went on. "I've done without—oh, everything. She's got to walk, I tell you. The doctor says she must go out in the sun and air, and how can she do it without that machine? I'm going to get that machine tonight."

So they came to the store of surgical affairs, in the window of which were displayed odd looking bandages and steels designed to assist nature when the human frame had lost some of its machinery or was deficient in normal activity.

At the door Briggsy put his hand on his friend's arm.

"Cart," he said, "do you think Mamie 'll like you for doing this?"

Carter shook off the hand.

"Don't she want to walk?" he demanded. "There's nobody but her and me, and suppose something 'd happen to me and she'd be left by herself? Could she go on sitting up there alone and nobody to do anything for her? Ain't we alone in the world—father and mother both dead?"

Thus they went into the store, and in a few minutes more they were on their way to Mamie.

To see her white face light up when she spied them from her window, to hear her exclamation when Carter showed her what he had for her!

"Oh, Tom!" she said. "And you've saved for a year to get it!" She pulled his face down to hers. "I never told you, but I've wanted to walk so much. And now I'll learn all over again. And maybe I can go and find better paying work, for if you'd get sick or be laid off at the factory what should we do with the little I earn? Oh, Tom, what a dear fellow you are!"

But Carter was gloomier than ever.

"Now," he said, "I'll go and get Mrs. Willett to help you put the apparatus on. It's perfectly simple. You see, this bandage is on top at the back, and this stay comes down behind."

Briggsy left them and went to his own room, though he did not get his supper, as he should have done. He sat down and thought. Soon he heard Mamie laughing with glee and could hear her making her first attempt at walking, clumsily, heavily, but taking a step nevertheless.

"Yes," said Briggsy, pounding his hand on the table; "I'll do it." It was a firm resolution, and yet it did not enable him to make preparations for his supper. Instead for some time he sat there in the dark and never once raised his head.

Then all at once he heard a strange clamping sound outside his door. And there was Mamie, Cart's arm around her, positively standing upright.

"I thought I'd pay you a call," she said. "It's just grand! I'll learn to walk in no time. And then what holidays we'll have! We'll go to the country and see the trees and the birds or downtown to look at the parades. I'll soon learn, only I'm a bit nervous just now. And, Mr. George Briggs, I've come to invite you to take supper with us. We'll celebrate the day."

Of course Briggsy went.

"I'll get some cakes," said Carter and disappeared.

She was lively all the evening, so lively that it was a wonder her brother remained gloomy and at last said he had forgotten something and must go out. Briggsy also left the room.

"Going with me?" Carter asked. "I'm not feeling very well, and a walk 'll help me."

Briggsy said he believed he'd go to his own room.

"Go if you want to," growled Carter and went down the stairs.

Briggsy had a hard night of it. He scarcely slept at all. Once he said: "Anybody 'll believe it was me. I'm only a charity child. I'll do it."

In the morning he had no desire for breakfast. He did not wait for Carter, but went off alone an hour too early to go to work. He walked the streets till the factory whistle sounded and then went to the room where he and Carter and ten other men worked together.

Briggsy was the last to arrive, and the door had scarcely closed upon him when it opened to admit the "old man." His name was Hallett, and he was a fine old fellow, very well liked by the employees. He was of stout build, with a round, smooth, boyish face, and he had scanty gray hair which stood up in little tufts. It was said that these tufts stiffened like the hair on a cat's back when he was angry. On this particular morning they were in a strange tangle, as if he had been rubbing them in some dire strait of perplexity, and his manner was characterized by embarrassment.

"Er—gentlemen," he began, "there's a matter I want to speak to you about this morning." He paused and stretched his collar with his fingers as if it choked him. "To make a long story short," he continued, with a great effort, "I dropped some money in this room yesterday afternoon. Now, don't say a word. I'm not mistaken about it. I wish I were. The money was dropped right here—five ten dollar bills in a roll. The room has been searched, and the money's gone. Somebody's got it. Now, I don't want to be harsh. I know the temptation. Perhaps the man who found it didn't know it was mine. We'll say he didn't know where it came from. He just found it and put it into his pocket.

"Well, what shall we do about it? If he keeps it any longer he'll be a thief, and he'll be putting eleven honest men under unjust suspicion. He ought to give it back for the honor of his fellow workmen. And I say this: If he brings it back today that'll be the end of the matter." Then the old man went out.

There was a brief silence, and then Carter said in a low voice so charged with guilt that Briggsy looked around in wonder at the men who seemed to have no ears:

"It's a mistake. He never dropped it here."

This remark met with scant approval. It was the general opinion that the "old man" knew what he was talking about.

Just after the whistle blew one of the men called out: "If any man or boy here knows anything about that money let him be decent and own up and not let the rest of us bear the brunt of it. He'd better, for the 'old man's' got fire in his eyes, and the detectives will do the rest."

The detectives! Briggsy had not thought of them. He credited them with unfailing ability to unearth anything. It would never do to let them get in their work. And that man had said, "Let the guilty one own up!" The resolution of last night when he had pounded the table and said he would "do it" rose before him. But to brand himself like that! And yet there was no time to lose. If the detectives were called in which of the employees might be accused?

The result of Briggsy's meditations upon this matter was the conviction that he must do something, and do it mighty soon, yet the afternoon kept slipping away. Briggsy had a scared eye on Carter most of the time, and he tried to keep the other one on the door, through which he momentarily expected to see the detective of his imagination appear with handcuffs for the guilty. No such calamity occurred, and the time to quit work arrived at last.

Briggsy sneaked out of the room first, and he felt that every eye was on him. The grimly humorous fancy came to him that some of these men "would think themselves mighty smart" before long. His legs felt like pieces of string, but they carried him to the door of Hallett's private office. He knocked and was admitted.

Hallett sat in his accustomed place, and nobody else was present except a strange man, rather shabby and of a sad countenance, who was leaning on the edge of the big roll top desk. Briggsy eyed the stranger with alarm, suspecting his profession.

"Well," said Hallett, "what is it? Speak up!"

Briggsy took his courage in both hands.

"It's about the money," said he.

"So I supposed," remarked Hallett.

"Could—could a feller pay it back?" Briggsy began.

Hallett looked at him curiously.

"Why, certainly," said he. "That's what I told you all this morning."

"I mean slow," gasped Briggsy. "Terribly slow—say a—a dollar a week."

Hallett glanced suddenly up at the man who was leaning on the desk. The stranger took the hint and spoke up promptly:

"I'll tell you what, my boy," said he, "you ain't made up your mind. That's what's the matter with you. You don't know what you want to say. And my suggestion to you is that you go out and take a walk and think it over. I'll have a talk with you by and by."

"I'm ready," Briggsy began.

"No, you ain't," said the man. "You ain't ready, and neither am I. Go 'out and take a walk."

And Briggsy went.

In his room that evening he hardened his heart to bear the brand of shame. Nobody came near him. He judged that Mamie was not in her room. She must have learned to walk already, and her brother had gone out with her. She would have a good time, and Briggsy was glad of it, and as this agreeable thought came to temper the bitterness of his reflections he felt conscious of a drowsiness which was exceedingly merciful, and so he fell asleep, fully dressed, upon his bed.

"HAVE YOU BROUGHT THE MONEY?"

He awoke refreshed and with a better courage in the early morning, and after a bite of breakfast he walked toward the factory with a strong and increasing resolution. He saw nothing of the detective nor of Mr. Hallett. He had vaguely expected that they would be waiting for him at the factory gate. One or two men looked at him peculiarly, but he encountered no unusual incident until he was inside the factory, when a man from the office met him and told him to go to Mr. Hallett's private room. This summons was like the closing of prison gates behind him, but he obeyed it readily.

He had decided to make no further offer to return the money piecemeal. He would earn it some day. That was all he knew about the matter. People were permitted to earn a little money in prison, he had heard. Anyhow, he would do his best. The money was spent. It couldn't be got back even if Carter were found out.

In the office were Mr. Hallett and the detective. One might have supposed that they hadn't moved since Briggsy was there last, their attitudes being precisely as he remembered them.

"Well, Briggs," said Hallett, "have you brought the money?"

"No," replied the boy. "I haven't brought it, and I can't bring it. It's gone. But you'll get it some day. That I'll swear to."

"Briggs," said the "old man" sternly, "you didn't take that money, but you know who did."

Briggsy drew himself up to his full height, which was a little more than five feet. He slapped himself on the chest.

"I'm the man," said he. "Lock me up."

Hallett looked at him for some seconds, smiling.

"We've found out where the money went," he said.

Briggsy turned faint.

"Don't you believe it!" he said. "You just listen to me, and I'll"—

"It went to buy a piece of apparatus for Miss Mamie Carter, a very worthy, nice, honest little girl, as I see her," said Hallett. "She called on me last evening."

"She—called—on—you!"

"Yes," said Hallett. "She came with her brother. He was there by her request—distinctly by her request."

"You see," continued the "old man," "our little friend, our poor little friend who is lame, happened to hear about some money being lost, and, being of the feminine gender, she jumped to a conclusion. So she had it out with her brother, and the upshot of it was that he brought her to me with the walking machine in her hands, for, of course, she couldn't wear it after she'd found out how she'd come by it.

"Well," continued Hallett, after a pause, "that was a sight to draw tears from our friend here"—he jerked his thumb at the detective—"who doesn't weep often, as I'm well convinced. Miss Mamie was afraid the man who sold the machine wouldn't take it back and pay full price, but she was going to earn the difference herself. Now, it just struck me suddenly as she was making this proposal that she could earn the money easier if she had the harness to wear, so I begged her to keep it. And then her brother and I got down to business and settled our little affair upon some such basis as you proposed yesterday afternoon. So there'll be no trouble.

"And now, Briggs, a word to you. Don't try to palm yourself off for a thief again. You look too honest. You couldn't fool—why, you couldn't even fool a detective. He saw through you in a minute. Go back to work now, and we'll say no more about it. You did wrong. It's always wrong to shield a criminal or to help a misguided man to walk in the way of the transgressor. But, confound you, Briggs, I rather like you for it."

An Old Favorite

THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND MORE

Author Unknown

ON July 2, 1862, President Lincoln, realizing the enormous extent of the task before him, issued a call for 300,000 more volunteers. The order called forth, among others, the following poem, which was very popular among the northern soldiers and those who sympathized with the Union cause. "Father Abraham" was one of the affectionate names by which Lincoln was called.

WE are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more,
From Mississippi's winding stream and from New England's shore;
We leave our plows and workshops, our wives and children dear,
With hearts too full for utterance, with but a silent tear;
We dare not look behind us, but steadfastly before:
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more!

If you look across the hilltops that meet the northern sky,
Long moving lines of rising dust your vision may descry;
And now the wind, an instant, tears the cloudy veil aside,
And floats aloft our spangled flag in glory and in pride,
And bayonets in the sunlight gleam, and bands brave music pour;
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more!

If you look all up our valley where the growing harvests shine,
You may see our sturdy farmer boys fast forming into line;
And children from their mother's knees are pulling at the weeds,
And learning how to reap and sow against their country's needs;
And a farewell group stands weeping at every cottage door;
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more!

You have called us, and we're coming, by Richmond's bloody tide
To lay us down, for Freedom's sake, our brothers' bones beside,
Or from foul treason's savage grasp to wrench the murderous blade,
And in the face of foreign foes its fragments to parade.
Six hundred thousand loyal men and true have gone before:
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more!

An Old Favorite

IF I SHOULD DIE TONIGHT

By Belle E. Smith

IF I should die to-night,
My friends would look upon my quiet face
Before they laid it in its resting-place,
And deem that death hath left it almost fair;
And laying snow-white flowers against my hair,
Would smooth it down with tearful tenderness,
And fold my hands with lingering caress—
Poor hands, so empty and so cold to-night!

If I should die to-night,
My friends would call to mind, with loving thought,
Some kindly deed the icy hands had wrought;
Some gentle word the frozen lips had said;
Errands on which the willing feet had sped;
The memory of my selfishness and pride,
My hasty words, would all be put aside;
And so I should be loved and mourned to-night.

If I should die to-night,
Even hearts estranged would turn once more to me,
Recalling other days remorsefully;
The eyes that chill me with averted glance
Would look upon me as of yore, perchance,
And soften in the old, familiar way;
For who could war with dumb, unconscious clay?
So I might rest, forgiven of all, to-night.

Oh, friends, I pray to-night
Keep not your kisses for my dead, cold brow!
The way is lonely; let me feel them now.
Think gently of me: I am travel-worn;
My faltering feet are pierced with many a thorn.
Forgive, oh hearts estranged, forgive, I plead!
When dreamless rest is mine, I shall not need
The tenderness for which I long to-night.

An Old Favorite

TO ALTHEA FROM PRISON

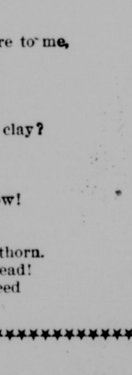
By Richard Lovelace

WHEN Love with unconfin-ed wings
Hovers within my gates,
And my divine Althea brings
To whisper at my grates;
When I lie tangled in her hair
And fettered to her eye,
The birds that wanton in the air
Know no such liberty.

When flowing cups run swiftly round
With no allaying Thames,
Our careless heads with roses bound,
Our hearts with loyal flames;
When thirsty grief in wine we steep,
When healths and draughts go free—
Fishes, that tipple in the deep,
Know no such liberty.

When like committed linnets I
With shriller throat shall sing
The sweetness, mercy, majesty,
And glories of my king;
When I shall voice aloud how good
He is, how great should be,
Enlarged winds, that curl the flood,
Know no such liberty.

Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage;
Minds innocent and quiet take
That for a hermitage:
If I have freedom in my love
And in my soul am free;
Angels alone, that soar above,
Enjoy such liberty.



Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroal now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later thsn December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

GRANULATED

Fertilizer Lime!

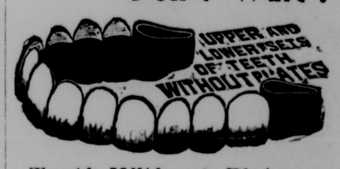
FOR FARMERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

C. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—21t

Now is the Time! Don't Wait!



Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work

A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, } FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY,

First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.

FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R.

POPULAR SEASHORE EXCURSIONS.

Atlantic City,

Cape May, Ocean City, Sea Island City, N. J., Ocean City, Md., and Rehoboth Beach, Del., July 16 and 28, August 11 and 25, and September 8.

At following very low rates from OAKLAND:

Only $8.50 Round Trip, tickets good in coaches only.

Only $10.50 Round Trip, tickets good in Pullman cars when accompanied by regular Pullman ticket.

All tickets good returning 16 days, including date of sale.

Stop-overs allowed on return trip at Philadelphia and Washington.

Ask Ticket Agents for pamphlet giving detailed information.

The Fight That Held the Fort

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

October 5, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

NEXT to Commander W. B. Cushing's marvelous feat in sending the Confederate ram Albemarle to the bottom of Cape Fear river and Sheridan's ride "from Winchester, twenty miles away," Corse's relief and defense of Allatoona pass, Oct. 5, 1864, is the best remembered single figure episode of the war.

The capture of Atlanta by Sherman's forces at the close of the summer of 1864 left the Federal army of the west loose in the heart of Dixie. The Confederate leader, General Hood, finding that he couldn't cope with it in open battle, determined to paralyze it for offensive operations by doubling back on Sherman's long line of railway communications, extending from Atlanta past Marietta, Allatoona, Kingston and Rome on to Chattanooga and Nashville. Slipping out of Atlanta to the west, he "lay low" until Oct. 1, then moved northward to the vicinity of Dallas. To keep pace with Hood, Sherman moved back to Marietta, and while his columns were toiling slowly over the mountains north of that point Hood struck out on the right flank to destroy the railroad from the mountain district northward. On Oct. 3 the track was completely destroyed for ten miles north of Marietta, and the Confederate division of General S. G. French was ordered to march several miles farther north, to Allatoona, where the road passed through a cut sixty-five feet deep, fill the cut with stones, earth and logs, burn the Yankee army stores at Allatoona, then slip away west and south and rejoin Hood's main army on the Dallas line before Sherman could intercept the raiding column. One of Sherman's divisions, under General J. M. Corse, was scattered along the railroad from Allatoona to Rome as railroad guards. Corse was at Rome with the bulk of his troops. A small brigade lay at Allatoona.

About noon on Oct. 4 a message from Sherman at Kenesaw, traveling from signal station to signal station on the mountain tops, reached Corse at Rome, ordering him to re-enforce Allatoona, for the enemy was marching upon it along the railway from the south ahead of Sherman's relieving column. There were no cars at Rome for the movement of troops. A train ordered up from Kingston was wrecked on the way. By wiring and sending out engines in all directions Corse got together twenty cars, loaded 1,000 men into them with 165,000 rounds of ammunition, steamed toward Allatoona, clearing the wrecked train out of the path, and reached the pass at 2 a. m. on the 5th, while the garrison outposts were engaged in a lively skirmish with French's Confederates.

RUSHING THE FLAG TO THE FRONT.

French had made a night march of ten miles between 11 and 2 o'clock. Picking their way over crag and precipice and through underbrush and slashings, his men enveloped the place on the south, east and west and waited for daylight. Morning disclosed an abrupt, fortified ridge extending east and west from the railroad and defending the deep cut on all sides. On the crest of the ridge east of the pass was a star shaped earthwork, with guns and rifle pits and abatis encircling it from the brink of the cut above and below. The ridge on the west was crowned by a stronger fort, with three small redoubts and rifle pits and abatis additional. In the mouth of the cut on the south were the depot and store buildings, the latter containing 1,000,000 rations, and all under the guns of the works above. The 1,000 men brought up by Corse increased the garrison to 1,900 men. Colonel Tourtellotte, with 450 Minnesota boys of the Fourth regiment and part of the Twelfth Wisconsin battery, lay in the fort east of the cut. In the brush around the works were 150 skirmishers of the Eighteenth Wisconsin. General Corse sent over to the east ridge 150 of the Twelfth Illinois and 250 of the Fiftieth to be held in reserve behind the works ready to move anywhere at call. On the west ridge 300 Illinoisans of the Ninety-third were scattered as pickets and picket reserves all around the semicircle. The Seventh Illinois, 267 strong, and the Thirty-ninth Iowa, numbering 280, formed a line of battle on a spur of the west ridge in the pits and redoubts covering the main fort.

French planted twelve pieces of artillery on the south of the cut to sweep its whole length and bombard the ridge as well. A brigade of Missourians under Colonel Cockerell and one of North Carolinians and Texans under General Young climbed the steep acclivity of the west ridge to storm the main fort, and General Sears' Mississippians marched squarely around the pass to the north and destroyed the railroad and telegraph, so as to isolate the garrison completely. That done, French summoned Corse to surrender in order to save "needless effusion of blood," allowing five minutes for deliberation. Corse replied at once that he was "prepared for 'the needless effusion' of blood whenever it was agreeable" to General French. He told his men to prepare for the worst. The moment the saucy reply of the garrison commander reached French he gave the signal for an assault all along the line.

Emerging from the woods on the west ridge and threading the tangled abatis and felled timber, Cockerell's Missourians and Young's Texans dashed forward, their lines swept by the fire from the pits and the fort. The Thirty-ninth Iowa and the Seventh Illinois bore the brunt of the first attack. Two companies of Iowans were far to the front skirmishing, three companies were posted in observation on a knoll outside the works and three companies lay in the trenches. French's lines overlapped the defenders, and the Iowa skirmishers, with their supports, were driven back on a tangent. Colonel Redfield and four lieutenants were killed, scores of men were killed and wounded and a few survivors got back to the main fort.

Out of six Iowa officers shot down five were killed, and out of eighty-six men hit thirty-five lay dead on the field. Colonel Redfield was shot four times. The Seventh Illinois, fighting beside the Iowans, suffered equal slaughter and lost sixty-seven wounded and thirty-five killed outright. The bloody work on the west ridge lasted over two hours. In the heat of it Corse sent an aid across the cut to the east fort for help, and the Fiftieth Illinois reached the west fort just as the hard pressed fragments of the Seventh and Thirty-ninth got back to the shelter of its walls. Before the assailants of the west fort could recover from the staggering blows delivered by the Iowans and Illinoisans and form for a regular assault the parapets and trenches of the works were lined with fresh men. Even the rough ground, the rocks, stumps and logs outside the fort sheltered marksmen waiting coolly for the onset. When it came it was terrible. The fire poured in on the north, south and west faces of the work, sweeping the ditches and parapets. The valor of the assailants was sublime. The colonel of the Forty-six Mississippi, W. H. Clark, leading the advance with the battleflag in his hands, fell dead on the brink of the ditch. Behind the Mississippians followed the Twenty-ninth North Carolina, the flag far in advance in the hands of Color Sergeant Rich. "Come on, boys!" he shouted, waving the flag in front of them, and went down severely wounded. The nearest comrade, Lieutenant E. B. Alexander, grasped the standard, echoed the sergeant's cry, "Come on, boys!" and immediately fell dead. Sergeant Parker next took the colors and bore them across the ditch to the parapet, where he held them until he was blinded by a wound in the face.

The defenders, not to be outdone in valor, boldly exposed themselves above the parapet—the officers setting the example—and fell in scores. There were six commissioned officers killed and twenty wounded on the west ridge. The Twelfth Illinois lost fifty-six killed and wounded, twenty-four of the number being commissioned and noncommissioned officers. Corse was hit in the face and stunned during the height of the assault. He came to just as the cry was going around, "Cease firing!" His soldiers thought the case was hopeless and were contemplating surrender to avoid annihilation. The artillery ammunition was all used up and the cannon silent. Some brave fellow whose name has not been recorded, hearing Corse's appeal to go on with the fight, volunteered to steal out of the fort, cross the fire swept cut and bring ammunition from the chests in the east fort. The fight had lasted over six hours. For an hour longer it raged fitfully, and the Confederates at last abandoned the field, leaving their dead and wounded lying as they fell. The cavalry advance of Sherman was rapidly galloping to the rescue from the south.

General Corse magnanimously attributed to "the extraordinary valor" of the officers and men of the Thirty-ninth Iowa and the Seventh Illinois the salvation of Allatoona pass. History declares that Corse played a great part in it, and the man who answered Sherman's order to hold the fort with the dispatch, "I am short a cheek bone and an ear, but am able to lick all h— yet," must always be the popular hero of Allatoona.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

PHILIPPINES AT WORLD'S FAIR

Complete Exhibition of Island People and Industries Covers Forty-seven Acres and Is Independent of Larger Show.

Not even in the heart of Manila city could there be found forty-seven acres of Philippine territory as interesting as that amount of space covered by the islands' display at the World's Fair. Here is an exposition within an exposition, a little wheel that revolves independently of the larger one encompassing it.

Scores of buildings are filled with exhibits, native life is depicted by as many different villages as there are tribes on the islands, military drills are given by Philippine troops, and concerts are rendered by native bands. For its amusement features the Philippine exposition has the humorous Igorrote, who dines on dog meat, and visitors are entertained by Visayan actors and actresses. Nothing is lacking to make the show complete.

SOUTH ENTRANCE PALACE OF LIBERAL ARTS, WORLD'S FAIR.

The Administration building is a replica of the government offices in Manila, while the Art and Education building reproduces in miniature the cathedral within the walled city, even the mellowed tints of age being faithfully rendered. A section of the ancient but still serviceable town wall has been reconstructed to serve the double purpose of a gateway to the show and a museum of arms and war relics. The other main edifices are types of Filipino homes, being built of undressed timber, bamboo and rattan, with thatched roofs and broad verandas.

Then there are the tribal villages nestling under the trees, some of the houses perched high up among the boughs, others on piles above the waters of the Arrowhead lake, all of them actual dwellings fashioned of native materials by native workmanship and illustrating the manners, customs and pursuits of their occupants. Here are women weaving a coarse cloth on a rude hand loom, others making baskets, others tending irrigated fields of rice. One group of men are in village council, trying an offender according to their tribal laws; others are slowly moving in a circular dance to the thump of tomtoms and the clang of brass gongs; others, again, are smelting iron by the aid of a primitive but most ingenious bellows, the constituent parts of which are a bamboo tube and an airtight mop of feathers working therein like the piston of a syringe. And these are but a few of an almost endless variety of life pictures.

The ethnological problem is a somewhat complicated one; but, although there are no fewer than sixteen races represented among the village dwellers, the scouts and the constabulary, each race speaking its own dialect and following its own customs, all may be roughly classified into four groups—the true aboriginals or non-Malays, the pagan Malays, the Christian Malays and the Mohammedan Malays.

The first are the dwarf Negritos, with dark skins and woolly heads, wearers of scanty raiment, proficient in the use of the bow and poisoned arrow, a race of nomads and forest dwellers, pagans pure and simple. They live in their own stockaded village.

Next to them are the Igorrotes, whose origin is traced back to the first wave of Malay invasion. Here, again, we have scanty clothing, amounting almost to nudity, but copper colored skins, long wavy tresses, pleasant featured faces and fine physiques, even though the stature be small. Among these pagan Malays are the head hunters and the dog eaters. They are savages, yet have their code of laws and a knowledge of several primitive industries.

The Christian Malays, produced by the second wave of invasion, are represented by the Visayans, a tall and handsome race, dressing well, living in pretty homes, skilled in weaving, dyeing, basket making, hat making, wood carving and other handicrafts, musicians of no mean merit, the one group of natives who came early and thoroughly under the influence of the early Spanish settlers.

Very different are the Moros, who swept into the islands from the Malay peninsula last of all, bringing with them their Mohammedan religion, also a knowledge of gunpowder acquired with the Koran from the Arabs—fanatics like their teachers, pirates, bloodthirsty, treacherous and vindictive fellows, ever at war among themselves and with the whole outside world. Despite their ferocity they are a clever race, dress handsomely, have their sultans and their slaves and are expert seamen, while long continued pillage on the high seas has surrounded them with many of the luxuries and conveniences of western civilization.

The buildings of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries show all the varied natural products, also the extremely primitive processes as yet in vogue, while in the Women's building we are introduced to a number of native manufactures, including the beautiful fabrics from the jusi, banana and pineapple fibers. This information is collated in the Building of Commerce, where a unique and most effective method of exhibiting is followed. In one hall are samples of all the articles produced for export, among which manila fiber, of course, holds the chief place of prominence, while in a second hall are all the manufactures from every country that are imported and find a ready market among the populace. Thus the business man gets a dual lesson. He sees what he can profitably take from the islands, and also what he may profitably send to them. When it is added that a large number of representative Filipinos have been brought over to visit the Exposition and study American business methods and manufactures, it will be recognized that great benefit both to the islands and to the world at large must result from this work of mutual enlightenment.

CONCERTS BY MASSED BANDS

Prizes Aggregating $30,000 to Be Distributed at the World's Fair.

Never were musical events in America planned upon such an elaborate scale as those of the World's Fair. A series of concerts will be given by competing bands in contest for prizes offered by the World's Fair. These contests will take place in Festival Hall, Sept. 12 to 17.

Nine cash prizes, aggregating $30,000, are offered for the successful bands. The prizes are divided so as to give to the organization scoring the highest number of points $3,250; $2,500 will be given to the band scoring the second highest number of points and $1,500 to the one getting the third highest number.

The above division is made for bands in Class A, which consist of twenty members. In the B class $10,000 will be given in prizes—first, $4,500; second $3,500; third, $2,000.

Class C, which includes bands of thirty-five members, will enjoy the division of $12,750. For the organization scoring the highest number of points a prize of $6,000 has been named. The second prize is $4,000 and the third $2,700.

Bands employed by the Exposition are not permitted to contest. All players must be bona fide members, and each musician must have been enrolled at least three months prior to the date of the contest. Each band must send to the bureau the name of its members and a nominal entrance fee.

Festival Hall concerts by massed bands will be given at 7:30 each day during the contest, in which all contesting bands will take part under the direction of a distinguished conductor. All bands entering must agree to play one concert in addition to the competing concert and massed concerts.

A separate programme has been prepared by the Bureau of Music for each class, and each band will play through the full programme of its class. The numbers in all three programmes are by eminent composers and are chosen with the view of bringing out the qualities of the bands performing them. The list of composers includes Wagner, Gounod, Offenbach, Verdi, Saint-Saens, Bizet, Strauss and Leoncavallo.

WEATHER AT WORLD'S FAIR.

Cool Nights and Delightful Indian Summer to Be Expected at St. Louis.

Usually the warmest month of the year, July proved to be one of the most pleasant of the World's Fair season, the average temperature being 67 degrees, a record lower than that made by either Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati or Chicago. The weather bureau records show that the temperatures in St. Louis during July were just between the extremes recorded at New Orleans and St. Paul, cities located at great variance.

August in St. Louis is a month of cool nights, and September and October are the most delightful months of the year. It is that period known as Indian summer, when the foliage and birds linger to challenge the coming winter. Nowhere on the American continent is there a spot more delightful than the World's Fair city, a garden of blooming flowers and spraying fountains.

St. Louis, like all cities, experienced several hot days during July, but her highest temperature recorded was 93 degrees against 94 degrees registered by the thermometer at Chicago. On the same day the mercury rose to 96 degrees in Philadelphia, and scores of heat prostrations were reported from New York and Boston.

The relative humidity shows St. Louis to be about normal. Assuming absolutely no moisture in the atmosphere to be zero and absolute wetness to be 100, the relative humidities for July, taken from the records of more than twenty years, Boston shows 70.6, New York 72.2, Philadelphia 68.6, Cincinnati 64.6, Chicago 66.9 and St. Louis 66.3. The same degree of heat in two places, with different degrees of humidity, would cause it to seem the hotter at the point of greater density.

St. Louis may therefore rightly claim to be a summer resort this summer, positively one of the most comfortable and delightful places on the map.

Sonnets of Schooldays.

[Sonnet of the Self Denial of True Love.]

IFF shee noo how i wurkt to gett thatt dime,
How i wuz swetten neerle awl thee time
I washt thee stepps ann polisht thee frunt dore.
I wunder iff sheed luv me ennymoar
Wenn shee is drinken lemmenade wich I hav bott fore hur. shee nose thatt itt wood bi fishlines ur topps ur marbuls wich i nede.
Butt no. i do nott bi um. no, indede.
i onley think uv hur ann my grate luv ann wunder sumtimes wott sheez thinken uv.

iff shee cood sea thee blizsturs on mi hand frum raken launs O wood she understand thatt evry time shee stopps ann starrts too draw
Hur breth sheez drawen munney throo thee straw.
O luv how eezy u malk us foargett thee way wee wurk wee blissfur ann wee swett
Too gett a littul munney wenn wee pass a stand ware lem ade is five a glas.
Wenn ure gurl looks up att u ofile stil ann sez O hennry doant itt malk u dri.

O luv u are a mitey mitey powr wee wurk fore munney menney a weery our butt lett a gurl gett thursty ann itts gone befoar u hardlie say jack robison.
thee millyunair spennds thowsands butt he nose
thares lotts moar in his pokket wenn itt goze butt wenn i spennd mi dime fere lemmenade itts awl ive gott. Butt luv is nott afrade Uv povverty. Ann evry breth shee draws bringgs happynes upp too me throo them straws.

—J. W. Foley in New York Life.

The End of It.

Podger—When is your marriage to Miss Munnybags to come off?

Bodger—It's off now.

Must Be True.

Hicks—Bowers has been telling me some of his war experiences.

Wicks—And I suppose you believed all his yarns?

Hicks—Oh, yes. They were so uninteresting I'm sure they must be true.—Boston Transcript.

In Abeyance.

"What a cute little baby!" exclaimed the good hearted old lady in the street. "Boy or girl?"

"We ain't decided yet," replied the little nurse. "Pop an' mom's still scrappin' over a name for it."—Catholic Standard Times.

At His Own Game.

"Suppose, Keener, that the foreigner to whom your daughter is engaged should turn out to be a bogus count?"

"He couldn't be a bit more bogus than the check I'm going to give him."—Detroit Free Press.

Before an Old Master.

Mr. Gaswel (in an art store)—Seems to me that's an awful price to pay for an old picture like that.

Mrs. Gaswel—The picture is rather old, to be sure, but the frame is new.—New York Weekly.

A Definition.

Little Clarence—Pa, what is a reform?

Mr. Callipers—Anything that interferes with the rights and pleasures of other people, my son.—New York World.

Twice as Bad.

George—What can be more sickening than to see another fellow making love to a girl?

Harry—To see another fellow making love to your girl.—Town Topics.

Not Afraid Now.

"Let's cross the street. I want to walk past that fellow over there."

"Who is he?"

"Fellow I paid $50 to yesterday."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Feminine Dig.

Tess—Yes, Mr. Hanson called upon me one evening last week, but he was disappointed.

Jess—Ah, you were at home then?—Philadelphia Press.

Why He Liked It.

Miss Antique—Your friend looked at the lines in my palms the other day, and he said it was a great pleasure to read such a hand as mine.

Miss Flip—Yes. Fred is deeply interested in ancient history.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 6 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY,
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R.R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily		1.54 A. M
No. 3—Daily		7.17 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday		9.26 A. M
No. 55—Daily		4.53 P. M
No. 1—Daily		10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily		12.27 A. M
No. *8—Daily		6.04 A. M
No. 2—Daily		6.31 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun		5.32 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily		4.34 P. M
No. 12—Daily		8.32 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT AUG. 28, 1904.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	SOUTHWARD No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	NORTHWARD No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	11 59	†7 40
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	7 08
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 45
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 33
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June	10 51	6 26
4 45	8 27	Barnum	10 36	6 10
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	6 02
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 44
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 40
6 25x	9 50x ar	Elk Garden lv	x8 10	x4 25
5 40†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	†5 08
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	5 02
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 52
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 48
6 43†	10 32†	Thomas	†8 38	†4 18
7 10†	11 00† ar	Davis	†8 05	†3 40
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 33	4 13
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 40
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 37
7 27	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 30
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 56
8 15†	11 59† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 40
	SOON

No.45	No. 3	No. 1		No. 2	No. 4	No.46
P. M.	A. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
3 30x	6 30†	2 35x	lv Elkins ar	x8 20	12 30†	x8 15
3 45	6 47	2 51	R.C. Jct	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 55	2 54	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 52
4 01	7 04	3 06	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10x	7 15†	3 15x	ar Bel'g'n lv	x7 35	11 45†	x8 35
					A. M.
P. M.	P. M.			P. M.	P. M.
x8 30	12 35†	lv	Elkins ar	x9 55	12 00
8 46	12 52		Beverly	9 39	1 44
9 10†	1 15†	ar	Hutt'e ar	x9 15	1 20†

No. 53	No. 51			No. 54	No. 52
A. M.	P. M.			P. M.	P. M.
x6 20	x12 35	lv	Elkins ar	x2 35	6 50x
7 49	1 24		Fishing Hawk	1 49	5 28
8 34	1 46		Glady	1 30	4 50
9 42	2 19		Burner	12 57	3 48
x10 15	x2 35	ar	Durbin lv	x12 40	3 15x

† Daily x Daily except Sunday. s Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE

World's Fair, ST. LOUIS.

Three Through Trains Daily,

Vestibuled Throughout With Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars VIA CINCINNATI.

Season, Sixty-Day and Fifteen-Day

Excursion Tickets ON SALE.

Cheap Coach Excursions

Every Tuesday in June AT

Very Low Rates.

Ask ticket agents for Descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information.

CANCER CURED

permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1520 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

COAL COMPANIES OUTWITTED.

Charles P. Gillespie Will Open Saloon In Spite of Opposition.

The merry war which has been waged between Charles B. Gillespie and the officers of the various coal companies, operating in and around Thomas and Hendricks, W. Va., has come to a sudden end with a complete victory for Gillespie. For years Gillespie operated a saloon at Hendricks and did a thriving business, but about a year ago he was refused a license by the authorities, being opposed mainly by the coal companies. He then purchased a lot on the opposite side of the river, erected new buildings, built a suspension bridge, started a hotel and saloon and did a thriving business with the residents of Hendricks. The county court this year refused to grant him a license to conduct his business in Brookland Heights, the new town which he started across the river.

However he was not to be outwitted and now it is announced that he has purchased a valuable tract of land across the river from Thomas and Henry, in Garrett county and will again open up for the sale of "fire water." The land purchased by Gillespie was the only tract within several miles of Henry not owned or controlled by the coal companies operating there. It was the property of a widow, who has steadily refused the the price offered her by the coal companies. The latter would not permit a saloon on their premises and Gillespie paid the widow $31,000 for the land and now asks $100,000 for it.

COMMUNICATED

Miss Carolina De Fabritiis.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN:

In the month of July a concert for Oakland was contemplated by the above named young lady and as THE REPUBLICAN gave the design a warm approval and made a proffer of its columns in such a behalf, an explanatory line as to the abandonment of the project may be due in the premises.

First, THE REPUBLICAN will concede to a young lady, what all mankind has to concede, the sovereign right to change her mind at will, and to that established fact can rightfully be added that unexpected happenings required the change of purpose. But as you failed to hear her in the element in which she ranks so well and charms so many, there may be a desire to know something, at least, of whom she is and from where she came. A brief visit from this accomplished Italian came by chance to the lot of Swanton's better fortune. Two pupils from this sober little town to the seminary in which this young lady taught, induced the visit. As indicated by her name, she is not an American product. Musical celebrities, like the wise men of antiquity, "come from the east." Miss De Fabritiis is of Italian birth and lineage. In early childhood she came to the United States, about twenty years ago, and though educated in the schools of this country to a thorough mastery of the English, as well as other languages, speaks her mother tongue with fluent ease. Cultivated in some of our best institutions of learning she developed a marvelous aptitude for music, a refined art for which her race is famous. Bearing, with diplomas, credentials of flattering distinction from several musical graduations, she received an appointment in St. Mary's Seminary, Maryland, where she taught until elected this summer principal of the Conservatory of Music, Halifax, Nova Scotia, and her departure last month from Maryland was to assume this new and distant charge.

And thus, Mr. Editor, it transpires by the constant changes in the ebb and drift of affairs that Oakland, like Miss McBride—

"Proud of herself and proud of her pride,
And proud of a thousand things beside,"

was deprived of the concert and of the opportunity to see and hear this reigning queen in the realm of song.

RELLIM.

SWANTON, September 3, 1904.

Public Schools to Open.

Monday of next week the public schools for Garrett county will open for a term of seven and a half months. The schools in Oakland will be in charge of Prof. McBee, recently of Baltimore, who will arrive here this afternoon.

Died.

SHAFFER—At Bayard last Thursday, Paul Loraine, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Shaffer, of Bayard. The child was one of twins born to Mr. and Mrs. Shaffer about five months ago. The interment was made in the Ashby cemetery at Crellin last Saturday.

Married.

SHARTZER—STONE—At the Lutheran parsonage in Oakland on Tuesday, the 9th inst., by Rev. E. Manges, Mr. Andrew Shartzer, of near Oakland, and Miss Harriet E. Stone, of Kingwood, West Va. The couple went east on their bridal trip.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

DROWNED IN THE RIVER AT BLAINE

A Slav, Who Had Shot Two Ducks, Lost His Life Trying to Get Them.

A Slav, name unknown, but employed in the North American mine operated by the Davis Coal and Coke Company at Blaine, West Virginia, opposite the town of Kitzmillersville, this county, was drowned in the Potomac River at a point near the towns last Sunday morning and his body recovered the same afternoon about two o'clock by some men who used grab hooks for the purpose.

The man had succeeded in shooting a pair of ducks on the river and being without a dog to retrieve them he undressed himself and plunged into the water. After swimming about half way across the river he was seen to struggle in the water by some of his countrymen and almost immediately sink from sight. His funeral took place Monday afternoon, the interment being made in the cemetery at Westernport. The man leaves a wife and several children, all of them being in the mother country.

HISTORIAN HURLBERT HERE.

Was Engaged Looking Up Matter for an Historical Work.

Archer Butler Hurlbert, of Marietta, Ohio, a historian of considerable prominence, who is engaged in writing "Historic Highways of America," and has already issued ten or fifteen volumes, treating upon matters of an historical character, was in Oakland a few days ago interviewing Rev. John M. Davis and other local gentlemen who have a retentive memory for things of the past, in connection with another volume descriptive of General Washington's visit and travels in Garrett county in his efforts to lay out a route for a canal across the Allegany mountains from the Potomac to the Cheat river. Mr. Hurlbert has been traveling over Washington's route and securing all possible information concerning the same. He left here for Bruceton, W. Va., going thence to Uniontown, Pa., through which town Washington passed.

HOYES AND VICINITY.

Among the visitors in our town the past week were the following: Dr. R. A. Rayenscroft and son, D. S. Custer, of Friendville; S. P. Specht and Mr. Freeland, of Deer Park; W. A. Maffett, of Oakland; P. P. McAndrews, of Avilton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Keller and daughters, Mary, Browning and Margaret, of Romney, W. Va., are making their annual visit to Mrs. Keller's parents at this place.

Mr. R. C. McCandlish and family, of Friendsville, spent several days the past week at the Mattingly House.

Mrs. Elijah Friend is numbered among the sick at this writing.

Mrs. Mary Seabold and granddaughter, Miss Margaret, of Cumberland, are visiting relatives and friends in this community.

Clarence Dewitt and sister, Miss Olive, of Frostburg, spent several days last week in this neighborhood.

Messrs. R. C. McCandlish and William Owens, accompanied by their wives, spent Monday of this week fishing at E. Custer's.

The Y. F. S. C. was very pleasantly entertained at the home of Arthur Dewitt Monday evening. All report a very enjoyable time.

Miss Orley Conneway, of Los Angeles, Cal., is visiting in this neighborhood at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Dewitt were called to the bedside of their daughter, Miss Bertha, near Oakland, who has been suffering from a severe attack of diphtheria, but is much improved at this writing.

Daniel Thayer and family, of near Crellin, spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives at this place.

Mrs. Carrie Dewitt and children, of Armistead, spent several days the past week with relatives in this community.

Mr. Eugene Baumgartner and wife, accompanied by Miss Wolf, all of Oakland, spent last Sunday in Hoyes.

Mrs. Lily Meyers and son spent a few days with Mrs. Maggie Dewitt here recently.

C.H. Bishoff and family, of Barnum; Henry Miller and family, of Keyser, Md.; George Kemp, wife and son, of Harnedsville, Pa., all visited George E. Bishoff's the past week.

Col. Pearre's Return.

Col. and Mrs. George A. Pearre and Mr. Wallace McKaig, who spent the summer on the continent sailed from Southhampton for New York, on the steamer Grosse Kurfurst, on September 4th. Upon arriving they will spend ten days at some seaside resort and expect to reach Cumberland about the 24th.

Circuit Court Monday.

On Monday the September term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county will convene with Judges Boyd, Henderson and Keedy on the bench. The several dockets are large, especially the criminal docket, and indications point to a prolonged session.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

An Ideal Place for Rest, Education and Amusement.

Carroll Record

Mountain Lake Park must be reckoned among the attractive summer resorts of the east, and among the mountain resorts of its class it is without an equal. It is a beautiful grassy oak forest of 800 acres, 2800 feet above sea level, laid out in walks and drives, and contains about 250 cottages, hotels and dwellings, an immense amphitheatre—one of the finest in the country, comfortably seating 4000 people—an "old auditorium" seating perhaps 2000, an administration building, stores, booths, resting places, etc., the whole being lighted by electricity and supplied with water.

The atmosphere is delightful, the elevation being practically 2000 ft. greater than that of Carroll county, and what we know as humidity—moisture and general "stickiness" in the air—is entirely absent on this 20-mile wide crest of the Alleganies; there is also entire absence of mosquitos, but few flies or insect pests of kind, and there is an indescriable restful feeling permeating the whole place. The Chautauqua program, however, which extends throughout the entire month of August, constitutes the chief superiority of Mountain Lake Park over other eastern resorts. In order that the exact character of this program may be understood by our readers, we give the events of a single day, as a fair specimen of the daily programs of the whole month:

9.00 a. m.—Biblical Exposition, "The Beginnings," Dr. Phil Baird.
11.00 a. m.—Lecture with costume changes, "The People and Customs of Scandinavia," with touch on Japan, by Miss Frank Miller.
7.30 p. m.—Concert, the Royal Hungarian Orchestra.
2.00 p. m.—Half-hour Prelude of Magic, Mr. Hendrickson.
2.30 p. m.—Lecture, "Wedlock or Deadlock," Dr. C. E. Maxfield.
4.30 p. m.—Round-Table Art Lecture, "Michael Angelo, the Sistine Chapel," Dr. Froelicher.
8.00 p. m.—Whistling, Imitations and Impersonations, Mr. Samuel H. Congdon, Baltimore, and the Aeolian Quartette with Orchestra.

Here we have a program, religious and educational in the forenoon, music and lecturers in the afternoon, and entertainment at night. Every day of the entire month is covered practically in the same manner, the talent engaged being high class, always. Therefore, it is not difficult to understand why Mountain Lake Park becomes a habit—almost a necessity—to those who have once spent a week or more there. If you want absolute rest and quiet, during the hot weather, here you can get it with the most pleasant surroundings if you want to be assured of not having your vacation spoiled by an attack of the "blues," or loneliness, here you have that assurance; if you want to take either solid or light mental stimulation, here you get just what you want, along with your resting-up; and best of all, you get the benefit of all these advantages at a modest cost.

Hotel board costs from $8.00 to $15.00 per week, while at the cottages rates range from about $6.00 to $10.00 per week. Weekly tickets to all the auditorium events, cost $1.50; daily tickets 35c. If you prefer outdoor games and exercises, you can enjoy boating, baseball, croquet, tennis, wheeling, rambles through the grove, any number of beautiful drives, or just downright loafing. There are no "side-shows," nor schemes for wheedling money out of you for nicnacs, but somehow you are able to get just about all you need and there is not the slightest feeling that there is something lacking to make your enjoyment complete.

If there is one drawback to the place it is the suddenness of showers, and the uncertainty connected with how to dress for a several hours absence from your boarding-house. In this respect Mountain Lake Park is rather skittish. Long, heavy rains, are practically unknown; but it is quite common for brief showers to occur daily, or more frequently; a half-hour afterwards, however, the walks are dry and the air so delightfully pure that the showers seem an aggravatingly pleasant necessity. So, too, with the temperature; as a rule, light, summer clothing is needed during the day, while the winter weight is very comfortable at night and early in the morning; indeed during our recent visit, hearth fires were necessary evening and morning, and overcoats and wraps were almost as common as summer dresses. A variety of clothing is an absolute necessity to entire comfort.

The Chautauqua program, we have said, is the chief attraction at the Park. It is more than that—it is its very heart and existence. Men and women of intelligence and culture, go there, year after year, who would not think of missing it. Ministers, physicians, teachers, scientists, students—the intellectual working classes in general—make up the summer population, which probably average 2,500 exclusive of excursionists, and this creates the impression, even to the casual observer, that the Park is a select place, the social atmosphere of which is distinctly religious educational and moral without being either Puritanical or so hedged in with discipline and "keep off the grass" regulations that excess of virtue interferes with a single property liberty of either young or old.

Every person who has "got the habit" of going to Mountain Lake Park, and who has taken the trouble to do a little thinking up to the point of realizing that all the attractions have not come by chance, must see in Dr W. L. Davidson, that ideal Superintendent, without whom the Park auditorium would seem a strange place, indeed. That quiet, resourceful, broad-minded, skillful weigher of human nature and discoverer of talent, is as naturally a part of each platform event as the attraction itself; and so unostentatiously does he fill his position—so intelligently, yet so firmly—that possibly the average visitors fail to realize that he is being both amused and regulated as an orderly atom in an orderly whole, largely through the influence of one man. In a few words, Dr. Davidson is a great man in his line.

One of the delightful experiences of a stay of a week or two at the Park, is the addition to ones list of acquaintances. Social lines are but lightly drawn, if at all, possibly because this summer population, coming largely from the section bounded by the Chesapeake on the east and the Ohio river on the west, and from central Pennsylvania on the north to the Carolinas on the south, represents the whole territory, wherein class distinctions would be difficult to establish. An acquaintanceship formed at Mountain Lake Park, therefore, is a safe one, and as one's enjoyment so largely depends on freedom from restraint in this direction, it is a most natural sequence that all who stop at "our house" especially, become friendly and enter into each others pleasures without reserve. Many, indeed, visit the Park year after year until their visits become annual reunions, full of reminiscences from the past form no small part of the mutual pleasure. It is also common experience that after the association of a score or more of even entire strangers, from widely separated sections, for several days, many connecting links are revealed which in some way or other draw visitors closer together and bring to them the knowledge of some common ground on which a more than casual friendship can be established.

This happy social condition, too, grows out of the fact that nearly all are there bent on the same purpose, having come largely because of a fore knowledge of the special, social and physical atmosphere of the place, to the end that harmony is bound to prevail because of the absolute lack of inharmonious predilection. Some years, of course, are somewhat less interesting than others, because attendance and weather conditions vary, but it can be truthfully said that, one year with another, the resort holds up the high standard of its attractiveness.

This year, those whose financial interests centre in the Park, complain somewhat of dullness, various causes for which are given, among which may be mentioned the World's Fair, the Baltimore fire, the Presidential campaign, cool weather, etc. Still, there are exceptions to the rule, as the most popular cottages were filled while the hotels seem to have enjoyed a fairly properous season—the disappointment being attached being to the non Chautauqua period.

In concluding this brief sketch we cannot refrain from urging readers of the Record to make up their minds now, to spend several of the weeks of August, 1905, at this most delightful resort; and yet, we would not advise them to go if they expect a gorgeous, artistically developed landscape, or a place of excitement, folly and fashion. It is rather a place for physical, mental and moral rest and uplift, close to the heart of the Universe, rendered the more enjoyable by the presence and efforts of christian people. It must be seen by those of the right class to be appreciated to it fullest extent—undoubtedly, there are those who would feel disappointed, after once there.

Returned From the West.

Young "Dick" Browning came in from the west last Wednesday night where he had been for two or three years trapping and fishing, and at times alternating this sport with work at a gold mine in Idaho. While engaged in the latter occupation several weeks ago the little finger on his left hand was caught in a sprocket wheel and badly crushed, but at the time little attention was paid to the injury. Since coming home, however, the hurt has given him considerable pain and on Monday Dr. McComas amputated the finger. "Dick" brought many trophies of the hunt home with him, including bear skins—one being that of a grizzily, the animal weighing more than a thousand pounds at the time it was killed—deer heads, horns, etc. He will remain at his father's home on Deep Creek during the fall and winter, expecting to return to the west next spring.

FINED $5 AND COSTS.

Officer Broderick Assessed that Amount for Shooting Horses.

The trial of Policeman Broderick for shooting two horses being driven through Oakland by some lumbermen from Crellin on Saturday night previous, came up for trial in Justice Gonder's court last Thursday afternoon. A large crowd of witnesses from Crellin and Oakland was present and after hearing the testimony the Justice fined the officer $5 and costs for cruelty to animals.

The reason given by the officer for shooting was that the men were acting in a disorderly manner and that he was compelled to use his pistol in order to arrest the offenders. A few days after the trouble occurred Broderick took out warrants charging the men with disorderly conduct. They were placed under arrest by the Sheriff but in determining the case against the officer on the charge of cruelty to the horses Justice Gonder decided that the evidence against the men was insufficient and he dismissed them.

The charge preferred against Officer Broderick for assault with intent to murder was sent to the Grand Jury, the officer filling a bond for his appearance at the September Term which meets next Monday morning.

GRAND LECTURER DUKEHART

Will Visit the Masonic Lodge in Oakland Tonight.

Grand Lecturer Graham Dukehart, of Baltimore, will make an official visit to Oakland Lodge No. 192, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons this evening. All members are earnestly requested to be present.

ORDER NISI.

David Sloan vs. Jefferson S. Green.
No. 1235 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

Ordered this 5th day of September, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by D. Lindley Sloan, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 5th day of October, 1904; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 30th day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sale to be $400.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—Test:

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

The Keyser Preparatory Branch
OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.
A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.
Special instruction for public School Teachers.
Instruction in Music.
A Splendid New Building Provided by the State.
A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.
Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.
No Tuition in Commercial Department.
Small Tuition charged Students from other States.
Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.
Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.
For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal.

L. L. FRIEND,
Keyser, W. Va.

The Maryland Agricultural College
COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY.
THREE COURCES OF INSTRUCTION.
AGRICULTURAL. MECHANICAL. SCIENTIFIC.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements: bath-rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.
New buildings with every modern improvement, and old buildings thoroughly renovated by opening of first session. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, with annual deposit, ($150) one hundred and fifty nine dollars, for scholastic year. Daily visit by physician to College. Catalog giving full particulars sent on application. Attention is called to the Short Course of ten weeks in Agriculture. Write for particulars.
Term Commences, Thursday, September, 15.
Early application necessary for admittance.
R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Maryland.

The Maryland School for the Deaf,
37TH SESSION.
Reopens September 14th, 1904.

Non-Sectarian. For the deaf and dumb and those whose hearing is too defective for attendance on public school. Speech and lip-reading taught, as well as grammar school and academic studies.
Location very healthful. Board and Tuition free to residents of Maryland.
Apply to
CHAS. W. ELY, Principal,
Frederick, Md.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. CO.
TO THE
KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS
BIENNIAL ENCAMPMENT,
LOUISVILLE, KY.
VERY LOW RATES
For the Round Trip.
TICKETS ON SALE August 12, 13, 14, 15,
good returning leaving Louisville not later than August 31st, 1904.
Stop-overs allowed at specified points in each direction.
Get details from Ticket Agent.

Mortgagees' Sale
—OF—
Personal Property!

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Joseph E. Lint, William A. Lint and Joseph V. Lint to the undersigned mortgagees, dated the 11th day of February, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 37, folio 355, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under said mortgage we hereby give notice that on Saturday, the 17th Day of September, 1904,

at the hour of two o'clock P. M., at the farm of Andrew J. Frazee, on Frazee's Ridge, in Selbysport District, Garrett county, Maryland, we will offer at public auction to the highest bidder the following personal property, to-wit:

One Aultman & Taylor Steam Engine and Dixon Separator Threshing Machine and Two Bay Horses,

being a portion of the property conveyed by said mortgage.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

JEFFERSON FRAZEE,
DAVID TAYLOR,
Mortgagees.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the Real Estate of Christian Orendorf, deceased.
No. 515 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23d day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause by Jacob S. Miller, Executor, to Christian C. Orendorf and Noah Orendorf, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $810.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.,
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:

E. E. FRIEND, Register.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the sale of the Real Estate of Daniel Smouse, deceased.
No. 482 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23rd day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four by the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause to Jane Smouse by Jacob S. Miller and Mortimer Smouse, Executors, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county once a week for three successive weeks before the 23d day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $3,000.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.,
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:

E. E. FRIEND, Register.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett County, to view the lands through which the proposed new road is to be located, said road to be located in election district No. 4, beginning at or near the old mill race bridge on the Bloomington and Westernport road and running thence northwest through the lands of the Davis Coal & Coke Co., and to intersect the Michaels and Westernport road at a point known as Klight's water trough, and to discontinue the old road, the distance of the proposed relocation being about one mile, and examine whether the said proposed road should be relocated, will meet on the 10th day of September, 1904, for the purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said proposed location of said public road, and if so, to locate the same, and perform their duty in the premises.

MARCUS M. FAZENBAKER,
GEORGE T. MILLER,
THOMAS BURKE,
Examiners.

ROAD PETITION.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first insertion of this notice in one of the county papers of Garrett county, application will be made by the undersigned to the County Commissioners of said Garrett county for the appointment of viewers to view and lay out a public county road beginning at or near Forty Water Station on the B. & O. R. R., in District No. 1, and running thence through the lands of Thomas Nines, C. H. Sweitzer, Levi Sweitzer, Frank Sweitzer, Jerry Sweitzer, Simon Sweitzer and others, and to intersect the County road leading from Swanton to Beckman at or near the top of the hill near the place of J. D. Ashenfelter, a distance of about one mile.

CHAS. H. SWEITZER,
A. F. SWEITZER, SR.,
C. E. SWEITZER,
BENJAMIN SWEITZER, JR.

Proposals for Building Wrought Iron Bridge.

Notice is hereby given, that the County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, will receive sealed proposals until

Tuesday, the 13th Day of September, 1904,

at 1.30 o'clock p. m. at their office in the town of Oakland, Md., for the building of a low truss wrought iron bridge; the superstructure to consist of one span 74 feet long and 12 feet wide; said bridge to have a capacity of 100 pounds live load.

The bids submitted shall only be for the superstructure. Said bridge is to be erected over the Youghiogheny River near Swallow Falls, in Election District No. 14, according to plans and specifications to be seen in the County Commissioners' office. The County Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids

By order of the Board.

A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., Aug. 24, 1904.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Tuesday, Sept. 13, 1904,

to transact business that may come before the Board.

By order of the Board.

A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,
Plumbing,
Gas Fitting,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
Center Street,
Keyser, W. Va.
PHONE 62.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1904. NUMBER 28

NATURAL GAS STRUCK NEAR CONFLUENCE, PA.

A Well of High Pressure Has Been Found In Undeveloped Field.

NEAR FINZEL. GARRETT COUNTY.

The Well Has Been Corked For Two Weeks While Efforts are Being Made to Secure Options on Adjoining Territory.

A gas field, the extent of which is not at present definitely known, has been discovered in the vicinity of Confluence, Somerset county, Pa. A well drilled within two miles of the town has been corked now for several weeks.

Confluence it about 25 miles from Finzel, Garrett county, where a company has been drilling for oil or gas.

Of the discovery, a special from Confluence to the Connellsville Courier says.

"The discoverers of the gas field are Johnstown people. They came here, it is claimed, with the intention of drilling a test well for oil. They were down less than 200 feet when a body of gas was struck that prevented any further drilling for oil. A pressure that equals the best of the wells in the Southern Fayette county field, those on the inside say, exists at the well. It was a month or so after the well was corked that the general public in this vicinity became aware of the fact that a gas field that may rival that of Greene county and some of those in West Virginia has been discovered in Lower Turkeyfoot township.

"The owners of the well have taken options on considerable territory surrounding the present well, but a great acreage is still in the hands of the farmers owning the ground. They have almost without exception refused to lease."

reatly Reduced One-Way Colonist Fares to the West via B. & O.

Commencing September 14th and continuing daily to and including October 14th, 1904, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will place on sale daily, from all stations, ONE-WAY COLONIST TICKETS to principal points in California, Arizona, British Columbia, Colorado, Montana, New Mexico, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington, Wyoming, etc., at greatly reduced rates.

For tickets and full information, call on or address Ticket Agents, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

IT WILL BE COLONEL AGAINST COLONEL.

Col. Kilgour of Montgomery, Announces His Candidacy for Congress.

WILL OPPOSE COL. G. A. PEARRE

The Fiery Orator of "Old Montgomery, Sah," Will Take Up the Forlorn Hope—Convention to Convene September 28th at Rockville

Matters political in this county have been as dull as they are at Esopus, the home of Judge Parker, Democratic candidate for the Presidency. The only evidence of a campaign apparent is the adornment of the lapels of men with campaign buttons or the dangling from their vest pockets of a brass check bearing the names of their choice for the offices of President and Vice President.

A little flurry was caused one day recently when it became known that Col. William Kilgour, of Montgomery county, had announced his candidacy for Congressional honors as against Col. Pearre, the Republican nominee. Up to that time no one seemed to desire to make a contest with our genial Congressman for the position, and as stated by Col. Kilgour his announcement came only after having been urged by his friends to accept the nomination.

The Democratic convention to make the nomination will meet at Rockville, Montgomery county, on the 28th inst. Col. Kilgour has stated that it will be a high-tonedcampaign if he becomes the nominee of the Democracy, because he has the warmest affection for Col. Pearre. It will be a case of colonel against colonel, as it were.

Colonel Pearre won his title as an officer of the Maryland State Militia when he commanded the Fourth Regiment, while Col. Kilgour earned his rank while serving upon the staff of Governor Thomas many years ago. Very few speakers care to cross swords with Col. Pearre and when Col. Kilgour shakes his locks in eloquent rage the audience is bound to sit up and take notice.

In this county Col. Kilgour has made campaigns, stumping it from end to end where he has many warm friends and admirers.

Mr. H. B. Bowers, of Columbus, Ohio, is in Oakland and may be located here for several months during the fall and winter doing special newspaper work.

SENATOR FAIRBANKS TO PASS THROUGH OAKLAND.

Senator Charles Warren Fairbanks, the Republican Vice Presidential candidate, will pass through Oakland on a special train tomorrow afternoon which is scheduled to arrive here at 4.50 o'clock. If possible arrangements will be made for an address of a few minutes' duration to be delivered by Mr. Fairbanks from the rear platform of the train while stopping at the station.

Senator Fairbanks will leave Washington at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning enroute for Parkersburg, West Va., and will make short speeches in the principal cities along the route.

Let all gather at the station tomorrow and give the next Vice President a royal reception.

AN ABLE LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE

Will Have High Place Among Masterpieces of Political Literature

SALIENT POINTS IN THE PAPER.

The President Sharply Contrasts Republican Steadfastness of Purpose With Democratic Uncertainty of Conviction.

President Roosevelt, in his letter of acceptance, sharply contrasts Republican steadfastness of purpose with Democratic uncertainty of conviction and makes the following telling points:

A party that chnges all its convictions before election cannot be trusted to adhere to fixed principles after election.

The letter and spirit of the Constitution have been strictly upheld by the executive, and Democratic criticism is based either on ignorance of misrepresentation.

The "encroachments" by the executive upon the authority of Congress in Pension Order 78 follow precedents established by President Cleveland and President McKinley.

Regarding the gold standard, the majority of Democrats seem to favor a supression of convictions—an attitude of mind it is impossible to trust or respect.

In regard to the problems arising from the relations of capital and labor, past deeds from an answer to criticism. The Republicans made moderate promises and kept them scrupulously; while their opponents recklessly promise many things they could not possibly perform.

The attitude of the Democrats regarding the tariff is one of insincerity, making promises they frankly admit they have no intention of keeping, while the introduction of the trust question tends only to confuse the real points at issue.

The immense increase in the country's trade is evidence that the Republican party has kept its pledge to increase our foreign commerce by every wise and consistent method. The Democrats have not accepted the protective policy, which has been the basis of our commercial growth.

The purchasing yower of the average wage received by the wage-worker has grown faster than the cost of living, and this in spite of the continual shortening of working hours.

There has been an enormous increase in the annual agricultural output and in the value of farm property.

The Army, is at present composed, is as small as it can possibly be and serve its purpose as an effective nucieus for the organization, equipment and supply of a volunteer army in time of need.

The diminution in the amount of the surplus is due to expenditures on account of such highly desirable improvements as rural free delivery, irrigation, pensions to veterans and the purchase of the Panama Canal. There has been rigid conomy in the administration of public business and all of fenders have been held to strict accountability, no mercy being shown to wrongdoers, who have been hunted out and prosecuted with the utmost vigilance.

The Democrats, in their platform, promise independence to the Philippines, but exhibit such irreconcilable differences among themselves that it is impossible to tell just what they would do if they had the chance.

To desert the Philippines to their fats would leave an indelible stain upon our national reputation for courage and for good sense.

The Republican party's achievements in the past afford a prophecy or the future.

ONE TELEPHONE COMPANY SELLS OUT TO ANOTHER

Garrett County Co. Purchases Property of West Virginia and Maryland Co.

PAYS 75 CENTS ON THE DOLLAR

For Stock—Takes Over All Lines Operated by W. Va. and Maryland Corporation—WillConsolidate the Central Offices.

For two years or more opposing telephone companies have been operating in Garrett county, their several lines reaching almost every hamlet and settlement of any consequences within the county and extending into West Virginia and Pennsylvania. The two systems have been built up resulting in service at an extremely low rate at the expense of the stockholders who received nothing whatever in the way of dividends upon their investment during the past year or two, rates being cut from $6 and $12 to $3. This precluded any profit accruing to either company and resulted in loss to both.

Recently a proposition was submitted to the directors of the West Virginia and Maryland company to the officers and directors of the Garrett County company to purchase the lines of the former upon a basis then named. The proposition was held under advisement until Friday last when a counter proposition was made and which was accepted by the officers of the West Virginia company and the sale made. The terms of the sale provide for the entire and immediate surrender of all lines and offices now operated by the West Virginia company to the Garrett County company, the price being about $9,000, the stockholders to receive stock in the Garrett County company upon a basis of 75 cents on the dollar, the stock to be issued by the 20th inst.

At points where censral offices are being operated by both companies these offices will be consolidated as soon as possible.

AN OLD MARK.

Block Taken From Hemlock Tree Which Was Marked in 1830.

One day recently the woodsmen employed on the Bond tract of timber land in this county cut down a hemlock tree which was located on the east slope of Savage mountain about four miles north of the mill at Bond and from it took a block bearing the inscription, "April 9, 1830. H. M. H., J. H." This block Mr. Bond brought to Oakland Monday and left it at this office. The marks are as plain as though they had been placed on it but a few days ago instead of over seventy years ago. A great many persons have examined the piece of wood and are or the opinion that it was an old line mark cut into the tree at the time of the Cunningham survey which was made in the locality in which it was found about the year 1830.

WILLIAM ENGLEHART. A PROMINENT CITIZEN

Of Accident District Died of Injuries Sustained in Runaway.

TOOK PLACE LAST THURSDAY.

The Unfortunate Man Was Engaged in Unhitchlug His Team When the Horses Took Fright and Ran —No Eyewitnesses to Accident.

Mr. William Englehart, residing within sight of the village of Accident, in District No. 5, where he was a suecessful farmer and very prominent in the community as a church worker and business man generally, met with a sad accident last Thursday evening which terminated fatally the same night about eleven o'clock.

Mr. Englehart, as near as can be learned, for there were no eye witnesses to the accident, had been to a neighbor's with his farm wagon drawn by two horses, where he purchased about ten bushels of wheat for fall seeding. Returned home about nine o'clock he drove up the lane leading to his barn and opposite the residence stopped the horses and was in the act of unhitching the traces when the animals took fright at something and started to run. In some manner Mr. Englehart was caught by the wagon and dragged for some distance before he became disengaged and his body by the monentum of the vehicle thrown forcibly to the ground, where he was found a few minutes later by members of his family in an unconscious state. He was taken into the house and a physicion summoned who made an examinotion of the injured man and did all in his power to revive him but without avail, death ensuing two hours later.

Mr. Englehart's injuries consisted of a broken and dislocated hip and the facture of a number of ribs.

He leaves besides a widow and six children, an aged mother. The children, Messrs. John L., postmaster at Accident, Ermine and Alvin, and Mrs. Chas. Speicher, Mrs. J. S. Gnegy of near Oakland, who was only recently married and returned last Wednesday from her bridal trip, and Miss Annie who resides at home.

The funeral of the deceased took place on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock from the English Lutheran church at Accident, the service being conducted by Rev. Reimer, pastor. Mr. Englehart was a member of the official board of the church, a thorough Christian gentleman, a good honest, straightforward citizen, whose counsels will be missed by all who knew him and whose presence in the community in which he resided all his life will be sorely felt. May his ashes rest in peace.

DEATH OF GEORGE MALE.

He Was Youngest of a Trio of Brothers.

George Male, youngest son of Wylie Male, and younger brother of Isaac and Luke Male, who survive him, died at his home near Boiling Springs, east of Deer Park, a few days ago. He was aged 84 years. His surviving brothers Luke and Isaac, are aged respectively 88 and 86 years, and are yet active considering their years. George, unlike his two brothers, had more of the characteristics of the Indians. He resided in a log hut on the mountain side with his wife where he raised a number of children.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS WERE OPENED MONDAY.

Attendance Generally Throughout the County Satisfactory.

PROF. J. F. M'BEE. OF BALTIMORE.

At Head of Oakland School and is Assisted by an Able Corps of Teachers in the Several Departments—Term Will be Long.

The public schools throughout Garrett county opened on Monday of this week and reports received at the office of the Board of School Commissioners in Oakland since that day are extremely encouraging, showing the attendance generally as being entirely satisfactory and up to the average.

Prof. J. Frank McBee, who came to Oakland from Baltimore to take charge of the schools here, is very much pleased with the success attending the opening. In the several departments about two hundred and seventy-five scholars were enrolled the first day, since which time additions to the enrollment have occured daily, bringing the present attendance up to about three hundred.

Prof. McBee's assistants are: first grade, Miss Jennie Johnson; 2nd grade, Miss Zaidee Browning; 3rd grade, Miss Oriey Dunham; 4th grade, Miss Lizzie Leary; 5th grade, Miss Mae Hamill; manual training department, H. A. Loraditch.

Prof. J. S. Gnegy has charge of the Mountain Lake Park school which is well attended.

The term will continue seven and a half months, which will be the longest term in the history of the county.

CIRCUS COMING.

Andrew Downie's big 25c Show will exhibit at Oakland Tuesday September 20. Of this show the Chanango American, Green, N. Y. says:

As had been announced, Andrew Downie's big one ring circus exhibited in Greene Saturday last, and it was pronounced the very best tent show given here in years. Both exhibitions were largely attended, and they gave entire satisfaction. There were no gamblers following the show, robbing the people, and it was free from objectionable features. The company, from the proprietor down to the humblest employee, were gentlemanly, and sought to entertain the public along these lines.

The street parade was all that could be desired, with fine trappings, two bands, a steam calliope, the electric organ, the funny clown band and many new features, all interesting and amusing, producing a display really worth seeing.

The exhibitions included performing horses and ponies, wonderful trained donkies, a large troupe of educated dogs and goats, and many other new and amusing features, constituted scenes which were highly enjoyable and worth much more than the price of admission.

A clean-cut show, respectable and entertaining in all its relations with the public, our citizens hope for a return date next season.

Mr. Charles T. Sweet, the Swanton nurseryman, purchased at public auction last Saturday the West farm located at Swanton for which he paid $850. The land is improved and upon it are several hundred fruit trees.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

OFFUTT'S. FURNITURE.

For every mentionable thing in the Furniture line, including all the latest patterns in

Bedroom Suits,
Chiffoniers,
Wardrobes,
Sideboards,
Hall Racks,
Couches,
Iron Beds,
Cribs,
Extension Tables,
Chairs and Rockers, all kinds,
Mattresses, single and double,
Springs, single and double,
Kitchen Cupboards and Safes,
Stands of all kinds,
Pillows and Bolsters,
Carpets, etc., etc., etc., etc.

Call and examine and be convinced that we are the cheapest place in Western Maryland to buy Furniture.

D. E. OFFUTT & SONS.

WE HAVE THE LATEST

In Styles and Best in Quality to Show you in SHOES

...A FULL LINE OF...

DOROTHY DODDS

Just received; light and heavy weight soles, Blucher and Bal Cut, Patent and Dongola.

WALK-OVERS

Talk for themselves. A look, a try-on, a sale. We only ask the pleasure of showing the line and we know the goods will do the rest.

H. L. DAUGHERTY, ... Oakland, Md.

A NICKEL FOR THE LORD

But Rolled in Luxury Only an Atom in Space.

Yesterday he wore a rose on the lapel of his coat, but when the plate was passed, he gave a nickel to the Lord. He had several bills in his pocket, and sundry change, perhaps a dollar's worth, but he hunted about, and finding this poor little nickel, he laid it on the plate, to aid the church militant in its fight against the world, the flesh and the devil. His silk hat was beneath the seat, and his gloves and cane were beside it and the nickel was on the plate—a whole nickel!

On the previous afternoon he met a friend and together they had some refreshments. The cash register stamped 35 cents on the slip presented him. Peeling off a bill, he handed it to the lad, and gave him a nickel tip when he brought back the change.

A nickel for the Lord, and a nickel for the waiter!

And the man had his shoes polished that same afternoon, and handed out a dime without a murmur. He had a shave, and paid fifteen cents with equal alacrity. He took a box of candies home to his wife, and paid forty cents for them, and the box was tied with a dainty bit of ribbon. Yes, and he also gave a nickel to the Lord!

Who is this Lord? Who is he? Why, the man worships him as Creator of the universe, the one who puts the stars in order and by whose immutable decree the heavens stand. Yes, he does; and he dropped a nickel in to support the church militant!

And what is the church militant? The church militant represents upon earth the triumphant church of the great God.

And the man knew that he was but an atom in space, and he knew that Almighty was without limitations; and knowing this, he put his hand in his pocket, and picked out the nickel, and gave it to the Lord!

And the Lord being "gracious and slow to anger," and "knowing our frame," did not slay the man for the meanness of his offering, but "gives this day his daily bread."

But the nickel was ashamed, if the man was not. The nickel hid beneath a quarter which was given by a poor woman who washes for a living.

LETTER TO E. E. SOLLARS
Oakland, Md.

Dear Sir: There are several ways of cheating in milk. An old-fashioned way is to water it. Nobody waters it now. A better way is to take out the cream—rich milk with the cream taken out is as good as poor milk with its cream all in.

But we needen't go into particulars. You don't rob your milk and your customers.

Paint is easy as milk to cheat with Good paint is as rare as good milk; for human nature is much the same in milkmen and paint men.

You are just and true with your milk; so are we with our paint. Devoe lead-and zinc-is twice as good as mixed paints: There's twice as much butter in it.

Mr. J. T. Ladd, Cheraw, S C, writes: "When Mr. Evans painted his house with Devoe, he figured on how other paints covered and had enough left to paint three large rooms. He was so pleased that he has used Devoe on two other houses."

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & Co

J. M. Davis and Son sells our paint.

NOT A BELIEVER IN CLAY'S FAMOUS ASSERTION.

Colonel Henry Watterson has been at Esopus, and now the announcement is made that the Democratic hopeful Moses will not go to St. Louis and he will make no speeches during the campaign. This comes from Judge Parker's own lips. An hour's heart to heart talk with the stat Democratic editor-politician, Colonel Watterson, was sufficient to convince the sage of Espous that he could not hoodwink American farmers and mechanics, much less the conservative business men of the country, into the belief that he was not a straddler on the financial plank. The Democratic slogan: "Let us get into office and then talk about policies, platforms and laws, but get into office," is an ill omen that means destruction to their own bulwarks, and none realize it more today than do the leaders of the Democracy. When a party is afraid to permit its champion to go upon the hustings and tell the voters where he stands on the important issues there is something radically wrong, and old Colonel Watterson was smart enough to see it and told the Democratic candidate to keep his mouth shut.

Is that the kind of a man you want to place in the Presidential chair, Mr. Voter?

Senator Beveridge says Parker will be defeated by a greater majority than any candidate since the war. The Republicans are willing to stand on their record, but the Democrats make no effort to stand on their own, nor are they willing to declare their policy and permit their banner-bearer to speak his own thought. Parker and his Democratic henchmen should study Henry Clay's famous expression: "I would rather be right than be President."

Oh, Democracy, where is thy sincerity! Oh, hypocrite, where is thy virtue!

WHO WANTS A CHANGE?

The Democratic candidate for Vice-President has voiced the one real and tangible Democratic issue of this campaign. It is a demand for a political change, that the Democratic party shall again have the administration of public affairs because industrial conditions are not satisfactory.

We have heard this Democratic lament over industrial conditions before. It was a loud and long complaint in 1892, at a time when all writers on political economy and all comparisons with previous periods agreed was the most prosperous era in the United States up to that time. Business was good, work was plenty, wages were higher than ever before. But the Democratic party complained of high prices and demanded a change. They won that election. They received from the majority of the voters a warrant to proceed with their change in the economic policy of the Government. The change came immediately after the election. Capital sat down to wait for the change and labor was compelled to wait for its wages and the means of living. There were more than 3,000,000 men thrown out of work and public relief was the most conspicuous institution in every great city in the land. There were soup kitchens and Coxey armies, not made up of hoboes, but of loyal, earnest and humiliated working-men who had been independent and self-respecting, but who had been driven to the direct want by the Democratic threat of change.

The expenditures of the Government were greater than the receipts for every year of the Democratic Administration. Bonds were issued for more than a hundred millions to meet the current expenses of the Government. The interest-bearing debt was increased, at a time when people were least able to have such an increase.

The reign of cheap prices did come with Cleveland's election and the cheapest commodity in the country was labor. Men who had labor to sell could not find a market. The farmer found that he could not sell his crops and horses, cattle, sheep and hogs, for what it cost him to produce them. He had to give a mortgage on his farm to pay his debts. That Democratic change in 1892 cost the American people more money in losses than any change that had ever been made in the economic policy of the Government. And in 1896 there was a universal demand for another change, any kind of a change to get away from the free-trade policy of the Cleveland Administration. The Democrats were even louder in their complaint than were Republicans. The Democratic Convention repudiated Cleveland and his administration, and with wild frenzy followed William J. Bryan in a demand for a free-silver policy that would create more money.

There were no friends anywhere for the men responsible for the change in 1892.

The memories of the people are often short especially in time of prosperity. But we doubt if the American people have forgotten the results of the last political change they ordered, when other Democrats voiced the Democratic demand just as Mr. Davis did in his speech of acceptance.

Notice.

I will operate my cider mill at Kearney every Friday until October 16th. After that date I will operate cider and apple butter mill daily except Saturday as long as apples may be brought.

Thanking the public for past patronage and soliciting a continuance of the same, I remain,

Yours most respectfully,
W. H. MUMAW.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

NOTICE.

Change in Business.

The firm of Jno. W. Haney & Sons having sold its milling business, plant and feed store at Friendsville, Md., to The Friendsville Milling Company, hereby gives notice that all persons knowing themselves indebted to the above named firm must call and make settlements of their accounts on or before Oct. 1st, 1904. All accounts remaining unsettled at that date will be placed in the hands of an officer for collection.

JOHN W. HANEY & SONS,
22-4t Friendsville, Md.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

PLEASANT FIELDS OF HOLY WRIT

SAVE for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ,
I might despair. —Tennyson.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Third Quarter. Lesson XII. Amos v, 4-15, September 18, 1904

Copyright, Davis W. Clark.

Israel Reproved.

It is to be regretted that the words minor, or less, have been used to designated the twelve prophets with whose writings the Old Testament closes. These minifying terms, certainly not gived by inspiration, may perhaps in part account for the too general neglect of this portion of the sacred Scriptures. Reference is, of course not to the contents, but only to the comparative brevity of the books. From a literary, doctrinal, or spiritual standpoint the writings are to be admired. Of Joel, for example, it has been said: "His style is clear and elegant;" of Hosea, "He is pathetic, animated, sublime;" "Micah has the poetic beauty of Isaiah and the vigor of Hosea;" "Nahum is surpassed by none in sublimity of description—his book consist of a single poem which opens with a solemn description of the attributes and operations of Jehovah." Malachi's language is vigorous, pure, and beautiful. His reasoning is concise and cogent.

Amos, to whose book our attention is attracted is the peer of any in the college of prophets. He was of lowly origin. He has been called the "peasant prophet." He lived among the the rough hills of Judea, near the edge of the great desert. He was untrained in the schools. He says of himself:

"No prophet I,
No prophets disciple I."

He calls himself one of the herdsmen of Tekoa. Part of his rustic occupation was to gather the fruit of the sycamore. To find a market for his fruit and flocks he must need go into the kingdom of Israel. There he observed the degeneracy of the people. On his return, and in the solitude of the wilderness, he had opportunity to meditate upon what he had seen. His heart was stirred. He must needs rebuke the people. It was woe to him if he did not. In his own strong language he said, "The Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go prophesy unto My people Israel." It is the surprise of the critic that from such an unlikely source such an elaborate and exalted work should come. Professor Cheyne does not hesitate to compare Amos to Dante, and say that the freshness and appropriateness of his imagery entitles him to as high a place in the history of literature as in that of theistic religion. Carl Frederick Keil points admiringly to the rhetorical power of Amos—his wealth and depth of thought, vivacity and vigor, his bold antithesis, his poetical roll rising into actual rhythm. Some one has picturesquely and appropriately described Amos's prophesy as a thunder-storm, rolling over all the surrounding kingdoms, touchiug Judah and finally settling down upon Israel.

Some one has called this particular period in the history of the kingdoms of Israel its "Indian summer," because of its glory, and also theness of the winter of its desolation. The ancient limits of the kingdom and all its splendor lost under former kings were regained under Jeroboam II. Great wealth was suddenly poured into the coffers of the princes and nobles. It was the wealth of conquest, the spoils of war, not the rewards of peaceful arts of commerce and agriculture. With riches gained in such a manner came the temptation, to oppression, and luxury. The poor was oppressed (viii, 4), the ordinances of religion thought burdensome (viii, 5), the idleness; luxury, and extravagance were general (iii, 15). You will search in vain the whole range of literature for a more graphic description of a self-indulgent people than Amos gives. They enthrone violence immediately, but consider the day of reckoning as indefinitly posponed. They recline upon ivory divans. They stretch themselves upon their couches beside their banquet-tables, laden with every delicacy. They use for an ignoble purpose the instruments which David invented for the worship of God. Ordinary wine-cups do not suffice; they drink from capacious bowls. They use the finest of oil in their boudoirs. How could such sensualisty perceive, much less be grieved, for the moral havoc made their country! "They are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph.

Now the prophet speaks their doom. The banquet before which they lounge shall suddenly be swept away before they can partake of it. Are they first in luxury—they shall retain their rank—and still be first in captivity. The cup of Israel's iniquity is full to its brim, so the Lord says by the lips of his prophet, "I abhor the excellency of Jacob and hate his palaces. Therefore will I deliver up the city with all that are therein."

The Teacher's Lantern.

Amos is thought to have been the first to reduce his prophecies to writing. In the solitude of Tekoa he addressed himself to the task. Here he probably composed the "grand Messianic epilogue." Traces of the original, oral delivery, however, show themselves in spite of the elaborate literary finish. Chief among them are the abrupt, short clauses.

One of Webster's brother once said, jestingly, "They had to send Daniel to school to make him as smart as the rest of us were naturally." Amos did not need even the school of the prophets. Nature and humanity were his university. He was a master of arts in both.

A popular magazine, in a recent issue, had a symposium of "If Lincoln had Gone to School?" It was suggested that he might have been less melancholy if he had the opportunity of recreation and diversion in the field which a liberal education would have opened to him. But the consensus was that there might also have been a dangerous abatement of native force and originality. Amos and Lincoln, however, are the exceptions which prove the rule that school is the best place for the average boy.

Twenty-six hundred years have passed since Amos reduced his sayings to writing. But the principles which underlie his splendid book are philosphic and fundamental. They are universally and perpetually applicable. Among them are these: Oppression and luxury will destroy any people. Righteousness only will exalt.

Amos showed that the overflowing material wealth of Israel was only the phosphorescence on decay. Its doom was a scant sixty years away. They thought that they stood at the very instant of falling.

The accepted idea of a prophet is too mechanical. We have been accustomed to think of one called to this office as so possessed by the Divine Spirit that his personal will and judgment are practically supplanted. He is moved like an automatom. A verse in St. James's Epistle turns a strong light upon the prophetic office and corrects our misapprehension, "Elijah was a man of like nature as we are." So every prophet in and out of his special function is a perfectly normal character. No prophet must be taken out of the category of the normal. St. James affirms that the prophet's feelings and emotions are just such as ours would be under similar circumstances.

Great Big Bargains.

$1150 cash will buy Sunny-Slope Cottage, at Mountain Lake Park; 6 rooms and summer kitchen, furnished throughout, with porch commanding superb view; four lots, 50x120 feet each; out-buildings; good well; strawberry patch; garden; large lawns; flower beds; walks, etc.

$75 will buy Lot No. 241, on corner Hazel Glade Drive and Park front; worth $300.

$50 will buy Lot No. 242, adjoining above; worth $200.

$75 will buy Lot No. 219, on corner D street and Park front; worth $225.

$50 will buy Lot No. 218, adjoining above; worth $200.

$50 will buy Lot No. 220, fronting on D street, and

$50 for Lot No. 221.

No Building Conditions on these Lots.

Apply to
L. A. RUDISILL,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M.D., PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON, OAKLAND, MD.
Office and residence, Alder St., east of post office.

BAUMGARTNER'S BIG BARGAINS!

5c SUGAR BOWLS, CREAM PITCHERS, THREE PAPERS PINS, ½ GAL. TIN BUCKETS, CAKE PLATES, AND LOTS MORE. 5c

Come around and see what 5 and 10c will do.

THE LITTLE MAN.

THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK
of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital	$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits	250,000
Liability of Shareholders	100,000
Additional Security to Depositors	$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

L. E. HANSON,
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland
PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD
CHEAP EXCERSIONS
TO THE
St. Louis World's Fair
EVERY WEDNESDAY IN
AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.
Only $14.50 Round Trip from OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.
CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.
2100 Madison Square, PHILA., PA.
Mention this paper.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE"
TO THE
WORLD'S FAIR,
ST. LOUIS.

Three THROUGH Trains DAILY
Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars,
VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS
ON SALE
AT
VERY LOW RATES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS
From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

ONLY $4.00 TO WASHINGTON AND RETURN,
ONLY $4.50 TO BALTIMORE AND RETURN,
Saturday, September 17, via BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD,
Special train will leave Oakland at 12 night, affording an opportunity to spend all day Sunday among the attractions of either Capital or Monumental City. 2t

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

COAL.

I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of

Bituminous Coal,

mined from my mine west of town.

Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.

Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be prompt filled.

E. Z. TOWER.

MAGIC REMEDY
Cures Diarrhoea, Cramps in the Stomach, Colera Morbus, Dysentary or Flux, in a few minutes. A positive cure. Keep a bottle handy; it will save many a doctor's bill, and possibly your life. At dealers. 25c; by Mail, 30c—in safety mailing case.
KEYSTONE COMP'Y BLAINE W. VA.

NOTICE.

The undersigned hereby gives notice to the general public not to trust or harbor my wife, Mary Ann Bittner, who left my bed and board without just cause or provocation, nor my three minor children, who accompanied her, they being Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, as I will not be responsible for any debts she, the said Mary Ann Bittner, nor they, the said Jonas, Henry and Clara B. Bittner, may contract in my name.

JEREMIAH BITTNER.
Friendsville, Md., August 5th, 1904. 23-3t

INDIGESTION

"I was troubled with stomach trouble. Thedford's Black-Draught did me more good in one week than all the doctor's medicine I took in a year."—MRS. SARAH E. SHIRFIELD, Ellettsville, Ind.

Thedford's Black Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Thedford's Black Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

More sickness is caused by constipation than by any other disease. Thedford's Black-Draught not only relieves constipation but cures diarrhœa and dysentery and keeps the bowels regular.

All druggists sell 25-cent packages.

"Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine to regulate the bowels I have ever used."—MRS. A. M. GRANT, Sneads Ferry, N. C.

CONSTIPATION

Two Points Of View

By GRANT OWEN

Copyright, 1904, by R. B. Shelton

He was big, broad shouldered and good to look upon. His clothes were faultless in cut and texture. His collar and shoes were always indisputably correct. He seemed broad, genial, prosperity incarnate. The smile on his large, rather homely features was particularly winning. He was always smiling. He smiled now as he stood before the girl, even though he was vaguely aware of some impending calamity.

"How could you?" Miss Train was saying in injured protest. "Oh, how could you?"

"How could I what, Amy?" Jarvis asked.

"How could you sleep as you did last evening when I was trembling—simply trembling—under the spell of that voice?"

"Did I?" he said doubtfully. "Oh, come now, Amy, that was impossible."

"Nevertheless you did," she answered. "It was sacrilege."

"Look here," he said, "I'm sure you must be mistaken. I'll admit I might doze intermittently at 'Aida' or 'Traviata' or 'Faust,' but at 'Tannhauser' never. I'm wide awake when Wagner is on the boards."

She glanced up hopefully. Had he really some canons of art, after all? There was undoubted sincerity in his tones. Perhaps this harsh judgment of him which she was aware had been formulating itself in her mind the past year was unjust to him. Perhaps, hidden behind that noncommittal smile, was a reverence for things artistic which his outward appearance successfully masked. But these thoughts were rudely quashed by his next remark.

"Sleep during 'Tannhauser?'" he laughed. "Absurd, Amy! Who on earth could sleep in such a tin shop racket as that?"

The girl winced. "Arthur!" she said in shocked remonstrance.

He moved in his chair uneasily.

"There I go again!" he said. "Forgive me. Really, I didn't mean to shock you, but I'm so brutally practical, you know."

"That's just it," said the girl, "so brutally practical. I wanted to see you

"YOU! DIDN'T YOU SAIL TODAY?"

this afternoon to talk about that very thing. I—I don't know just how to make you understand it, but I'm afraid we won't be at all happy together. We're so very different—so very far apart."

The smile left his face momentarily.

"You don't mean"— he began.

"Yes," she said very low. "I don't think we are suited to each other, Arthur."

It took him some time to grasp the full import of her words. Then the smile came back, but it was a very artificial smile.

"Perhaps you are right," he said, with a huskiness in his big voice. "Perhaps you wouldn't be happy with a commonplace sort of chap like me. And your happiness, Amy, is the first and only thing that is worthy of my thoughts. You might see how a month without me might work anyway. And if it isn't all you expect, why, call me back, dear. I shall always be ready to come."

She watched him down the street until he turned a corner. But before that corner was reached she had already felt a queer tightening at her throat, and the houses across the street were blurred to her vision.

* * * * * * *

Three weeks passed, and she looked at the matter much more calmly. It was best thus. She had been quite right in her judgment, she decided. Then came the disturbing note from him:

My Dear Amy—I have decided to take a little run abroad. Any communication addressed care of the Colonial club, London, will reach me. I sail Thursday morning at 10. As ever, yours,

ARTHUR E. JARVIS.

She was angry with herself for feeling disturbed at the contents of the note. She tried to believe a tear that plashed on to the paper did not alter her attitude toward Jarvis, but she was distinctly dismal all the afternoon.

That evening she went to the opera with young Carlton Morley, who appreciated things artistic and was an enthusiast in Wagnerian scores. Morley was particularly brilliant that evening, but Amy Train beside him was thinking how insignificant and conceited he was. She was unutterably bored by his witty criticism of the box holders, and his enthusiasm over the tenor's work seemed almost effeminate in its effusion.

On the way home in the carriage Morley talked incessantly of orchestration and harmony, but his monologue fell on unheeding ears. Amy was looking pensively through the carriage window. She was thinking that Jarvis sailed tomorrow at 10 and that even if she cabled him it would be over a week after his receipt of it before she would see him. She devoutly wished Morley at the ends of the earth. She wanted to put her head down on the cushion and cry.

Thursday afternoon at 3 she sat in the library vainly trying to interest herself in the pages of a current magazine. The doorbell rang, and she heard a well known step across the hall. She sprang up as Jarvis entered.

With an effort she refrained from rushing to him. She leaned against a chair and said weakly:

"You? Didn't you sail today?"

"Of all the idiots," he announced, "I'm chief and foremost. Just before we sailed I realized it all—that instead of relieving my loneliness those 3,000 miles of sea would intensify it. I fled down the gangplank like a man possessed just as they were hauling it up. I simply had to see you again."

"I've been horribly lonely," she confessed, "but I didn't realize it all until last night. I went to the opera, and I wanted you with me even there."

He smiled happily.

"It wasn't the same without you," she said.

He had taken her in his arms. Now he was looking down at her and laughing softly.

"Perhaps you missed my accompanying snore," he chuckled.

"I did—oh, I did!" she said, pressing one of his big hands to her hot cheek.

The Sign of the Patch.

Mrs. Murray had advertised for a skilled gardener to work by the day in her yard, and somewhat to her embarrassment she was obliged to choose between two applicants who appeared at the same moment. As she stood on her doorstep, questioning first one and then the other, she became aware that her mother-in-law, seated on the porch a short distance from the men and directly behind them, was frantically gesticulating.

The old lady, satisfied at last that she had attracted her daughter-in-law's attention, pointed unmistakably toward the less prepossessing of the two men, and the younger woman, supposing that her relative had some personal knowledge of the applicant, promptly engaged him.

"Has that man ever worked for you, mother?" asked Mrs. Murray when the two women were alone.

"No," replied the old lady. "I never saw or heard of either of 'em until now."

"Then why in the world did you choose the shorter man? The other had a much better face."

"Face!" returned the old lady briskly. "When you pick out a man to work in the garden you want to go by his overalls. If they're patched on the knees, you want him. If the patch is on the seat, you don't."—Youth's Companion.

Heard a Great Deal.

He—Well, did you enjoy the evening?

She—Indeed I did. We went to the opera.

He—Of course you enjoyed it?

She—Immensely.

He—What did you hear?

She—What did I hear? Well, what didn't I hear? I heard that Nell Vanderdyke is engaged to Tom Browning and that Jack Rentsarelow and Edith Singleton have quarreled and are not going to be married after all. Then I heard that Mrs. Tenbroke is going to get a divorce from her husband. Mrs. Thorndyke has been sued by her dressmaker. The Livingstons have a baby. Count Cantukount is not a count at all. The Thompson boys—

He—But—

She—Well, don't interrupt me. I thought you wanted to know what I heard?

He—So I did, but—

She—Well, keep still, then. I—

He—What I meant was what opera did you hear?

She—Oh, well, I'm sure I can't remember, but I saw the name on the programme.

What a First Class Fare Means.

There are some people who imagine that wealth entitles them to privileges not accorded to the general public and exempts them from obligations and rules that others are disposed to obey. An incident which occurred on one of our ocean steamers conveys a wholesome lesson to the purse proud contemners of the rights of the majority. A family of unlimited wealth had secured the best accommodation the steamer afforded.

The gentleman and his wife kept themselves secluded most of the time, but the children were allowed to run wild over the steamer until they became such intolerable nuisances that the captain was spoken to, and he gave the youngsters a severe reprimand. This roused the indignation of the mother, who remarked to the captain that as she paid first class fare she thought she was entitled to first class privileges.

"Madam," said the captain, "first class fare means first class conduct." There was no further protest.—London Tit-Bits.

Capital and Labor Must Unite

By CARDINAL GIBBONS

NO MAN WAS CREATED FOR HIMSELF. THE MOST POWERFUL MAN CANNOT SAY TO THE POOREST MAN, "WE NEED THEE NOT." IF A MAN BE AS POWERFUL AS ALEXANDER AND AS RICH AS CROESUS HE CANNOT SAY TO HIS POOREST HUSBANDMAN, "I NEED THEE NOT."

If you journey to New York you will see one of those ocean leviathans at its dock, idle, quiet, without strength—a hulk. The crew, officers, stokers and scores of other humble workmen come aboard. The captain touches a button and the great thing glides into the water and rushes to the ocean like a monster of the sea, bearing its burden of treasure and men.

THIS IS THE UNION OF LABOR AND CAPITAL, AND WITHOUT THIS UNION THE WORLD MUST BE LIKE THE HULK OF THAT QUIET, SILENT LEVIATHAN. All I have said goes to show that the strongest man is weak without the help of his neighbor.

Whatever be your power you are but a link in the chain of human society. Take the influences of the moon on the tides and its pale, white light that we receive as a blessing. Are not these but portions of the sun's rays? Every one should co-operate with one another and no one should stand aloof.

Cain said, "I am not my brother's keeper." If Christ had put forth that doctrine we would today be groping in darkness and the shadow of death. YOU ARE YOUR BROTHER'S KEEPER, AND HE HAS A CLAIM UPON YOU. You cannot imitate Christ by performing miracles as he did, but you can perform miracles of grace and blessing which rejoice the heart of God, give pleasure to others and thereby bring more pleasure to yourself.

WHEN YOU CAUSE THE FLOWERS OF JOY AND GLADNESS TO GROW IN THE HEARTS OF OTHERS YOU HAVE PERFORMED THE CROWNING MIRACLE OF A GOOD LIFE.

The Peculiar Strength Of the United States

By Rear Admiral GEORGE W. MELVILLE

WE have little to fear from Europe in naval warfare, because NO SINGLE POWER could successfully blockade our coast. Our commercial reserve and ability to produce would sustain this nation for an indefinite period in warfare. On the other hand, a portion of the British navy, for instance, would be required to guarantee a food supply to England.

The naval protection of the British is too small for its merchant marine. The mercantile marine is disappointing as an auxiliary to a navy, because every nation's ships are manned partly by aliens.

England's other chief difficulty would result from an inadequate coal supply.

We are fortified also by a system of quick dispatch. At a critical moment A RAILROAD MAN might render greater service in moving a great army than a commanding general in the field. Fighting in Cuba was no comparison in importance to the problem of the business management of the war with Spain.

OUR NAVY IS NOT AS STRONG AS IT OUGHT TO BE, and we should be progressive. We will expend $400,000,000 for the completion of the isthmian canal and require $300,000,000 for protection—forts, battleships and soldiers.

WE NEED TO BRING THE NAVAL SERVICE IN TOUCH WITH THE PEOPLE. MAKE IT AS EASY FOR THE OFFICER NOT A GRADUATE OF ANNAPOLIS TO OBTAIN A COMMISSION IN THE NAVY AS FOR MEN NOT FROM WEST POINT TO RISE IN THE ARMY.

Technical schools should be made auxiliary to West Point and Annapolis in training men for war.

Women Control the Stage

By WILTON LACKAYE, Actor

WOMEN CONTROL THE STAGE, AND THEATRICAL MANAGERS RECOGNIZE THAT FACT AND CATER TO IT. In other countries the man says, "My dear, I have tickets for such a play on a certain night," and his wife is delighted at the chance to go to the theater, but in this country it is different. The women say to their husbands, "Don't come home tonight without tickets for the theater," and they don't.

If a play is a success, then it must be a success with the women. If women make the stage A DUMPING GROUND FOR DIVORCE COURTS AND THE PRIZE FIGHT, then they are the means of driving artists from the stage, for the stage presents only such plays as are acceptable to women. The men are too busy with commercial interests to give their attention, so the standard of plays rests with the women. It should have A HEALTHFUL, NORMAL TONE, for the stage is a mirror reflecting the emotions and passions of the world.

The theater can't be restricted entirely to plays that are suitable for a fourteen-year-old girl. THE PROBLEM PLAY IS A GREAT THING, BUT IT SHOULD NOT BE SEEN BY ALL. IT IS FOR THOSE WHO HAVE PROBLEMS IN THEIR OWN LIVES.

Why the American Succeeds

By General WILLIAM BOOTH of the Salvation Army

I BELIEVE in the possibility of an American, not only in HIS SCIENTIFIC AND COMMERCIAL ENTERPRISE, BUT IN HIS ABILITY TO SECURE GREATER CONQUESTS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD, his inventiveness, his freedom from shackles and conventionalism and his readiness to adopt new methods where they are likely to realize his aims more efficiently and quickly.

The Mountain State BUSINESS COLLEGE

Gives a training that turns talent into a money making power. Does it quickly, thoroughly, cheaply. Full and complete courses in BOOKKEEPING, PENMANSHIP, TELEGRAPHY, SHORTHAND and TYPEWRITING. $110 pays tuition, board and room-rent for five months. Skilled teachers. Large attendance. Healthful study halls and recitation rooms. Modern and convenient furniture. The M. S. B. C. has a National reputation and its graduates are sought after by business men everywhere. Now is the best time to begin a course. No vacation. Individual instruction. Our new Art Catalogue can be had for the asking. Address, A. G. SINE, President, PARKERSBURG, WEST VA.

The Boy Makes the Mule Go,
And the Mule Makes the Cart Go.
WITH OUR NEW PROCESS
We Make the Bread Go!
Because It Is Best.
A Trial Will Convince You.
OAKLAND MODEL STEAM BAKERY,
HENRY LAUER, Proprietor.

Carey's Magnesia Flexible Cement Roofing for Flat or Steep Surfaces

Is suitable for all classes of buildings as it affords thorough fire protection and is a non-conductor of heat and cold. It will last the lifetime of the roof-boards. It is fire-proof and is rated the same as metal or slate roofs. Call or write for samples and prices.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,
Agents for Garrett County, Oakland, Md.

First National Bank
OF GRANTSVILLE, MD
Now Open for Business.
EQUIPPED WITH A
Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe and Vault.
Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound banking.
Deposits by mail and all correspondence give prompt attention.
We Solicit Your Account.

Paid-up Capital, - - $25,000
Liability of Stockholders, 25,000
Total Liability, - $50,000
PAYS 3 PER CENT.
on time deposits. Interest computed and paid semi-annually.
DIRECTORS.
C. H. JENNINGS, U. M. STANTON, G. C. KELLER, ELI STANTON, W. A. HITCHINS, J. S. HERSHBERGER, FRANK WATTS
OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - President.
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President.
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier.

The Up-to-Date Grocery,
First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.
Exclusively a Grocery Store.
CASH OR PRODUSE—One price to everybody and that the lowest consistent with a complete line of High-Grade Groceries.
Everything New, Clean and First-Class.
Fresh Vegetables on THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS.
Largest Line of CRACKERS in Oakland—Fresh Every Week.
W. H. BARTLETT.

THOS. LITTLE.
This is the season of year to make changes, and I will make a GREAT REDUCTION in the prices of
China and Porcelain Ware.
I have a large stock of this goods and they must go at the remarkably low price of 10c each. Many of these pieces are cheap at 25c. But I have concluded to sell all at the low price of 10c each.
They consist of Decorated, Gold Trimmed Meat Plates, large and small, Bakers, Nappies, Pitchers, Bowls, Cups and Saucers, large and small plates, just the thing for every day use.
Also a Fine Line of Imported China at Less than Cost.
Come Early and get the Choice Pieces.
THOS. LITTLE.

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 15, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

New York.

For Vice-President:

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,

Indiana.

For Congress:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

Allegany County.

HENRY DAVIS is not the first rich man whom the Democrats have nominated for Vice-President in the hope of securing liberal contributions to the campaign fund. In 1880, as running mate to Hancock, "the superb," they named William H. English, of Indiana. Mr. English, who had been prominent in politics when a young man, had for many years been in retirement, addressing himself to money making. He had a talent for that, and had amassed a large fortune. He was a little "near" in a trade, and canny as a Scot. But the years had left him with some political ambition, and the Democratic played upon it in their calculations.

How much Mr. English contributed to the campaign was never stated. But, to judge by the epithets in number and grossness that were bestowed upon him by the disappointed, he must, in all, have refused to contribute about twenty million dollars.

THE UNSATISFIED DEMOCRACY.

It seems absolutely impossible to satisfy our Democratic friends no matter what may be the condition of business, the condition of the treasury, or any of the various other conditions connected with our government and its people. It is only a few years since they were terribly alarmed over the surplus in the United States Treasury. Mr. Cleveland particularly in his famous free trade message of 1897 called attention to the great surplus which was being augmented annually, and in response to that message the Republican party enacted the McKinley law and our excess receipts were considerably cut down in the following two or three years. Again after the close of the Spanish war when the account had been settled and our receipts were beginning to exceed our expenditures by nearly one hundred millions of dollars annually the Republican party twice reduced the taxation resulting in a decrease of revenue of considerably more than one hundred millions of dollars and yet a surplus has continued from year to year, and Uncle Sam's balance has always been on the right side.

But now we are confronted with what seems to be a slight deficit, although it is by no means certain that by the end of the fiscal year we shall not come out with a balance to our credit in the United States Treasury. But at the same time the slight deficit of July and August form a very fruitful theme for the Democratic editors who evidently desire to drop the great issues of the campaign and harp upon the insignificant result of our receipts and expenditures. To begin with the declaration that we had a deficit of over forty millions of dollars during the last fiscal year is absolutely misleading, if not positively false. The expenditure of fifty millions of dollars in payment toward the Panama canal alone accounted for that apparent deficit and was simply an investment much the same as a man in prosperous times would withdraw a few hundred dollars from his bank account in order to put an addition on his house.

MAINE.

Thirty thousand majority is a pretty husky figure. This result in Maine, following on the heels of a similar result in Vermont, must prove a great heartener for the Republicans. It was fought for. Both parties exerted themselves. The Democrats, with no hope of carrying the state, tried to reduce and conceded Republican strength as much as possible, and reinforced their local eloquence with the imported article. The torrential guff of Bourke Cochran was distributed liberally over the commonwealth. It was practically all to no purpose. Nothing could stay the tide, which gathering eight years ago, has been sweeping on ever since, and still is high. The figure of Monday, influenced here and there by local squabbles, will undoubtedly be raised in November, when sentiment will be expressed on national questions alone.

This is the last of the preliminary skirmishes. Oregon in June and Vermont and Maine in these September days, have recorded themselves heavily against the Democrats. The vote of Arkansas was light, although it is scarcely necessary to discuss that, Arkansas does not know, in the proper sense of the term, government by party. She knows but one party. An opposition is permitted to go through the motion of a campaign, but would not under any circumstances be permitted to win at the polls.

We come, then, to the general engagement, which, from now until voting day, will be waged with energy. The Democratic leaders do not try to disguise their difficulties. Leading Democratic newpapers frankly express their discouragement. Chairman Taggart is a pathetic misfit! It is impossible either to explain or excuse such a selection for a post of such importance. Factional rows in New York have not been composed. Factionalism in Indiana is increasing to that extent that it is now proposed to star Mr. Bryan in the state in an effort to keep the silver men in line for Judge Parker's gold telegram. The sky is overcast.

The Democrats, however, do not lack for managers of ability, and they are gathering in New York and taking stock. Mr. Gorman, Mr. McLean, Col. Guffey and others are good fighters and have notches on their sticks. Such a situation as now exists could not be changed as late as October 13th. Can it be changed as late as this? Paradoxical as it may sound, the only hope of the Democracy seems to be in its present hopelessness. If anything can be done the necessity of it is so plainly apparent that every mother's son will buckle down and do his best.

THE FIRST VOTE.

A young man's first vote for President is the most important one the will ever cast and may affect himself as well as the country beneficially or the reverse.

The young American approaches his twenty-first birthday with a feeling of pride tinged with solemnity. He knows that henceforth the constitution and laws invest him with all the rights of citizenship. No matter how well equipped he may have been to exercise these rights before, he cannot do so until he is twenty-one years old. He has waited impatiently for the time when he could vote, and long before it arrives he has begun to consider carefully how he should cast his first ballot. He remembers how his father voted and decides whether he will follow in his father's footsteps or not. He recalls what he knows of history, weighs the platforms and issues carefully, and tries to reach a conscientious conclusion as to how he should vote. This is right. He puts his best thoughts and conscience into his first vote, as he ought to.

No subsequent vote ever receives quite the same careful thought. The first vote decides a young man's party affiliations, and after that he is apt to follow in the path in which he has started. Hence the importance of starting right. Hundreds of thousand of men today are proud because they cast their first vote for Abraham Lincoln, General Grant or William McKinley, and many thousand more will be proud that their first vote was cast for that patriot—statesman, Theodore Roosevelt.

GRANGE MEETING AT MT. LBKE.

Speakers of National Reputation Will be There on Saturday to Make Addresses.

The Grangers of Mountain Lake Park and vicinity will meet at the Park on next Saturday morning at ten o'clock upon which occasion they will be addressed by the Hon, Aaron Jones, Master of the National Grange, a man of more than ordinary ability as a speaker, Mr. Jones is just completing a tour through the New England and Eastern States where he has been accorded audiences numbering more than 5,000 enthusiastic listeners. Ex-Governor Atkinson, of West Virginia, will be present and make an address.

All farmers and agricultural into are urged to be present at this meeting.

Mr. Ager, Master of the Maryland State Grange, will also be present at the meeting and made an address.

SECOND AMPUTATION NECESSARY.

Rev. A. R. Snedegar's Injuries More Serious Than at First Reported.

The serious injuries that befell Rev. A. R. Snedegar, the genial and popular pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Bloomington, on Friday, the 2nd inst., an account of which was published in these columns last Thursday, have resulted more serious than first reports would indicate, necessitating a second amputation of his leg, which was performed at the Keyser Hospital on Monday.

Mr. Snedegar, as stated last week, was shot in the ankle by a charge fired accidentally from the shotgun carried by his companion, Mr. Harry Baird, a popular young man of Bloomington the contents of the barrel entering Mr. Snedegar's leg and shattering the bone very badly. The accident took place at a point some five or six miles from Bloomington and at least a mile from any place of refuge. The injured man was carried on the back of his companion to the house and then it was some hours before a physician could be gotten to him. Dr. Kemp, of Bloomington, was the first physician to arrive and was closely followed by Drs. Wilson and Parsons of Piedmont, who rendered all the aid possible, but the great loss of blood so weakened the wounbed man that but little hope for his recovery was entertained. Conveying him to Bloomington, the yhysicians took him from that point to Keyser where the injured leg was amputated just below the knee, but complications arising a further amputation was made Monday, this time a few inches above the knee. His condition is favorable at this time for recovery much to the gratification of his many friends and neighbors at Bloomington.

HOYES AND VICINITY.

The Hoyes Grange was very much delighted with the splendid success with which they met at the picnic held here Saturday, Sept. 3rd. Large numbers were present from in and near Oakland, Accident, Friendsville and other points, and all seemed to spend a gala day. The speaking on many of the different phases of Grange work was of an unusual character, and the music and recitations were admirably rendered. Rev. Faust of Georgia, and Rev. Conaway of near here, gave execellent addresses in the forenoon, and the afternoon the people were honored by the privilege of listening to Prof. A. W. DeWitt of of Frostburg, and Prof. H. B. McDonnell of the Department of Chemistry of the Maryland Agricultural College. A festival was held in the evening, and although there was no financial object in view, there was a handsome sum realized, which will go toward the further improvement of the society. May the good works of the Grange continue. It is an important factor in the educational and business interests of the country and should receive the support of all. It is of special interest to the farmers. Encourage the farmers. They are the men who feed the world.

Mr. Albert Cuppett is spending a few days here with his parents before taking up work at Grafton for the winter.

Mr. Thomas Bishoff attended the dedication at Cranesville Sunday last.

Miss Bertha DeWitt, who has been visiting relatives near Oakland, where she suffered from an attack of diphtheria, has recovered from her illness and returned home Sunday.

Mr. Lyon and family have moved on the Casteel farm where they will remain as tenants.

Emanuel Custer is on the sick list at present.

Miss Ollie Cuppett has gone to West Liberty, W. Va., where she will remain about ten days visiting her sister, Mrs. J. A. Enlow.

Mr. Inskip Keller, wife and family, who have been visiting relatives here have returned to their home at Romney, W. Va. They were accompanied to Oakland Saturday by J. Arthur DeWitt.

Mr. Alvin Lowdermilk of this place has returned to California, Pa., where he is attending school.

A number of our people attend Quarterly Meeting at Blooming Rose Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Wm. Callis and daughters spent Sunday at Cranesville attending the dedication.

Misses Ophie Freeland and Mabel Sisler of Terra Alta, are visiting relatives at this place.

Misses Elizabeth and Edna Welch have gone to their schools, the former teaches near Bittinger; the latter at Grantsville.

Call For Your Letters.

Mrs. S. H. Boem, Mrs. M. A. Johnson, Mrs. Jos. Niner, Mrs. Sarah Martin, Mrs. Annie Lemback, Miss Marie Baldwin, Miss Mamie Hogue, Miss Mary Kobfleisch, Miss Effie Paugh, Miss Elizabeth Vallamt, Lakin Friend, Jos. Rinhart, Jos. Wakefield, W. B. Westcott, William W. Bailey, W. E. A. Richards.

THE LATE CHARLES BROWN.

A Glowing Tribute Paid His Memory by Editor Lou Smith of Meyersdale.

From the current issue of the Meyersdale (Pa.) Commercial, published by that veteran of the newspaper business in this section, Mr. Lou A. Smith, the following tribute to the memory of the late Charles Brown, of Grantsville, whose tragic death was noted in these columns last week, is taken. We may add that the subject of the sketch was intimately known by Mr. Smith from early youth until his death and that the article below is reproduced in these columns because of the fact that Mr. Brown's many noble traits of character endeared him to all who enjoyed his acquaintance. Mr. Smith's tribute follows:

"Mr. Charles Brown's life passed away at the home of his sister Margaret, Grantsville, Md., Thursday of last week. He was in ill-health, had just pulled through a long term of sickness, was weak, and despondent. All before him was gloom and his mind, perhaps then yielding to that inscrutable disease that robbed us of a Trent, a Hartzell and thousands of others in the highest walks of social and official life, had no power to rally and come out from beneath the cloud enveloping it. Those who knew him loved him. That fact states in brief the manner of man Charles Brown was. His wife, his sons and daughters may well be proud of it.

"Charles Brown was a son of Captain Henry Brown of Grantsville, who lost his life on a saw mill. An elder brother, Sergeant George Brown, fought through the Civil War and returned, only to lose his life, like his father, on a saw mill. Charles Brown is the third tragic death to record The family is an old and honored one in the annals of Allegany and Garrett counties. He married the youngest daughter of the late Joseph J Stutzman, the first superintendent of public schools of Somerset county. His early life was bright with promise. He was well educated, he was energetic, he commanded mens' respect and esteem, he was a bright business man and became a prominent politician, occupying high places of trust (which he never dishonored), his family connections were enviable, but he was poor and remained poor. Thousands and thousands of dollars passed through his hands, but he had never learned in the school of graft, hence his hand remained clean and he remained poor. That to-day, after life's fitful fever has passed, is one of the brightest that illumes his history. He was loyal, a true American and a patriot of the purest type.

"His body was laid to rest in the home church yard, Friday, the pastor of the family, Rev. S. Chas. Stoyer of St. Paul's Reform church, conducting the last sad rites. Peace to his ashes and consolation to the loved ones who are left to mourn."

KENDALL.

Judge U. S. Kendall of Fairmont, W. Va., returned here to look after his business interests after an absence of two months, during which time he was engaged with duties on the bench and Mt. Clemens, Michigan.

James Vansickel and Miss Nannie Turney, two young people of this place, were quietly married at Blooming Rose Sunday by the Rev. D. A. Friend of the M. E. Church. It goes without saying that the young men of Kendall gave them a lively serenade upon their return here Monday evening.

W. F. Holman, machinist for the Yough Manor Lumber Company, is serving as a grand juror at the present term of the Circuit Court. He will be absent for more than a week.

SOFT CORE

Like the running brook, the red blood that flows through the veins has to come from somewhere.

The springs of red blood are found in the soft core of the bones called the marrow and some say red blood also comes from the spleen. Healthy bone marrow and healthy spleen are full of fat.

Scott's Emulsion makes new blood by feeding the bone marrow and the spleen with the richest of all fats, the pure cod liver oil.

For pale school girls and invalids and for all whose blood is thin and pale, Scott's Emulsion is a pleasant and rich blood food. It not only feeds the blood-making organs but gives them strength to do their proper work.

Send for free sample.
SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists,
409-415 Pearl Street, New York
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

Earl Parker, Charles and Millard Steinley, of Pocahontas, Pa., arrived here Monday to work for the Yough Lumber Company.

S. A. Kendall, President of the Yough Manor Lumber Company, was here Monday, but left Tuesday for New York and other eastern cities on an important business mission.

John Lish, Henry Friend, Frank Raybeck and Elmer Teats, all employees of the Yough Manor Lumber Company, left Saturday for a ten days trip to the World's Fair at St. Louis.

Mrs. Minnie Rhodes, of Bidwell, Pa., sister-in-law of Jesse Reed, supervisor of the Manor Land & Oakland Railroad, was a visitor at the Reed home over Sunday. She was accompanied by her three children.

The public schools of Kendall opened Monday with a large enrollment under the supervision of Mr. Thomas Fike who was last year's teacher. He is one of the leading teachers of Garrett county.

John Birch who has a squad of men grading for the railroad which the Yough Manor Lumber Company is building from White Rock to a point into Preston county, West Virginia, where a large tract of timber known as the Guffey tract is about to be developed, is making good progress. This extension is about four miles long and must be built through very rough country.

We are having delightful weather at this writing. This is the time of the year when out door life is congenial.

Our young people who are fond of dancing gave a delightful hop at the Club House on last Wednesday evening. There were twenty couples present and it was the most pleasant event that has ever been given here, all the participants being the best people of this community. Good music greatly added to the occasion. The committee having the dance in charge consisted of Mr. Roy Shank and Misses Maude Whitmore and Mary Ashby.

JUDGE PARKER'S MISTAKE.

Judge Parker in his speech to the Democratic editors called attention to the alleged extravagance of the Republican administration and compared it with the first Cleveland Administration twenty years ago. If the Democratic candidate for President had no later Democratic administration for the purpose of comparison he might be excused in going back to 1884. But there was a most conspicuous Democratic administration dating back only eight years and unlike that first Cleveland Administration which had a Republican Senate as a check on Democratic legislation and appropriation, this later Democratic administration was completely Democratic so as to give free play to the capacity of that party for economical government.

What was the result? In the four years of that administration the net expenses of the Government were less than they are now and also less than they were under the administration of President Harrison, but the revenues were also less even than the expenses. It is not proof of economy when an individual or a government cuts expenditures to keep within the revenues but the Cleveland Administration did not do that; it borrowed more than $250,000,000 to meet current expenses and added that much to the public debt for future generations to pay as the price of Democratic incompetency.

This was the first and only administration since the civil war when such economy was practiced. Under Republican administrations, the expenses of the Government have been kept below the revenue and something laid by each year for the payment of the public debt. If Judge Parker wants to make a comparison of economical administration, let him take the years 1894, 1895 and 1896, under Grover Cleveland, in comparison with the last three years under President Roosevelt. In 1894 the net revenues were $4.40 per capita; for 1895 the net revenues were $4.54 per capita; and the net expenses $5.16 per capita; for 1896, the net revenues were $4.65 per capita and the net expenses $5.01 per capita. That was under complete Democratic administration.

Under President Roosevelt in 1901 the net expenses $6.56 per capita. In 1902, the net revenues were $7.11 and the net expenses $5.96; in 1903 the net revenues were $6.93 and the net expenses $6.26. For each year of the Democratic administration the people are now paying interest on a public debt created to meet ordinary expenses at that time, and the Roosevelt Administration has been saving the money to pay that debt.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

Fell From Building.

Bert Hinebaugh, who was employed in the erection of the Hart building on Alder street, fell from the second floor of the structure to the cellar beneath Tuesday morning and sustained painful though not serious injuries. His ankle was sprained and his right shoulder considerably bruised.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

Great Bargains at Sincell's.

We Want You to See Them.

"Vast" begins to describe them—but doesn't even suggest the variety—the quality—value so conspicuously present in them all.

You must simply see them for yourself to realize the size and magnificence of our shirt waists which we are offering at 98 cents. They are winners and we have about ten dozens, all sizes, from 32 to 44. We invite you to call and look at them whether you care to buy or not.

Our Clothing Department,

In the careful choice of our selection lies much of its value to the buyer.

Constant touch with the centers of manufactnre and a carefully gleamed knowledge of what Fashion demands—these little things make our stocks strong.

The choicest line we have ever had to offer in Clothing we have now on display at prices astonishingly low. The prices in the ready-mades run from $4.50 to $18.00; made-to-measure $15 to $50

Come and See for Yourself.

The very newest styles in

Women's Tailor-ade Suits

One-Third Off.

We must close up our stock and offer

Great Bargains

To the Public.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

The Garrett National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, - $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, - 15,000.00

The Easy Way.

Is standing tedious? There is one separator you can turn comfortably while sitting—one that has a supply can less than waist high.

THE TUBULAR SEPARATOR

IS THE ONLY ONE! New inventions make it so—make it the most practical—most effective—best! All other separators are dangerous and expensive in comparison. I'm selling lots of them—and giving away catalogs about them. Read the "Separator."

J. E GNAGEY, Accident, Md.

A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

HAS NO SUBSTITUTE

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Accidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Mr. N. U. Bond, of Bond, was in the city Monday evening on business.

Mr. William W. Sweet, postmaster and merchant at Swanton, was here on business Saturday.

Attorney James W. Thomas, of Cumberland, was a business visitor to Oakland last Friday morning.

Miss Wona Robinson left Oakland yesterday for Philippi, Beverly and other points in West Virginia.

Mr. R. L. Friese, of Sang Run, was here on business Tuesday and made this office a brief social visit.

Miss Cecelia Gesner, of Annapolis, is in Oakland visiting Mr. and Mrs. Edwin L. Mitchell at their home on Procter street.

Miss Mary Sloan, of Lonaconing, who visited Mr. and Mrs. Sliger in Oakland for a few weeks, returned to her home this morning.

Mr. John O. Michael will leave Oakland tomorrow for Baltimore and from thence go to York, Pa., where he will engage in business.

Mr. Benjamin Bimmire, of Baltimore, who spent a considerable portion of the summer here with his wife, returned to Baltimore last Friday.

Mrs. W. M. Coddington, of Oakland, who spent several weeks with friends and relatives at Keyser and Elkins, W. Va., has returned to her home here.

Mrs. James L. Pollock, of Philadelphia, who spent the summer here with her parents Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Bartlett, returned to her home in the above city this morning.

Mr. W. O. Ison, son of Mrs. Benj. Ison, of Oakland, who went to Europe early in August, arrived in New York on the return journey Monday on the steamer Ryndam.

Mrs. M. L. Scott and Miss May Vickers, of the Baltimore store, are in Philadelphia where they are purchasing goods for fall and winter. A notice of the opening will be given when the goods arrive.

Ernest Ashby, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Ashby, of Oakland, who was recently awarded a free scholarship in Western Maryland College by the Board of School Commissioners, left for Westminister Monday morning.

During the week this office was honored by visits from Judge Elias Merrill, Michael Daily, Wm. H. H. Friend, D. S. Custer, Elijah Friend, A. C. George, C. T. Sweet, W. W. Savage, Chas. H. Sweitzer and others.

Miss Annie Spedden will leave for Baltimore Friday morning, where she will spend a few days before returning to Culpepper, Va.

Mrs. Charles F. White, of Hutton, daughter of Postmaster John M. Jarboe, of Oakland, has been appointed postmaster at Hutton to succeed Miss Tina S. Connell, who was recently married and removed from that point to Century, West Va.

Mr. Fred. A. Thayer as attorney, advertises in this issue of The Republican a valuable piece of real estate at mortgagee's sale, which will take place in front of the court house door in Oakland on Saturday, October 8th, at two o'clock p. m.

Judge Daniel Wilson and brother, Mr. James H. Wilson, of near Blaine, were in Oakland Tuesday, the former to be present at the Orphans' Court session, and the latter on business. This office acknowledges a pleasant and paying visit from both gentlemen while they were in the city.

Mr. William Englehart, Cumberland, son of John Englehart, Esq., of Guseman, W. Va., was in Oakland last Friday afternoon on his way to Accident to attend the funeral of his uncle, the late William Englehart, an account of whose tragic death is published in this paper today.

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON says: "The Republican fences are all right. They are staked and ridered and we are ready to put strings of barbed wire on top to keep the Democrats out, but they will not climb much this year. But we have got the barbed wire and the fellows to put it on if necessary."

Mr. P. T. Garthright, proprietor of the Hustling Store Company, Mountain Lake Park, advertises in this issue of The Republican an auction of seasonable goods, furniture, hardware, stoves, etc., which will take place at the store opposite the Mountain Lake Park railroad station on Saturday, Sept. 24th.

Rev. W. H. Faust, of Deer Park, will preach at that place Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. His subject will be: "The Gates of Hades Shall Not Prevail Against It." The same evening at 7.30 o'clock he will preach at Loch Lynn Heights upon the subject: "The Old Man and the New Man." All are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. L. A. Rudisill, the Mountain Lake Park real estate man, has recently sold some very valuable pieces of real estate at the Park, among them being the Frysinger house and lot, for which a good price was obtained. The owner of the property, Rev. W. M. Frysinger, will leave shortly for California where he will reside in the future.

Mrs. Laura Trippett, of Baltimore, who has been at Kingwood during the summer months, came down to Oakland Saturday and remained here until Monday morning visiting friends. Mrs. Trippett has been connected with the Woman's College in Baltimore for the past ten years where she holds a very responsible position, leaving here Monday for that city where she will assume her duties at once preparatory to the opening of the college for the fall and winter term.

Lutheran Church Services.

Services at St. Mark's Lutheran ch. as follows: Prayer service every Wednesday at 7:30 p. m.; Sabbath School, 9:30 a. m.; Catechize, Saturday 2 p. m.; Christian Endeavor, Sunday, 7:00 p. m.; Preaching services next Sabbath at 7:30 p. m.; Harvest Home services at 10:30 a. m.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE CIRCUIT COURT.

Convened Monday With Judges Boyd and Henderson on the Bench.

S. T. JONES FOREMAN GRAND JURY.

A Great Many Cases Postponed, Some Settled and Quite a Number Disposed off By Trial—Grand Jury Busy.

The regular September Term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county convened in Oakland Monday with Judge A. Hunter Boyd and Associate Judge Robert R. Henderson on the bench. Judge Keedy is at his home in Hagerstown but will arrive here later during the session of the court.

Mr. Scott T. Jones, of Oakland, was appointed foreman of the grand jury. His experience in this capacity at previous terms of court eminently fit him for this important position and the court's action in again placing him at the head of the grand inquest was favorably commented upon by many. Mr. Jones' associates in the grand jury room are Messrs. Benj. F. Shaffer, Henry C. Butler, James B. Shockey, Lewis C. Preyost, James A. Baldwin, Upton Cuppett, Walter W. Riley, Alex. C. George, Wallace F. Bowman, W. McCullouh Brown, Arthur Townshend, George W. Moon, William A. DeWitt, Elias Merrill, Chas. H. Loar, John H. Cuppett, Thomas J. Johnson, David S. Custer, W. W. Schlossnagle, James W. Leathers, Alex. C. Mason and G. Carroll Pattison.

In charging the grand jury as to its duties Judge Boyd laid special stress upon the condition of the county buildings, especially the jail in which are now confined twenty prisoners which was erected for the accommodation of but eight. He also called attention to the inadequacy of the court house for present needs and the continual danger of the records being lost by fire or otherwise on account of the insecure vaults provided for that purpose.

At the call of the several dockets entries were made in many cases. Out of about sixty cases for trial more than thirty were continued, some were settled upon terms filed without going into trial, while others were tried before the court and in one instance a jury was empaneled.

APPEALS.

1. John Felty, Jr., vs. Mt. Lake Light and Water Co.; tried before court; judgment for water company for $13.67. Peddicord, Heindel—Hamill and Semmes.

2. John Lucas vs. Edward Nicklow; settled. Hamill—Renninger.

3. F. C. Browning vs. Community of Mt. Lake Park; dismissed. Peddicord—Thayer.

4. Elmira Barnard vs. Archibald Barnard; settled. Sincell—Hamil.

5. R. J. Sensor vs. Octavius Smith; affirmed. Hamill—Peddicord, Heindel.

6. John Shartzer vs. Benj. H. Sincell; verdict by the court for Sincell. Semmes—Gonder, Heindel.

7. Same vs. same; dismissed.

8. E. E. Clark vs. H. P. Murphy; judgment affirmed for $36.98. Heindel—Hamill.

9. Peter Nathan vs. J. S. Broadwater; continued. Peddicord-Hamill.

10. Hiram Frazee vs. J. S. Harrison; judgment reversed. Peddicord.

11. Felty & Co. vs. Baltimore Bargain House; dismissed. Peddicord—Hamill.

12. Baltimore Bargain House vs. Felty & Co.; settled. Hamill—Peddicord.

13. Cyrus Stark vs. A. C. Whetzell; continued. Hamill—Sincell, Heindel.

14. County Commissioners vs. Joseph Cogley; tried before court and held sub curia. Renninger—Thayer.

15. B. & O. R. R. Co. vs. G. H. Pritchard; continued. Hamill—Renninger.

16. Luther McRobie vs. C. S. May; tried before court; judgment for $17.19. Hamill, Jr.—Renninger.

17. Patrick S. Fazenbaker vs Peter Wilt; trial set for today. Sincell—Renninger.

18. Andrew Shartzer vs. Fred A. Thayer; jury trial; verdict for Thayer for $31. Hamill—Peddicord.

19. J. L. Burley vs. L. E. Hansen; dismissed. Thayer—Peddicord.

20. Same vs. same; same entries; same counsel.

21. E. H. Smouse vs. Minnie Whetsell; continued. Renninger—Sincell, Heindel.

22. C. R. Savedge vs. L. A. Rudisill, secretary; tried before court; sub curia. Peddicord—Thayer.

23. Austin Shaw vs. John B. Harmon; settled. Hamill—Renninger.

24. Charles J. Fazenbaker vs. Truman Mosser; dismissed. Hamill—Renninger.

25. L. T. Yoder vs. Community of Mt. Lake Park; continued. Peddicord—Thayer.

36. Same vs. same; same entries.

TRIALS.

2. Milwaukee Harvester Co. vs. Elijah Livengood; judgment of condemnation. Hamill.

3. Same vs. same; judgment for $106 35.

6. Joseph B. Adams et al. vs. Lydia Burkholder; dismissed. Sincell—Hamill.

7. Same vs. same.

8. Lorenzo T. Yoder et al. vs. Elmira Hinebaugh; continued. Hamill—Sincell.

11. E. Glenn Perine et al. vs. Sarah Ashby et al.; continued. Howard, Mitchell—Sincell.

12. Sarah Kerfoot vs. Monroe Coal Mining Co. Continued. Peddicord.

13. E. Glenn Perine et al. vs. John R. Browning; placed at end of docket. Howard, Mitchell—Hamill, Semmes.

16. Isaac I. Thompson et al. vs. Jos. T. O'Haver; continued. Sincell—Renninger & Offutt.

18. Wm. H. Smouse vs. B. & O. R. R. Co; continued. Peddicord-Hamill.

20. First National Bank, Friendsville, Md., vs. U. G. Palmer; stet. Hamill—Peddicord, Thayer.

21. Same vs. same.

22. Bank of Kingwood vs. Commonwealth Tanning Co.; stet. Hamill—Sincell.

23. Same vs. same.

28. John T. Sincell vs. H. C. Sincell, garnishee; stet. Sincell—Peddicord, Semmes.

29. Henry W. McComas vs. G. S. Hamill, garnishee; judgment for defendant. Peddicord—Renninger.

30. Citizens Bank of Lewiston, Pa., vs. Commonwealth Tanning Co.; stet. Hamill—Sincell.

32. D. E. Offutt vs. C. Holliday & Co.; continued. Hamill.

33. Same vs. same.

34. Henry M. Speicher vs. C. Holliday & Co.; continued. Hamill.

35. Same vs. same.

36. John L. Englehart vs. C. Holliday & Co.; continued.

37. Same vs. same.

38. Alfred Wass vs. John Libkoes et al.; continued. Peddicord, Thayer—Hamill.

44. Jos. W. King et al. vs. Isaac W. Thompson; judgment. Peddicord, Hamill—Thayer.

45. Same vs. same; judgment for $532.14.

46. Same vs. same; judgment for $130.51.

47. Baltimore Bargain House vs. Hammond & Martin; settled. Hamill—Renninger.

48. Noah Newman vs. Mrs. Samuel Glotfelty et al; continued. Sincell, Heindel—Hamill.

49. First National Bank, Oakland, vs. George Geissman; judgment on rule for $365.75. Thayer.

50. Same vs. M. M. Ashby; judgment on rule for $365.75. Thayer.

51. Same vs. John Shartzer et al.; judgment on rule for $365.75. Thayer.

52. Jacob S. Meyers vs. Ephraim Thomas; settled. Thayer—Hamill.

54. Clark DeBerry vs. Andrew Shartzer; continued. Hamill, Hamill, Jr.—Williams.

56. C. S. Fuller vs. Henry Bernard; continued. Gonder.

59. Beacons Falls Rubber & Shoe Co. vs. John Felty, Jr.; settled. Hamill—Peddicord.

60. Wm. Casteel et al. vs. Helen S. Hossen et al.; continued. Mitchell—Sincell, Heindell.

BANK STATEMENTS.

Dull Season Finds Garrett County Financial Institution in Good Shape.

The condition of the various National banks of Garrett county at the close of business September 6th, upon which day the Comptroller of the Currency called for statements, is highly gratifying to the banks as well as the people of the county generally, as the exposition of the finances of these institutions reflect the prosperity of the people of the communities in which they are located as nothing else can.

In our advertising columns today will be found statements of three of the four banks doing business in Garrett county, they being the Garrett National and First National of Oakland, and the First National of Friendsville.

The Garrett National's volume of business upon the date of the statement approximated half a million of dollars. Its deposits amounted to $370,000, while its surplus and profits equalled nearly $20,000. Its growth is in keeping with the prosperity of the community.

The First National of Oakland, also shows and increase in volume of of business, its resources approaching four hundred thousand dollars. Its surplus amounts to $23,000. The deposits are $201,000. Considering the length of time the First National has been in business its growth is remarkable and is only another instance showing the prosperity of Oakland and this section generally.

The First National of Friendsville, at the head of which are many of the progressive business men of its home town, is the youngest institution of finance in the county. Its resources amount to $167,000 while its surplus is $7,000, a very appreciable increase over its former statement.

All these banks are controlled by conservative business men who have been successful in their chosen professions and avocations. They are reliable, safe and strong.

Dixon & Kelso

Have just opened up an immense stock of

FALL & WINTER GOODS

To which we invite a careful inspection by prospective buyers. We call especial attention to our stock of . . . .

Outings, Flannels, Blankets, Clothing, Shoes, &c.

Will begin handling POTATOES on a large scale about October 1st. Will exchange anything in our stock for them at the market price at the time of delivery.

All are invited to come to our store when looking for your FALL and WINTER supply.

Yours, respectfully,

DIXON & KELSO.

BUILDING, PAVING, PRESSED FACE. BRICKS VITRIFIED FOR FOUNDATIONS VITRIFIED FOR SEWERS, STREET PAVING BLOCKS.

Best Quality for Building, Casing, Sidewalks and Streets.
Beautiful Shades, Red, Light Granate and Mixed Colors.

Capacity 80,000 Daily. Prompt Shipments.

QUEEN CITY BRICK & TILE COMPANY
—AND—
CUMBERLAND GRANATE BRICK COMPANY
Cumberland, Maryland.

HOTEL PROPERTY BOUGHT.

C. A. Bender Becomes Purchaser of Livengood Hotel at Grantsville.

Mr. Charles A. Bender, an energetic young man of Grantsville, who is serving as a grand juror at this term of the Circuit Court, purchased on Saturday from Mr. C. M. Livengood at Grantsville, the Livengood Hotel, which has been operated as a hotel for many years by its former owner. The property was only recently rebuilt and is today one of the most valuable properties of its kind in the county, enjoying a lucrative and growing patronage. Possession will not be given Mr. Bender until early in the spring. The consideration was nearly $10,000.

Mr. Livengood, who is one among the many good citizens of Grantsville, will continue to reside there or nearby, he being the owner of a farm adjoining the town.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Will Give Smoker and Supper Tomorrow Evening

The smoker and supper to be given at the Oakland Hotel tomorrow evening by Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias for which a hundred or more invitations have been issued, promises to be well attended as nearly every invitation has been acknowledged and accepted.

The supper will take place immediately after the adjournment of the session of the lodge and will be given in honor of the visit to the assemblage of some of the officers of the Grand Lodge of Maryland.

The menu for Friday will be upon an elaborate scale and all who attend may be assured of a well spent evening.

Mr. Isaac Male, of Round Glade vicinity, was in Oakland Tuesday soliciting money with which to erect a dwelling for himself and family to replace the one recently burned. Besides losing his house by the flames nearly all his furniture, clothing and bedding was consumed. Mr. Male is upwards of eighty five years of age and the help extended him by the people of Oakland is true charity. He collected quite a snug sum of money from the citizens.

Governor Edwin Warfield and the members of the Maryland delegation to the number of fifty, invited to participate in the Maryland Day exercises at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition last Monday passed through Oakland Sunday evening, en route to St. Louis, on board a special train composed of a buffet car, a diner, three Pullman sleepers and a private car for His Excellency and family.

Subscribe for The Republican

New Goods, Just Opened.

The Latest Things Out in

Pongees, Draperies, Satteens, (these are beauties). Seersuckers, Granite Cloths, Flannelettes, Sacking, Chambrays, etc.

We have them.
You want them,
Come get them.

The Latest Things Out In

Hats, Caps and Shoes,

and Men's and Boys

CLOTHING.

Also fine line Clothing Samples,

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

Proposals for Building Sidewalks

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, for the erection of a sidewalk fronting the opera house block in Oakland, beginning at the corner of Green and Second streets and ending at the north property line of H. Lauer, and extending from the property line along said block to the wood curbing.

Proposals will also be received for the erection of a walk from Second street to Railroad street walk.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of N. S. Heindel, First National Bank building, Oakland, Md.

Proposals must be on file with the clerk of said Mayor and Council not later than six o'clock, September 19th, 1904, and endorsed on the back, "Proposal for erecting sidewalks."

By order of the Mayor and Council of Oakland.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,

Plumbing,
Gas Fitting,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.

Center Street,
Keyser, W. Va.

PHONE 62.

Maryland at the Fair.

Pen Picture of the Terrapin State's Exhibit at St. Louis

The Maryland Agricultural Exhibit at the World's Fair occupies block 45 on the southeast side of the Agricultural Palace, and in dimensions is 90x20 feet.

Mr. Wm. L. Amoss, a farmer at Benson, Harford county, and director of the Farmer's Institutes, a department of the Maryland Agricultural College, was through the courtesy of its trustees, placed in charge to organize and collect products for exhibition. Every assistance possible was given by the President, director and faculty of both College and Experiment Station, where the products were received and stored, Prof. W. T. L. Talliaferro acting as receiving agent, ably assisted by Professors Norton, Austin, Simons, Walls and Doane. In the work of installation the superintendent in charge was ably assisted by Messrs. Lew A. Cohill of Washington county, John A. Scott of Baltimore county and Stewart B. Shaw of Somerset county.

The exhibit in design is unique and attracts more than usual attention, it being fashioned so that the characteristics of the State may at a glance be apparent to the stranger. Approaching the exhibit from the center of the aisle and west side, high above all banners, in gold letters 17 inches in length, is seen "Maryland," 20 feet long. From the effect of the sky-blue background it seems to be suspended in midair over a map 7x12 feet of the State, held in place as it were, on a bank of dark-blue clouds. No one can fail to find the block if he keep but one eye open when passing through the building. The exhibit, like the State, is made up in sections—Western or Northern, Central, Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland. By the arrrangement it is easy to explain why Maryland has within her boundary lines every condition of land and climate found in the temperate zone. All products are exhibited with the names and addresses of the growers attached, tied by ribbons of orange and black, the State colors. The weathered oak cases with plate-glass front which were made by J. C. Knipp & Sons of Baltimore, are as good, if not betrer than any in the building. The plate-glass by its brilliancy and perfect transparency, gives a lustre to the products behind it, a freshness as in the natural, and reproduces that which is lost in the presence of artificial curing or preserving. To the visitor's left, at the north end, is a case six feet long and one foot deep, filled with specimens of forage. Timothy is shown from the farm of the Consolidated Coal Co., near Frostburg, Allegany county, in two lots—the first and second crops from the same field. The second crop is quite four feet long, and shows the unsuspected fertility of the Allegany Mountain pockets. Another specimen, exhibited by J. T. Hoopes, Harford county, is over five feet in length, which, it is explained grows on land which often produces 100 bushels of corn per acre. In the same case are three varieties of clover, alfalfa, buckwheat and a sheaf of spring wheat from H. Weber & Sons, Garrett county, which shows a growth of four and one-half feet of straw. A case of forage at the opposite or south end contains forage crops of the Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland—winter wheat, barley, oats, cow peas, soja beans and blade fodder. Forage, it is explained, cannot be preserved with the same ease in the East as in the Western States, where the harvest season is so dry that grain can be left in the fields for months after cutting, while in Maryland crops must be at once stacked or stored in barns; that the frequent showers make truck and fruit growing more profitable than grain; that the nearby markets offer opportunities for sale of these which their Western brothers do not enjoy. The two cases for exhibiting 10 samples of soils and subsoils, collected by Dr. J. A. Bonsteel of United States Division of Soils for the Maryland exhibit, are located one at each end of the space. The cases are so arranged that the soils can be inspected both in jars and in bins. In the front of each case in black letters is the fact, "MARYLAND HAS A GREATER VARIETY OF SOILS THAN ANY STATE IN THE UNION." With each sample is the name, a description, where obtained, characteristics, the list of crops for which it is best adapted.

A feature intended to illustrate the varied conditions of the State, quite foreign to each other, is the two barn scenes, located at each end and on the wall side of the block. That on the north end is labeled "Western Maryland Barn." The front is built of barn boards painted red. One story only is visible; the second and roof is hidden by a hickory tree, with foliage, true to nature. The trunk, eight inches in diameter, stands at the north corner, while its long limbs, with its many branches, hide completely the second story and roof. A hop vine winds itself around the trunk and spreads its foliage and flowers across the front. A coonskin is nailed to the side. The front has the appearance of an open barn floor, and is protected from dust and the hands of the multitude by plate glass. On the floor to the right is a pile of yellow dent corn, each ear of mammoth proportions. Some has been selected for seed and lays in a pile by the bucket, with a bundle of alfalfa on it, where the farmer sat when shelling by hand into the partly-filled half-bushel basket, while in a second pile are the cobs and in a third the nubbed corn. Some sacks have already been filled. At the south end of the same barn is a pile of wheat, quite 20 bushels; the mow to the left is filled with wheat in the sheaf, while that to the right is filled with loose timothy hay; overhead is corn fodder, while on the timbers hang corn knives and the flale. The inquisitive visitor is told that straw has a value to the Eastern farmer second only to the grain, that hay brings a better price loose than when baled, that the coon and fox take the place of the deer and jack rabbit of the plains.

The barn at the south end is labeled "Southern Maryland Barn." Here the grapevine and muskrat skin take the place of hickory tree and coon. The dark-green foliage, with bunches of half-ripe grapes, have been frequently taken for the "real" thing. The front is not painted whitewashed, but stained a weathered gray. Oyster tongs lean against the barn. The front is also protected with plate glass. The loft to the right is filled with tobacco hanging from sticks, while on the floor is a stripping scene, as when the farmer and his help drop all and go to dinner. To the extreme left is a "burden" of seasoning tobacco, while opposite is a full hogshead ready for the French market. Hanging from pegs and nails are corn-husk collars (the only exhibit of the kind in the building), baskets, mats and implements commonly seen in a tobacco barn, and a basket of cotton sent from St. Mary's county. A spinning wheel which came from Calvert county hangs from a beam above, and is said to be over 200 years old. It is a surprise to many that cotton was once grown for market in Southern Maryland and lower Eastern Shore. The stranger is told that man does not work for a living in Southern Maryland unless it is work to gather what the waters of the Chesapeake Bay abundantly supply, without care or forethought on the part of the people whose farms lay along the shores of its many inlets. In the barn hangs the decoys, gill net, crab net, oyster hammer and knives, fishing rod and tackle. The north end of the barn is filled with blade fodder, which is a new product to the Western farmer, and is the only exhibit of the kind in the Agricultural Palace.

The corn exhibit, consisting of samples of 10 ears each, collected from nearly every county, is displayed in a handsome case 4 x 12 feet, protected by plate glass. Each sample is tied with orange and black ribbons, with the names and addresses of the growers attached. On the top shelves in jars is a comparative analysis of Maryland corn, high in protein, presented by H. J. Patterson, of the Maryland Experiment Station. Here, too, is displayed a diploma awarded by the Paris Exposition in 1889 to "Sir" J. P. Silver of Harford county, for corn exhibited by him. The certificate is immediately below a sample of the same variety exhibited by his son, Mr. J. P. Silver. This case of Maryland corn often causes remarks and expressions of surprise that Maryland has land that will grow such. A second corn exhibit is made in a special exhibit in the middle aisle of this mammoth building. Here are displayed the four staples—tobacco, sugar, cotton and corn. Through President Silvester and Director Patterson of the Maryland College and Experiment Station, a special corn exhibit is made, the design being built of staff wood, with three mammoth ears of corn weighing each 100 pounds as decoration in part. Around this on tables will be seen a duplicate exhibit. It was thought by making this display before the Western corn-growers they would be convinced of the evident fertility of Maryland land.

The tobacco exhibit is displayed in a case of like construction and proportions to that occupied by the corn and is located at the opposite end and in front of the "Southern Maryland Barn." It makes an attractive showing of the planters' tobacco from both Southern Maryland and Frederick county. The broad membrane like leaves readily catch the eye of the visitors, and they are frequently heard to read aloud the sign, "Maryland Tobacco." A special tobacco exhibit is also made in the middle aisle on a space 20 feet square. In the centre stands a giant Indian on a pedestal over seven feet high with a long-stemmed pipe in his mout hand a horn of plenty on his left arm, from which the manufactured products of the weed falls to the ground. The whole is apparently built of tobacco. To his right and left are cases 12 feet long, in which are displayed on the one side the several types of tobacco sold on the Baltimore market, and which were furnished by the Tobacco Leaf Association, while the other case contains a duplicate exhibit of the Southern Maryland planters. On the front of the pedestal in tobacco leaves is the word "Maryland"; also a placard telling where to find the Maryland Building and the several exhibits of the State.

The middle section of the space displays products of Central Maryland. Against the wall, and exactly in the centre, is the Dairy (a springhouse, not common in the West), built of staff in imitation of round stones. Under the eaves is a peewit's nest, a hornet's nest, and in the corner, beneath the overshoot, is a spring of crystal water, which reflects the visitor's smiles as if it were a mirror. A gourd hangs by, while a churn, butter-worker and print are as we find them on the average farm. Large milk-cans, coolers, strainers, etc., indicate that the Maryland dairyman is in the milk and cream business; leaving butter and cheese making to his less fortunate Western brothers. The dairy exhibit is supplemented by a display of bottles (full of milk) from S. N. Shoemaker's Walker-Gordon Dairy and the New Hygeia dairy. The visitor is amazed to learn that it is expected during the Exposition to have an exhibit of fresh milk from Mr. Shoemaker's dairy, 1000 miles away, as a clinching argument that Maryland produces good milk and cream such as needs no preservative or other than scrupulous cleanliness.

The canned-goods industry is in evidence in this section to the right and left of the "Springhouse." Placed against the wall, which has been covered with black cloth, are three pyramids of cans of peas, corn and tomatoes. Over each respective group is placed the the fact that from the United States census of 1900 that Maryland packed one-fourth of the peas, one-eight of the corn, one-third of the tomatoes packed in the United States. Between each pyramid is a shield, covered with orange cloth, cans of small fruits arranged and attached to the face of each, while over and above all, to the right and to the left, are two globes, five feet in diameter, on pedestals of cans, with the outline of the two hemispheres in evidence. Canned goods with gold labels encircle each, and illustrate the fact that "MARYLAND CANNED GOODS ARE AROUND THE WORLD." To the front and at the end of each wing stands a pyramid of cans on pedestals, one of crabs and the other of oysters! The base is covered with its respective shell.

In front of these, and close to the nickle-plated two-inch iron pipe rail which encloses the whole exhibit, are two extension tables, with a barrel and a half of big-stemmed sweet potatoes piled on each, and a card bearing the following: "These potatoes were grown on land 20 miles from Washington, bought eight years ago for $3.38 per acre." Few visitors pass the table without reading this typewritten information.

To the right and left of the centre are two pyramids, 12 ft. high and 8 ft. at base. On one are manufactured animal products while the other displays the manufactured vegetable products. In black letters on the face of each we read Maryland has 46,000 farms, with an average of 2,033,000, and a total value of farm crops of $30,217,000. Each of the eight steps of the latter carried a product with a legend of its value to the State in the following order: Corn, $7,463,000; hay and forage, $4,709,000; potatoes, $1,337,000; vegetables, $4,354,000; miscellaneous, $1,792,000; tobacco, $1,438,000; orchard fruit, $1,416,000; small fruit, $1,224,000. The pyramid of animal products has five steps, with the following information: Dairy products, $5,239,000; meat products, $4,546,000; poultry, $3,650,000; wool, $145,000; honey and wax, $39,000. On the summit of each pyramid is a group of jars containing fruit and vegetables in preserving fluid, looking as natural as when on the trees or vine. A few things of interest on the pyramids are a pair of socks made by Mrs. Ann L. Hill of St. Mary's county, aged 70 years, knit from cotton spun by her and grown by her son the past year; maple sugar and syrup from Silas C. Beachy, Garrett county; some jars of fruit put up by Mrs. Geo. T. Chambers, Calvert county; peaches packed in 1893; pears and wine of 1896; English walnut and other nuts grown and exhibited by Arthur J. Ford of Cecil county.

The proverbial hospitality of Maryland is asserted by a "Lawn Bower," built of the native laurel by Robert Cremens & Sons of Baltimore, which stands in front of the "Dairy," close to the aisle. Here at all hours congregate visitors from the world over, as the register, standing on a rural desk, will testify. Nearly 300 have registered at this bower in one day, though many stop and do not leave their names. This gives some idea how it attracts the eye of the passer-by. The whole has been thickly covered with English ivy. On opposite sides the morning-glory vines, one white and the other purple, have crept through the tangled mass to the roof. A wild rose, full of bloom, has thrown its spray across and over the front, and here and there are little bird's nests. The comfort and apparent coolness of the whole halts the weary to read the sign. "ALL ARE WELCOME—WALK IN." On the inside he finds the Baltimore American, the Sun, the News and county papers. In glass-covered racks are pamphlets supplied by real-estate firms of the State. Two placards call attention to the census records for Maryland, one the average yield per acre, the other the average value of farm products. The latter gives Maryland a standing with the highest of her sister States.

By ingenuous construction, the superintendent has made his desk by dropping a section of an exhibition of grain; through this, also, unobserved doors open to closets back of the canned-goods, where are stored the samples intended for the inspection of the Committee on Awards.

Though the arrangement and the display of the products are convincing of the varied conditions found in the State, nothing probably leaves with the visitors a more lasting impression than the five snapshot pictures, five feet long and 16 inches wide, taken by J. W. Schaefer of Baltimore with his wonderful camera on films especially prepared by the Eastman Co., and colored by Miss E. S. Jackson of Washington. The one standing on the soil case at the north end was taken at Braddock Heights, and lays before the visitor a view of the Middletown Valley, Frederick county, a strip of land across the State 16 miles wide and over 50 miles in length, from the Mason and Dixon Line to the Potomac and Old Virginia.

In the Southern Maryland section over the soil case is a typical plantation scene, the home of Hon. Thomas Iglehart, "Indian Range," 12 miles from Annapolis and five miles from navigable waters on South River and on the Baltimore & Southern Railroad. A card contains the information that the land is naturally fertile and has a market price of from $10 to $30 per acre. A third picture, over the grain exhibit, in the same section, was taken three miles from Cambridge on an inlet of the Choptank River, from Mr. Monday's barn roof. In the foreground oyster tongmen are seen at work, while across the river the peaceful farm homes illustrate a life that is ideal. The fourth picture, taken off Solomon's Island, is a beautiful water scene of the second natural harbor in the United States and the proposed terminus of the Baltimore & Southern Railroad at the mouth of the Patuxent River, where some of the finest oysters grow. The fifth is the Maryland Agricultural College.

The display of each product on this space is intended to show the several industries in which the people of the State producing or manufacturing the agricultural products (not horticultural) will have every opportuhity of securing the benefits of an advertisement which an award from the official committee can give him through a diploma, the same as if he spent his time and many thousands in making a display of his own construction, and that, too, without cost to him No manufacturer or producer of products intended for seed or to be sold direct to the consumer should let this opportunity pass. The committee making awards will not pass on canned goods or tobacco until September. Nothing has yet been scored except that which is perishable.

Comparatively new cook stove cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. 2t*

A Home and Day School.

BRIAR-BEND SEMINARY,

AT MT. LAKE PARK, MD.,

In the Alleghany Mountains,

will be re-opened (D. V.)

On September 14th, 1904.

Full course of study. Music, Vocal and Instrumental. French, Latin and Bible Study. Certificates admit to leading colleges without examination.

A Home for Motherless Girls; Climate Unrivaled for Health; Only four visits from a Physician in thirteen years.

Applications received for service in exchange for tuition. Refererences quired. Bills payable monthly in advance.

Crisp Views of an Everyday Philosopher

TAKE time to idle or you will run out of time to work.

At county fairs, as in life, the side shows cost the most.

One dressy woman in a block will run a dozen innocent men in debt.

The happiest girl is one who thinks her father the best man on earth.

People who have nothing to do lead a dog's life hunting entertainment.

A snob recognizes as his superior only the man who has more money.

Zeal and duty are not slow, but curiosity gets there before either of them.

If you want a short cut to success, take hints from other people's experience.

Age is only a question of how much we are alive and how much we are dead.

We are well off when we don't have all the miseries other people think we have.

We are our own architects; ideas are the bricks and perseverance is the mortar.

Women are seldom cynics. They decline to let it get out that they have drawn a blank.

Man feels a generous glow when he denies himself something he can't raise the money to buy.

All the world loves a lover, because he is so funny.

Experience is expensive, but we would fool our money away anyhow.

The rude man always thinks he deserves credit for not being a hypocrite.

When a man really loves his wife, he doesn't mind letting her kiss him in hot weather.

This is a queer world. The people most run after are those who don't pay their debts.

Another form of selfishness is always wanting to bestow favors and never wanting to accept them.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Crucial Test.

"Are you sure you love him?" asked the girl who gives advice.

"Almost," answered the girl with the confiding nature. "I have watched him eat an orange and a cream puff and still retain the impression that he is serenely noble. I am going to watch him eat corn from the cob, and if that doesn't disturb my impressions I shall feel absolutely sure."—Washington Star.

Familiar Example.

"Now, little boys," said the Sunday school superintendent, "I want you to tell me what faith is."

Tommy Tucker broke the silence that followed.

"Goin' out on the pier early in the mornin' to ketch a mess o' fish for breakfast," he said.—Chicago Tribune.

Easily Parted.

"He's quite bald, I understand."

"Almost. He has just two wisps of hair left."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, and he calls one 'the fool' and the other 'his money.'"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Probably.

Mrs. Fussy—It takes half of my time keeping our silver in shape. I wish I could find a polish that would last.

Mr. Fussy—Send for a burglar. He'll clean it up so that it won't bother you any more.—Detroit Free Press.

Temptation.

First Moth—It's no wonder you are troubled with indigestion after eating so much.

Second Moth—I know. But it was such a fashionable overcoat!—Town and Country.

Handling the Law.

"According to the boys who took Pelter home this morning, his wife laid down the law to him."

"Laid it down! Why, man, she threw it at him."—St. Paul News.

Woes of the Four Hundred.

Visitor—What is the matter with Fido?

Hostess—Oh, isn't it horrid? I gave him to the laundress to wash, and she starched him!

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroal now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later thsn December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

GRANULATED

Fertilizer Lime!

FOR FARMERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

C. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—21t

Now is the Time! Don't Wait!

Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work

A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY,

First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.

FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R.

POPULAR SEASHORE EXCURSIONS,

Atlantic City,

Cape May, Ocean City, Sea Island City, N. J., Ocean City, Md., and Rehoboth Beach, Del.,

July 16 and 28, August 11 and 25, and September 8.

At following very low rates from OAKLAND:

Only $8.50 Round Trip, tickets good in coaches only.

Only $10.50 Round Trip, tickets good in Pullman cars when accompanied by regular Pullman ticket.

All tickets good returning 16 days, including date of sale.

Stop-overs allowed on return trip at Philadelphia and Washington.

Ask Ticket Agents for pamphlet giving detailed information.

War With Fire and Sword

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

October 9-13, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

SHERIDAN'S thundering victories over General Jubal A. Early's Confederates at Opequan and Fisher's hill in September, 1864, proved after all indecisive and left the mastery of the Shenandoah valley still in dispute. When Sheridan set out on the march which resulted in the battles of Sept. 19 and 23, he intended to make a dash up the valley in rear of the Confederate army, strike a telling blow and return at once to his old camping ground near the Potomac. But meeting his opponent sooner than he had expected he fought and whipped him, then followed up and fought and whipped him a second time. Again following up, the campaign lasted so long that when the Confederates had been pursued to their last ditch Sheridan's army was without rations and far from its supply depot. Then the cautious young commander, with his army confronting the enemy, decided to retreat without a fight.

Grant urged Sheridan to push on in the course he had so well begun. He told him that he could decide the fate of Richmond by advancing toward the James river, above the city. Grant wished Sheridan to strike Charlottesville and repair the railroads from the Potomac to that point as a means for rationing his army. But Sheridan replied that his soldiers could not subsist off the supplies to be found in the region where he was operating while the railroad was being repaired. He knew that General Early had been reenforced since his defeats in September and so decided to march his whole army back beyond the scene of his recent victories. While the Federals were lying in front of Staunton, the Confederate base of supplies, the cavalry scoured the region round about, finding it rich in forage and grain. Sheridan decided to burn the crops around Staunton and continue the work of destruction in his retrograde march down the valley. When his views and plans reached Grant at Petersburg the chief told his lieutenant to take up some position which he could hold and send all the troops that could be spared to his own lines at Petersburg.

During the long wait of Sheridan in the vicinity of Staunton the wagon trains were steadily going to the front with supplies. But the valley region, with mountains cut by innumerable passes on either side, is a splendid field for irregular warfare, and the roaming Confederate partisan bands of Colonel Jack Mosby and the daring McNeil were continually raiding Sheridan's trains and surprising his outposts. One night a Federal cavalry picket, 150 strong, was captured entire at Mount Jackson, half way between Sheridan's front and his base. Often a Federal train of fifty or sixty wagons going to the front would require a guard of at least 2,000 men, and yet the only enemy to be met was the roaming parties of raiders, numbering twenty to forty men. Retaliation and a bitter civil war with the torch supplementing the gun and sword became the order of the day. Sheridan reported that when he set out on the return march he had made the whole region of the upper valley between the Blue Ridge and North mountain untenable for the Confederate army.

But the destruction did not stop with the burning of crops and mills. One day Sheridan's engineer officer, Lieutenant John R. Meigs, was found dead under suspicious circumstances outside of camp. It was believed that he had been murdered by citizens in retaliation for the damage wrought by the Federal troops. This led to a second retaliation, and by Sheridan's order all the dwellings within an area of five miles were given to the flames in spite of the appeals of the occupants. And, after all, it was disclosed at the end of the war that Lieutenant Meigs met his death in combat with an enlisted Confederate soldier engaged in scouting between the lines where he met the lonely Federal.

As matters stood in the valley the first week in October the sadly defeated General Early had more fight left in him than his victor, gallant Phil. Early had once more been re-enforced by the division of General Kershaw from Richmond, the presence of which had scared Sheridan in August and the absence of which in September encouraged him to attack. Early also received the fresh cavalry brigade of General T. L. Rosser, who was to take command of General Fitz Lee's mounted division. Rosser was a fighter, and the people hailed him as the "savior of the valley." Early had attributed his mishaps in September to Sheridan's superiority in cavalry, and Rosser eagerly set to work to vindicate the troopers. Rosser led an attack on Custer's Federal command, and a brigade under Lomax fell upon the division of General Wesley Merritt. In point of fact, Rosser's men were constantly kicking at the heels of Sheridan's rear guard and annoying if not hastening his retreat. The night of Oct. 8, after a day of rear guard fighting, Sheridan told his cavalry chieftain, General Torbert, to move out at daylight and either "whip Rosser's cavalry or get whipped himself." The column marched at dawn and rode back after the enemy, meeting him at Tom's brook, a stream which crosses the valley above Strasburg. Getting his line into position, Torbert charged the enemy, stirring up a saber fight which lasted for two hours. Finally the men of Rosser and Lomax took to the rear and left eleven guns, with ambulances, headquarters wagon, "everything on wheels," as spoils to the victorious Yankee troopers. Torbert chased Rosser back toward Staunton, twenty-six miles.

After the battle at Tom's brook Sheridan placed his army in position along Cedar creek, sent the Sixth corps on toward Washington to rejoin Grant on the James and prepared to go himself to Washington for consultation with his superiors about a plan of campaign. While Grant was satisfied to leave Sheridan to his own devices, the war department wished him to fight his way through Early's army toward the upper James river and flank Richmond. At this time Sheridan believed that Early, with his infantry, was at Gordonsville or Charlottesville, fifty to sixty miles from his own camps on Cedar creek. News of Sheridan's movements reached Early with astonishing accuracy and celerity. He learned of the departure of the Sixth corps and immediately set out to try conclusions with his foe. Once more he marched his men up Fisher's hill, pushing his front forward through the town of Strasburg to Hupp's hill, a height only two miles from Sheridan's line. All this was done so quietly that the first the Federals knew of the presence of a foe was the dropping of a big shell from Hupp's hill near the officers' mess in General Thorburn's Federal camp.

Shell followed shell, and Thorburn's men left their dinners to charge the saucy battery on Hupp's hill. Meanwhile Rosser's cavalry forded Cedar creek and again attacked the redoubtable Custer. The events of the day satisfied Early that Sheridan was in position behind Cedar creek, and he withdrew his vanguard to the works on Fisher's hill.

The bombshell in Thorburn's camp completely disillusioned Sheridan as to the remoteness of Early's army, and he instantly dispatched a courier to recall the Sixth corps to the line at Cedar creek.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

THE SABER FIGHT AT TOM'S BROOK.

The German Cobbler

Mr. Voglestein Tells Hans How to Earn Money Easily.

MY frendt, Mr. Voglestein, comes in yesterday mit a smile on his face und says:

"Hans, I belief I vhas a werry smart man. If you vhas ash smart ash me you vhill be a rich man in two years."

"How vhas you smart?" I asks.

"Vhell, I go oafer to see my brudder-in-law der odder day, und on der vhay I meet a man who likes to sell me a gold brick. His price was $250. Some folks would buy that brick right off queek, but dot vhas not me. I walk right along mitout a word, und der man followed me und makes dere price $200. I shake my head. He falls to $150. I shake my head some more. He comes down to $100. Hans, if it vhas you you buy dot brick at $100 so queek ash neffer vhas."

"HE WANTED TO SELL ME SOME GOLD BRICKS."

"But don't you?"

"Not mooch. I vhas no spring hen. I say I vhill gif $50 und no more, und dot feller finally hands me oafer der brick."

"Und how mooch you make, eh?"

"Nottings. It vhas all a swindle. I take dot brick to a jeweler, und he says it vhas all lead und brass und vhas valued at 10 cents."

"Den you lose $50."

"No, I don't. I make $200, und vhen I tells a policeman aboudt it he pats me on der back und says I vhas sharp ash razors. Hans, don't neffer pay a man his first price for a gold brick. Take adwantage of his being hard oop und beat him down."

Mr. Voglestein puts his feet on der stove und sings to himself for awhile, und den he says:

"Hans, do you know aboudt some stocks?"

"I guess not."

"Of course you don't. You vhas only a cobbler. If you knew aboudt some stocks you can ride in your own carriage in three months. How mooch you pelief I make last week from stocks?"

"It vhas $5, mebbe."

"Humph! Do I look like some five dollar man? I make $75 shust ash easy ash grease, und I pelief nobody vhas smarter dan me. I see in der paper dot some Texas oil stock vhas worth par, but can be bought for 25 cents on der dollar if taken right avhay. I vhas at der office at 7 o'clock in der morning to buy dot stock. I pay $25, and it vhas worth $100. Do you see? Dot's vhat is called der ground floor."

It makes me feel badt dot Mr. Voglestein makes so mooch money in a leetle while, und I keep still und don't say nottings. He smiles und chuckles, und putty soon he says:

"Oh, I vhas nopody's fool. I go by an auction room der odder day, and dot auctioneer holds oop a watch und says who vhill gif me $75 for dis watch? If it vhas you you gif him dot $75 right off queek, but dot vhas not Mr. Voglestein. I look at him und don't say nottings. Vhen he says $60—$50—$40 I keep quiet. Vhen he says he shall haf to sell dot watch or be turned outdoors I bid $25. He likes me to make it $26, but I won't do it, und mit tears in his eyes he puts der watch in my hands. Dot vhas $50 saved. I tell you Hans, if you vhas some sharpness you get along in dis world all right."

"Vhas dot watch all right?" I asks.

"I can't say. I put him in my pocket, but vhile I vhas going home some pickpocket takes it out. If he peliefs it vhas my $200 watch dot I bring oafer from Shermany, den he loses $175, und I make shust dot mooch. Did you hear aboudt my buying a horse last week?"

"No. How he vhas?"

"Vhell, I vhas in a saloon, und a man comes in und says he likes to go to Toledo, O., to see his mother die, but he don't haf enough money. He must sell his horse for $50. How mooch you pelief I offer him, Hans?"

"I can't say."

"Vhell, I speak mit him a little vhile und den offer him $15. He cries aboudt his mother und says it vhas too cheap, but he finally takes it und goes avhay. Dot vhas a clean profit of $35 for me."

"But I don't see you drive dot horse oudt," I says.

"It vhas good reasons why. Vhen I goes down to der stables to get him he vhas dead."

"Und so you lose $15?"

"Not at all. Hans, you vhas a cobbler und not a financier. If dot horse vhas alive he cost me $100 a year to feed him, und so I save $85. I speak to my wife aboudt it, und she holds oop her hands und says I shall haf an office on Wall street. By golly, Hans, but it vhas awful nice to be some speculators und make money."

Dot makes me feel badt some more, und I don't speak to Mr. Voglestein for ten minutes. He smokes und smiles und vhalks around, und by und by he says:

"I don't like to brag aboudt myself all der time, but if I vhas a sharp man it vhas all right for some odder people to know it. Mebbe somepody told you aboudt my dog? He bites a boy der odder day, und dot boy's fadder says I shall pay $100 damages. I sits down und talks the case oafer, und in ten minutes she vhas all right. Dot boy vhas Yankee, und my dog vhas German, und it vhas all a mistake. My dog bites der boy on der leg instead of nipping his coattails, und der language vhas all to blame."

"Und don't you haf to pay nottings?"

"Not a cent. I shust gif dot boy $25 to learn German, und he knocks off $75 for my dog to learn English, und der you vhas. How you can sit here und cobble oop some shoes vhen money vhas to be picked oop outside by der hatful vhas somethings awful to me. Goodby, Hans. I like to help you, but you don't haf some speculations in your head."

M. QUAD.

Getting the Local Color.

The possible customer stopped before another painting.

"If you will allow me to criticise," he said, "you have imparted too much of a haze to your sea and sky and land in this picture. Even the air itself seems to look blue."

"That is a view from the veranda of a hotel at a New Jersey summer resort," explained the artist. "The boarders are supposed to be swearing at the mosquitoes."—Chicago Tribune.

Politics at the Musicale.

Bason—Which did you say was Mr. Hennessy?

Egbert—He's that thin man leaning against the mantelpiece.

"Let's see! What party does he belong to now?"

"He belongs to that fat party in the lavender dress over there near the piano."—Yonkers Statesman.

Overworked.

"The edge on a razor," said the garrulous barber, "improves by laying it away for a time."

"That being the case," rejoined the victim in the chair, "I'd advise you to lay the one you are using away for about 2,000 years."—Chicago News.

Why He Wept.

His Mother—Why, Mary, what's the matter with the child?

Mary—Sure, ma'am, he's been cryin' all the way home because the man as sells fruit told him he never kept star spangled bananas.

His Bump.

Phrenologist—That, sir, is your bump of locomotion.

Jones—Right you are. I got that Friday when I fell from my horse.

Athletics.

"Do you think the modern girl is benefited by an athletic training?"

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "It enables her to get in and out of a hammock without breaking her neck."—Washington Star.

Precaution.

"Jenkley has ordered a handsome suit of clothes without a pocket in coat, vest or pants."

"Why's that?"

"Going to wear it to the races."—Detroit Free Press.

Not Acquainted With It.

"Pa, what's a sine qua non?"

"Oh, pshaw, don't ask me! I ain't had my automobile long enough to learn about all of these technical names yet."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Worse Yet.

"Twiggs never complains of his troubles."

"No. He is always bragging about his prosperity."

A Note of Life.

Life's jest too sort for sighin'—
The song still beats the sigh;
The rainbow's runnin' rosy
Round the storm that's in the sky.
An' all the world is loveliness,
An' all the world is light,
An' so—to joy, "Good mornin'!"
An' so—to grief, "Good night!"
—Atlanta Constitution.

WORLD'S FAIR SPECIAL DAYS

Events of Worldwide Importance Crowd One Another on the Season's Programme---Many Congresses and Conventions to Meet.

Each of the remaining days of the World's Fair season has a programme filled with special events that offer additional attractions for late visitors. National and state governments, municipalities, secret societies, trade organizations and college fraternities have arranged to participate in the special days allotted to them, and thousands of persons will be drawn to the World's Fair upon these occasions.

Missouri is to have an entire week at the Exposition, and the Lumbermen of America will be present for six days. St. Louis day Sept. 15, will be one of the big days of the Exposition in point of attendance. Some of the largest events, including the great airship races, have not yet been scheduled, and they are not included in the list of attractions given here:

SOUTH ENTRANCE PALACE OF MANUFACTURES, WORLD'S FAIR.

SPECIAL EVENTS FOR AUGUST.

22—Missouri week begins, Pythian day and convention of National Firemen's association.
Horse and mule show in Live Stock section; closes Sept. 3.
23—Rathbone Sisters' day.
24—Deutscher-Krieger Bund day.
25—Conventions of dental examiners and Institute of Bank Clerks.
26—Ramsey family reunion.
27—Liberal Arts day.
29—Inauguration of great Olympic games, hammer throwing, running and jumping.
30—Tennis tournament and Marathon race in Olympic games.
31—Eagles' day and Tyler family reunion. International tug of war in Olympic games.

SPECIAL EVENTS FOR SEPTEMBER.

1—Tennessee and Indiana day.
Dumbbell competition and hurdle races in Olympic games.
2—Jewelers' and Silversmiths' day.
3—Sons and Daughters of Justice.
International team race in Olympic games.
5—Labor day and beginning of Lumbermen's week.
6—Oklahoma day.
7—Convention of postoffice clerks and Brigham family reunion.
8—Modern Woodmen day.
9—California, Odd Fellows' and House of Hoo-Hoo day.
10—Reunion of Spanish War Veterans.
12—Maryland day.
World's amateur cricket contest.
Cattle show opens in Live Stock section; closes Sept. 24.
13—Catholic Knights of America.
14—Woodmen of the World and State of Louisiana day.
15—St. Louis day.
16—Mexico day and Germanic congress.
17—Massachusetts and Colorado day.
19—Congress of arts and science and Arizona day.
Olympic golf championship tournament.
20—Nevada day.
Archery contests.
21—Illinois day.
22—Arkansas day.
23—Lewis and Clark Centennial exposition day and Virginia day.
24—Idaho day.
26—Fraternal day.
Military athletic carnival.
27—North Dakota and Apple day.
28—International congress of lawyers and justices and Utah day.
29—Knights and Ladies of Security day.
30—Kansas day.

SPECIAL EVENTS FOR OCTOBER.

1—Indian Territory day.
Equestrian polo championship contests.
3—New York day.
Sheep and swine exhibition in Live Stock section; closes Oct. 15.
4—New York State and Advertising Men's day.
5—Rhode Island day.
6—Maine, Ohio, New Jersey and German day.
7—W. C. T. U. and Daughters of Confederacy day.
8—Chicago Press day.
10—Cuba's national day.
11—Missouri day.
12—Italian and Michigan day.
13—Connecticut and City of Detroit day.
14—A. A. U. Wrestling Championship day.
15—Mystic Toilers' day.
17—American Library Association day.
18—Alaska, Nebraska and Helen Keller day.
19—Jefferson day.
20—Meeting of Colonial Dames of America.
21—Congregational day.
22—Fraternal Mystic Circle.
24—Bankers of the World day and National Council of Women.
Poultry, pigeons and pet stock exhibition in Live Stock section; closes Nov. 5.
25—Clergyman day.
Dog and cat exhibition in Live Stock section; closes Oct. 28.
26—Nut growers, dairymen and silk culturists' congress.
27—Farmers' mass exhibition.
Turners' mass exhibition.
28—A. A. U. gymnastics championship.
29—Home missionary convention.
A. A. U. gymnastic championships.

SPECIAL EVENTS FOR NOVEMBER.

2—Convention King's Daughters and Sons and National Humane society.
3—Collegiate Alumni association.
5—Missouri University day.
7—Interscholastic football games.
Southern breeding cattle exhibit in Live Stock section; closes Nov. 12.
10—College relay racing.
12—College football.
15—Brooklyn day.
16—Association football.
17—Cross country championship.
18—Association football.
19—Interscholastic football.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	1.54 A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.17 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	9.26 A. M
No. 55—Daily	4.55 P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily	1.27 A. M
No. *8—Daily	5.04 A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.31 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.34 P. M
No. 12—Daily	8.32 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN, Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT AUG. 28, 1904.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†11 50	†7 40
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	7 08
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 45
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 33
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June	10 51	6 26
4 47	8 27	Barnum	10 36	6 10
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	6 02
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 44
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 40
6 25x	9 50x ar	Elk Garden lv	x8 10	x4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	†5 08
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	5 02
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 52
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 48
6 43†	10 32†	Thomas	†8 38	†4 18
7 10†	11 00† ar	Davis	†8 06	†3 40
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 33	4 13
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 09	3 40
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 37
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 30
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 56
8 15†	11 59† ar	Elkins lv	†7 00	†2 40
	NOON

No. 45	No. 3	No. 1		No. 2	No. 4	No. 46
P. M.	A. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
3 30†	6 30†	2 35x	lv Elkins ar	x8 20	12 30†	89 15
3 45	6 47	2 51	R.C. Jct	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 51	2 54	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 52
4 01	7 04	3 06	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10s	7 15†	3 15x	ar Belg'n lv	x7 35	11 45†	88 35
						A. M.

P. M.	P. M		P. M.	P. M.
x8 30	12 35†	lv Elkins ar	x9 55	†2 00
8 46	12 52	Beverly	9 39	1 44
9 10†	1 15†	ar Hutt'e ar	x9 15	1 20†

No. 53	No. 51		No. 54	No. 52
A. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.
x6 20	x12 35	lv Elkins ar	x2 35	6 50x
7 49	1 24	Fishing Hawk	1 49	5 28
8 34	1 46	Glady	1 30	4 50
9 42	2 19	Burner	12 57	3 46
x10 15	x2 35	ar Durbin lv	x12 40	3 15x

† Daily x Daily except Sunday. s Sunday only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager.
F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE

World's Fair, ST. LOUIS.

Three Through Trains Daily,

Vestibuled Throughout With Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars VIA CINCINNATI.

Season, Sixty-Day and Fifteen-Day

Excursion Tickets ON SALE.

Cheap Coach Excursions

Every Tuesday in June AT

Very Low Rates.

Ask ticket agents for Descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information.

CANCER CURED

permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1520 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

No. 6588.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, AT OAKLAND, IN THE STATE OF MARYLAND, AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS, September 6, 1904.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts	$248,549 51
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured	19 46
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	3,000 00
Stocks, securities, etc	92,910 00
Banking-house, furniture and fixtures	13,677 93
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)	1,015 12
Due from State Banks and Bankers	3,493 44
Due from approved reserve agents	49,511 09
Checks and other cash items	298 11
Notes of other National Banks	405 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	253 14
MONEY IN BANK, VIZ:
Specie $12,280 30
Legal-tender notes 11,080 00	23,360 30
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)	2,500 00
Due from U. S. Treasurer, other than 5 per cent. redemption fund	2,000 00
Total	$491,002 10

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$50,000 00
Surplus fund	15,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	4,988 40
National Bank notes outstanding	50,000 00
Due to other National Banks	435 46
Due to State Banks and Bankers	237 73
Dividends Unpaid	12 00
Individual deposits subject to check	262,554 87
Time certificates of deposit	167,654 70
Cashier's checks outstanding	118 94
Total	$491,002 10

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. Jones, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 9th day of September, 1904.

G. A. FRALEY, Notary Public.

CORRECT—Attest:

D. E. OFFUTT,
G. S. HAMILL,
J. M. DAVIS,
Directors.

NO. 5623.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF OAKLAND, AT OAKLAND, IN THE STATE OF MARYLAND, AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS, Sept. 6, 1904:

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts	$166,042 14
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	50,000 00
U. S. Bonds to secure U. S. Deposits	40,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	6,200 00
Bonds, securities, etc	38,915 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	42,997 19
Other real estate owned	500 00
Due from National Banks (not Reserve Agents)	2,308 60
Due from State Banks and Bankers	196 63
Due from approved reserve agents	24,461 77
Checks and other cash items	396 19
Notes of other National Banks	280 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	99 31
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie $8,233 90
Legal-Tender notes 5,000 00	13,233 90
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)	2,500 00
Total	$389,130 73

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$50,000 00
Surplus Fund	23,000 00
Undivided Profits, less expenses and taxes paid	376 93
National Bank notes outstanding	50,000 00
Due to other National Banks	3,032 25
Due to State Banks and Bankers	691 19
Due to Trust Companies and Savings Banks	8 52
Individual Deposits subject to check	189,386 03
Time certificates of deposit	12,251 38
Certified checks	236 40
Cashier's checks outstanding	148 03
United States deposits	40,000 00
Bills payable, including certificates of deposit for money borrowed	20,000 00
Total	$389,130 73

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, R. E. Sliger, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. E. SLIGER, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 9th day of September, 1904.

JOHN FELTY, JR., Notary Public.

CORRECT—Attest:

FRED A. THAYER,
A. G. STURGISS,
OWEN TREACY,
Directors.

No. 6196.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK, AT FRIENDSVILLE, IN THE STATE OF MARYLAND, AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS Sept. 6th, 1904.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts	$117,223 31
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured	74 05
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation	25,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds	1,734 37
Bonds, Securities, etc	3,850 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures	5,965 07
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)	1,380 06
Due from State Banks and Bankers	97 89
Due from approved reserve agents	6,759 39
Checks and other cash items	131 18
Notes of other National Banks	300 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents	264 59
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie $ 348 75
Legal-tender notes 2,618 00	2,966 75
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)	1,250 00
Total	$166,996 66

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$25,000 00
Surplus Fund	6,950 99
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	275 63
National Bank notes outstanding	25,000 00
Due to other National Banks	508 57
Due to State Banks and Bankers	66 63
Individual deposits subject to check	67,065 75
Time certificates of deposit	42,329 09
Total	$166,996 66

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss.

I, R. C. McCandlish, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. C. McCANDLISH, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of September, 1904.

E. M. LISTON, Notary Public.

CORRECT—Attest:

WM. H. H. FRIEND,
L. E. FRIEND,
D. S. CUSTER,
Directors.

The Keyser Preparatory Branch

OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.

A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.

Special instruction for public School Teachers.

Instruction in Music.

A Splendid New Building Provided by the State.

A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.

Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.

No Tuition in Commercial Department.

Small Tuition charged Students from other States.

Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.

Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.

For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal,

L. L. FRIEND,
Keyser, W. Va.

THE INJUNCTION IS MADE PERPETUAL.

Important Opinion By Judge Boyd In Celebrated County Boundary Case.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE ACTION

Forty Thousand Dollars in Taxes Involved—By Decision Garrett County is Estopped From Further Proceedings In the Matter.

Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd Saturday afternoon filed his opinion in the injunction proceedings of the Consolidation Coal Company vs. the Garrett County Commissioners and others, ordering that the injunction be made perpetual and that the defendants be perpetually enjoined from collecting the taxes sued for on any land belonging to the plaintiff lying east of what is described as the Chisholm line dividing Garrett and Allegany counties.

This is the case argued some weeks ago in which the boundary line between the two counties and a vast area of land are involved, and in which also is involved the question of the right of Garrett county to collect from the Consolidation Coal Company about $40,000 in taxes claimed to be due that county in the disputed territory. In the year 1872, by an act of the legislature, Daniel Chisholm, county surveyor for Allegany county, was directed to run a straight line from the Savage river at a point where the river empties into the Potomac river, using the Fairfax stone on the West Virginia side of the Potomac as an observation point to the Mason and Dixon line, the section north of said line to form what is now known as Garrett county. The line was located and the surveyor's returns with a plat accepted, and by vote of the people the new county was formed.

The line thus formed by Surveyor Chisholm and returned by him was considered by both Allegany and Garrett counties as the boundary line until Hiram P. Tasker made the averment that a number of military lots in both counties were not assessed. He was instrumental in having the legislature of 1898 pass an act authorizing Surveyor L. A. Bauer to relocate the line. By the line run by Mr. Bauer a strip of land heretofore on the Allegany side of the line, which averaged about 2,000 feet for 18½ miles, and consisted of about 6½ miles of coal land was thrown on the Garrett county side of the line. When Garrett county attempted to collect the taxes on the land in dispute the Consolidation Coal Company, through Allegany county, which county was made a party to the injunction proceedings, secured an injunction to prevent Garrett county from collecting the $40,000 taxes. The claim was made that there was a vast difference between the lines run by Chisholm and Bauer, that the line run by Chisholm was only a trial line and that he intended to make and return another line.

Chief Judge Boyd, in his opinion, states that the case was filed by the Consolidation Coal Company, but that the principal question argued was the proper location of the boundary line between the two counties. He states that while the Chisholm plat cannot be found, there must have been one filed, as in his return Chisholm stated: "I have carefully run and located the lines of the aforesaid new county of Garrett, and herewith append a plat of the same according to their proper courses and distances." The point was raised that Chisholm did not run the line to the highest point on Savage mountain, where that mountain was crossed by the Mason and Dixon line, as directed by the act authorizing him to run the line. The court holds that Chisholm ran the line to what he then, with the best means at his command (even the Mason and Dixon line being then in dispute), thought to be the top of the mountain on that line, and that the line so run by Chisholm was ratified by a vote of the people of the new county, that all laws relating to Garrett county up to the time of the suit for taxes, were passed with that line in view as the boundary line, that all acts of the county were done with the same line in view, that it had stood undisputed from 1872 to 1898, and that the vote on the question of separating from Allegany county was taken and decided "according to the said Chisholm line."

Judge Boyd states that the taking of the census, the returns of election, etc., were all made with the Chisholm line as the boundary line. He also states that it was known that County Surveyor Greene of Garrett county had run the line later and that his line came out within two feet of where Chisholm had planted the stake at the end of his line. After reviewing the case at some length Judge Boyd, in his opinion states: "My conclusions are, 1st, that Garrett county was formed under the provisions of the constitution and the act of 1872, according to the line run on the ground by Mr. Chisholm, which is described in his report and is located by the plaintiff.

"2nd. That if location of the boundary line be conceded to have been erroneous, as not being from the proper point on the Mason and Dixon line, the acquiescence in that line run by him was for such a length of time as to make it improper for the courts to now disturb it, as public policy forbids the change of a boundary line between two counties after it has been recognized and virtually accepted for twenty-five or more years, unless the change be made in the way provided for by the constitution.

"3rd. That as a consequence of these conclusions the plaintiff's property east of the Chisholm line was improperly assessed by Garrett county, and the injunction must be made perpetual, as the case was submitted for final hearing."

The attorneys in the case were Benj. A. Richmond, Albert A. Doub and Robert H. Gordon for plaintiffs, Consolidation Coal Company and Allegany county, and Benjamin Sincell for the defendants, Garrett county and others.

GARRETT CO. S. S. CONVENTION.

Good Attendance at All Sessions—New Officers Elected.

The Garrett County Sunday School Convention was held at White Church, Ryan's Glade, on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 10th and 11th. The attendance at all the sessions was very large.

State Supt. Geo. H. Nock was accompanied by Rev. W. M. Poisal, of Baltimore, and Rev. Ephraim Lee, of Cumberland. Mr. Poisal preached a very able and eloquent sermon on Sunday morning.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, C. M. Miller; Secretary, Jas. A. Enlow; Executive Committee, S. T. Jones, Rev. Wm. Faust and Rev. Wm. Clary.

There is a movement on foot to employ Rev. Ephraim Lee to travel during the fall, winter and spring through Garrett and Allegany counties in the interest of Sunday School work. Mr. Lee is well and very favorably known throughout Garrett county.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Hustling Store Company,

LOCH LYNN HEIGHTS,

Will conduct an Auction at its store rooms opposite the Mt. Lake Park railroad station on

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1904,

When good seasonable Goods, first-class in every respect—Goods that command one hundred cents on the dollar—will be sold absolutely without reserve. The goods to be sold consist of—

Rockers and Dining Room Chairs.
Trunks, Telescopes and Suit Cases.
Screen Doors and Clothes Racds.
Tin and Galvanized Boilers.
Horse Collars and Pads.
Mattings, Rugs and Mats.
Lot of Underwear and Overalls.
30 Overcoats.
Cupboard, Dinner Pots and Tea Kettles.
Window Shades and 1 Washing Machine.
One Harrow, 1 Horse, 3 Spring Wagons.

500 pairs Shoes and lot Trousers.
Lawn Mower, Scythes and Snaths.
Ice Cream Freezers and Dishes.
Ewers, Basins and Slop Pails.
Lot Umbrellas and Store Fixtures.
Lot Tinware and Porcelainware.
Several Heating and Cooking Stoves
Lot Hats, Clocks and Pictures.
Lot Paints.
Lot of Poultry Wire.
Bed Steads, Bed Springs, Mattresses, Pillows, Comforts, Spreads and Blankets.

TERMS OF SALE—All sums under $10 cash; on sums of $10 and over a credit of six months will be given by purchaser executing his note with approved security. These terms must be complied with before any goods are removed.

The Hustling Store Company.

P. T. GARTHRIGHT, Prop'r.

A Big Day for

OAKLAND,

Monday, Sept. 20.

ANDREW DOWNIE'S NEW BIG SHOWS

COLOSSAL MUSEUM OF WONDERS AND TRAINED ANIMAL EXPOSITION

THE CANVAS CROWNED KING OF EXHIBITIONS, STUPENDOUS AND FAULTLESS

—THE LARGEST—

ONE RING SHOW IN AMERICA

COMPRISING CHAMPIONS WHOSE SUPREMACY AS ARTISTS NONE CAN DISPUTE.

50 GREAT ACTS

200 HORSES AND PONIES

—THE ONLY—

SINGING DONKEY IN THE WORLD

A GRAND COLOSSAL AGGREGATION OF WONDERFUL PERFORMING ELEPHANTS, HORSES, PONIES, PIGS, GOATS, DOGS AND MONKEYS; BEAUTIFUL TROPICAL BIRDS—RENOWNED AND DARING ACTS, AERIAL EXPLOITS, LONG DISTANCE LEAPS, WONDERFUL BICYCLISTS, HIGH WIRE PERILS.

25 FAMOUS FUNNY CLOWNS

—NEW GLORIOUS—

FREE STREET PARADE AT 10 A. M.

4 BANDS OF MUSIC, MAGNIFICENT STEAM PIANO, 50 TRIUMPHANT CHARIOTS, DENS, CAGES AND CARS.

A GRAND FREE EXHIBITION

On the SHOW GROUNDS, immediately after the PARADE.

A BEWILDERING DEATH-DEFYING LEAP FOR LIFE, BY

PROF. RICARDO

REMEMBER THE DAY AND DATE

2 PERFORMANCES DAILY, RAIN OR SHINE DOORS OPEN AT 1 AND 7 P. M., PERFORMANCE AT 2 AND 8 P. M.

UNDER OUR COLOSSAL SCOPE OF WATER-PROOF CANVAS

PRICES REDUCED FOR THIS DAY AND DATE ONLY

ADULTS 25c., CHILDREN UNDER 12 YEARS 15c.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the sale of the Real Estate of Daniel Smouse, deceased.

No. 482 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23rd day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four by the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause to Jane Smouse by Jacob S. Miller and Mortimer Smouse, Executors, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county once a week for three successive weeks before the 23d day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $3,000.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.,
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:

E. E. FRIEND, Register.

Mortagee's Sale

OF VALUABLE

REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Isaac W. Thompson and Laura Thompson, his wife, to the First National Bank of Oakland, Md., dated the 16th day of September, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 45, folio 51, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under said mortgage, the undersigned attorney named in said mortgage, hereby gives notice that on

SATURDAY, the 8th Day of October, 1904

at 2 o'clock p. m., in front of the courthouse in the town of Oakland, Garrett county aforesaid, he will offer at public auction to the highest bidder all the following described real estate, to-wit: All those parcels of land in Garrett county aforesaid of which the late Henry Thompson died seized and possessed, known as

"FAIR SWEEP,"

and also another parcel of land purchased by the said Henry Thompson from N. B. Harvey and beginning for the same at a buttermut tree standing at the corner of the Military Lot formerly owned by Philip Davis and running thence North 50 perches, North 45 degrees West 29 perches, West 52 perches, South 45 degrees West 30 perches, to the outside line of "Avon's Vale" and with said line South 45 degrees East 153 perches, thence South 70 degrees East 148 perches to a line fence between the lands of said Henry Thompson and Thomas K. Harvey, and along and with said line fence North 30 degrees West 50 perches, north 89½ perches, South 89½ perches, West 89½ perches to the beginning, containing as a whole

One Hundred and Forty-five Acres and Fifty-four Perches.

Said property is mostly cleared and in cultivation. Improved by a good dwelling house, barn and other out buildings, a good orchard with a variety of fruits and the place is well watered. By the terms of the will of the late Henry Thompson his widow holds a life estate in said farm and the same will be sold subject thereto.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

FRED. A. THAYER,
Attorney named in the Mortgage.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the Real Estate of Christian Orendorf, deceased,

No. 515 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23d day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause by Jacob S. Miller, Executor, to Christian C. Orendorf and Noah Orendorf, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $810.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:

E. E. FRIEND, Register.

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY.
THREE COURCES OF INSTRUCTION
AGRICULTURAL. MECHANICAL. SCIENTIFIC.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements: bath-rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

New buildings with every modern improvement, and old buildings thoroughly renovated by opening of first session. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, with annual deposit, ($159) one hundred and fifty nine dollars, for scholastic year. Daily visit by physician to College. Catalog giving full particulars sent on application. Attention is called to the Short Course of ten weeks in Agriculture. Write for particulars.

Term Commences, Thursday, September, 15.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Maryland.

The Maryland School for the Deaf,

37TH SESSION,

Reopens September 14th, 1904.

Non-Sectarian. For the deaf and dumb and those whose hearing is too defective for attendance on public school. Speech and lip-reading taught, as well as grammar school and academic studies.

Location very healthful. Board and Tuition free to residents of Maryland.

Apply to

CHAS. W. ELY, Principal,
Frederick, Md.

ORDER NISI.

David Sloan vs. Jefferson S. Green.

No. 1233 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

Ordered this 5th day of September, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by D. Lindley Sloan, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 5th day of October, 1904; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 30th day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sale to be $400.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—Test:

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Mortgagees' Sale

—OF—

Personal Property!

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Joseph E. Lint, William A. Lint and Joseph V. Lint to the undersigned mortgagees, dated the 11th day of February, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 37, folio 355, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under mortgage we hereby give notice that on

Saturday, the 17th Day of September, 1904,

at the hour of two o'clock P. M., at the farm of Andrew J. Frazee, on Frazee's Ridge, in Selbysport District, Garrett county, Maryland, we will offer at public auction to the highest bidder the following personal property, to-wit:

One Aultman & Taylor Steam Engine and Dixon Separator Threshing Machine and Two Bay Horses,

being a portion of the property conveyed by said mortgage.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

JEFFERSON FRAZEE,
DAVID TAYLOR,
Mortgagees.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1904. NUMBER 29

SECOND WEEK OF THE CIRCUIT COURT.

Chief Judge Boyd and Associate Judges Henderson and Keedy Present.

CRIMINAL CASES BEING TRIED.

Appeal Docket Completed and Many Cases on the Trial Docket Disposed Of—Court Will Probably End This Week.

The second and probable final week of the September Term of the Circuit Court convened on Monday when Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd and Associate Judges R. R. Henderson and M. L. Keedy appeared upon the bench. Judge Keedy arrived in Oakland from his home in Hagerstown Sunday evening and Judges Boyd and Henderson came up to Oakland Monday morning from Cumberland where they had spent Sunday with their families.

The appeal docket was completed on Thursday afternoon of last week when the trial docket was taken up and a number of cases appearing thereon were terminated.

Monday, under the rule of the Court, the criminal docket was taken up and at the time this paper is put on press the case of the State against Dennis Hare, charged with assault and attempt to rape Rebecca Swauger, of near Grantsville, is being tried. To secure a jury in this case Sheriff Frantz summoned about twenty-five talismen, a number of the regularly summoned Jurors being disqualified to serve in the case owing to numerous causes.

APPEALS.

22. C. R. Savedge vs. L. A. Rudisil, Sec'y; tried before Court; verdict for appellant. Peddicord—Hamill.

23. L. T. Yoder vs. Community of Mountain Lake Park; dismissed. Peddicord—Thayer.

26. Same vs. same; same entry.

TRIALS.

15. John H. Beckman vs. John C. Beckman; tried before Court; verdict for plaintiff. Hamil!—Peddicord.

17. Joseph R. Roy vs. I. W. Thompson; dismissed. Sincell—Thayer.

18. John Shartzer vs. Henry C. and Edward H. Sincell; jury trial; verdict for plaintiff for $550 against Henry C. Sincell, and verdict in favor of defendant, Edward H. Sincell. Semmes—Peddicord.

24. The Board of County Commissioners vs. Louis Nydegger; removed to Allegany county. Sincell, Renninger—Peddicord.

25. Nancy C. Walling vs. Charles A. Hessen; continued. Hamill—Peddicord.

40. Thomas S. Ryan vs. George Truesdell; settled. Renninger—Hamill.

CRIMINAL APPEALS.

Charles Mosser vs. State; assault; continued. Renninger—Thayer.

Thomas A. Douglas vs. State; tried before Court; guilty; $1 and costs.

CRIMINAL TRIALS.

1. State vs. Russell Seibert; stet.
2. State vs. Ed. McRobie; stet.
3. State vs. Thomas Brooks; stet.
4. State vs. Harry Holliday; stet.
5. State vs. W. A. Harvey; dismissed.
12. State vs. Harry Friend; assault and battery; jury trial; guilty; fined $20 and costs. Thayer—Peddicord, Hamill, Renninger.
13. State vs. Alfred Schroyer; assault and battery; tried before Court; not guilty. Thayer—Peddicord, Hamill, Renninger.
15. State vs. Bartlet Tony; larceny; plea of guilty confessed by defendant Thayer—Offutt.
16. Same vs. same; dismissed. Same counsel.

State vs. William Gray; lareeny of a watch; jury trial; guilty. Thayer—Heindel.

State vs. A. R. Raymond; continued; cruelty to animals. Thayer—Sincell.

26. State vs. Richard Jamison and Michael Boyle, Jr.; continued.
28. State vs. Ora Rice and Charles Knox; cruelty to animals; continued. Thayer—Renninger.
29. State vs. Ira E. Culp; assault and battery; tried before Court; not guilty. Thayer—Peddicord.
30. Same vs. same; dismissed; same counsel.
8. State vs. Chas. Weimer; assault; plea of guilty; fined $20 and costs. Thayer—Hamill.
9. Same vs. same; dismissed; same counsel.
21. State vs. Wm. Cannon; assault and battery; plea of guilty; fined $20 and costs. Thayer—Renninger.
22. Same vs. same; same charge; dismissed. Same counsel.

Notice.

I will operate my cider mill at Kearney every Friday until October 16th. After that date I will operate cider and apple butter mill daily except Saturday as long as apples may be brought.

Thanking the public for past patronage and soliciting a continuance of the same, I remain,

Yours most respectfully,
W. H. MUMAW.

OFFUTT'S. FURNITURE.

For every mentionable thing in the Furniture line, including all the latest patterns in

Bedroom Suits,
Chiffoniers,
Wardrobes,
Sideboards,
Hall Racks,
Couches,
Iron Beds,
Cribs,
Extension Tables,
Chairs and Rockers, all kinds,
Mattresses, single and double,
Springs, single and double,
Kitchen Cupboards and Safes,
Stands of all kinds,
Pillows and Bolsters,
Carpets, etc., etc., etc., etc.

Call and examine and be convinced that we are the cheapest place in Western Maryland to buy Furniture.

D. E. OFFUTT & SONS.

"A REPROACH TO A CIVILIZED PEOPLE."

Thus the County Buildings in Oakland Were Characterized by Grand Jury.

JAIL INSECURE AND UNSANITARY.

The Court House Wholly Inadequate for Present Needs—Recommendation Made that Jail be Vacated and Prisoners Sent Elsewhere.

The Grand Jury for the present term of the Circuit Court completed its duties on last Friday morning and after making its report to the Court asking its dismissal the members were discharged from further service.

The report of the jury deals with the condition, insecurity and inadequacy of the present county buildings in no uncertain tone, characterizing them as being "a reproach to a civilized and progressive people" and calling upon the county officials to immediately take some measures to remedy the conditions now prevailing. The report recommends to the Court that the confining of persons in the present jail be discontinued and that arrangements be made with another county for the proper care of the prisoners from this county.

This latter recommendation will be taken up this week by the Court. It is possible that an order will be passed vacating the jail here and sending all prisoners to Cumberland or the House of Correction for detention.

The report of the grand jury follows:

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland:

We, the Grand Inquest of the State of Maryland for the body of Garrett county, respectfully beg leave to make the following report:

We have discharged the duties incumbent upon us as Grand Jurors by examining all witnesses sent before us, making presentments in all cases where we considered the evidence sufficient and by dismissing without unnecessary delay all witnesses as soon as might be after their testimony had been received.

In conformity with the law, and the direction of the Court, we have visited the public buildings, the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court, the County Commissioners, the Treasurer and the Register of Wills. The books and records in the different offices seem to be neatly and correctly kept, but the offices provided are too small and are not provided with the conveniences and comforts becoming the dignity of our county. We have reason to be proud of our officers, but our public buildings are a reproach to a civilized and progressive people, and the proper officers should take immediate steps to provide a new court house and jail.

We found the jail in as good order and as clean as it is possible for the Sheriff to keep it under present conditions. The building, however, is lacking both in providing for the security of prisoners and in regard to its sanitary arrangements, and is entirely inadequate in size for the growing requirements of our county and for the numbers who have been confined within it. We found that while the jail was fitted to accommodate eight persons, there had at times within the past six months been as many as thirty-three persons confined therein, with an average of twenty persons. It is not only those who are held under criminal charges that are thus made to suffer, but many innocent witnesses who are unable to give bond for their appearance at court. In case of an epidemic under present conditions the county might be held to heavy damages in case of death of any of the inmates.

We recommend that the confining of persons in our jail be discontinued and that arrangements be made with another county having adequate jail facilities to care for prisoners convicted by our courts.

We acknowledge the very courteous and efficient assistance of the State's Attorney.

Respectfully submitted,
S. T. JONES, Foreman.
W. MCCULLOH BROWN, } Clerks.
GEO. W. MOON, }

The report of the grand jury was supplemented by a strong paper presented to the Court in the form of a petition, signed by each juror, calling upon the County Commissioners to at once take the necessary steps toward providing the means to remedy the condition of the jail and court house. The petition reads as follows:

"The undersigned citizens of Garrett county demand of the county officials that they take some immediate measures to remedy the condition now existing in our county jail and that they take up the question of new public buildings.

"W. MCCULLOH BROWN,
BENJ. F. SCHAFFER,
HENRY C. BUTLER,
JAMES B. SHOCKEY,
LEWIS PREVOST,
JAMES A. BALDWIN,
UPTON CUPPETT,
WILLIAM RILEY,
ALEX C. GEORGE,
WALLACE F. BOWMAN,
ARTHUR TOWNSHEND,
GEORGE W. MOON,
WILLIAM A. DEWITT,
ELIAS MERRILL,
CHARLES H. LOAR,
JOHN H. CUPPETT,
THOMAS J. JOHNSON,
DAVID S. CUSTER,
W. W. SCHLOSSNAGLE
JAMES W. LEATHERS,
ALEX C. MASON,
SCOTT T. JONES,
G. C. PATTISON,
"Grand Jurors, Sept. Term, 1904.

GARRETT COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

Sixteenth Annual Session Will Convene on Monday In Oakland.

INTERESTING PROGRAM PREPARED

By County Superintendent Ed. A. Browning—Instructors Will Be Present from Other Sections—Renowned Lecturers to Speak.

The Sixteenth Annual Institute of Garrett county Teachers will be held in Oakland, commencing Monday, September 26, and continue until Friday noon, September 30. This promises to be one of the best and and most instructive institutes ever held in Garrett county, and everybody is respectfully invited to be present. Those who are to deliver lectures will be present on the evenings designated.

The following excellent program has been prepared by County Superintendent Ed. A. Browning, who has spared no pains to make the institute a success:

MONDAY, SEPT. 26—10.30 A. M.

Music—By the Oakland Choir,
Miss Mae Homill, Organist.
Invocation—Rev. Dr. H. Scott.
Address of Welcome—Rev. E. Manges.
Response—Prof. J. C. Beahm.
Musical Selections—
Miss Blanche Lowdermilk.
Address—Dr. M. B. Stephens,
State Superintendent.
Announcements—
Superintendent Browning.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Address—Prof. T. L. Gibson,
Musical Director.
Address—Dr. M. B. Stephens.
Round Table—"Primary Language Training."
Theory—Miss Ethel D. Baker, Leader.
Discussion—Outline Institute Manual Page 12.
Picture Lessons—Miss Marion Leary.
Stories—Miss Rose Janoske.
Fables and Their Application—Mr. A. L. Lee.
Paraphrasing Exercises—Prof. E. D. Murdaugh.
General Discussion.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 27—9 A. M.

Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
Invocation—Rev. W. H. Miller.
Recitation—Miss Osa Fisher.
Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
Address—Dr. N. G. Brumbaugh.
Recess.
Round Table—Construction Work as Correlated With Number Work. Prof. E. D. Murdaugh, Leader.
Discussions—Clear Images and Accurate Conception. J. C. Beahm.
What Powers of the Mind Must be Exercised and Developed in the Teaching of Numbers in the Earliest Primary Grades? J. I. Sollars.
General Discussion.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
Address—John T. White,
Supt. of Allegany county.
Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
Address—Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh.
Recess.
A Lesson in Construction Work—H. A. Loraditch, Manual Training Teacher.
Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
The Origin of Theaters, Shakspeare's Writings—Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh.

WEDNESEAY, SEPT. 28—9 A. M.

Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
Invocation—Rev. Dr. H. Scott.
Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
Address—Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh.
Recitation—Miss Bessie Moore.
Psychology—Prof. E. D. Murdaugh.
School Room Troubles and School Management—Questions Referred to any member of Institute.
Recess.
Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
Teaching Orthography—
Supt. Browning.
Discussion of Methods—Open to All.
Examinations—Dr. E. H. Bartlett.
Routine Business.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
Address—Byron W. King.
Address—Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh.
Recess.
Address—Supt. John T. White.
Report of Committees.
The Curriculum of Studies—Ira Culp.
Discussion—S. K. Welch.
Discussion—Nezzie Friend.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 29—9 A. M.

Session of Superintendent and Teachers until 10.30.
Recess.
Address—Byron W. King.
Address—Supt. John T. White.
Address—Prof. E. D. Murdaugh.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Music—Prof. T. L. Gibson.
Address—Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh.
Round Table—"The Teacher's Profession." Prof. T. L. Gibson.
"Ventilation"—J. I. Sollars.
"The Teacher During Vacation"—
H. W. Browning.
"Local Institutes"—J. C. Beahm.
General Discussion.

FRIDAY, SEPT. 30—TRUSTEES' DAY.

Music—Pros. T. L. Gibson.
Invocation—Rev. J. M. Davis.

The duties of Trustees will be made plain. Addresses by different persons to the trustees. It is hoped all the trustees in the county will be present.

Business Session.
Adjournment.

INSTRUCTORS.

Dr. M. B. Stephens, State Supt.
Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh, University of Pennsylvania.
Prof. E. D. Murdaugh, State Normal at Frostburg.
Prof. T. L. Gibson, Musical Directon, Ebinsburg, Pa.
Prof. John T. White, Supt. Schools of Allegany county.
Miss Ethel Baker, Frostburg Normal.
H. Crawford Bounds, Supt. of Wicomico county.
Senator U. G. Palmer, Ex-Examiner of Garrett county.

LECTURERS.

Monday Evening at 8 o'clock—
Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh.
Tuesday Evening at 8 o'clock—
Rev. Jahu DeWitt Miller.
Wednesday Evening at 8 o'clock—
Musical Entertainment.
Thursday Evening at 8 o'clock—
Dr. Byron W. King.

Taken to Grantsville for Interment.

The remains of Mrs. Mayhew, who died at Johnstown on Sunday, were brought here upon the following day and taken overland to Grantsville, Md., where they were interred on Tuesday morning. Deceased was first married to Abraham Beachy, a well known resident of Grantsville, who died some years ago. A daughter, Mrs. Theodore White, of Connellsville, was present at the funeral.—Myersdale Republican.

Largest Locomotive in the World.

The largest locomotive in the world weighing 149½ tons owned by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad will shortly be put to work on the 17 mile grade from Piedmont to Altamont. It is now on exhibition at St. Louis exposition.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS BANQUET FRIDAY NIGHT

With a Large Crowd Present the Affair Was a Great Social Success.

GRAND LODGE OFFICERS ATTEND.

Grand Chancellor James Tattersall and Grand Keeper of Records and Seal James Whitehouse, Both of Baltimore, Guests of Honor.

Pythianism of Oakland and indeed all of Garrett county and the adjoining counties of West Virginia, was represented here last Friday night at the supper and smoker tendered by Garrett Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias, upon the occasion of the visit to the local lodge of two of the Grand Lodge officers, they being Grand Chancellor James Tattersall and Grand Keeper of Records and Seal James Whitehouse btoh of Baltimore, the affair being given in their honor.

Friday night being the regular meeting night of the lodge a full attendance was present when after the routine business had been transacted the brethren along with visiting members from the lodges at Piedmont, Terra Alta, Gormania and other points repaired to the Oakland Hotel where the gentlemen partook of a specially prepared feast.

The speaking was impromptu throughout, and was indulged in by Mr. Whitehouse and many members of the Oakland lodge.

The menu consisted of many delicacies and was served in the large dining hall of the hotel to the hundred or more present.

Messrs. Tattersall and Whitehouse returned to Baltimore Saturday morning.

BISHOP PARET TO MAKE VISIT

And Confirm Class at St. Matthew's Church This Evening.

This evening at 7.30 o'clock the Rt. Rev. Dr. Paret, Bishop of Maryland, will hold his tri-ennial visitation of St. Matthew's Protestant Episcopal church in Oakland, when he will confirm a class.

Chas. F. Frazee Wins His Suit.

The many friends of Mr. Chas. F. Frazee, recently of Selbysport, but now engaged in business at Pittsburg, are rejoicing over the victory won by him in the United States District Court against the Merchants Coffee Co. of Baltimore, which corporation filed a bill declaring an infringement was being made by Mr. Frazee by putting upon the market a brand of coffee under the name of "Hasty Lunch Coffee." To further advertise his product Mr. Frazee proposes to give away twenty cases of the goods to the twenty persons guessing nearest the popular vote for the Presidential candidates this fall. Any one addressing him at Pittsburg can get a guessing card.

Mr. Frazee has been prominent in politics in Pittsburg for a number of years past and was recently elected a member of the Republican Advisory Board of the party for Pennsylvania.

Buried at Grantsville.

Mrs. Mayhew, well known at Grantsville, died at Johnstown, Pa., Sunday and her body taken to Grantsville for interment which took place there on Tuesday of last week. She was aged nearly seventy years and leaves a number of children.

WE HAVE THE LATEST

In Styles and Best in Quality to Show you in SHOES

...A FULL LINE OF...

DOROTHY DODDS

Just received: light and heavy weight soles, Blucher and Bal Cut, Patent and Dongola.

WALK-OVERS

Talk for themselves. A look, a try-on, a sale. We only ask the pleasure of showing the line and we know the goods will do the rest.

H. L. DAUGHERTY, ... Oakland, Md.

THE LAWS OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY

An Interesting Synopsis by Mr. Jacob Brown, of the Allegany Bar.

The act or laws of the General Assembly of Maryland for the session of 1904, have just been delivered to the different officials of the State for distribution among those entitled to copies. The volume is a large one containing 1420 pages. The Acts or laws of all kinds number 692 chapters, 88 or about that mumber are general laws for the State at large; the rest are local, special or personal acts for the different counties and Baltimore city. Allegany county comes in for 32 Acts of this class of legislation; and Garrett county has 15. The most prolific subject for legislation was charters for corporations.

The volume mentioned is quite in contrast with the small acts or books of the eighteen-forties, and prior there to. Although in those early years, the scope of legislation was considerably wider than in later years. Then public roads in the counties could not be opened without an act of the Assembly, with not less than three commissioners to formulate it. Even an election district in a county could not be had without an act of the Legislature. A person's name could not be changed without an act. Now the courts have the power.

Another fruitful subject of legislation has been taken from the Legislature and granted to the courts of equity, divorce. By the act of 1841, chapter 262, the power to grant divorces was conferred upon the old Court of Chancery, and the county courts sitting in equity. The old "high court of Chancery," was abolished by the Constitution of 1850.

Another subject of frequent legislation in early times was done away with by the act of 1805, known as the insolvent debtors' law. Prior to then an unfortunate person confined in the county jail for debt had no remedy or relief except by an act of the General Assembly. Many such acts can yet be found in the old books. No the people of this humane and enlightened age such would seem to barbarism in reality, but so it was, fortunately not so for the last half century.

J. B.

Cumberland, Sept. 12, 1904.

ROOSEVELT'S ACCEPTANCE.

The Democrats will find that "charion note" they have been yearning for from Paker in the stirring letter letter of acceptance which President Roosevelt has written and which has been published. That document is literally a prolonged "clarion note" from beginning to end. It is the bright, clear, sure note of the born leader, of a ruler of men, who has a cause in which he believes and in which he knows that his people believe. Nobody who begins to read this letter will pause till he has finished it,and nobody will have the slightest difficulty in understanding every word of it. President Roosevelt needs no interpreter, and nothing that he says requires subsequent explanation or elucidated by himself or anybody else.

There is nothing timid, or apologetic, or evasive in the President's letter. The keynote of it is pitched in the opening passage wherein he says: "We do not have to guess at our own convictions, and then correct the guess if it seems unpopular. The principles which we profess are those in which we believe with heart and soul." He stands on the record of deeds done; he is not only willing but eager to defend every item in that record, and he is proud of every item in it. That is his letter in a nutshell. It is the challenge of a letter who has no more fear of combat than he has apprehension of defeat, for he has faith in the justice of his cause and knows it will prevail because it is just.

His thrust at the Democrats are as deadly as they are keen: "A party whose members are radically at variance on most vital issues, and if united at all, are only united on issues where their attitude threatens widespread disaster to the whole country, cannot be trusted to govern in any matter. A party which, with facile ease, changes all cannot be trusted to adhere with tenacity to any principle after election."

Speaking of the pension order, he says: "If our opponents come into power they can revoke this order and announce that they will treat the veterans of 62 and 70 as presumably in full bodily vigor, and not entitled to pension. Will they now authoritatively state that they intend to do this? If so, we accept the issues. If not, then we have the right to ask why they raise an issue which, when raised, they do not venture to meet."

Concerning Parker's declaration that the "common law affords a complete legal remedy against monopolies," he bowls the ex-chief judge over completely by saying: 'But there is no common law of the United States. Its rules can be enforced only by the State courts and officers. No federal court or officer could take any action whatever under them. It was this fact, coupled with the inability of the States to control trusts and monopolies, which led to the passage of the federal statutes known as the Sherman anti-trust act and the interstate commerce act; and it is only through the exercise of the powers conferred by these acts, and by the statutes of the last Congress supplementing them, that the national government acquires any jurisdiction over the subject. To say that action against trusts and monopolies should be limited to the application of the common law is equivolent to saying that the national government should take no action whatever to regulate them."

These are merely samples of the general tenor of the letter. Not an issue is evaded—the coal strike, Panama, merger suit, all are treated with a clearness and force rarely equalled and certainly never surpassed in a document of this kind. At the close President Roosevelt rises to a level of really noble eloquence in his appeal to no class and to no section, but to all good citizens in whatever part of the land they dwell, and whatever may be their occupation or worldly condition. We have striven both for civic righteousness and for national greatness, and we have faith to believe that our hands will be upheld by all who feel love of country and trust in the uplifting of mankind. We stand for enforcement of the law and for obedience to the law; our government is a government of orderly liberty equally alien to tyranny and to anarchy; and its foundation stone is the observance of the law, alike by the people and by the public servants. We hold ever before us as the all-important end of policy and administration the reign of peace at home and throughout the world; of peace, which comes only by doing justice."

NOTICE.

Change in Business.

The firm of Jno. W. Haney & Sons having sold its milling business, plant and feed store at Friendsville, Md., to The Friendsville Milling Company, hereby gives notice that all persons knowing themselves indebted to the above named firm must call and make settlements of their accounts on or before Oct. 1st, 1904. All accounts remaining unsettled at that date will be placed in the hands of an officer for collection.

JOHN W. HANEY & SONS,
22-4t Friendsville, Md.

No. 6588.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE GARRETT NATIONAL BANK, AT OAKLAND, IN THE STATE OF MARYLAND, AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS, September 6, 1904.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$248,540 51
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured		19 46
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		3,000 00
Stocks, securities, etc		92,910 00
Banking-house, furniture and fixtures		13,677 93
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		1,015 12
Due from State Banks and Bankers		3,493 44
Due from approved reserve agents		49,511 09
Checks and other cash items		298 11
Notes of other National Banks		405 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		253 14
MONEY IN BANK, VIZ:
Specie	$12,280 30
Legal-tender notes	11,080 00	23,360 30
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)		2,500 00
Due from U. S. Treasurer, other than 5 per cent. redemption fund		2,000 00
Total		$491,002 10

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$50,000 00
Surplus fund	15,000 00
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	4,988 40
National Bank notes outstanding	50,000 00
Due to other National Banks	435 46
Due to State Banks and Bankers	237 73
Dividends Unpaid	12 00
Individual deposits subject to check	202,554 87
Time certificates of deposit	167,654 70
Cashier's checks outstanding	118 94
Total	$491,002 10

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss:

I, S. T. Jones, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 9th day of September, 1904.

G. A. FRALEY, Notary Public.

CORRECT—Attest:
D. E. OFFUTT,
G. S. HAMILL,
J. M. DAVIS,
Directors.

No. 6196.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK, AT FRIENDSVILLE, IN THE STATE OF MARYLAND, AT THE CLOSE OF BUSINESS Sept. 6th, 1904.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$117,223 31
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured		74 05
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		25,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,734 37
Bonds, Securities, etc		3,850 00
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		5,065 07
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		1,380 06
Due from State Banks and Bankers		97 89
Due from approved reserve agents		6,759 89
Checks and other cash items		131 18
Notes of other National Banks		300 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		264 59
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$ 348 75
Legal-tender notes	2,618 00	2,966 75
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation)		1,250 00
Total		$166,996 66

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$25,000 00
Surplus Fund	6,950 99
Undivided profits, less expenses and taxes paid	275 63
National Bank notes outstanding	25,000 00
Due to other National Banks	308 57
Due to State Banks and Bankers	66 63
Individual deposits subject to check	67,065 75
Time certificates of deposit	42,329 09
Total	$166,996 66

State of Maryland, County of Garrett, ss.

I, R. C. McCandlish, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. C. McCANDLISH, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of September, 1904.

E. M. LISTON, Notary Public.

CORRECT—Attest:
WM. H. H. FRIEND,
L. E. FRIEND,
D. S. CUSTER,
Directors.

PLEASANT FIELDS OF HOLY WRIT

SAVE for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ,
I might despair. —Tennyson.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Third Quarter. Lesson XIII. September 25, 1904.

Copyright, Davis W. Clark.

REVIEW

This part of the Bible is pre-eminently a cross-section of human life. For this reason, although very old, it is peculiarly up to date, and has an application to current affairs. St. James might have said, "He was a man of like nature with us." Strength and weakness both are exemplified. The whole gamut of human passions is run. The inevitable denouement of various courses of conduct is faithfully depicted. We are taught by example in this instance, and it is a proverb, example is better than precept. That is a crude and hasty judgment which relegates these incideuts to the category of mere Old Testament story —and to a far-away land. They show human life, its motives, fair and foul; its sufferings and successes and possibilities. Elijah and Obadiah, Ahab and Jezebel, and the rest are alive to-day, and will reappear in every age. They are human types, and as such are "the chief study of mankind."

Rehoboam, the prince of blunderers, first appears upon the scene. He precipitates the division of the kingdom. When called by the national assembly to plight his faith as a constitutional monarch, he took counsel of the gilded youths of the empire and gave his subjects, already on the point of revolt, a recklessly insolent answer. He threatened to add to his father's yoke and to exchange his whips for scorpions. He parted Hebrew history that day into two streams which were never to be reunited. The Upper Kingdom, the kingdom of Israel, was composed of ten tribes. It survived three centuries and had twice the territory and population of the southern kingdom, and most of the prophets and historic sites. It ended in the Assyrian captivity. The kingdom of Judah, composed of the tribes of Judah and Benjamin had the temple, the priesthood, and Isaiah among the prophets. It was interrupted by the Babylonian captivity, but survived until A. D. 70.

Jeroboam, the first king of Israel, was a man of splendid genius. His specialtv was military architecture. Over against the dreary incompetence of Rehoboam the practical and forceful spirit of Jereboam appears to best advantage. The moment he took up the scepter he began the fortification of the key cities, and well earned the title of "fortress builder of Israel." But in spite of noble qualities the key to Jeroboam's character is found in the somewhat odious word, "policy." He buttressed his throne and perpetuated his dynasty by confirming the separation of two kingdoms. He accomplished this by separating the nations religiously as well as politically. He set up symbols of religion at the most sacred shrines within his own territory, and excused his subjects from their religious pilgrimages to Jerusalem. In the place of the Levites, who had all deserted to Judah, he created a new and popular priesthood, in which all sections and classes were represented. As a piece of statecraft this is to be commended, but if the supernatural elements of Hebrew history are admitted, then Jeroboam was at fault in throwing himself dead against the fundamental principles of the Mosaic law and ritual.

The idolatry of Israel began in mild form. But it was a start on a down grade. Velocity augmented. A few decades and total apostasy was reached. Such disease needed heroic treatment. Elijah was the Lord's physician in this instance. Now the accepted idea of a prophet is too mechanical. We have been accustomed to imagine one called to this office as so possessed by the Divine Spirit that personal will and judgment are practically supplanted. He is moved like an automaton. A verse in St. James' Epistle turns a strong light upon the prophetic office, and corrects our misapprehension, "Elijah was a man of like nature as we are." In and out of his special function, he was a perfectly normal character. Over in Tishbe of Gilead he contemplated the disgrace and impending ruin of his country. His heart was stirred with patriotic feelings. Do not take Elijah out of the category of perfectly normal human life. St. James says his feelings and emotions were just such as ours would be under similar circumstances. In his distress he communed with God. Is the evil iemediless? Can not the people be chastened? Will not drought and famine bring them to repentance? He believes so. He prays that it may not rain. Can he aspire to be Jehovah's ambassador to the court of Ahab? If so, he places himself unreservedly at the disposal of the Almighty. So, of his own will, with use of his own judgment, in normal manner he becomes Israel's reformer.

For sheer courage Elijah is unsurpassed. Among the ever-living heroes he stands the peer of any for interpidity. "Go!" "And he went!" is the brief record, but how much must he read between the lines. He was commanded to go into the teeth of a raging lion. Ahab felt that the prestige of his kingship had been discounted by Elijah's opposition. He had been humiliated in the eyes of his subjects and neighboring monarchs. His wife, inflamed with religious zeal, goaded him on to revenge. Every circumstanee, personal, domestic, and national, conspired to make him the implacable foe of the prophet who had brought this withering woe upon the nation. Under circumstances like these the premptory command came, "Go, show thyself to Ahab!" Without remonstrance or hesitation, taking his very life in his hand, the prophet started. The animals of war, exploration, or rescue do not contain an instance which surpasses this in cool and dauntless courage.

The lessons of Carmel are as clear cut as the sky-line of the mountain itself. The commentary seemed to come in advance of the text in this instance. A thousand years before St. Paul wrote the words "an idol is a nonenity in the world," this scene illustrated and proved it. Not for six hours on the mountain had Baal been appealed to, but probably for the whole three years of the famine. Yet not a whisper came in response. But Jehovah answered the prophet's prayer at once. The next we see of Elijah he is not riding the crest of a popular reformation—its idolized hero—but ignominiously stranded upon the shore, where the receding tide has left him. The picture may not be as pleasing and exhilarating, but it may be quite as profitable or even more so, than the other. How to deport one's self in defeat; how to make defeat serviceable in the evolution of character—that is the prime lesson for the universal human heart. And that lesson God teaches us in His universal human heart. And that lesson God teaches us in His dealings with His servant in the wilderness and in Mount Horeb.

The splendid scenic parable of Sinai cleared up Elijah's difficulties. By means of it he caught again the clue of Providence. He never again dropped the thread until it led him to the chariot of fire. The parable was for him personally. He was to be like it. In his case roar was to be subsided into whisper. After the cataclysms of his career, there was to be a period of blissful communion. Again the parable had meaning for the national life. Storm and fire stands for the initial means of reformation. They made the nation susceptible to the still small voice of justice and truth, which breathed through the prophets who succeeded. To the few isolated events of Elijah's career one was to be added which should surpass them all, even in the quality of scenic effect. But any attempt at minute description of Elijah's translation leads to exaggerated rhetoric. Human language can not depict the scene. The Lord's minister on this occasion, as on so many others, was a flaming fire.

Amos, to whose book attention is drawn in the closing lesson of the quarter, is the peer of any in the college of the prophets. He has been called the peasant-prophet. He lived among the rough hills of Judea, near the edge of the great desert. He was untrained in the schools. It is the surprise of the critics that from such an unlikely source such an elaborate and exalted work should come. Amos has been compared to Dante. His prophecy has been described as a thunder-storm rolling over all the surrounding kingdoms, touching Judah, and finally setting down upon Israel.

LETTER TO AN OAKLAND DOCTOR

Oakland, Md.

Dear Sir: You understand chemistry: how'd you like to earn $1000?

Devoe lead-and zinc—that's the name of our paint that takes fewer gallons than mixed paint and wears twice as long as lead-and oil—is made of white-lead, white-zinc, its color, turpentine dryer, and linseed oil.

If any chemist finds any adul teration in this paint we'll pay his bill and $1000 besides.

It's nobody's business what we put in our paint, of course;but we want it known. For lead-and zinc and linseed oil, ground together by machinery, are the stuff to paint with: and lead-and-oil mixed by hand is not.

We want it known that one word describes the best paint in the world; and that word is Devoe.

Are you going to paint?

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & Co

P. S. J. M. Davis & Son sell our paint

Subscribe for The Republican

BAUMGARTNER'S BIG BARGAINS!

5C SUGAR BOWLS, CREAM PITCHERS, THREE PAPERS PINS, ½ GAL. TIN BUCKETS, CAKE PLATES, AND LOTS MORE. 5C

Come around and see what 5 and 10c will do.

THE LITTLE MAN.

THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS. BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital	$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits	250,000
Liability of Shareholders	100,000
Additional Security to Depositors	$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

L. E. HANSON,
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland
PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD
CHEAP EXCERSIONS
TO THE
St. Louis World's Fair
EVERY WEDNESDAY IN
AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.
Only $14.50 Round Trip from OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.
2100 Madison Square, PHILA., PA.
Mention this paper.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE
WORLD'S FAIR,
ST. LOUIS.
Three THROUGH Trains DAILY
Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars, VIA CINCINNATI.
SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RATES.
CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS
From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

ONLY $4.00 TO WASHINGTON AND RETURN,
ONLY $4.50 TO BALTIMORE AND RETURN,
Saturday, September 17, via BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD,
Special train will leave Oakland at 12 night, affording an opportunity to spend all day Sunday among the attractions of either Capital or Monumental City. 2t

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars Cameras and Photo Supplies

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

COAL.

I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of

Bituminous Coal,

mined from my mine west of town.

Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.

Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be promptly filled.

E. Z. TOWER.

MAGIC REMEDY

Cures Diarrhoea, Cramps in the Stomach, Colera Morbus, Dysentary or Flux, in a few minutes. A positive cure. Keep a bottle handy; it will save many a doctor's bill, and possibly your life. At dealers, 25c; by Mail, 30c—in safety mailing case.

KEYSTONE COMP'Y ELAINE W. VA.

CANCER CURED

permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1520 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

INDIGESTION

"I was troubled with stomach trouble. Thedford's Black-Draught did me more good in one week than all the doctor's medicine I took in a year."—MRS. SARAH E. SHIRFIELD, Ellettsville, Ind.

Thedford's Black Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Thedford's Black Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

More sickness is caused by constipation than by any other disease. Thedford's Black-Draught not only relieves constipation but cures diarrhœa and dysentery and keeps the bowels regular.

All druggists sell 25-cent packages.

"Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine to regulate the bowels I have ever used."—MRS. A. M. GRANT, Sneads Ferry, N. C.

CONSTIPATION

Yellow Flat's Heiress

By HARRISON SMITH

Copyright, 1904, by Richard B. Shelton

The Interstate limited had rumbled along for the last hour and a half across brown, level plains, whose hopeless homogeneity of landscape was only occasionally relieved by clumps of dessicated and no less hopeless cottonwoods. Presently the whistle tooted hoarsely. There was a grinding of set brakes, and the train slowed down and came to a stop before a bare little station, a derelict seemingly in this level waste.

Tancred rose rather unwillingly from his comfortable chair and, preceded by the obsequious porter bearing his heavy suit case, stepped from the limited on to the uneven board platform of Yellow Flat station. He looked about him, and his heart sank. The porter beside him seemed to him the representative of a civilization that would depart when the limited pulled out. So Tancred gave the porter a half dollar and stood watching the receding train with a feeling that he had been marooned.

There was one consolation, however. He could finish up the business which had brought him hither in a day or two and quit this desolation. A week of this flat nothingness he felt would drive him mad. He sought the station agent and inquired of him the best way to reach Tapley's ranch. The agent hailed a nondescript individual addressed as Jock, who was loafing on the benches, and asked him what he could do for this gentleman, who wanted to get to Tapley's.

"Old man Tapley at the 4X?" said Jock. "Sure! Drop you there on my way to the Crescent." He led the way to a vehicle outside, half wagon, half buckboard. "Hop in," he said hospitably.

Jock clucked to his team, and they jolted over the brown plains behind a pair of piebald ponies whose chief accomplishment seemed to lie in whisking their tails over the lines and running like mad. Jock was not loquacious, and Tancred was in no mood to talk. Frankly he wished the thing was over and that he was starting back east.

SUCH A GIRL AT YELLOW FLAT FAIRLY TOOK AWAY HIS BREATH.

He fell to wondering what sort of a girl this niece of Tapley's was like. Probably she was old and more or less of a barbarian or perhaps she was the sort who would say, "Oh, ain't that lovely!" when he told her his late client, the Hon. Peter Chisholm, had left her a fortune that had been the envy of many scheming women in the cycle of the unmarried Peter's acquaintance. Jock here beside him could probably enlighten him as to Miss Parsons, but it was scarcely worth while. She was some quite impossible person no doubt. He handed Jock a cigar and put the whole thing from his mind.

It was gray twilight when they drove up to the ranch house at the 4X. Tancred alighted and was warmly welcomed by Tapley.

"I don't care a snap of my fingers what business it is that has brought you," he said to Tancred. "You're to stay just as long as you can stand it with us, and a little longer if you have any charity for isolated old chaps like myself," he added hospitably. "A man in touch with things in the east is a godsend, sir. Supper will be ready shortly, and meanwhile Gertrude shall give you some tea. Pardon me a moment, and I'll hunt her up."

The room they had entered evidently served as a library. Books lined the walls, tempting chairs offered their comfort, skin rugs covered the polished floor. It was quiet and in excellent taste. Tancred's misgivings about the lady were somewhat mitigated.

At that moment Tapley returned.

"Mr. Tancred," he said, "permit me to present the lady whose business brought you here, my niece, Miss Parsons."

Tancred bowed and murmured his greetings somewhat incoherently, for surprise had tied his tongue. Had he met her on Broadway he would have looked at her more than once, but finding such a girl at Yellow Flat fairly took away his breath.

"Won't you let me take away the bad taste of your ride with some tea?" she asked solicitously.

Tancred asquiesced heartily and seated himself near the dainty tea table where she was busying herself.

"Twenty-two," he told himself mentally, "and the finest eyes in America."

In that half hour at the tea table Tancred fell in love, and, having fallen in love, the object of his coming here intruded itself like a black cloud in the fair sky of his happiness. This girl was an heiress. It was this he had come to tell her. And Tancred, albeit a sturdy young lawyer, was by no means wealthy. He suddenly resolved to let the fortune remain in the background for a week at least. He would be unreservedly happy for that time, and then—"Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof," he told himself.

"Cousin Peter couldn't have left me much," said Miss Parsons.

"No," said Tancred, carrying out his resolution. "I'll go over the papers carefully, and in a week's time I think I can tell you the exact amount."

A week went by—two weeks—a month. Still the exact amount of Cousin Peter's legacy was not vouchsafed to Miss Parsons. She seemed to have found a richer legacy in her rides with Tancred across the brown plains and her talks with him before the library fire. Uncle Tapley looked on with happy approval.

"They're thoroughbreds—a fine pair," he told himself often and with much satisfaction.

It was at the end of the sixth week of his stay at the 4X ranch that Tancred after a night of sleepless agony resolved to terminate the pangs of conscience which were beginning to trouble him seriously. They had ridden that morning to a group of wells on the northern border of the ranch. The air was crisp and clear, and Miss Parsons, with eyes sparkling and cheeks aglow from the ride, was doubly charming

Tancred's mind reverted to that afternoon when he had stood on the platform of the Yellow Flat station.

"I felt as if I were marooned," he told himself, "and I was marooned—in paradise."

He squared his shoulders and turned to the girl.

"I'm going back tomorrow," he said, with quiet force.

"Tomorrow?" The consternation in her voice set his heart thumping, but he went on calmly.

"Yes; tomorrow. You and I are very far apart." His voice had a note of sadness.

"Are we very far apart?" she said, looking away.

"Three hundred thousand dollars," he said.

"I—I don't think I understand you," she said, regarding him with wondering eyes.

"Cousin Peter is responsible," he observed.

"Oh!" she gasped. "Was it all that?"

"Yes," he said. "You understand, of course, why I go?"

She was silent. Her face was turned from him again. Presently he caught the sound of a sob.

"Miss Parsons—Gertrude!" he cried, and—such are resolutions—he put his arm about her.

"I'll—I'll give it away," she said, sobbing unrestrainedly on his shoulder.

And because of this, brown, bare Yellow Flat became the garden of Eden—to Tancred, at least.

Three Poems.

Poems are of three kinds—magazine poems, tone poems and gowns.

Magazine poems have distinct raisons d'etre. There is always unconscious idiocy seeking expression. Besides, the space between stories is often too large for a tail piece and too small for an illustration, whereupon it is a poem or nothing, and nothing, while it has its points of superiority, is typographically ineffective.

A tone poem is the Pierian spring escaping through a slide trombone, with any kind of a seat, at $5.

In the opinion of some sober critics gowns are quite as dithyrambic in form as they would be had Walt Whitman been a milliner. They follow no rule of construction further than that they look best on women who can least afford them.

Poem was originally a Greek word, meaning merely a thing made. A thing made to order is a later significance.—Life.

A Substitute For Images.

Members of the Greek church of Russia, where images are forbidden, have resorted to what an unfriendly critic has described as an ingenious evasion of an ecclesiastical prohibition. They do not carve a figure out of marble or shape it in bronze, but they paint the face, hands and perhaps the feet of a saint on wood and form the robes by means of metal work in relief. The nimbus of the saint is not infrequently enameled and in some cases the drapery is studded with precious stones, but bejeweled icons of any real value are not, as a rule, to be found in churches, though sometimes images are covered with glass to protect them from the kisses of those who come to pray before them.

What an "Old Man Kangaroo Mile" Is

What is an "old man kangaroo mile?" The expression was used by the premier of Victoria in a recent speech, and one of the reporters subsequently asked him what it meant. "Well, you see," he replied, "an ordinary English mile is 1,760 yards; an old man kangaroo mile would be about 500 yards extra." The old man kangaroo is the biggest and most powerful of the marsupials, and it can cover a mile very rapidly with tremendous jumps. A race between an old man kangaroo and a motor car would be worth seeing if it were possible to arrange and carry out such a contest.—London Chronicle.

An Old Favorite

THE LADY OF TEARS

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

THROUGH valley, and hamlet, and city,
Wherever humanity dwells,
With a heart full of infinite pity,
A breast that with sympathy swells,
She walks, in her beauty immortal;
Each household grows sad as she nears,
But she crosses at length every portal,
The mystical Lady of Tears.

If never this vision of sorrow
Has shadowed your life in the past,
You will meet her I know, some to-morrow;
She visits all hearthstones at last.
To house and cottage and palace,
To servant and king, she appears,
And offers the gall of her chalice—
The unwelcome Lady of Tears.

To the eyes that have smiled but in gladness,
To the souls that have basked in the sun,
She seems in her garments of sadness
A creature to dread and to shun,
And lips that have drunk but of pleasure
Grow pallid and tremble with fears,
As she pours out the gall from her measure,
The terrible Lady of Tears.

But in midnight, lone hearts that are aching
With the agonized numbness of grief
Are saved from the torture of breaking
By her bitter-sweet draught of relief.
Oh, then do all graces enfold her,
Like a goddess she looks and appears,
And the eyes overflow that behold her,
The beautiful Lady of Tears.

Though she turns to lamenting all laughter,
Though she gives us despair for delight,
Life holds a new meaning thereafter
For those who but greet her aright,
They stretch out their hands to each other,
For sorrow that smiles and endears,
The children of our tender mother—
The sweet, blessed Lady of Tears.

An Old Favorite

GOD'S ACRE

By Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

I LIKE that ancient Saxon phrase which calls
The burial-ground God's Acre! it is just;
It consecrates each grave within its walls,
And breathes a benison o'er the sleeping dust.

God's Acre! Yes, that blessed name imparts
Comfort to those who in the grave have sown
The seed that they had garnered in their hearts,
Their bread of life, alas! no more their own.

Into its furrows shall we all be cast,
In the sure faith that we shall rise again
At the great harvest, when the archangel's blast
Shall winnow, like a fan, the chaff and grain.

Then shall the good stand in immortal bloom,
In the fair gardens of that second birth;
And each bright blossom mingle its perfume
With that of flowers which never bloomed on earth.

With thy rude ploughshare, Death, turn up the sod,
And spread the furrow for the seed we sow:
This is the field and Acre of our God,
This is the place where human harvests grow!

An Old Favorite

ENSIGN EPPS, THE COLOR BEARER

By John Boyle O'Reilly

ENSIGN EPPS, at the battle of Flanders,
Sowed a seed of glory and duty,
That flowers and flames in height and beauty
Like a crimson lily with heart of gold,
Today, when the wars of Ghent are old
And buried as deep as their dead commanders.

Ensign Epps was the color bearer—
No matter on which side, Philip or Earl;
Their cause was the shell—his deed was the pearl.
Scarce more than a lad, he had been a sharer
That day in the wildest work of the field.
He was wounded and spent, and the fight was lost;
His comrades were slain, or a scattered host,

But stainless and scathless, out of the strife
He had carried his colors safer than life.
By the river's brink, without weapon or shield,
He faced the victors. The thick heart-mist
He dashed from his eyes, and the silk he kissed
Ere he held it aloft in the setting sun,
As proudly as if the fight were won;
And he smiled when they ordered him to yield.

Ensign Epps, with his broken blade,
Cut the silk from the gilded staff,
Which he poised like a spear till the charge was made,
And hurled at the leader with a laugh.
Then round his breast, like the scarf of his love,
He tied the colors his heart above,
And plunged in his armor into the tide,
And there, in his dress of honor, died.

Where are the lessons your kinglings teach?
And what is the text of your proud commanders?
Out of the centuries, heroes reach
With the scroll of a deed, with the word of a story,
Of one man's truth and of all men's glory,
Like Ensign Epps at the battle of Flanders.

The Mountain State BUSINESS COLLEGE

Gives a training that turns talent into a money maker. Does it quickly, thoroughly, cheaply. Full and complete courses in BOOKKEEPING, PENMANSHIP, SHORTHAND and TYPEWRITING. $100 pays tuition, board and room rent for five months. Skilled teachers. Large attendance. Healthful study halls and recitation rooms. Modern and convenient furniture. The M. S. B. C. has a National reputation and its graduates are sought after by business men everywhere. Now is the best time to begin a course. No vacation. Individual instruction. Our new Art Catalogue can be had for the asking. Address, A. G. SINE, President, PARKERSBURG, WEST VA.

The Boy Makes the Mule Go,
And the Mule Makes the Cart Go.
WITH OUR NEW PROCESS
We Make the Bread Go!
Because It Is Best.
A Trial Will Convince You.
OAKLAND MODEL STEAM BAKERY,
HENRY LAUER, Proprietor.

Carey's Magnesia Flexible Cement Roofing for Flat or Steep Surfaces

Is suitable for all classes of buildings as it affords thorough fire protection and is a non-conductor of heat and cold. It will last the lifetime of the roofboards. It is fire-proof and is rated the same as metal or slate roofs. Call or write for samples and prices.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,
Agents for Garrett County, Oakland, Md.

First National Bank
OF GRANTSVILLE, MD
Now Open for Business.
EQUIPPED WITH A
Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe and Vault.
Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound banking.
Deposits by mail and all correspondence given prompt attention.
We Solicit Your Account.

Paid-up Capital, - - $25,000
Liability of Stockholders, 25,000
Total Liability, - $50,000
PAYS 3 PER CENT.
on time deposits. Interest computed and paid semi-annually.
DIRECTORS.
C. H. JENNINGS, U. M. STANTON, G. C. KELLER, ELI STANTON, W. A. HITCHINS, J. S. HERSHBERGER, FRANK WATTS
OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - President.
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President.
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier.

The Up-to-Date Grocery,
First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.
Exclusively a Grocery Store.
CASH OR PRODUSE—One price to everybody and that the lowest consistent with a complete line of High-Grade Groceries.
Everything New, Clean and First-Class.
Fresh Vegetables on THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS.
Largest Line of CRACKERS in Oakland—Fresh Every Week.
W. H. BARTLETT.

THOS. LITTLE.
This is the season of year to make changes, and I will make a GREAT REDUCTION in the prices of
China and Porcelain Ware.
I have a large stock of this goods and they must go at the remarkably low price of 10c each. Many of these pieces are cheap at 25c. But I have concluded to sell all at the low price of 10c each.
They consist of Decorated, Gold Trimmed Meat Plates, large and small, Bakers, Nappies, Pitchers, Bowls, Cups and Saucers, large and small plates, just the thing for every day use.
Also a Fine Line of Imported China at Less than Cost.
Come Early and get the Choice Pieces.
HO S. LITTL E

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

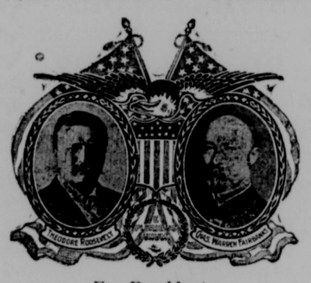
REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 22, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.



For President:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

New York.

For Vice-President:

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,

Indiana.

For Congress:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

Allegany County.

IMPROVED CONDITIONS.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in his letter of acceptance diagnoses the weakness of the Democratic party as "the result of an effort to improvise convictions; for when thus improvised it is natural that they should be held in a tentative manner."

The whole current history of the Democratic party from the date of New York State convention early in the year has been of this character. The men who assumed to control Judge Parker and who did secure control of the Democratic National Convention bent all their ingenuity to finding expressions that would improvise convictions that could be held in a tentative manner during the campaign. Mr. Bryan characterized the New York platform and the St. Louis platform as carrying doubtful and double meaning. He labored day and night at St Louis to get something affirmative into the National platform and his one success was in amending the tariff plank so as to declare that "protectien is robbery of the many for the benefit of the few," and demanding "a tariff for revenue only." On every other plank the men who were in control sought to "improvise convictions" which should be held in a "tentative manner" and their candidate for President has so held them, explaining away any meaning which seemed reasonable to his own formal utterances.

The Democratic campaign has so far been to fight under cover without any vigorous declaration of principles or policies. That party has always had positive declarations in its previous platforms and there has never been any reason to doubt that it did stand for tariff for revenue only, for free silver and for surrendering the Philippines.

There is no doubt that the great majority of Democrats still believe in these old Democratic policies. The new managers of the party and the candidate have persuaded the majority to keep silent for a time that there may be an appearance of saneness and safety about the whole organization. They have so far kept out of the campaign the real Democratic leaders in Congress who would shape legislation if their party should win in this campaign and elect the President and a majority of Congress.

But the most dangerous lunatic is he that has the cunning to appear sane when brought before the court of lunacy for examination. So with the Democratic party. Its improvised convictions are only for the campaign Give that party control of the Executive and the Congress and its old insanity will appear again as it did in 1894 in the Democratic tariff law which wrecked the prosperity of the country, and again in 1896 in the fanaticism of free silver. It cannot be trusted.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

While the Democrats grumble, growl and snarl at the Administration for having recognized the Republic of Panama, and attempted in vain to make good the charge of double dealing in securing control of the canal strip, the world moves and work goes on. Without any blare of trumpets the Panama Canal Commission are going ahead. Laws have been enacted for the government of the canal zone, sanitary officers are whitewashing, fumigating, ditching, draining, burning garbage, fighting mosquitoes, and taking all necessary steps to make the Isthmus as healthful as Havana was under the government of General Leonard Wood.

Work on the canal is not being neglected, for Admiral Walker who has just returned from the Isthmus, reports that excavation is now proceeding twice as fast and with less men and at half the cost as compared to the management under the French Company. This is but another instance of the well-known fact that the Republican Party is the party that does and dares. The country needed the canal and told the Administration to acquire the strip and do the work. Roosevelt was the wrong man to so instruct unless the country meant what it said. The strip has been acquired, the work has been pushed and will continue to be pushed to a conclusion, and the waters of the Atlantic and the Pacific will mingle in an American canal to float American shipping which will carry American goods made by American workmen to all parts of the world.

From the way the Democratic press has been hammering at Roosevelt's lettter of acceptance, there must be something in it that hurts.

THE idea of Henry Gassaway Davis, in the eighth decade of life taking up the work of a Cleveland, a McKinley or a Roosevelt is fantastic. It is really side splitting. The Democratic convention dealt the candidacy of Judge Parker a body blow when it gave him the old gentleman as a running mate. In the remote contingency of the election of Judge Parker, his Secretary of State, as second in line for the Presidency, with the withered life of Henry Gassaway Davis intervening, would become a very important person. Suppose he should be David B. Hill! The thought is dumfounding

---

Col. Pearre at Home.

Col. George A. Pearre, Republican representative in Congress from the Sixth Maryland district, has returned from Europe, where he went early in the summer for a period of rest prior to the opening of the fall campaign. Colonel Pearre was greatly benefited by his stay abroad, and has come back home vastly improved in health.

Representative Pearre would have returned to this country earlier had the exigencies of the campaign in the Sixth district demanded his presence. Up to this time, however, there has been no occasion for ante-election work, as the Demacrats have not as yet named a candidate to oppose Colonel Pearre for Congressional honors. The campaign will get under way shortly, it is believed, and Colonel Pearre will take his usual active part in the contest. Those conversant with the political affairs of the district look for his re-election by an increased plurality next November. Two years ago Colonel Pearre received 18,310 votes to 14,479 cast for his Democratic opponent, C. F. Kenneweg, a plurality of nearly 4,000.—Washington Star.

BITTINGER AND VICINITY

Mr. Jonas Bittinger is the owner of a very pious shepherd dog, who by some strange instinct is able to keep a record of the days so accurately that he always knows when it is Sunday. It is said that this sagacious creature is very fond of accompanying his master wherever he may go during the week, and if it so happens that Mr. B. wishes the dog to remain at home on any week day he is obliged to chain him, but on Sunday no manner of persuasion will induce "Jack" to leave home, even though the entire family goes away and remains all day.

Mr. C. E. Ellithorpe spent last and this week at Oakland as a juror.

Mr. Jas. Emerick, salesman for the Shipley Hardware Co., was in town last week.

The public school here had a very successful opening, and the first week reached an enrollment of 34.

Miss Lizzie Welch is in charge of the Beachy school for this winter and Mr. T. Turney of the Fox Town academy.

The Lutheran Sunday School will hold a "Harvest Home" picnic at this place on Saturday, Oct. 1st, and an enjoyable time is promised and all are invited.

Mr. Clarence Brenneman returned last Saturday from St. Louis, where he had been in attendance at the fair.

Mr. Chris Beachy started from here last Tuesday morniug for Oklahoma where he will probably locate permanently. Mr. Beachy will visit the fair at St. Louis en route. The well wishes of many friends go with Chris on his journey.

Comparatively new cook stove cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. 2t*

DEER PARK IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY

Prizes Awarded Road Supervisors for Good Work.

One of the original causes for the starting of the Village Improvement Society in Deer Park was the desire to get better roads. It seemed to some of the founders when they began to talk of it five years ago that something could be done in this way that would mean, first of all, access to Deer Park easier for all residents of the neighborhood and, second, make the summer driving more agreeable for those who come only as summer visitors.

The society has from the beginning done at its own cost some repairs of bridges, culverts and so on near Deer Park when the money in the hands of supervisors was insufficient. Three years ago it requested the county commissioners to place in its charge a section of the road leading out of Deer Park, stating that it would prefer to have a bad road or one hard to keep in order. The commissioners appointed Mr. George Walter, a member of the society, as supervison of the road from Deer Park over the mountain east of the railroad to the Ryan's Glade road near Loch Lynn. Mr. Walter has cared for this road now for three years at the expense of the society. From being a much gullied, stony and very rough road it is now, in spite of a situation which makes it liable to be washed by every rain, one of the very best roads in the county. The cost of maintenance of this road during the past season was $185, of which $30 was paid by the county levy.

To further this same object of bettering the roads, the society decided last fall to give this summer three prizes for the best roads in the Deer Park vicinity. A committee selected the roads to compete, choosing those most in use, omitting the road above described as under the charge of the society itself, and omitting the main road from Deer Park to Oakland by Broadford. Seven separate portions of roads were considered by the judge and examined several different times during August and September. The Judge was Mr. H. C. Groome, of Warrenton, Va., who has been spending the summer at Deer Park. He made the awards on consideration of the general excellence of the roads, their condition with respect to drainage ditches, bridges, culverts and the like. The opinion expressed was that the Old Tram Road from Deer Park to the Hooppole was, on the whole, better kept than any of the other highways and the first prize of $25 was given to Mr. Samuel Rodeheaver, the supervisor of this section. The second prize, $15, was presented to Mr. Jacob L. Echard, of Mountain Lake Park, for the Gordon road. The third best piece was thought to be the road from Thayerville to the Altamont road and $10 was accordingly sent to the supervisor for this section.

The society proposes to give similar sums next year in the same way and has in contemplation the possibility of giving somewhat larger sums in order that the men performing the labor on the roads under the supervisors may receive some share of the award.

Another Divorce Sought.

Mrs. Rebecca A. McMinn, wife of Howard J. McMinn, by her counsel, Attorney Julius C. Renninger, has filed a bill in the Circuit Court seeking a divorce from her husband. The action is based upon statutory grounds, alleging excessive cruelty and citing the fact that the defendant, McMinn, was indicted and sentenced by the Circuit Court for Garrett county upon two separate charges of assaulting and beating the plaintiff

---

Subscribe for The Republican

Men of Oak

Timbers of oak keep the old homestead standing through the years. It pays to use the right stuff.

"Men of oak" are men in rugged health, men whose bodies are made of the soundest materials.

Childhood is the time to lay the foundation for a sturdy constitution that will last for years.

Scott's Emulsion is the right stuff.

Scott's Emulsion stimulates the growing powers of children, helps them build a firm foundation for a sturdy constitution.

Send for free sample.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists,
409-415 Pearl Street, New York.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

NEW BRIDGE AT SWALLOW FALLS.

To Be Erected by the County Commissioners at Once.

The wooden bridge spanning the Youghiogheny River at Swallow Falls which has for several months been in an unsafe condition, broke down near the centre of the channel span one day last week shortly after a heavily laden lumber wagon to which was attached four horses, had passed over it and fell into the river, carrying with it an empty wagon which was being taken across the structure by hand.

At their meeting last week the Commissioners awarded to the York Bridge Company the contract to erect a single span iron structure over the river at this point to take the place of the wrecked bridge, the contract price for the superstructure being $1139, the bridge to be in place within sixty days from the date of the signing of the contract.

The Commissioners also contracted with the same construction company for the erection of a sidewalk along the bridge over the Yough at Friendsville. The walk is to be five feet wide and especially adapted for foot travel. When this bridge was erected a few years ago the necessity for a sidewalk was not so apparent as at present and by providing the addition it will be a great convenience to the people of that town, especially the children passing from one side to another on their way to and from school. The sidewalk will cost $415 and is to be completed within sixty days.

Briar-Bend Seminary Reopened.

The reopening of Briar-Bend Seminary at Mountain Lake Park, September the fourteenth, was the intellectual climax of prominent events of the season at this famous resort. Words of welcome were given by the President, Miss E. B. Swan, followed by reading of Scripture, prayer and a brief outline of the history of Briar-Bend Seminary.

Interesting addresses and kind expressions were given by Miss Julia Hill, of Washington; Mrs. John E. Gault, of Baltimore; Mrs. Rambeau, of Boston; Mrs. C. W. Baldwin, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Jas. A. Enlow, of Cumberland. Letters of regrets were read from former pupils as follows: Messrs. Harland L. Jones, Frank E. Rathbun, Stuart Hamill, Semmes Hamill and those given verbally by the parents present in absence of their daughters as former pupils. The assembled pupils of 1904, ranging from young children to that of twenty years of age, occupying their respective places, the young men and young women separated by extreme distance in the spacious, bright, sunny study room, gave the atmosphere of preparation for application to the requirements of the standard of the Seminary. All looked bright and thoughtfully happy, and the mingling of guests and students when partaking of refreshments in an adjoining room recalled the happy college days of the past in the minds of those who were privileged to be present.

The establishment of Briar-Bend Seminary occurred in 1888, and has been doing its progressive work amidst local and more distant patronage of young men and women. A number of the young men have now entered universities and colleges in further preparation for their chosen professions, while others are occupying positions of trust as bankers and other business interests, the foundation having been laid at Briar-Bend Seminary, close in reach of home.

Among the former and recent students: Messrs. H. L. Jones, banker; Frank E. Rathbun, journalist; Stuart Hamill, lawyer; Semmes Hamill, lawyer; Geo. P. Alderson, law department in Georgetown University; Wesley Rudisill, electrician, superintendent of Mt. Lake Park Water and Light Co.; Irwin Sperry, superintendent of railroad works, Norfolk, Va.; John Weber, florist.

These are noted as local men of promise who have been under the thorough instruction of Briar-Bend Seminary.

The present term is reopened with gratifying prospects. We note Miss Adele Chartener, from Pittsburg, Pa., is a boarding pupil.

We regard this Seminary as a rare opportunity for culture of the mind, soul and body and a complete fitness for all practical emergencies of life.

MRS. JOHN E. GAULT,
Baltimore, Md.

Date of Wedding Announced.

The date of the approaching wedding of Miss Nellie Harrison, of Somerset, and of Mr. John C. Brydon, general manager of the Somerset Coal Company, has been made public, the event to take place in the Lutheran church at Somerset, on Wednesday evening, October 12th. It will be one of the swell social functions of the year at the county seat town, and owing to the prominence of the contracting parties the attendance from away will necessarily be very large.

The groom-elect is a son of Mr. William Brydon, of Bloomington, this county.

Subscribe for The Republican

THE COURT HAS AN OUTING.

Justices and Lawyers Visit Coneway's Tower Monday Evening and Take Dinner.

Monday evening of this week after the adjournment of the Circuit Court Judges A. Hunter Boyd, Robert R. Henderson and Martin L. Keedy as guests of the local bar, were driven up to Conneway's Tower, eight miles south of town, where dinner was served by Mrs. Conneway to the gentleman composing the party.

The Judges were accompanied by Messrs John T. Mitchell, Gilmor S. Hamill, Judge Ferdinand Williams, Edward H. Sincell, J. C. Renninger, Wm. R. Offutt, Edwin L. Mitchell and G. S. Hammill, Jr.

The party after viewing the magnificent sight from the tower and partaking of a bountiful repast returned to Oakland the same evening, arriving here about ten o'clock.

BLOOMINGTON STORE ROBBED.

Mr. William Moody Met With Another Loss Friday Night.

The general store of Mr. William Moody at Bloomington, which has been robbed upon one or two former occasions was again entered by burglars Friday night of last week when goods to the value of about one hundred dollars, consisting of boots, shoes, cutlery and notions, were carried off.

There is no positive clue to the robbers and as yet none of the stolen articles have been recovered or located.

NEW TELEPHONE STOCK ISSUED

To Holders of Stock In The West Va. and Maryland Company.

On Saturday the officers of the Garrett County Telephone Company met in Oakland and issued to holders of stock in the West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania Telephone Company certificates of stock in the Garrett County Telephone Company in lieu of the stock they held in the West Virginia company which was recently absorbed by purchase by the Garrett County Company. By the terms of purchase holders of stock in the corporation which has ceased to exist received stock in the Garrett County company upon a basis of 75 cents on the dollar for their stock.

The new certificates were signed by Mr. W. A. Maffett president, and James W. Beeghley, Esq., secretary of the Garrett County Company. Mr. Clarence V. Guard, vice president of the West Virginia Company, was present and represented the holders of stock in his company.

Married.

SANDERS—BOWMAN.—A pretty home wekding took place yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Sanders near Gortner, when their daughter Miss Addie Elizabeth was united with Mr. Lee Bowman, of near Sunnyside, the ceremony being performed by Rev. E. Manges, pastor of the Oakland Lutheran church, in the presence of the families of the bride and groom.

Mrs. M. D. H. TAYLOR.

SECOND STREET.

FALL OPENING.

Friday and Saturday,
SEPTEMBER 23-24.

All the Latest Styles from the East in—

Hats, Caps, Notions, Fancy Goods.

A full line of LADIES' AND CHILDREN'S WINTER UNDERWEAR, HOSIERY and GLOVES

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

New Fall Styles, 1904.

Women's Tailor Made Suits.
Women's Tailor Made Skirts.
Women's Tailor Made Coats.
Women's Queen Quality Shoes.
Men's Griffon Brand Clothing.
Men's Kirshbaum Overcoats.
Men's All America Shoes.
Men's Bion Shoes.
Men's Crawford Shoes.

We have spared no pains in making a selection of goods from the leading factories in the United States.

We want every teacher visiting Oakland next week to make our store a visit.

WE ARE ORIGINATORS OF

High Grade Merchandise

IN THIS SECTION.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

The Garrett National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, - $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, - 20,000.00

The Easy Way.

Is standing tedious? There is one separator you can turn comfortably while sitting—one that has a supply can less than waist high.

THE TUBULAR SEPARATOR

IS THE ONLY ONE! New inventions make it so—make it the most practical—most effective—best! All other separators are dangerous and expensive in comparison. I'm selling lots of them—and giving away catalogs about them. Read the "Separator."

J. E GNAGEY, Accident, Md.

A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

HAS NO SUBSTITUTE

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby--Personal Mention, Etc.

Amos Bittinger, of near Mountain Lake Park, was a business visitor to this office yesterday afternoon.

Merchant and Mrs. D. M. Dixon, who spent a week or two at the St. Louis Fair, have returned home.

Mrs. Jennie Davis, of Frostburg, is here visiting her mother, Mrs. S. M. Miller at the Commercial Hotel.

Miss Gertrude Shirer, of this office, is the guest this week of friends and relatives at Grafton and Clarksburg, West Va.

Mr. George Loar, of Grafton, West Va., spent Sunday in Oakland as the guest of his mother and other relatives.

Rev. W. H. Faust, the Baptist minister stationed at Deer Park will preach Sunday as follows: Elder Hill, 11 a. m.; Thayerville 3.15 p. m. and Deer Park 7.30 p. m.

Prof. Leo J. Rasche, of Grafton, accompanied by his cousin Miss Stella Rowan, of Pittsburg, Pa., arrived here Friday evening and remained until Monday evening as guests of Mrs. Kate Rasche at her residence on Water street.

Rev. E. R. Skidmore is dead at Buckhannon, W. Va., after a lingering illness, aged 43 years. He was a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church and leaves a wife and family. He was widely known in the West Virginia Conference and was a son of the late Alpheus Skidmore.

Ex-deputy Sheriff Frank Callis, of Hoyes, who was painfully injured one day last week by having his foot run over by a heavy threshing machine which he was assisting to move from one point to another, was in town a day or two recently, haying almost recovered from his injuries.

Capt. James A. Hayden left Oakland yesterday for Uniontown, Pa., where he will visit old friends and participate in the reunion of the Eleventh Pennsylvania Reserves of which he was a member during the Civil War. The reunion will occur today.

Elsewhere in this paper today will be found a highly interesting and entertaining letter written by Dr. A. F. Speicher, formerly of Accident district, from his new home at Los Angeles, Cal., in which city the doctor and family located about a year ago, having previously resided at Elk Lick, Pa., but all the while retaining their interest in the welfare of Garrett county and her citizens.

Mrs. K. C. Tannehill, of Confluence Pa., is in Oakland visiting Mrs. M. L. Scott.

Abraham A. McRobic, of near Deer Patk, has been granted an increase in pension to $10 per month.

Mr. Jeremiah Harvey, of near Wilson, West Va., was a visitor to this office Tuesday morning.

Mr. Clarence V. Guard, of Friendsville, was in Oakland last Saturday on business, returning home the same evening.

Mr. Carl White, Dixon & Kelso's head salesman, is off on a week's vacation which he is spending with relatives and friends at Uniontown, Pa.

Robert Shirer, of Clarksburg, West Va., son of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Shirer, of Oakland, arrived here Saturday to remain a few days visiting his parents.

Among the attorneys from out of town attending court in Oakland this week are Judge Ferdinand Williams, of Cumberland, and Mr. George D. Hay, of Philadelphia.

Mrs. John T. Mitchell and daughter Clara of Oakland, left here last Thursday evening for Roanoke, Va., where they will remain a month as the guests of relatives.

Mr. H. M. Hebden, of Baltimore, was in Oakland over Sunday as a guest at the Commercial Hotel.

Mr. John Kennedy, of Parkersburg, who with his father is engaged in a street paving contract at Piedmont, came up to Oakland Saturday night and was the guest over Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Martin and family.

Mr. William H. Pool, of near Blaine, has been recommended to Governor Warfield by the Democratic Committee for this county for appointment as Justice of the Peace for District No. 13.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Harne, who arrived here Saturday from Memphis, Tenn., and spent Sunday in Oakland as the guests of relatives, departed Monday for New Martinsville, West Va., where Mr. Harne will again locate as cashier in the bank at that city, he having resigned from the position last January and moved south.

The many friends of Dr. J. Lee McComas, the pioneer practitioner of Oakland, will be pleased to know that he has resumed the practice of his profession and may be consulted daily from ten o'clock a. m. until six o'clock p. m. at either Sturgiss' or Harned's Pharmacy. On Wednesdays and Saturdays he will give gratuitous advice to the poor.

Mr. Martin L. Fresh, of near Accident, was in Oakland yesterday taking home with him in two large wagons several tons of patent plaster which will be used for plastering his new house now being erected on his farm in place of the dwelling burned some months ago. The new house is commodious and will be quite an improvement to his property.

The Hustling Store at Mountain Lake Park will continue to hustle out its large stock of general merchandise until the entire stock is disposed of. All goods at cost except groceries. Come see the large stock of double and single wood heaters. Nothing to equal them on the market. One new six lid nine-inch hole steel range for sale. 2t.

Attorney Thomas J. Peddicord was at Terra Alta Monday evening where he attended a meeting of some of the citizens of that place as counsel concerning the extension of the town's limits, bringing within the corporation lines a number of farms upon which municipal taxes have been laid and their collection sought through process of the law. Mr. Peddicord has been retained as attorney by some of the parties to the suit which has taken on large proportions.

Rev. E. Manges, the pastor, announces services for Sunday in the Deer Park Lutheran church as follows: Preaching, preparatory service and communion at ten o'clock.

Mr. C. W. Swink returned to Oakland Monday from a trip of two weeks on business through the Valley of Virginia. While absent Mr. Swink purchased some well seasoned timber for use in his business and also a car load of fine poplar lumber for the Oakland Manufacturing Company. Mr. Swink made a portion of the trip a-wheel, traveling 235 miles on his bicycle without a breakdown. He returned by the way of Elkins and Marlington, in which section everything is in a prosperous condition. In the Valley he says things are in good shape with a prospect of reducing the Democratic majority.

Upon the occasion of the visit of Mr. James Whitehouse, of Baltimore, to Oakland on last Friday evening, he was met by many of his old and warm friends who remember with pleasure the numerous political campaigns made through the county in his company when he kept the audiences who gathered to hear him at almost every school house and cross roads in a constant roar of laughter by his witty passages and anecdotes, not forgetting the thrusts with telling effects at the opposition party and its principles.

Charles Vaughn, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Vaughn, was stricken with appendicitis Monday afternoon. While the attending physician is positive of the ailment he has not yet decided to perform an operation to remove the cause of trouble. The lad is resting comfortably this morning.

By advertisement printed in this paper today it will be noticed that the Board of Election Supervisors has set Tuesday, Oct. 4th, as the first day for registration; the second sitting will be the following Tuesday (Oct. 11th), after which date no names can be added to the registration books this year. Let every Republican see that his name is upon the books. If you know of one unregistered make it your duty to have him go to the proper registration officer upon one of the above dates and become qualified to vote by having his name entered upon the registry of voters in his proper district.

Mr. Chas. C. Speicher, of Accident, was in Oakland Saturday where he qualified before the Orphans' Court as administrator of the personal estate of his latey deceased mother and was also appointed trustee of the real estate belonging to his father, the late Austin Speicher, at the time of his death. Mr. Speicher was accompanied by his brother, Mr. Ross Speicher, of Wray, Colorado, who left his former home at Accident more than twenty years ago, settling first in Iowa, then in Nebraska and later going to Colorado where he has a fine farm. Although born in the vicinity of Accident where he grew to manhood his visit to Oakland Saturday was his first to this town. Mr. Speicher will remain with relatives at Accident for a month or more before his return to the west.

Downie's show, which was billed to arrive here early Tuesday morning and to give two performances that day, got lost on the road from Gorman and an accident to the canvas wagon containing the tent for the big show delayed its arrival until too late for its erection for the evening performance, hence everything except the side show was called off, much to the disappointment of all the young folks and many of the large ones. The show is said to be a really good one. It left here some time between midnight and daylight yesterday morning for Terra Alta where a performance was given yesterday and today it will delight the natives of Kingwood. For the occasion Deacon Brown has ordered a barrel of apple brandy to be tapped and set up in the public square.

Died.

PEARSON—At the residence of Mr. Chas. M. Miller at Swanton, on Saturday of heart trouble, Rev. Charles C. Pearson, aged 69 years. Mr. Pearson was well known in Oakland and at the time of his death was rector of St. Mark's Protestant Ebiscopal church at Berkley Springs, West Va., to which town his remains were conveyed and interred on Monday. He leaves a widow and one son. The deceased was a man of sterling character and great ability as a pulpit orator.

UPPERMAN—At her home in the east end of town, on Sunday night last of consumption, Mrs. George Upperman, aged about twenty-six years. The deceased leaves besides her husband three small children. The interment was made Tuesday in the Oakland cemetery.

Adjudged Insane.

Samuel Montgomery, an old soldier of the Civil War, was adjudged insane by a jury empanneled for that purpose last Thursday afternoon and committed to Springfield Asylum, Baltimore county, for treatment.

NEW VICE PRINCIPAL.

Miss May Hopkins, of Baltimore, To Assist Prof. McBee.

Miss May Hopkins, of Baltimore, a graduate of the Woman's College of that city, and also a graduate of the teachers training school, has been elected vice principal of the Oakland Public School to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. J. I. Sollars, who very acceptably filled the place for two years past.

Miss Hopkins arrived here Saturday evening and on Monday assumed her new duties as assistant to Prof. J. Frank McBee, the principal.

The school is now thoroughly organized. Its several departments, especially in the primary classes, are very much crowded and to relieve the congestion in these class rooms it has been deemed expedient to secure quarters for a portion of the primary scholars in another building located in the east end of town, which will probably be done some time this week.

RAVENSCROFT BUILDING ADDITION

Stone Masons Engaged in Erecting Foundation for Structure.

Ex-Senator R. A. Ravenscroft, who purchased several years ago the triangular lot of ground adjoining his property fronting on Second street and running through the block to Railroad street which prior to the fire of a few years ago was occupied by the Malette building, has a force of stone masons at work erecting the foundation walls for a new building which will become an addition to the structure already up and occupied as store rooms and offices.

The addition will be two stories high and will be constructed of brick and structural iron. The frontage on Second street will be about eighty feet, the line terminating at the railroad crossing.

A portion of the lot is now occupied by a building used by Browning Bros. as a meat store. The building will be removed to a point nearby where the occupants will continue business.

Baltimore Store Opening.

Mrs. Scott and Miss Vickers, of the Baltimore Store, have returned from the east with a stock of fall and winter millinery and announce that the opening will take place on Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 27th and 28th. You are cordially invited to be present.

LAW FOR TRACTION ENGINES.

Its Observance May Prevent Serious Accidents.

At this season of the year when the threshing of crops is at its height and with it an almost constant movement along our highways of traction engines and threshing outfits, it is deemed expedient to publish the law governing engines on the roads as follows:

"Every traction engine, when propelled by steam upon or over any public road in this state, shall be accompanied by at least two men, whose duty it shall be to so conduct the engine as to cause little alarm as possible to horses, ridden, driven or led upon such road, and to render at all times all reasonable assistance to persons so riding, or driving or leading horses upon such road.

"The person in charge of said engine, at the signal or request of any person leading a horse, or of any person leading or driving a horse or horses attached to any vehicle; or at the indication of such horse or horses becoming alarmed by said engine, shall go as far as practicable to the side of the road, and remain stationary until the said horse or horses have passed to a safe distance, in the meantime making as little noise as possible with the steam.

"One of the men accompanying such engine shall precede such engine at least three hundred yards to warn persons riding or driving upon any public road, of the approach of said engine and shall assist such person or persons in the management of any horse or horses that may require his assistance to control the same.

"If any person in charge of any such engine shall neglect to comply with the provisions of the three preceding sections, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars, and in default of the payment of said fine, shall be committed to jail for not less than thirty days, or until the fine is paid, or by both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the justice.

"Shall be the duty of the owner of such engine to have a copy of the four preceeding sections, and of this section, posted on said engine, and in default thereof he shall be subject to a fine of not less than ten dollars."

Pension Increased.

James Browning, of Allegany county, a Veteran soldier in the Civil war, has been granted an increase of pension from $8 to $12, under the age rule. His claim was filled June 17 last. He is 76 years old—a connection of the immense Browning family of Garrett county. Mr. Jacob Brown was the attorney.—Cumberland News.

Dixon & Kelso

Have just opened up an immense stock of

FALL & WINTER GOODS

To which we invite a careful inspection by prospective buyers. We call especial attention to our stock of . . . .

Outings, Flannels, Blankets, Clothing, Shoes, &c.

Will begin handling POTATOES on a large scale about October 1st. Will exchange anything in our stock for them at the market price at the time of delivery.

All are invited to come to our store when looking for your FALL and WINTER supply.

Yours, respectfully,

DIXON & KELSO.

BUILDING, PAVING, PRESSED FACE. BRICKS VITRIFIED FOR FOUNDATIONS VITRIFIED FOR SEWERS, STREET PAVING BLOCKS.

Best Quallty for Building, Casing, Sidewalks and Streets.
Beautiful Shades, Red, Light Granate and Mixed Colors.
Capacity 80,000 Daily. Prompt Shipments.

QUEEN CITY BRICK & TILE COMPANY
—AND—
CUMBERLAND GRANATE BRICK COMPANY
Cumberland, Maryland.

BLOOMINGTON.

Rev. A. R. Snedegar, the Methodist divine of this place an account of whose unfortunate accident was noted in your colums a few weeks ago, is still at the Hoffman hospital and rapidly improving from his serious injury.

The visiting Eagles from this place to the Eagles' convention at Baltimore last week, returned home on Saturday and report a glorious time.

Miss Emma Ridgley, of Ridgley, W. Va., returned home on Wednesday after a pleasant visit to postmistress Bartlett and Mr. and Mrs. John Raley.

Commissioner Stump is hustling the new bridge along and expects to have the abutments completed in a few days.

The corner-stone of the new M. E. church at this place will be laid by the Masonic fraternity of Westernport and Piedmont on next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunt returned on Monday from a visit to relatives in Pittsburg.

Evangelist Riley of Baltimore, preached in the M. E. church on last Sunday evening.

Dr. Hugh Strechan, of Savage, who has been practicing his profession at the above named place for the past 18 months, has closed his office and will locate at Hutters, I. T. He started for his new home on Tuesday evening and expects to take in the St. Louis Exposition en route.

Mr. Michael Flynn had two horses killed on the B. & O. one-half mile west of town on last Thursday night.

Mr. Truman Warnick, who has spent most of the summer at St. Louis, is visiting his brother, Mr. Geo Warnick.

Mr. Nelson Clark has moved to Crellin.

Two Lonaconing men by the name of Hohing were arrested at Keyser last week for hunting in West Virginia without a license. Judge Dailey imposed a fine with costs of $66.50. As they had killed only three squirrels their hunt proved to be a very dear one. If the game wardens of Garrett were as watchful as the Mineral county authorities, and the fine imposed as large as Judge Dailey's, we would soon have a good sized pile of West Virginia "boodle" in our county treasury.

The first game of Sunday base ball at Pea Vine Park occurred on last Sunday afternoon between the Highlanders of Piedmont and a picked nine from Savage and this place. The "profesh" won with ease. A passed-around-hat collection during the game netted the players about $27.00.

New Goods, Just Opened.

The Latest Things Out In

Pongees, Draperies, Satteens, (these are beauties). Seersuckers, Granite Cloths, Flannelettes, Sacking, Chambrays, etc.

We have them,
You want them,
Come get them.

The Latest Things Out In

Hats, Caps and Shoes,

and Men's and Boys

CLOTHING.

Also fine line Clothing Samples,

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

Proposals for Building Sidewalks

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, for the erection of a sidewalk fronting the opera house block in Oakland, beginning at the corner of Green and Second streets and ending at the north property line of H. Lauer, and extending from the property line along said block to the wood curbing.

Proposals will also be received for the erection of a walk from Second street to Railroad street walk.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of N. S. Heindel, First National Bank building, Oakland, Md.

Proposals must be on file with the clerk of said Mayor and Council not later than six o'clock, September 19th, 1904, and endorsed on the back, "Proposal for erecting sidewalks."

By order of the Mayor and Council of Oakland.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,

Plumbing,

Gas Fitting,

Steam and Hot Water Heating.

Center Street,
Keyser, W. Va.

PHONE 62.

FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

Dr. A. L. Speicher Writes an Entertaining Letter from His New Home.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Sept. 6, 1904.
To the Editor of The Republican:

I thought perhaps a short letter from this section might be of interest to many readers of your valuable paper, providing it does not find its way to the waste paper basket. We have been here for eight months, and have noted a few thing now and then.

The city of Los Angeles and suburban towns, as well as the country in general have been active and busy during the time that we have been here, and prosperity and success seem to be assured to the city. The unmistakable signs are in evidence that the city of Angels is on the verge of greater activity. Los Angeles is a very beautiful and bustling city. It has made wonderful progress and growth since our visit here seven years ago. It is difficult to realize the extent to which the city has grown, and the extensive improvemeets that have been made along all lines. It is an up to date city in every respect, and at its present rate of increase, in 1910 it will have a population of 250,000.

It has many up to date stores, a number of very elegant large department stores, some very fine hotels and beautiful homes, and one of the best street car services of any city in the land.

The real estate market and building operations are quite active. Frequently was it said at the beginning of 1904, that this year would witness a lull in business, as well as in the real estate market. There are several reasons for this, the partial failure of the hay and grain crops, the blow to the orange industry, on account of transportation facilities, and there came the exodus of thousands of Angelenos to the St. Louis fair, and it is said the representation California exceeds any other portion of the country in comparisod to population, and then again tens of thousands of tourists from different parts of the union visiting the exposition who otherwise in many instances would have made Los Angeles their objective point. All of this in connection with a presidential year which in itself ought to be of necessity a dull year. In face of all this the city is experiencing the busiest and most prosperous summer term it has had for many years. The traveling salesmen who visit Los Angeles from different parts of the country report that here they are placing unusually large orders. The wholesale merchants say their business is excellent and collections good, and that merchants are preparing for an extraordinary fall season.

In financial circles the local banks are enlarging their capital and expanding their resources and moving into larger and finer quarters.

In fact Los Angeles now has some of the most elegantly appointed banking rooms in the United States, of which the Southern California Savings bank, the Security Savings bank, and the First National and the new Farmer's & Merchant's National are conspicuous examples. A number of new banks have been established during the year, and several others are planning.

In real estate and building circles a condition of affairs exists not equaled by any other community in the United States, in proportion to population. This is taken from statistics the real estate activity and building operations are simply phenomenal. Building for several years past has been at the rate of about $1,000,000 per month.

A very large proportion of the building permits are for homes, that means that every year, in fact every month, there are hundreds, yes thousands of additions to the permanent population. People come here and become enchanted with this section and the fine climate that they wish to abandon the ice, the snow, the floods, the heat, the drought and tornadoes of the each for the balmy climate of this temperate land.

I do not mean to say that Los Angeles possesses all the good things of the earth. The East has its attractions also and can boast of some environments which the people of this section cannot enjoy.

Railroad statistics show that the number of trans-continental tourists who come to this city is multipling enormously year by year, which is very natural. California is not nearly so far away as it was a quarter of a century ago, from the East.

With the elegant and comfortable facilities for transportation by rail and the cheap rates, people can, and do, travel much more than they did formerly, and those who possess only moderate means can have the opportunity and share the privilege of traveling North, East, South or West and see some of this country, and some of the grand, beautiful and magnificent sights of this the best and greatest country in the world. Another item in the building permits of great importance is covered by the big brick blocks in the business districts. It means a great deal when men will put $800,000 in a building on leased ground, and when A. W. Hellman, who is conservative and keen sighted, and who has waited thirty years to assure himself of the absolute certainty of Los Angeles' metropolitan destiny, finally erects an eight story fireproof office and bank building at a cost of almost $1,000,000, and where a corporation of shrewd business financiers and good business men will pay $200,000 for a bit of ground and erect a "sky scraper" of twelve stories, elegantly finished, and when a man like J. B. Laukershine is building a nine story hotel, that will rival any thing on the Pacific Coast, and when Henry E. Huntington whose capital and brains is big enough to enable him to operate in the biggest financial centers of the country, abandons New York and San Francisco to invest $30,000,000 in a net work of street railways that radiate from Los Angeles and connect with it many of the towns and beaches of Southern California. All this means a great deal for the prosperity and future development of the city and country around. The beach resorts have grown wonderfullv in the past few years. Long Beach which had but a few houses seven years ago, when we were here, to day has a populateon of about 6000. At Ocean Park where a few years ago were nothing but sand dunes and the land worth perhaps $100 per acre have been leveled down and laid out into town lots and to day it is a prosperous and picturesque town where corner lot has been sold recently at $400 per front foot. Towns are springing up along the beach at many places.

The government is building one of the largest harbors and breakwaters at San Pedro in the United States, and when completed, will mean much in a financial and business way to this city. The pier will be over one mile long.

The Salt Lake railroad is nearing completion, and when completed it will open to traffic and development, rich and fertile region which has been dormant owing to lack of transportation facilities, and will cut off 200 miles from the distance to the East.

The real estate fraternity are preparing for great activities as a result of this enterprise. Only a few months ago a corner lot on corner Ninth and Broadway went begging at $800 a front foot and today it will bring $1350 a foot. Not long since a lot on Spring street sold for $1800 per front foot, and the same week the lot advanced in price $10,000.

The cost of living here is perhaps a little higher than it is in the East, but may err in our judgment. Ordinary labor is paid from $1.75 to $2 25 per day.

We were told when we left for the Pacific Coast, that we would never see any lightning nor hear its thunder. That assertion has been exploded. Aug. 13th, we saw flashes of lightning and heard a number of loud reports of thunder, and we enjoyed a delightful Maryland shower, which continued for several hours; since then we have had an additional nice rain. These rains are somewhat of a surprise and unusual at this season of the year as are many other things in California.

Well, Mr. Editor, my letter is becoming lenghty and I must ring off. Please change our address from 3024 to 3005 Vermont avenue. We expect to move across the street very soon, and enjoy eating fruit under oue own vine and figtree. We have figs, oranges, lemon, peaches, etc., on our ranch of 90x150 feet; we raised a tomato vine that measured 6 feet in height and 18 feet in circumference at the top and produced 2 bushels of tomatoes. and this is not a California story either but is the genuine article.

With best wishes and kindest regards, Yours truly,

A. F SPEICHER.

P. S.—Roosevelt is sure of California's vote.

Comparatively new cook stove cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. 2t*

A Home and Day School.

BRIAR-BEND SEMINARY,

AT MT. LAKE PARK, MD.,

In the Alleghany Mountains,

will be re-opened (D. V.)

On September 14th, 1904.

Full course of study. Music, Vocal and Instrumental. French, Latin and Bible Study. Certificates admit to leading colleges without examination.

A Home for Motherless Girls; Climate Unrivaled for Health; Only four visits from a Physician in thirteen years.

Applications received for service in exchange for tuition. Refererences quired.

Bills payable monthly in advance.

The "Stunt" Of Mlle. Clementine

By ROBERT C. V. MEYERS

Copyright, 1904, by Robert C. V. Meyers

MLLE. CLEMENTINE was renovating the garments of Teddy and Chrissy, her dead sister's children, sons of Barney, the proprietor of the circus. She had promised her sister to look after the boys, and laundry work was a part of the surveillance. In the evening, a vision of silver and azure, she would soar aloft and take that leap from the trapeze which caused the timid souls in the audience below to hold their breath till she had landed on terra firma. As she rubbed away at the little garments she reflected on many things. Lately the circus had become almost unbearable to her. Barney said it was her liver and that exercise would cure her. She asked him what he called her performance on the trapeze. He answered that her liver was used to that; what was needed was variety of exercise.

She did not press the question, though she may have thought her exercise was sufficiently varied—cooking for Barney and the kids, helping round in the tent, acting as dresser to the performers, looking after the horses when Barney was in the dumps.

"By the way," her brother-in-law said, looking in on her, "the boy has turned up again."

The boy had followed her round for months and made all manner of protestations.

"Yes," she replied. "I saw him last night."

"Has he written to you as usual?" asked Barney.

She answered that a note had come that morning.

"He ought to see you now," he grinned, "this very minute."

She leaned farther over the tub.

"Keep it up, Clem," he went on. "It's as much of a stunt as your hop from the trapeze. Such a thing is always a sendoff for a show. Oh, I forgot. Sally wants you to mend her red velvet body. She's getting so fat I really believe she'd rip an iron fireproof safe if she was dressed up in one."

Sally was Signora Sarepo, who nightly wound a boa constrictor around her neck as though for warmth and called herself a "charmer."

"She must wait her turn," Mlle. Clementine told him. "I must fix Maggie's wig. Bill caught his nails in it last night when he missed his jump."

Bill was the lion into whose cage Marguerite de Melville, his owner, "in fear and trembling" obtruded herself at each performance and invited to skip over her head by shooting off a pistol near his ears in order to accent the invitation.

Then here came Teddy and Chrissy clamoring for bread with jam on it.

Mademoiselle wrung the suds from her hands and attended to the behests of her nephews.

Still Mlle. Clementine kept at her washing. All the time she was thinking of the boy. She knew his other

"HE OUGHT TO SEE YOU NOW."

name, of course, but she [illegible] think of him as the boy. It kept her under, so to speak.

The boy was so young! She remembered the first time she had noticed him. It was at a town forty miles away, and she caught his eye as she kissed her finger tips to the audience. And, ah, the look he gave her!

In came Maggie with her torn wig, closely followed by Sally with the red velvet "body."

"It's like this, Clem," said Maggie. "I'm never hard on a friend that's down on his luck, but I must live, and so must Bill."

Mademoiselle conceded the fact.

"And," went on Maggie, "a continuous house wants Bill and me, and I rather like the 'snap' of vaudeville. If Barney can't pay up let him say so like a man. But it's shabby to promise and do nothing and hold me back when I can do better."

"So I say," the "charmer" chimed in.

Mademoiselle frowned. Of course things were going wrong; things were usually going wrong. It had always been so, and the worry had been too much for Sister Eliza. Barney was the greatest drag of all, either up in the skies or down in the depths. Last night when the box office was levied on by the printer he was for stopping the show and acknowledging defeat, though his wife's sister had pulled him through, as she had often done before. But was it worth while to keep on like this? By acceding to the boy's wishes she might end it all. Teddy and Chrissy would grow up just as well without her, while their father would scramble along like so many other men who seem never to establish a footing in the world. Yes, she could leave it all and interfere with the boy's prospects, for she knew all about the boy—how he had but recently left college and what a career his father had planned for him.

Yet what was to hinder her from growing up with him? She never had had half a chance; she had only known the circus.

She controlled the boy. She might form him into a sensible man and force his father to recognize her as a good woman and a helpful wife. She was tired of her sordid environment, of the poverty stricken sham.

She had but to say the word and the boy would take her away from it all.

She felt in the front of her gown. Yes, it was there, the ring he had insisted upon her taking and which she wore on a string round her neck so that Barney should not see it, for if Barney knew she had it he would imagine she possessed untold riches and might suggest branching out.

The boy had told her the ring once belonged to his mother. Why had she accepted it? Not for its money value surely, though that was considerable. But it had seemed very pleasant for her to have it. Knowing that it had been his mother's, she felt that he respected her as the greatest lady in the land when he could offer her his dead mother's ring.

And he had sent her a note this morning bidding her meet him this afternoon and answer the question he had put to her so often—would she become his wife?

To think of him and his bright ways and the possibilities that lay before her! They could go away from these crowded, congested cities, out to newer parts of the world where he might quickly work himself into being a power, she at his side. He was educated and enthusiastic, and education and enthusiasm might do anything in this world. But here was Barney again. He was laughing.

"You're in for it!" he said.

She looked at him for explanation.

"The old man has come after his son," he went on. "They told me at the hotel. Papa and sonny had it hot and heavy last night; almost came to blows. And all on your account. Your name was fanned from one to the other of them. It's the biggest card the show's ever had. We'll be crowded tonight.

"Maggie and Sally look black," he went on. "But tonight with a crowded house I'll manage to pay them something on account. Remember your stunt with the boy. Clem, keep it up." And he went away whistling.

Mademoiselle had many things to do before she was free to keep her engagement. First of all, Maggie marched in. She had been closeted with the "charmer."

"Clem," she said, "Sally and I have made up our minds that we won't go on tonight without some of our back pay. Barney's promises are all wind, and we can't live off air pudding if you can."

Again came Barney, in the depths this time.

"Clem," he groaned, "Maggie and Sally are drawers, and they've come down flat for their salaries. Couldn't you manage to borrow something from that young fellow?"

"Stop that!" she blazed out. "Don't ever let me hear you say anything like that again."

"Oh, you needn't mount the high horse with me!" he retorted. "I don't care what becomes of the show. Only your sister's children will suffer, that's all."

Mademoiselle watched him leave the tent and knew that he went for something to invigorate him, as he usually did when anything went wrong.

Surely she must get away from all this; she could stand it no longer. She hurriedly tossed on her street attire.

How bright the day was! How clear and clean the whole world looked away from the tent! It was a good and beautiful world, and surely she had a right to some of the goodness and beauty. She paused for a moment to drink in the glory of sunshine and blue sky, feeling young, almost girlish. Then she went on. She had walked some ten minutes or so when she glanced round. Yes, there he was. She knew he would be on the watch for her. But the boy was white of face, and there was a frown between his eyes as he came up to her. "Let us get into some quiet spot," he said. "I have a good deal to say to you."

There was a new quality about him that spoke of mastership. She went along beside him, silent as he, though she glanced at him sidewise now and then like some timid schoolgirl. And then they came to a little square with benches arranged about a glittering fountain where sparrows hopped and bathed in the bright spray. She seated herself. She knew that the time had come when she must make her decision, when the boy had all at once become a man, a masterful man.

He continued to stand.

"My father is here," were his first words.

"Yes?" She looked at the bathing sparrows.

"He followed me," he went on, "as though I were a child and did not know what I was doing. A child!"

In a flash the difference in their ages appealed to the woman who listened. He was twenty-one, while she was—any age she chose to look.

"It is like this," he continued. "My father has foolish plans for my future. I have my own ideas. I shall go in for politics; that's the field for a fellow like me. As for the social side of life, I am tired of all that nonsense. You are paying attention?"

"Oh, yes," she answered hastily.

"My father," he said, "heard of you, and he came after me. He says I know nothing about you. He speaks of a young girl he had selected for me, the daughter of a friend of his. He twits me with having liked her till I met you"—

"You liked her?" she interrupted.

"Oh," he said, "when you came could I think of any one else?"

The fervor of his tone touched her.

"But I told my father all that was over. Then he reminded me of your social position. I hope I do not pain you in speaking so plainly. I want to be honest, you know."

"It is always best to be honest," she replied.

He moved closer to her.

"Clementine," he said, "it must be as I say now. I will not be held off any longer. I have means of my own. Get rid of that miserable circus, be my wife and go with me to some new faroff place where we shall be together and happy."

Just such a picture as she had painted to herself earlier in the day!

"My love!" He sank to his knees and caught her hand in his. "My love!"

At his touch something seemed to give way within her. She saw him giving up for her sake the life his father had planned for him and entering the world of politics, where a man's wife may have sprung from anything; saw the girl he had "liked" till she came between them; saw herself beside him, far older than he, a woman with a glamour about her which he must some time estimate at its true value, a woman unused to his ways of life and who might hold him down. Hold him down! Never! She could elevate him far more than a frivolous young society girl might ever do, for she knew the world, could urge him on, make him see in the successes he should yet achieve that the motive power of those successes had been her love for him. And yet he was young.

"IT WAS YOUR MOTHER'S!"

the asserted authority of his father made him resentful and extravagant, while she—ah, she could make him a successful man; she knew she could; she knew her power. Did not all the people of the circus look up to her? Did not Barney depend upon her? The circus! She wrenched her hand from his. The circus!

"Your father was right," she said. "You know little or nothing about me!"

He sprang to his feet. "What do you mean?" he demanded.

She regarded him. He was a man, every inch a man, a loving man. And in her heart was a crying out for love, for refinement such as his, for all that he knew and she knew not, for freedom from the life that was hers.

He caught her by the arm. "Tell me!" he said.

Surely she might ruin his prospects by marrying him. And yet he loved her, and there was so much happiness in that thought!

"Tell me!" he repeated.

"You took too much for granted," she said hoarsely and rose to her feet. "And yet I"—

"You shall marry me," he thundered. "By heaven, you shall!"

"I will not," she said, "yet."

He stepped back from her.

"You do not love me!" he cried. "Is that it?"

She fingered the buttons of her coat till one of them came off and rolled to her feet.

"I cannot," she said, "now."

"Cannot!" he echoed. "What do you mean by 'cannot?' Do you mean that you cannot love me? You dare not? Is there any obstacle? What do I care for all the obstacles in the world?"

"That may be it," she said. "An obstacle, and yet I love"—

"An obstacle!" he repeated. "There is no obstacle short of a legal one"—

"A legal one?" she interrupted.

"Tell me," he said, "you are free; you are not bound to any one; you are not the wife of some one else?"

The wife of some one else!

It was as though he gave her a cue. Yet could she tell that lie? He was so young; she was not of his world. Dared she withhold any lie when all his future trembled in the balance?

"Tell me," he was saying. "I will never give you up unless—unless you are bound to some one else. I had not thought of that. Tell me it is not true."

She was white to the lips. She made an ineffectual effort to speak.

"Think of me!" he pleaded.

Think of him! Then she said boldly, "Barney, the owner of the circus"—and paused.

"What of him?" he demanded.

"He is my husband!" she said.

She could have cried out at the look that came to his face.

"And you never told me," he said. "You led me on all this time. You are the falsest woman ever created!"

"He is my husband," she said as before.

He gave her a long look.

"My father," he said, "was right."

He was leaving her when she called his name. She might tell him the truth even yet and—have him sacrifice everything for her. And dared she forsake her own duties? She snapped the string about her neck and held out the ring he had given her.

"No!" he cried, repulsing her. "I would not touch it after it has lain over your cruel heart."

"It was your mother's," she faltered.

"It was my mother's, but she never wore it. The jewels my mother wore shall be worn by the woman who shall be my wife, not by the one who has been false as a woman can be!"

She heard his footfalls become fainter and fainter. She did not see him leave her, everything was so blurred before her eyes.

She gave a deep sigh. Something hurt her hand. She looked down and saw that she had pressed the ring so tightly that it cut her palm. She regarded the jeweled circlet.

"It will pay the salaries," she said, "and buy shoes for Teddy and Chrissy. I promised Eliza. And now I must make haste to the tent and get supper or I shall be late for my stunt." And "No, no!" and again "No, no!" and she laid her lips on the ring in her hand, then threw it as far as she could into the dust of the road. She hurried away, holding her coat tightly across her breast as though the fierce pressure helped her.

Mlle. Clementine looked old for the first time in her life.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroal now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later thsn December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

GRANULATED

Fertilizer Lime!

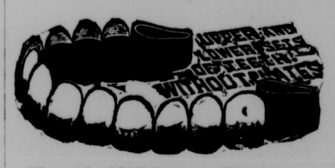
FOR FA RERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

G. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—21t

Now is the Time! Don't Wait!



Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work

A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY,
First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

The Keyser Preparatory Branch
OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.
A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.
Special Instruction for public School Teachers.
Instruction in Music.
A Splendid New Building Provided by State.
A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.
Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.
No Tuition in Commercial Department.
Small Tuition charged Students from other States.
Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.
Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.
For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal.

L. L. FRIEND,
Keyser, W. Va.

The Red Tide at Cedar Creek

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

October 19, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

LONG before sunrise the morning of Oct. 19, 1864, terrific volleys of musketry aroused the men of Thorburn's division, holding Sheridan's left flank at Cedar creek, from their sleep. They stumbled from their quarters into darkness and fog to find Kershaw's Confederate infantry rushing over the parapets. Before a defensive shot could be fired Kershaw's men laid hold of seven cannon, seized hundreds of prisoners, turned the guns on those who retreated and in short order swept Thorburn's camp bare of defenders. This was General Jubal A. Early's initial stroke in his famous surprise of Phil Sheridan's line at Cedar creek.

Sheridan had left the front four days before the attack. He had been warned of trouble, but had ignored it because he believed that Early was too far away from his base of supplies to undertake a battle.

Before leaving the camps Sheridan posted Crook's command, the Eighth corps, including Thorburn's division, along the valley pike on the left. Next came the Nineteenth corps—Emory's—along the east bank of the creek, with the Sixth corps, under Wright, on the right of the Nineteenth. The cavalry hovered on the extreme flanks, watching the roads that come in from the east and west. Leaving the command to General H. G. Wright, Sheridan set out on the 15th to cross the Blue Ridge east.

On the 17th Sheridan had finished his mission and returned as far as Martinsburg. On the 18th he started up the valley pike on horseback and halted in Winchester for the night. Early on the 19th he was aroused by an officer on duty with the word that artillery firing could be heard at Cedar creek. The report said that the firing was not continuous and might be caused by a reconnoissance, and Sheridan leisurely awaited his breakfast.

Meanwhile Early had advanced three columns to support Ramseur's attack. Crook's command, which was isolated and the farthest front, had been enveloped by the Confederate divisions of Kershaw, Ramseur, Pegram and Gordon. At the same time Wharton's Confederate division, formerly Breckinridge's, advanced against Emory's Nineteenth corps. Crook's entire corps was overwhelmed and his ranks scattered, but at the camp of the Nineteenth corps the division of Grover stood at arms, having been ordered out on a reconnoissance at daylight.

Generals Wright and Emory were promptly at the front and, having formed a line of defense, awaited the coming of Kershaw, who was in Crook's camp pursuing the defeated soldiers. But further surprise awaited the Federal line. Gordon and Pegram had passed around Crook and, deflecting, struck the Nineteenth corps in the flank, being sheltered from view by the heavy fog that hung over the valley. The Confederate cannon soon enfiladed the works of the Nineteenth corps, and General Wright ordered it to fall back. A stirring episode of the retreat of the Nineteenth corps is described by Colonel H. E. Hill of the Eighth Vermont. Says Colonel Hill: "In the early morning fight the colors of the Eighth Vermont passed through a terrible ordeal and received a bloody baptism. Suddenly a mass of enemies confronted the flags and with hoarse shouts demanded their surrender. Defiant shouts went back: 'Never! Never!' And then, amid tremendous excitement, commenced one of the most desperate and ugly hand to hand conflicts over the flags that have ever been recorded. Men seemed more like demons than human beings as they struck fiercely at each other with clubbed muskets and bayonets. A Confederate of powerful build attempted to bayonet Corporal Worden of the color guard. Worden, a tall, sinewy man, who had no bayonet on his musket, parried his enemy's thrusts until some one—I think Sergeant Brown—shot the assailant dead. Another Confederate then leveled his musket and shot Corporal Petre, who held the colors, in the thigh, a terrible wound, from which he died that night. Petre held the regimental flag. He cried out: 'Boys, leave me! Take care of yourselves and the flag!' But in that vortex of hell men did not forget the colors, and as Petre crawled away to die they were instantly seized and borne aloft by Corporal Perham and were as instantly demanded again by an assailant who attempted to grasp them. Sergeant Shores of the guard placed his musket at the man's breast and fired, instantly killing him. But now another rifle flash, and a bullet from the dead southerner's companion killed Corporal Perham, and the colors fell to the earth. Once more, amid terrific yells, the colors went up, this time held by Corporal Blanchard, and the carnage went on.

"The fight for the colors continued. A Confederate discharged his rifle within a foot of Corporal Bemis of the color guard and wounded him, but was, in turn, shot dead by one of our men. A little later Sergeant Shores and Lemuel Simpson were standing together by the flags when three Confederates attacked them and ordered them to surrender. As the assailants had just discharged their pieces Simpson immediately fired and shot one, and Sergeant Shores bayoneted the other. Sergeant Moran, whose devotion to the flag had been intensified by the regiment's forty-four days' heroic action before Port Hudson, marvelously escaped. He was in the hottest of the fight, however, and held the United States flag all the while, assisting several times in protecting the regimental colors. But as the enemy crowded on a hundred men in gray took the place of a dozen grasping for the flags."

This gallant band of Green Mountain boys entered the fight numbering 159 soldiers and sixteen officers. Over 100 of the soldiers fell, and thirteen of the officers were killed or wounded.

The salvation of Sheridan's army depended upon the Sixth corps, which General Wright brought up to interpose between the broken ranks of the Eighth and Nineteenth corps and their vigorous pursuers. The leader of the Sixth, General Ricketts, was wounded at the outset, and the second in command, General Getty, formed a line across the Winchester pike, with batteries planted to command the roads down the valley. A counter charge of the Sixth corps was checked by Early's artillery.

General Early promptly rallied his forces for a second blow and, avoiding the direct attack on the Sixth corps, moved to the Federal left to engage the cavalry. Sheridan reached the front at 1 o'clock and saw the repulse of Early by the line of troopers. Arriving within three miles of the extreme front of the old camp, Sheridan met the first organized body of troops, Ricketts' and Wheaton's divisions of the Sixth corps. These troops had retired less than two miles from their old camp. Farther on he met Getty's division on a hillside in position, and riding up the steep to them he took off his hat and was received with cheers. A little farther on he met General Torbert, who with his cavalry corps was resisting the enemy's advance. Torbert said, "My God, I'm glad you've come!"

Turning to the front again Sheridan was greeted with a line of regimental flags that rose up out of the ground to welcome him. These were the colors of Crook, whose men had been at the extreme front and had been surprised at the sudden attack of the morning.

The warning of an impending attack which Sheridan had ignored was to the effect that the renowned General Longstreet was on his way to the valley to join Early in crushing the Federals. The events of the morning gave color to this report, and Sheridan determined to act with caution. He set about rearranging his lines, with the soundest of the infantry in the center—that is to say, the Sixth and Nineteenth corps, with the cavalry division of Custer on the right and the divisions of Merritt and Wilson on the left. Between 3 and 4 o'clock the column was put in motion. At the first assault Early's line gave way, the Federal infantry sweeping over stone walls and every form of cover, and the cavalry dashing in upon the flanks to clean up the hurrying fugitives as prisoners.

VERMONTERS BATTLING FOR THEIR FLAGS.

In the exciting pursuit the cavalry brigade of Colonel Charles Russell Lowell charged among the houses of the little hamlet of Middletown, losing its chivalric and accomplished leader in the first clash of arms. The first Confederate gun captured that day was taken by the First Vermont cavalry of Custer's line. In sending them in Custer told the Vermonters that he would be satisfied if they got a single gun from the enemy. Before the day ended there were forty-eight guns taken from the enemy by Sheridan's army, and of that number twenty-three were credited as trophies to the First Vermont cavalry. Fighting in company with the Fifth New York cavalry of the same brigade the Vermonters helped to capture forty-five guns, five stands of Confederate colors and 1,000 prisoners. The Confederates were pushed back beyond the camps they had captured in the morning. When the news of this fresh victory reached the north there was an outburst of enthusiasm for the hero, and Sheridan was promoted major general in the regular army for his third and final defeat of Early.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN ON THE WORLD'S FAIR

What Distinguished Statesmen and Others Say of the Educational and Inspiring Exposition at St. Louis.

The public utterances of distinguished men who have visited the world's fair have but one note, and that of emphatic praise. Here are some of their comments:

Hon. John Hay, secretary of state: "I have never seen nor heard of anything so fine."

Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury: "Any father of a bright boy can afford to send him to the Fair simply to study any one of at least a thousand exhibits."

Hon. Charles H. Grosvenor of Ohio: "A visit of ten days by a man of ordinary aptness and appreciative capacity to the Fair is almost equal to a postgraduate course in a university."

Hon. Benjamin B. Odell, governor of New York: "St. Louis has been badly misrepresented by accounts which say that her weather is unbearable. The Fair is wonderful."

Hon. George C. Pardee, governor of California: "The governor of the Golden State, who has spent all his life within her borders, finds that he knew only a little about his state until he came to the Fair and saw all her varied products assembled together."

Hon. Albert B. Cummins, governor of Iowa: "The Louisiana Purchase Exposition is on the grandest scale of any exposition the world has ever seen."

Hon. Richard Yates, governor of Illinois: "The more I see of the Exposition the more I enjoy it."

Hon. Fennimore Chatterton, governor of Wyoming: "I wish the Fair the greatest success. It certainly deserves it."

Hon. Franklin Murphy, governor of New Jersey: "It is well worth coming from New Jersey to see even a small part of this Fair."

Hon. A. B. White, governor of West Virginia: "I cannot speak too strongly of the greatness of this Fair."

Hon. William J. Bryan: "The Exposition is an unparalleled wonder."

Hon. John Sharp Williams, member of congress from Mississippi: "The most wonderful thing of its kind."

Hon. Hoke Smith of Georgia, formerly secretary of interior under President Cleveland: "I am highly pleased with the Exposition and believe it to be one of the triumphs of modern civilization."

Hon. Perry Belmont of New York: "In magnitude and beauty the Fair is wonderful. It is worth coming a long distance to see."

Hon. Daniel J. Campau, chairman of the Michigan delegation to the Democratic national convention at St. Louis: "It is positively sinful for parents to fail to bring their children to see the Fair."

M. Paul Dupuy, editor of Le Petit Parisien of Paris, France: "I admire the Exposition for its immensity, its spirit of the sublime, its general beauty and its completeness."

Prince George of Bavaria: "I have never seen anything prettier than the St. Louis World's Fair buildings when outlined at night with their millions of electric lights."

Hon. Louis E. McComas of Maryland: "The greatest Fair in the world."

Hon. John F. Dryden of New Jersey: "The people have no idea of the greatness of the Exposition. Every American should see it."

T. P. Shants, president of the Clover Leaf route of Chicago: "The Fair is a big success and will continue to become a greater success as it progresses."

WAGE EARNERS AT THE FAIR

Prominent Men Planning to Help Workers See the Great Exposition.

Wage earners of America are to see the World's Fair by tens of thousands under the auspices of the National Civic Federation. A new bureau of the Federation has just been established at St. Louis upon the World's Fair grounds. Back of the movement are Grover Cleveland, David R. Francis Andrew Carnegie, Cornelius N. Bliss and others. Plans are making to have a vast number of the wage earners of the United States see the World's Fair, the most glorious spectacle of the age and the most influential factor in the education of the American citizen.

The bureau is in charge of Miss Gertrude Beeks, secretary of the Federation's welfare department, of which Mr. H. H. Vreeland, head of the street railway system of New York city, is chairman. The bureau headquarters is in the east end of the Palace of Transportation, on the ground floor. The Exposition management is in hearty accord with this movement on the part of the Federation to induce the large manufacturers and other employers of labor to provide ways and means for the wage earners of America to visit the Exposition. President Francis is displaying personal interest in the undertaking by affording the Federation every facility for the consummation of its efforts, and in this connection he has directed Theodore Hardee, assistant to the secretary, to co-operate with Miss Beeks and Ralph M. Easley, chairman of the Federation's executive council, in every possible way.

The Exposition management has also equipped this bureau with clerical assistance and a full supply of World's Fair literature. The bureau will be used as headquarters for all wage earners coming to the Exposition under its auspices. The aim of the Federation is to make it feasible for the largest possible proportion of wage earners to visit St. Louis and see the World's Fair. It will see that they are met at the depot by responsible persons and conducted to suitable lodgings, where they will be treated fairly.

There will also be furnished, free of charge, appropriate itineraries indicating the points of interest to be seen within a limit of one week, which is about the average time each party will spend here. It will also indicate the objects of special interest to various craftsmen in their particular lines, so that they may devote as much time as possible to the objects of peculiar interest to them. These and many other efforts will be made to help all wage earners to enjoy the benefits of this great Exposition comfortably and at an expense within their means.

Bowser Cuts Grass

With the Aid of a New Mower He Trims the Lawn In His Yard, but a Series of Mishaps Causes Police Interference For Fear of a Riot.

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]

WHEN he had finished dinner the other evening Mr. Bowser turned up missing for ten minutes, and when "discovered" again he had on an old suit of clothes and there was a genuine agricultural smile on his face.

"Are you going to dig a well or chop wood or—or anything?" asked Mrs. Bowser as she surveyed him in considerable surprise.

"Not exactly," he rather sheepishly replied. "Saying nothing of the fact that I need exercise and that I can save $100 in a very short time, I am going to cut the grass in the front yard."

"But how? With the butcher knife?"

He sat down on the front steps, and his agricultural smile broadened and 'engthened until it took in hay, oats, corn, wheat and potatoes, and had a lightning rod man come along just then he would no doubt have found Mr. Bowser a soft mark.

"The boy will be here presently," he finally answered. "I have bought a lawn mower, and it should have been here half an hour ago. However, there is time enough. Yes, I have bought an eight dollar lawn mower, and I purpose to put a stop to the extortionate demands of the scoundrels who go about cutting grass. They have robbed me long enough. The machine will save its cost every month."

"I fail to see how," replied Mrs. Bowser after a little mental arithmetic. "We have got about ten square feet of grass to cut. We have had it cut four times at 15 cents a time. We may have to have it cut four times more at the same price. The cost may possibly reach $2 for the season. How you can save anything by paying out $8 for a lawn mower I fail to see. Besides"—

"I may not save over $15 or $20 this year," he interrupted, "but there are other years to come. I am looking ahead. If I put all the back yard into grass next year it will be a regular hayfield. I have also to figure on the physical exercise. The best doctors in America are a unit in agreeing that shoving a lawn mower around is the best thing ever discovered for spinal complaint."

"And you have finally developed that, have you?"

Before Mr. Bowser had got ready to answer a boy came from the hardware store with the mower. It was painted red and green, and he was dragging it along the sidewalk and making as much noise as possible, and he was of course followed by a goat, two dogs and fifteen children. The procession stopped with a bang before the Bowser gate, and the crowd was at once added to by children from across the street. If there was any circus going on around there they wanted to see it.

"You might have known how it would be," said Mrs. Bowser as she surveyed the gathering and noticed that nearly every family on the block was sitting out to get the air.

"Don't you worry yourself, Mrs. Bowser. I have bought a lawn mower, and I propose to use it, and if the sight of a man using such a machine sets the whole town rubbernecking let 'em go ahead and gawp. Please inform me what in thunder is the matter. Do you expect the machine to bust up and wreck the neighborhood?"

"No, of course not; but, you see, you have never run a lawn mower before, and—and"—

"And I may knock down the front fence or run over and kill three or four people! Yes, there is some danger of it, but I will be very careful of it for the sake of you and the cat. If you fear bloodshed and devastation you had better hide down cellar till it's all over. I shall now begin."

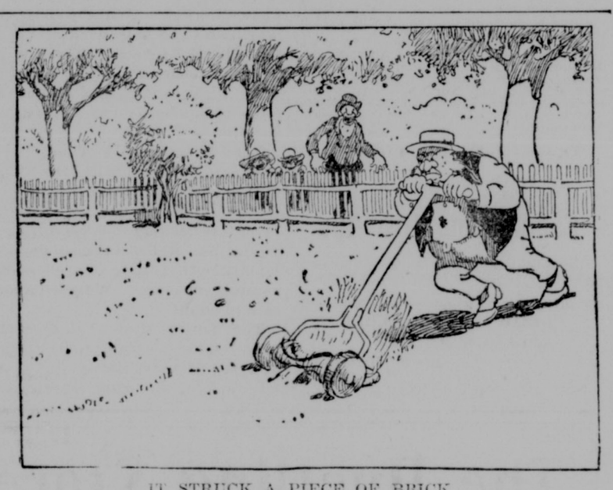
There was a bur-r-r-r, and he was at work.

Lawn mowing and watch repairing are not exactly the same thing, but before you can repair a watch or mow a lawn you must look out for clothespins, brickbats, castor oil bottles and tomato cans. That mower had just got a gait on her and was merrily buzzing away when it struck a generous piece of brick which a boy had cast into the yard in throwing at a cat and was brought up short with a sound that put people's teeth on edge. There was a chorus of delighted exclamations from the children. They were guileless children, but even the youngest of human nature rejoices when a lawn mower is made to suffer. The noise also stopped a man who was passing, and he leaned over the fence and sagaciously said:

"Cut your brickbats with an ax, my friend. You will find it easier and cheaper."

Mrs. Bowser's heart stopped still, and the cat forgot to breathe. Both expected the man to be slaughtered in cold blood, but Mr. Bowser only gave him a pitying look and waved him to pass on. The brickbat was picked out of the grass and tossed into the street, and then steam was turned on and the mower started again. To the amazement of the children and other onlookers it cut grass. The green blades flew into the air and hovered over the machine, and the scent of new mown hay became apparent clear down to the corner. Words of admiration were being spoken on every hand, when there was another sudden stoppage. It was so unlooked for that Mr. Bowser's heels left the ground, and for an instant he seemed about to take a header. There was a general groan of disappointment as he saved himself, and the old clothespin he picked from between the blades was looked upon as no real friend of that crowd. Another pedestrian felt called upon to stop and say something. He was an old man and full of wisdom. He was also deaf, and he shouted so that he could be heard forty rods away.

"If you knew beans from broomsticks you'd use a rake on that grass first!" he bellowed. "Some men allus begin their work wrong end to."



IT STRUCK A PIECE OF BRICK.

For a moment Mrs. Bowser was like one paralyzed, and the cat stopped her purring to choke up, but no one was struck dead. Mr. Bowser got red in the face and his ears twitched, but he hid the volcano raging in his breast with a bland smile and removed the obstruction. As it was thrown over the fence the children scrambled for it, and a battle royal was the consequence. The attention of a policeman standing on the corner was attracted, and he came strolling down to halt at the gate and inquire:

"Doin' the lawn mowin' act, eh?"

"Just a little," was the reply.

"Yes, he's mad at the grass and means to give it fits," put in a small boy.

"I'd have hired it done," said the officer as he encouraged the boy with a smile.

Mr. Bowser had nothing further to say, but made ready to resume work. The presence of the officer of course attracted further attention, and several vehicles stopped in front of the house that their drivers might learn what the rumpus was about. It took nerve on Bowser's part to starboard his helm and go ahead, but he would not take a bluff. He had shoved the mower almost eleven feet, and was doing beautiful work, when the shaft picked up a long piece of rusty wire and wound it up to a stop. Then the policeman laughed, the children clapped their hands, and words of satisfaction were heard from the sitters.

"If you want my advice"— began the officer, but he was interrupted with:

"But I don't."

"Then I'll give it to you just the same. Take it in! You are raisin' a row and disturbin' the peace."

"Yes, take it in!" shouted a dozen boys.

"Take it in, of course!" echoed a dozen sitters.

"If you don't I'll have to take you in," continued the bluecoat. "I don't say there's any law agin a man runnin' a lawn mower, but he's got to do it without creatin' an excitement. Here's a crowd that is worked up to such a pitch of frenzy that it's ready to tear down buildin's and murder Chinymen, and you've got to get that machine into the back yard or become responsible to the law."

Mr. Bowser got it there, and, towering over Mrs. Bowser, who had vacated the steps and closed the front door, he said:

"Woman, I have been guyed, humiliated and browbeaten, and it's all on your account. You will take the 10:10 train for your mother's home tomorrow morning, and as soon as the necessary legal papers can be made out we will see about the divorce and alimony." M. QUAD.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
ELAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily	1.54 A. M
No. 3—Daily	7.17 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday	9.26 A. M
No. 55—Daily	4.53 P. M
No. 1—Daily	10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily	12.27 A. M
No. *8—Daily	6.04 A. M
No. 2—Daily	6.31 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun	5.12 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily	4.34 P. M
No. 12—Daily	8.32 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT AUG. 28, 1904.

SOUTHWARD		STATIONS	NORTHWARD
No. 3	No. 1		No. 2	No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†11 59	†7 40
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	7 08
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 45
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 33
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. Junc	10 51	6 26
4 47	8 27	Barnum	10 36	6 10
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	6 02
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 44
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 40
6 25x	9 50x ar	Elk Garden lv	x8 10	x4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	†5 08
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	5 02
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 52
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 48
6 43†	10 32†	Thomas	†8 38	†4 18
7 10†	11 00† ar	Davis	†8 05	†3 40
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 33	4 13
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 40
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 37
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 30
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 56
8 15†	11 50† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 40
	NOON

No. 45	No. 3	No. 1		No. 2	No. 4	No. 46
P. M.	A. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
3 30§	6 30†	2 35x	lv Elkins ar	x8 20	12 30†	§9 15
3 45	6 47	2 51	R.C. Jct	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 51	2 54	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 52
4 01	7 04	3 06	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10§	7 15†	3 15x	ar Bel'g'n lv	x7 35	11 45†	§8 35
					A. M.
	P. M.	P. M		P. M.	P. M.
	x8 30	12 35†	lv Elkins ar	x9 55	†2 00
	8 46	12 52	Beverly	9 39	1 44
	9 10†	1 15†	ar Hutt'e ar	x9 15	1 20†

No. 53	No. 51		No. 54	No. 52
A. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.
x6 20	x12 35	lv Elkins ar	x2 35	6 50x
7 49	1 24	Fishing Hawk	1 49	5 28
8 34	1 46	Glady	1 20	4 50
9 42	2 19	Burner	12 57	3 48
x10 15	x2 35	ar Durbin lv	x12 40	3 15x

† Daily x Daily except Sunday. § Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

Great Big Bargains.

$75 will buy Lot No. 241, on corner Hazel Glade Drive and Park front; worth $300.

$50 will buy Lot No. 242, adjoining above; worth $200.

$75 will buy Lot No. 219, on corner D street and Park front; worth $225.

$50 will buy Lot No. 218, adjoining above; worth $200.

$50 will buy Lot No. 220, fronting on D street, and

$50 for Lot No. 221.

No Building Conditions on these Lots.

Apply to

L. A. RUDISILL,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

NOTICE OF
Registration of Voters.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY,
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 15th, 1904.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 33, as amended by the Acts of 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1904, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respection Election Districts of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on

Tuesday, October 4,

Tuesday, October 11,

and on

Tuesday, October 18.

for revision only,

(No one can Register after Tuesday, Oct. 11)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts and for the purpose of performing all other duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.,

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the old Postoffice Building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Thos. Garvey's house in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

The Officers of Registratton for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Corrigan property, Third and Alder streets, in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration for the Ninth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the shop of Thomas Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Building owned by Dr. J. W. Laughlin in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the storeroom of C. E. Eilithorpe, in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in Kitzmillersville.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the Opera House building in the town of Oakland.

WILLIAM HAMILL,
A. C. BROWNING,
Officers of Registration for District No. 1 of Garrett county, Md.

JASPER GUARD,
DAVID K. HERRING,
Officers of Registration for District No. 2 of Garrett county, Md.

JOHN CUSTER,
THOMAS H. BITTINGER,
Officers of Registration for District No. 3 of Garrett county, Md.

WM. J. BARNARD,
JOEL PAUGH,
Officers of Registration for District No. 4 of Garrett county, Md.

JAMES E. McGETTIGAN,
WM. M. FRAZEE,
Officers of Registration for District No. 5 of Garrett county, Md.

NATHAN C. BROWNING,
J. ALVIN FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for District No. 6 of Garrett county, Md.

E. H. BARTLETT,
LINCOLN CALLIS,
Officers of Registration for District No. 7 of Garrett county, Md.

JAMES W. MASON,
JONAS YUTZY,
Officers of Registration for District No. 8 of Garrett county, Md.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
DANIEL B. LAYMAN,
Officers of Registration for District No. 9 of Garrett county, Md.

WILLIAM SEABOLD,
S. P. SPECHT,
Officers of Registration for District No. 10 of Garrett county, Md.

PETER F. MICHAEL,
STANLEY M. JACOBS,
Officers of Registration for District No. 11 of Garrett county, Md.

HENRY WILEY,
SIMON J. ORENDORF,
Officers of Registration for District No. 12 of Garrett county, Md.

L. C. HAMILL,
W. SCOTT PEW,
Officers of Registration for District No. 13 of Garrett county, Md.

JOHN F. BROWNING,
B. C. SCOTT,
Officers of Registration for District No. 14 of Garrett county, Md.

EDMUND JAMISON, President,
CHAS. M. MILLER,
E. E. SOLLARS,
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Md.

CHAS. A. DIFFINBAUGH, Clerk.

Mortgagees' Sale
OF VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE
Adjoining the Town of Oakland, Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Louisa Chambers to the undersigned mortgagees, dated the 16th day of April, 1903, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 43, folios 413, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having been made under said mortgage, we hereby give notice that we will offer at public sale to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY,
The 15th Day of October, 1904,

at the hour of eleven o'clock a. m. of said day, in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland aforesaid, all that lot, piece or parcel of ground situate, lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, which on the plat of Dailey's Sub—divisions of lots Nos. 57, 58, 71, 72, and 2, of Pennington's Addition to the Town of Oakland is known and designated as Lot No. 31, and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning for the same at a planted stone marked 31 standing on the North side of Crook street and the West side of Third street, and North 67° West, 60 feet from the end of the first line of Lot No. 30 of the subdivision of Lot No. 2 of said addition, and running thence with Third street North 23° East, 68½ feet, then North 67° West, 130 feet, South 46½° West, 76 feet to Crook street, and with it South 67° East, 158½ feet to the beginning, containing

9,881 1-8 SQ. FEET.

The improvements consist of a comparatively new and

Commodious Dwelling

containing eight rooms, a stable and other necessary outbuildings, and is a very desirable property.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
FRED. A. THAYER,
Mortgagees.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

KENDALL.

Miss Iva McCullough, the charming and accomplished daughter of J. W. McCullough of Friendsville, is a frequent visitor at Kendall where she has a class in music. Miss McCullough received her musical education in Boston having spent a number of years in that centre of culture.

Mr. Henry Krug returned home from Philadelphia and other Eastern points last Thursday. He had been away for a number of weeks.

Messrs. Henry K. Friend, Bert Teets, John Lish and Frank Raybuck, who have been to the World's Fair at St. Louis, returned Monday noon. They report a good and instructive trip and say that to see all of the Fair would require a solid month. They were greatly pleased with the foreigh exhibits.

H. R. Watson, tie inspector for the the B. & O. R. R., spent several days of this week at Kendall in the interest of his company.

D. H. Horton, traveling manager of the H. C. Huston Lumber Company of Pittsburg, was here between trains Monday. Harry is strictly up to date in all departments of the Lumber business and is always a welcome visitor.

Mr. Ralph Velev, one of the engineers on the Manor Land & Oakland R. R., left for his Pennsylvania home Tuesday, having been summoned thither on account of the illness of his wife.

Mr. Roy Shank, assistant bookkeeper for the Yough Manor Lumber Company, will be granted a leave of absence for three months in order that he may take a thorough course of bookkeeping in Duff's College, Pittsburg. Roy is so well and favorably known here and he has been so competent and valuable to the company that his place will be open for him when he returns.

Mr. Jacob Sliger, one of our best citizens, has been on the sick list for some days.

Scott Mitchell, of Addison, Pa., is a recent employe with the Yough Manor Lumber Company.

This section has been favored with several refreshing showers during the week, but it has been so dry for a long time that these showers scarcely counted for much. We need a lot of rain to count.

The Yough Manor Lumber Company tendered a picnic to its employes and families last Saturday. A special train of five cars was run from Kendall to Swallow Falls where the picnic was given and almost the entire population of our town spent the day at the Falls. An invitation was also extended to the Friendsville people to join our picnickers on that day and at least fifty excursionists from that place accompanied our people to Swallow Falls. The day was perfect for such an occasion and all those who journey to Swallow Falls had the time of their lives. Dancing, games of various kinds and delightful strolls over the surrounding country afforded amusement for all.

BITTINGER.

Rev. Shoup preached an excellent sermon to the Bittinger congregation Sunday morning last.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowser, accompanied by Miss Mariett, all of Jennings, were "Broadway" drivers Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Jonathan Broadwater, of Minnesota, is visiting relatives in this section.

Mr. A. J. Orendorf, one of Bittinger's prominent young men, is obliged to take frequent drives over the mountainous sections of Garrett county, owing to his very ill health.

Mr. Earl Stanton, of near Grantsville, was the guest of Miss Malinda Orendorf some time since.

Mr. W. J. Claybrook, of Meyersdale, Pa., drove overland to Oakland one day last week and on his return spent Thursday night at the Central as the guest of Miss Ellithorp.

Messrs. Edward Brenneman and Oliver Buckle drove to Jennings recently to have their profile taken by the famous photographer, Edw. Wiley.

Messrs. Bender and Beagle, of Springs, Pa., and J. E. Emrick, of Meyersdale, Pa., were registered at the Central last week.

Dr. H. L. Bevans and son Harry, of Grantsville, passed through this burg last Monday.

Mr, and Mrs. Ellithorp and daughter Miss Amanda, with their friend Miss Welch, drove to Jennings, Sunday afternoon.

Mr. W. H. Lohr, of Swanton, was in this section last week.

Mr. U. O. Blocher, of Grantsville, paid this village a visit recently.

The Lutheran congregation will hold a harvest home picnic Saturday, October 1st.

MAYFLOWER.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

After Forty Years.

Mr. D. W. Fitzwater, of Mountain Home, Elmer county, Idaho, was in this city Saturday visiting his brother, Mr. A. B. Fitzwater, who is in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad.

Mr. Fitzwater was born at North Glade, in Garrett county, about ten miles from Mt. Lake Park. In November, 1865, he left his native place to join other young men in seeking fortunes in the west. Mr. Fitzwater never returned to the east until a few weeks ago, when he came to visit his brother and sister in the home place in Garrett county.

Since leaving Maryland Mr. Fitzwater has been engaged in gold and silver mining and has prospered. He was married in the state of Iowa and has a family in Idaho.—Cumberland News.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

LOST—Large Newfoundland dog. Reward if returned to R. H. West, Oakland.

LOST!

On Hooppole Road a lady's Diamond Bar Pin. Finder will be liberally rewarded by returning to the Deer Park Hotel.

Appointments By Supervisors of Elections to Fill Vacancies.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 15, 1904.

George Stahl, appointed Republican Officer of Registration and Judge of Elections by this Board at a meeting held June 25, 1904, for Election District No. 8, is found to be disqualified to serve as such by being incapacitated by physical disability, and in his place and stead Jonas Yutzy, whose postoffice address is Sunnyside, Maryland, is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

Wm. Moorehead, appointed Democratic Clerk of Election for Election District No. 4 is found to be disqualified to serve as such, and in his place and stead Lawrence Garvey, whose postoffice address is Bloomington, Md., is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county.
EDMUND JAMISON, President.

Order of Publication.

Rebecca A. McMinn, Plaintiff, vs. Howard J. McMinn, Defendant.

No. 1282 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county.

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by Rebecca A. McMinn, plaintiff, against Howard J. McMinn, the defendant.

The amended bill states that on the 25th day of May, 1896, the plaintiff was married to the defendant at Garrett county, Maryland, with whom she resided in said state and county until sometime about the month of February, 1899. That after said marriage the defendant frequently beat the plaintiff in a shameful manner with great cruelty and brutality, and that his vicious conduct became so intolerable that the plaintiff was forced to leave his house and take safety and refuge elsewhere, and was obliged to swear out a warrant for his arrest for her safety.

That at the March Term, 1899, of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, the defendant under the name of David J. McMinn, (by which name he was commonly known), was indicted and convicted in two separate cases for assaulting and beating the plaintiff. That the conduct of the plaintiff towards her husband has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, and that the defendant has not coutributed anything to her support or her children for over five years, and that he has declared his intention of living with her no longer, and that there is no possibility of reclaiming her husband or their ever living together. That said abandonment by said defendant of said plaintiff was without just cause or reason and has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation. That there were two children born to them from said marriage, to-wit: Grace Mabel and James William, seven and five years of age, respectively, infants.

That the said defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant, the custody and guardianship of the said minor children, general relief and an order of publication against said non-resident defendent.

It is thereupon, this 20th day of September, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 21st day of October, 1904, give notice to said absent defendent of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of November, 1904, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to pass as prayed.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.

Office and residence, Alder St., east of post office.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the sale of the Real Estate of Daniel Smouse, deceased.

No. 482 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23rd day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four by the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause to Jane Smouse by Jacob S. Miller and Mortimer Smouse, Executors, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause, to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county once a week for three successive weeks before the 23d day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $3,000.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.,
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:
E. E. FRIEND, Register.

Mortagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Isaac W. Thompson and Laura Thompson, his wife, to the First National Bank of Oakland, Md., dated the 16th day of September, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 45, folio 51, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under said mortgage, the undersigned, as attorney named in said mortgage, hereby gives notice that on

SATURDAY,
the 8th Day of October, 1904

at 2 o'clock p. m., in front of the courthouse in the town of Oakland, Garrett county aforesaid, he will offer at public auction to the highest bidder all the following described real estate, to-wit: All those parcels of land in Garrett county aforesaid of which the late Henry Thompson died seized and possessed, known as

"FAIR SWEEP,"

and also another parcel of land purchased by the said Henry Thompson from N. B. Harvey and beginning for the same at a butternut tree standing at the corner of the Military Lot formerly owned by Philip Davis and running thence North 70 perches, North 45 degrees West 29 perches, West 52 perches, South 45 degrees West 30 perches, to the outside line of "Avon's Vale" and with said line South 45 degrees East 153 perches, thence South 70 degrees East 148 perches to a line fence between the lands of said Henry Thompson and Thomas K. Harvey, and along and with said line fence North 30 degrees West 50 perches, north 89½ perches, South 89½ perches, West 89½ perches to the beginning, containing as a whole

One Hundred and Forty-five Acres and Fifty-four Perches.

Said property is mostly cleared and in cultivation. Improved by a good dwelling house, barn and other out buildings, a good orchard with a variety of fruits and the place is well watered. By the terms of the will of the late Henry Thompson his widow holds a life estate in said farm and the same will be sold subject thereto.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

FRED. A. THAYER,
Attorney named in the Mortgage.

ORDER NISI.

In the matter of the Real Estate of Christian Orendorf, deceased,

No. 515 Administration. In the Orphans' Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 23d day of August, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, that the sales made and reported in the above cause by Jacob S. Miller, Executor, to Christian C. Orendorf and Noah Orendorf, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 23rd day of September, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sales to be $810.

DANIEL WILSON, C. J. O. C.
GEO. B. McMILLAN, J. O. C.,
JACOB FEIK, J. O. C.

True copy—Test:
E. E. FRIEND, Register.

The Maryland Agricultural College
COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY.
THREE COURCES OF INSTRUCTION.
AGRICULTURAL. MECHANICAL.
SCIENTIFIC.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements: bath-rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

New buildings with every modern improvement, and old buildings thoroughly renovated by opening of first session. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, with annual deposit, ($159) one hundred and fifty nine dollars, for scholastic year. Daily visit by physician to College. Catalog giving full particulars sent on application. Attention is called to the Short Course of ten weeks in Agriculture. Write for particulars.

Term Commences, Thursday, September, 15.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Maryland.

The Maryland School for the Deaf,
37TH SESSION,
Reopens September 14th, 1904.

Non-Sectarian. For the deaf and dumb and those whose hearing is too defective for attendance on public school. Speech and lip-reading taught, as well as grammar school and academic studies.

Location very healthful. Board and Tuition free to residents of Maryland.

Apply to
CHAS. W. ELY, Principal,
Frederick, Md.

ORDER NISI.

David Sloan vs. Jefferson S. Green.

No. 1233 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

Ordered this 5th day of September, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by D. Lindley Sloan, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 5th day of October, 1904; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett, county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 5th day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sale to be $400.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Mortgagees' Sale
—OF—
Personal Property!

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Joseph E. Lint, William A. Lint and Joseph V. Lint to the undersigned mortgagees, dated the 11th day of February, 1901, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 37, folio 355, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under said mortgage we hereby give notice that on Saturday, the 17th Day of September, 19..

at the hour of two o'clock P. M., at the farm of Andrew J. Frazee, on Frazee's Ridge, in Selbysport District, Garrett county, Maryland, we will offer at public auction to the highest bidder the following personal property, to-wit:

One Aultman & Taylor Steam Engine and Dixon Separator Threshing Machine and Two Bay Horses,

being a portion of the property conveyed by said mortgage.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

JEFFERSON FRAZEE,
DAVID TAYLOR,
Mortgagees.

The Hustling Store Company,
LOCH LYNN HEIGHTS,

Will conduct an Auction at its store rooms opposite the Mt. Lake Park railroad station on

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1904,

When good seasonable Goods, first-class in every respect—Goods that command one hundred cents on the dollar—will be sold absolutely without reserve. The goods to be sold consist of—

Rockers and Dining Room Chairs.
Trunks, Telescopes and Suit Cases.
Screen Doors and Clothes Racks.
Tin and Galvanized Boilers.
Horse Collars and Pads.
Mattings, Rugs and Mats.
Lot of Underwear and Overalls.
30 Overcoats.
Cupboard, Dinner Pots and Tea Kettles.
Window Shades and 1 Washing Machine.
One Harrow, 1 Horse, 3 Spring Wagons.
500 pairs Shoes and lot Trousers.
Lawn Mower, Scythes and Snaths.
Ice Cream Freezers and Dishes.
Ewers, Basins and Slop Pails.
Lot Umbrellas and Store Fixtures.
Lot Tinware and Porcelainware.
Several Heating and Cooking Stoves
Lot Hats, Clocks and Pictures.
Lot Paints.
Lot of Poultry Wire.
Bed Steads, Bed Springs, Mattresses, Pillows, Comforts, Spreads and Blankets.

TERMS OF SALE—All sums under $10 cash; on sums of $10 and over a credit of six months will be given by purchaser executing his note with approved security. These terms must be complied with before any goods are removed.

The Hustling Store Company.
P. T. GARTHRIGHT, Prop'r.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1904. NUMBER 30.

THE SUIT GIVEN UP BY DEMOCRATS.

They Agree to Accept Mr. Bryan's Opinion Relative to Marking Ballots.

ONE CROSS MARK SUFFICIENT

To Vote for the Presidential Electors —Another In Its Proper Place Must Be Made To Vote for Congressman.

The Democrats have abandoned plans to contest the soundness of the opinion of Attorney General Bryan that voters need place their marks only in the square opposite the name of the candidate for President of the United States, and that is not necessary to place their marks opposite the names of the several electors representing the candidates of the several parties for President. It is understood that former Attorney General John P. Poe has advised the Democratic state central committee, of which he is the counsel, that it is not advisable to press the case.

No steps had been taken to bring the case before the lower court, but several legal methods were discussed, none of which however, were deemed advisable. Those contemplating the suits were confronted by an obstacle which was insurmountable. The Republicans would not have been willing had the case reached that stage at which their co-operation would have been requested, to agree to go forward at once with the suit in order to secure a decision by the lower court, and then by the Court of Appeals, prior to the November election. Without the willingness of the Republicans as the defendants to join in the movement for an early decision the expeditious dispatch of the case would be impossible.

The Republican managers of the campaign had paid but little heed to the threatened litigation to overthrow the attorney general's opinion, and had prepared to issue sample ballots containing only two marks—one opposite the name of Mr. Roosevelt and one opposite the name of the Republican candidate for Congress. If any other construction of the election law than that placed upon it by the attorney general had been substituted, it would have been ignored by the Republicans, who were in position to make a contest before Congress, both on the electoral and congressional vote of the state. Such a step, however, has been averted by the abandonment of the case by the Democrats.

The attorney general's opinion regarding the marking of ballots is embodied in his instructions to judges of election, which instructions have the full force of law. These instructions read as follows:

The voter must mark with an indelible pencil his cross mark (X) opposite the name of each candidate for whom he wishes to vote, with the exception of candidates for the office of presidential electors. The voter may vote for presidential electors by making a cross mark (X) in the square opposite the name of each one of the persons (not more than eight in number) for whom he wishes to vote. He may also vote for the eight candidates for presidential elector of any political party by making his cross mark (X) in the square opposite the surnames of the candidates of the party of his choice for president and vice president. For example, a voter wishes to vote for the candidate of the Democratic party for presidential electors; he can do so by making a cross mark (X) in the square opposite the name of each one of the eight Democratic candidates for presidential elector; he can also, if he prefers, make his cross mark (X) in the square opposite the names of Parker and Davis, the Democratic candidates for president and vice president, and have his ballot counted for each one of the Democratic candidates for presidential elector grouped under the names of Messrs. Parker and Davis. (Art. 32, sec. 50.)

Father Mattingly Leaves Hancock.

Rev. Romanus Mattingly will leave Hancock in a few days to accept a charge at St. Catherine's home for self-supporting girls, Washington city. The institution is called Our Lady of Mercy. The home is on Capitol Hill and in charge of the Sisters of Mercy. Father Mattingly will probably live at the Catholic University and attend the lectures. Father Mattingly will be succeeded by Rev. Henry S. Nagengast, of St. Anthony's church, of Gardensville, Baltimore county, Md., who will take charge of St. Peter's church and all the missions. He is a young man and a good anguist. He will take charge as a pastor on or before next Sunday.

Father Mattingly is well known in Oakland, having been pastor at St. Peter's church at one time. He is a native of Mt. Savage, Md.

Lutheran Church Services.

Services at St. Mark's Lutheran ch. as follows: On Saturday evening, Oct. 1st, at 7.30, preparatory service, confirmation and reception of members. Sabbath morning at 10.30 Communion; at 7.30 p. m. preaching.

Preaching at Crellin by Rev. E. Mangus next Sabbath at 2.30 p. m.

OFFUTT'S. FURNITURE.

For every mentionable thing in the Furniture line, including all the latest patterns in

Bedroom Suits,
Chiffoniers,
Wardrobes,
Sideboards,
Hall Racks,
Couches,
Iron Beds,
Cribs,
Extension Tables,
Chairs and Rockers, all kinds,
Mattresses, single and double,
Springs, single and double,
Kitchen Cupboards and Safes,
Stands of all kinds,
Pillows and Bolsters,
Carpets, etc., etc., etc., etc.

Call and examine and be convinced that we are the cheapest place in Western Maryland to buy Furniture.

D. E. OFFUTT & SONS.

GARRETT COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THE COUNTY TEACHERS' INSTITUTE IN SESSION.

Proceedings of the Sixteenth Annual Meeting of the Public Instructors.

INTERESTING TALKS DELIVERED.

State Superintendent Bates Stevens Opened the Session Monday—The Gathering Well Attended and Interesting

Monday morning at half past ten the Sixteenth Annual Teachers' Institute met in the public school building in Oakland and was called to order by State Superintendent M. Bates Stevens, of Baltimore City.

In calling the Institute to order Mr. Stevens complimented the teachers of Garrett county for their loyalty to the cause of education and also for the large number of teachers present which was an indication of the success which was sure to attend the sessions throughout.

After singing, devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. Church. Rev. E. Manges, pastor of the Lutheran church, delivered the address of welcome to the assembled teachers which was responded to by Prof. J. C. Beahm, of the Accident schools. Both addresses were made in the respective speakers' happiest veins and were listened to very attentively by those in attendance.

The address of Dr. Stevens following that of Mr. Beahm, was an excellent one in which the shortcomings as well as the noble work of the teacher were well and pointedly presented. The speaker made a strong plea for more active interest on the part of the teachers in the organization of teachers' associations which will benefit the communities generally in which they are located.

Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh, who holds the chair of Pedagogy in the University of Pennsylvania, was the next speaker. It is a difficult matter to convey an idea of the power of Dr. Brumbaugh in his remarks. He showed that a teacher should be extremely careful in his habits and conduct, should eat well and sleep an alloted number of hours and keep himself in prime physical and mental condition so as to the better enable him to appy his talents in his chosen line of work.

Prof. T. L. Gibson followed Dr. Brumbaugh with an hour's instruction in music, which was well received and highly appreciated by the teachers present.

In the evening, when the session was held at the opera house, Dr. Brumbaugh delivered a scholarly lecture on "America In Porto Rico." The speaker was sure of his ground having been at the head of the organization of public instruction in Porto Rico during the year 1898 and the pictures he drew of the natives in their endeavor to obtain even the rudiments of learning was indeed a great incentive to the American youth to be up and doing, with the advantages of public instruction open to him upon every side.

This session on Tuesday was opened by Prof. Gibson who again devoted some time to musical instruction. It was evident that the teachers greatly need the training along this line and they are responding well to the efforts of Prof. Gibson.

Dr. Brumbaugh followed, after a general discussion of many subjects, with an address on the "Revival of Learning in Europe." The lecture was continued into the afternoon session. The speaker had no difficulty in holding the attention of his hearers. He plead especially that parents should give to their children first a good education, it being their best equipment in life with which to withstand the many vicissitudes which all are bound to meet, no matter what vocation one may enter.

Tuesday evening Rev. Jahu DeWitt Miller, the brainest and one of the best known lecturers on the American platform today, spoke to a packed house on the subject "The Self-Sufficiency of the Republic." This lecture like all of Mr. Miller's, was very broad and highly enjoyed.

WEDNESDAY'S SESSION.

Wednesday morning the Institute was called to order by Superintendent Browning and after a musical prelude Prof. Gibson rendered that splendid song, "My Old Kentucky Home.

Prof. John T. White, of Allegany county, was introduced and spoke at some length on "Reading." He plead especially for more careful instruction upon this important branch of education, very properly ranking it as the leading of all subjects.

Prof. Brumbaugh took up the subject of Literature," explaining the evolution of English literature, especially the tragedy as presented in Othello.

After a short intermission, Prof. Murdaugh, of the State Normal School, was introduced. He selected as his subject "Psychology" as determining the method of the presentation of subjects to pupils.

The afternoon session opened by singing.

Dr. Brumbaugh continued his lectures, having selected as his subject the "Training of the Feelings," showing how children may be stimulated to noble action by presenting examples of of self-denial, heroic actions, and generous conduct. His labor at the Institute has been highly appreciated. He received the most perfect attention throughout his work.

Prof. Murdaugh introduced the "Round Table on Primary Reading," which he very ably presented. This subject is of greater interest to Garrett county teachers than any other. So many still cling to the alphabet.

Prof. White then gave his farewell address when the institute adjourned.

SHEEP TAKEN TO ST. LOUIS.

One Hundred Head From Col. Truesdell's Herd Shipped to the Fair.

On Tuesday a hundred head of Rambouillet sheep from the celebrated herd owned by Col. George Truesdell near Deer Park, were sihpped by fast freight in three cars to the fair at St. Souis, which were accompanied by the shepherd of the flock, Mr. Hugh Claderwood, and a young man named Rodeheaver.

Of the total number taken to St. Louis twelve will be for exhibition purposes while the balance will be sold at public auction on the Fair grounds when fancy prices are expected. The sheep are the pick of the flock of Col Truesdell's imported animals from France where a number of them took first prize in a world's contest.

Settled With Creditors.

E. B. Stone and Robert Felty, merchants of Connellsville, Pa., have taken the business of the Oliver Lumber company, near Kingwood, W. Va., which was in the hands of a receiver. They compromised with the creditors by paying them cash at fifty cents on the dollar or giving them full amount in stock. About 150 men will be employed and the monthly pay roll will amount to $70,000. The mills are again in operation.

CONGRESSIONAL TIMBER A VERY SCARCE ARTICLE

The Democrats Assemble at Rockville and Adjourn Without Nominating.

WILL MEET AT HAGERSTOWN

Wednesday Where Selection Will Probably Be Made—Mr. DeWarren Reynolds, of Cumberland, Could Have Had Nomination.

The Democratic congressional convention at Rockville yesterday failed to nominate and adjourned to meet next Wednesday at Hagerstown. Before the convention met DeWarren H. Reynolds, of Cumberland, was a favorite, but on the arrival of his delegation a quietus was put by him to the move. Bowie F. Waters, of Rockville, also declined the honor. The name of George A. Pearre of Frederick, Md., was considered informally, but he would not consent. Mr. Waters was made chairman of the convention. A committee on nominations was appointed. The committee failed to find a Democrat willing to stand fire and recommend the adjournment, which was carried.

Resolutions were adopted by the convention endorsing the Democratic platform and Parker and Davis, concluding with the unanimous tender of the nomination for congress to Spencer C. Jones, of Montgomery county. With some warmth Mr. Jones resented the attempt to force the nomination for Congress on him as he is a Senator from Montgomery county, and the president of the Senate. The move was made to embarrass him.

Owing to the delay of the Allegany and Garrett county delegations in arriving, the convention, which occurred in the opera house at Rockville, did not begin its futile deliberations until late in the afternoon. The Frederick county delegates urged the nomination of George A. Pearre of Frederick because the exact similarity in names would, it was affirmed, operate much to the advantage of the Democratic party, especially in Frederick county, where the illiterate negro vote is large and where the official ballot will contain no party designation. Mr. Pearre however declined to be a party to this scheme. He is a first cousin of Col. George A. Pearre, the Republican nominee.

Mr. DeWarren H. Reynolds sought the political cyclone cellar at the convention, if there be aught in the imputation of the Baltimore Sun.

Mr. Reynolds could have had the nomination for the mere assent, but he declined to become the sacrifical lamb in terms both positive and eloquent.

PRISONERS SENTENCED BY THE COURT SATURDAY

Some Will Go to the Penitentiary Others to House of Correction.

FINES IMPOSED FOR ASSAULT

Three of The Fuller Brothers Convicted of Assaulting Deputy Sheriff Frantz—Denis Hare Found Guilty of Assaulting Stella C. Swauger

On Saturday morning those who had been convicted upon criminal charges during the September Term of the Circuit Court, were brought before Judges Boyd and Henderson for sentence.

Thomas Douglas, found guilty of assault, was fined $1 and costs, which he paid and was discharged.

George Marvil who was tried before the Court upon an indictment for false pretences was found guilty but paroled by the Court and placed under a bond for his appearance at the September Term, 1905.

Chas. Weimer, found guilty of assault was assessed $20 and costs which he paid and was discharged from custody.

Dennis C. Hare, of near Grantsville, whose trial was in progress before a jury when this paper was put to press last Thursday, was found guilty on the third count of the indictment, assault and battery. He had been indicted for rape, his victim being Stella C. Swauger, a young girl, living near Grantsville. The jury was out all night before an agreement was reached. The prisoner was sentenced to serve six months in the House of Correction.

Edwin C. Butler, who was tried before the Court for stealing a sum of money from Benj. F. Fike, was sentenced to serve one year in the Maryland Penitentiary.

Bartlett Toney, an Italian, found guilty of having stolen a watch from Grant Pew, was given eighteen months in the Penitentiary.

Michael C., Oscar and Peter Fuller, three brothers, who live at Corinth, West Va., indicted for having assaulted Deputy Sheriff James Frantz at a baseball game on the afternoon of July 4th, when the officer received a blow on the head and in the face with a beer bottle in the hands of one of the brothers, were sentenced to pay fines aggregating $160 and costs of prosecution. The former, Michael, was assessed $100 of the amount, but refusing to pay, was sent to jail. The other two paid up and were discharged.

William Gray, colored, indicted for stealing a watch, was sent to the House of Correction for eighteen months.

Henry Rosenberg, for selling liquor without a license, was fined $50 and costs.

Thomas Osik, upon the same grounds, was also fined $50 and costs, the fines in both cases being paid and the prisoners discharged.

Subscribe for The Republican

WE HAVE THE LATEST

In Styles and Best in Quality to Show you in SHOES

...A FULL LINE OF...

DOROTHY DODDS

Just received: light and heavy weight soles, Blucher and Bal Cut, Patent and Dongola.

WALK-OVERS

Talk for themselves. A look, a try-on, a sale. We only ask the pleasure of showing the line and we know the goods will do the rest.

H. L. DAUGHERTY, ... Oakland, Md.

SAYS HE COULD TELL MORE.

Prophet Says Japan Will Rule Eastern World in the Fatal Year 1908.

Lee Spangler, the York (Pa.) weather prophet and evangelist, whose many predictions pertaining to world events have been fulfilled, and who prophesied the breaking out of the war in the East a year before its occurrence, the death of Queen Victoria, the assassination of William McKinley and the death of Mark Hanna, is out with a fresh forecast.

"In my last forecast several months ago," said Spangler, "I predicted a great drouth in Europe, which has visited Germany. People wonder why so many of my predictions are fulfilled. There is nothing marvelous about it. They are simply revelations from a higher power than that of man. I have been chosen as the medium, through which they are to be made known to the people.

"I still reaffirm my prediction of the election of Theodore Roosevelt as President of the United States.

"The war in the East is turning out as I said it would before its outbreak. Russia is being defeated. Its power is broken and it will never be a world power again. God has avenged the wholesale butchery of his people, the Jews, in Russia.

"He has vengeance to visit upon other far Eastern nations. Turkey will become involved in war with other nations and will be dismembered. The murder of thousands of Armenians and other innocent Christians will be avenged by God.

"All the nations of Europe will decline in power with the exception of England. England and the United States will be ruling the Western World and Japan the Eastern world when the destruction comes in 1908.

"The greatness of President Roosevelt is not realized by the people of the United States. He has been chosen by God to do a greater work than any other American has performed. It would not be wise for me to tell what that work is.

"A great drouth is shortly to visit parts of this country. I could make other startling prophesies, but God has forbidden me to give them to the people until later."

THE WAY OF THE RAIL

Unique World's Fair Edition of The "Book of The Royal Blue."

The September number "Book of the Royal Blue," issued by the Passenger Department of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, which will come from press on September 12th, is entirely devoted to special interests at the World's Fair.

Its leading feature is an excellently prepared article on "The Way of the Rail in the World," by J. G. Pangborn, who has charge of the Baltimore & Ohio exhibit at the World's Fair, and which has been illustrated from photographs taken during the present month.

The B. & O. exhibit, which is the most complete of its kind in existence, and the result of nearly fifteen years research, presents all types of locomotives, various cars, railway equipment, photographs, etc., both European and American, from the beginning of railroad transportation. Mr. Pangborn, who made a study of the progress of railways throughout the world under a special commission of the Field Columbian Museum of Chicago, is the author of several books on railways, notable among them is the World's Railways." Another article by Mr. Pangborn on the "Locomotive Tonnage at the World's Fair" comments on the great amount of idle motive power on exhibit in the Transportation Building.

One, two and three-day itineraries give pointers to the prospective World's Fair visitors, whose time of sight seeing at the Fair is limited.

Pen sketches of various exhibits are also given, and the entire volume is uniquely illustrated with snap shot photographs at random throughout the grounds.

For those intending to visit the Fair, as well as for those who cannot make the trip, this particular number is most valuable, as it presents the greatest of World's Fairs in a photographically realistic manner.

The edition will be limited. Single copies can be obtained for 5 cents each, on application to D. B. Martin, Manager Passenger Traffic, Baltimore, Md. Regular subscription, 50 cents per annum.

NOTICE.

Change in Business.

The firm of Jno. W. Haney & Sons having sold its milling business, plant and feed store at Friendsville, Md., to The Friendsville Milling Company, hereby gives notice that all persons knowing themselves indebted to the above named firm must call and make settlements of their accounts on or before Oct. 1st, 1904. All accounts remaining unsettled at that date will be placed in the hands of an officer for collection.

JOHN W. HANEY & SONS,
22-4t Friendsville, Md.

Comparatively new cook stove cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. 2t*

PLEASANT FIELDS OF HOLY WRIT

SAVE for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ,
I might despair. —Tennyson.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Fourth Quarter. Lesson I. 2 Kings ii, 12-22. October 1, 190

Copyright, Davis W. Clark.

Elisha Succeeds Elijah

There is a moral grandeur in the close of Elijah's career, which cannot fail of recognition. The end is unique and fitting. The coming event casts no shadow, but a ray of glory before, which even the sons of the prophets could recognize. The prophet made a stately promenade from Gilgal to Bethel, from Bethel to Jericho, from Jericho to the point beyond Jordan, where he was to make connection with the chariot of fire. Perhaps Elijah entertained some misgiving as to the legitimacy of Elisha's successorship. If so, it arose from the opposite temperament and method of the latter. It is so hard for us to learn that God may have other ways than the one in which we may have been called to work. But Elisha proves the might and perseverance of his gentleness, in his thrice-repeated asseveration, "I will not leave Thee." The question of successorship settled, Elijah, who to the worldly view had nothing but his mantle to bequeath, asked his companion to designate what portion of his estate he would select. Elisha again gives new evidence that he is in the line by the choice he makes. It is that he may have an elder son's portion of the Spirit which moved Elijah. Not that he may resemble his spiritual father in personal appearance, temperament, or deed, but that the same Spirit that operated in Elijah may work in him also, and twice as powerfully as in any other son of the prophets. The thing asked was "hard," because it was beyond the prophet's jurisdiction. He could only say that if, in the hour and article of his translation, now so imminent, Elisha could with eye of seer penetrate to and behold his entrance to the spirit world, then he would be of such character as to receive the same Spirit that had illuminated Elijah himself.

No studied phrase could have been so appropriate as Elisha's unpremeditated ascription to the ascending prophet. The chariot with its horsemen was the most formidable part of an Oriental army, corresponding to artillery in modern times. The very weight of the machine, its wheels armed with hooked blades, the archer standing within it like a tower of brass, the horses driven four or six abreast. Nothing could stand before such a terrible engine. So when an army met a chariot, it was a real calamity. It was irreparable, and the force was correspondingly weakened. That is the meaning of Elisha's cry as he stands in the swelling of Jordan, "My father, my father! chariot and horseman of Israel!" It signified that he was greater than any chariot which even heaven itself could afford him, and, in addition, that he was both chariot and charioteer, the nation's strongest defense. Elisha himself had no such exit from the world as Elijah. It was in his quiet home in Samaria that Elisha fell sick of his sickness whereof he died, as the account quaintly says. Jordan only parted at the beginning of his career to let him come back to his native land and toil for God and his fellows. There was no miraculous division of the river, no chariot, or whirlwind. His death was natural and his burial according to the custom of the country.

But in spite of this contrast, it is worthy of note that his epitaph is identical with that of the Tishbite. When Joash, the king of Israel, came down to visit the dying prophet in the touching language of the narrative, he wept over his face, and cried, "O, my father, my father, thou chariot of Israel and horseman thereof!" So this prophet of benignty was the strongest armament of Israel. His gentleness made his nation great. For sixty-five years this holy man of God continually passed by, mainly on his errands of mercy and healing, and to those sacred services which he conducted on Sabbaths and new moons, and to his professor's chair in the various schools of the prophets, which he had founded. His career of benediction was just as efficacious for Israel as Elijah's career of malediction. Both were woven into the plan of Providence, and were as indispensable as warp or woof. So there are yet diversities of gifts, but the same spirit, differences of administration, but the same Lord, and there are diversities of operation, but it is the same God.

However, the chronological order in which these dissimilar prophets appeared must be remembered. Elijah, the iron flail of Jehovah, came first and beat down a path through the foul idolism of Israel along which Elisha, the almoner of God's mercy could walk. It has been so in the Church from the beginning. Controversialists and reformers have opened a way for the patient toilers of the kingdom to follow. The one class is as indispensable as the other.

The Teacher's Lantern.

Two pictorial incidents are recorded on the threshold of Elisha's prophetical career. Whether they are idealized on literal is of comparatively small moment. They at least symbolized, the one the beginning, the other the effect of his ministry. The opening of the river by the stroke of Elijah's mantle in the hands of Elisha proved the legitmacy of the latter's successorship, and indicated that he was to have his way through the stream of events then transpiring. No wonder it was said, "The Spirit of Elijah doth rest upon Elisha." He was at once saluted as the successor of the translated prophet.

The sweetening of the spring at Jericho indicates the effect of Elisha's ministry. He was to heal his nation and his times. His was to be a saline and quieting influence in the bitter and turbulent stream of individual and collective life. The woman of Shunem spoke of him as the "holy man of God, which passeth by us continually." For sixty years he continued faithfully to discharge the duties of his high office.

Elijah was the "chariotry" of Israel. Good men in high office are worth more than a park of artillery. Good men in or out of office are the real standing army of the nation.

Elijah was as different from Elisha as Mount Sinai from the Mount of Beautitudes. Eight out of nine of Elisha's reputed miracles are beneficent. The exception proves the rule.

The same Spirit may operate through men of unlike temperament, without destroying their individual dissimilarity. It is the same steam that operates the different machines in the factory. That fact, however, does not make a lathe a saw or vice versa. Each does its own work. So of men.

The young men of Bethel failed to apprehend this truth. They thought Elisha no prophet, because he did not look and act like Elijah; because, in fact, he wore his hair short. Paul asserts that while there are diversities, the Spirit may be the same.

Education was one of the silent but mighty forces in the reformation of Israel now in progress. There were several well-attended theological seminaries in existence.

It is well said that Elijah's last duty (the dividing of Jordan) was a test of his spiritual strength. He has to build for himself, by an act of faith, the path to his glorious end, and so impress indelibly upon the hearts of his followers that no other way than faith in God's promises leads to the inheritance of light.

Now follows a loose collection of acts covering twelve chapters. They are the credentials of Elisha's prophetical calling. Some tradition of them was probably preserved in the school of the prophets, later committed to writing and finally incorporated in the Book of Kings. They are evidently fragmentary, unchronological and pieced

"Never to change"—that is the conceit of a little mind. Elisha said, "No," to his doubting scholars when they insisted the search should be made for the body of Elijah. But he put himself aside, and said, "Yes," when he realized that if the concession was not made to their weakness they would probably always harbor a doubt of the translation of Elijah. Matheson says well, "That saying 'Yes, after having said 'No' at first, is one of the finest things."

There is an Eastern story of a mythical fountain, each drop of which, cast upon the ground, caused a new fountain to spring up. Elisha was such a fountain. Each word, each indeed of his, like the fabled drops, caused new fountains to spring by the wayside of his long career.

LETTER TO C. M. RATHBURN. Oakland Md.

Dear Sir: Mr. —President of a cotton-mill at Union, S C—he don't want to see his name in print—had two offers of 500 gallons of paint: $1.30 $1.25. Took the $1.25; and got skinned. He'd have got three-quarters skinned if he'd taken the other.

The $1.30 was full-gallon; the $1.25 was 18 per cent. short. The full-measure paint was adulterated 40 per cent. the short-measure paint was adulterated 45 per cent, besides benzine in the oil, don't know how much.

Devoe lead-and zinc wasn't sold in the town then.

It don't pay to monkey with paint.

Devoe costs less than any of 'em; not by the gallon, of course; by the house and year. That's how to reckon it. Go by the name.

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & Co

P. S. J. M. Davis & Son sell our paint

The Kind of Work The Tramp Liked Best

"WANT work, eh? Tryin' to git 'long in the world the best you can, eh?"

The forlorn individual with the seal of many states upon his back sighed and said in husky tones:

"I once worked. I am anxious to work again, but no one will take my proposition seriously when I solicit toil, hard, stern toil. It is a hard thing for a man to beg for what no one will give him, sir."

"When did you last try your hand at labor?"

"Ten long and weary years ago. Since then I have been denied the pleasure of earning the sweat of my brow by steeping my hands with the soil of toil. Mighty tough luck, isn't it?"

"Humph! You have had a hard road to travel all these years. I am sorry I have nothin' for you to do. No wood to saw, hayin' over and not time for harvestin', no stuns to pick on this farm. The best I can do for you, stranger, is this: Here's 50 cents for a night's lodgin and breakfast in the village."

"At last, at last, I have worked"—

"What do you mean?" asked the old farmer as the other turned away.

"I have worked—you," came floating back from the stranger's whiskers as he passed out of sight in the gloaming.—St. Louis Republic.

Striking Resemblance.

"Aren't you a minor?"

"No, sir. But say, dis ain't de foist time I've been mistook fer Jack Munroe."—New York American.

Carrying It Too Far.

"Prisoner, stand up."

The prisoner stood up.

"You have been convicted," said the judge, "of the crime of horse stealing, an offense which in more primitive times and more sparsely settled communities was punished in a much severer way than the statute prescribes nowadays, and, indeed, it may have been necessary to the well being of a society composed of lawless as well as law abiding citizens to visit extreme penalties upon violators of the laws concerning the rights of property, no less for the punishment of crime than for the deterrent effect on other criminals, and, taking this view of the case, you may congratulate yourself that you live in an age of law and order, for you have had a fair and impartial trial by a jury of reputable citizens, whose verdict, I am bound to say, meets my hearty approval, and it only remains for me to pronounce sentence, which is"—

"Judge," interposed the prisoner, pale with fear, "are you going to give me a still longer sentence than that?"—Chicago Tribune.

Dignity.

"Never, sir!" sternly declares McCullough Keene, the famous animal impersonator.

"But," persists the stage manager, "we've got to have you go on in the third act with Tom the piper's son, dressed in a pig's skin, to imitate that animal."

"Sir," retorts the artist, "I cannot do it. Never shall it be said of me that I am a ham actor."—Judge.

Need For Haste.

Tess—Where are you going in such a hurry?

Jess—I'm going to congratulate May Fikkle. Just heard she was engaged to Harry Somers.

Tess—But what's your rush?

Jess—Goodness, how can I congratulate her if I don't get there before the engagement's broken?—Philadelphia Press.

The Size of Coal.

"Here's another alleged humorous article about coal by that new funny man," said the editor's assistant. "Shall I use it?"

"What size is it?" asked the editor.

"Oh, chestnut size, of course."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Too Bad.

Dolly—Those clouds are very thick, pa, aren't they?

Pa—Yes, dear. There are layers on layers, sometimes half a mile dense.

Dolly—Isn't it a pity that they leak and let the rain through?—Metropolitan Mazagine.

Partial Return.

Algy—You say she only partially returned your affection?

Clarence—Yes, and that's what I'm kicking about. She returned all the love letters, but retained all the jewelry.

Playing Even.

Teacher—I suppose you know, Harry, that in keeping you after school I punish myself as well as you.

Harry—Yes, m'm; that's why I don't mind it.—Boston Transcript.

BAUMGARTNER'S BIG BARGAINS!

5C SUGAR BOWLS, CREAM PITCHERS, THREE PAPERS PINS, ½ GAL. TIN BUCKETS, CAKE PLATES, AND LOTS MORE. 5C

Come around and see what 5 and 10c will do.

THE LITTLE MAN.

THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS. BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

L. F. HANSON,
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland
PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD
CHEAP EXCERSIONS
TO THE
St. Louis World's Fair
EVERY WEDNESDAY IN
AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.
Only $14.50 Round Trip from OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.
2100 Madison Square, PHILA., PA.
Mention this paper.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE
WORLD'S FAIR,
ST. LOUIS.
Three THROUGH Trains DAILY
Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars, VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RATES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS
From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

ONLY $4.00 TO WASHINGTON AND RETURN,
ONLY $4.50 TO BALTIMORE AND RETURN,
Saturday, September 17, via BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD,

Special train will leave Oakland at 12 night, affording an opportunity to spend all day Sunday among the attractions of either Capital or Monumental City. 2t

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into to the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

COAL.

I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of

Bituminous Coal,

mined from my mine west of town.

Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.

Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be promptly filled.

E. Z. TOWER.

MAGIC REMEDY
Cures Diarrhoea, Cramps in the Stomach, Colera Morbus, Dysentary or Flux, in a few minutes. A positive cure. Keep a bottle handy; it will save many a doctor's bill, and possibly your life. At dealers, 25c; by Mail, 30c—in safety mailing case.
KEYSTONE COMP'Y BLAINE W. VA.

CANCER CURED
permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1520 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

INDIGESTION

"I was troubled with stomach trouble. Thedford's Black-Draught did me more good in one week than all the doctor's medicine I took in a year."—MRS. SARAH E. SHIRFIELD, Ellettsville, Ind.

Thedford's Black Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Thedford's Black Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

More sickness is caused by constipation than by any other disease. Thedford's Black-Draught not only relieves constipation but cures diarrhœa and dysentery and keeps the bowels regular.

All druggists sell 25-cent packages.

"Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine to regulate the bowels I have ever used."—MRS. A. M. GRANT, Sneads Ferry, N. C.

CONSTIPATION

SUPPLEMENT

Odds in Wall street of 2 to 1 on Roosevelt deliver no electoral votes, but they are mighty discouraging to the silent speculator of Esopus.

Silence has grown weary listening for the reply that comes not from Esopus to Tom Watson's query, "What is Judge Parker's position on the negro question?"

Confidence in the continuance of the present administration at Washington for another four years is reflected in the confident tone that pervades all business circles in the United States.

Comparison of Republican and Democratic platforms of the last forty years emphasizes the difference between things done and things promised. One is a party of great achievements, the other of great promises.

The Democratic editors will have fun with themselves when they begin making extravagance of the national expenditures and the Jeffersonian parsimony that has plastered New York over with a debt of more than $310,000,000.

The Democratic platform denounces protection as "robbery of the many to enrich the few." Yet experience has proved that under protection prosperity is diffused among all classes of people, while under free trade all classes suffer.

It is said that Tammany will not consider the money question irrevocably settled until the contract for the next $50,000,000 subway is awarded to a backer of Judge Parker, who will recognize that a public subway is a political trough.

There is one truth that seems beyond the comprehension of the Democracy, that "the old order changes, yielding place to the new." Otherwise it would not try to fit the Jeffersonian knickerbockers of 1804 on the lusty American giant of 1904.

No matter how Democratic platforms may try to whitewash or sugar-coat the position of the party on the tariff question, its real object is always the destruction of the protective system, which is the principal safeguard of American industries, labor and wages.

The Democratic party never gets right on National issues, except when it tries to steal the Republican platform. After lecturing for many years that free silver at 16 to 1 was the paramount issue, it now drops the question and actually admits that the gold standard is irrevocably fixed.

Under the last Democratic administration business was paralyzed at home and the United States had a doubtful standing among nations. During the McKinley and Roosevelt administrations prosperity has been restored at home and the prestige of the nation abroad has advanced as never before.

Under the present tariff law all industries have revived and prospered, labor has been fully employed and more workmen have received good wages than ever before in the history of the country. Why take the dangerous risk of putting a party in power that would reverse this policy of prosperity?

The policy of protection has preserved the American market for the products of American manufactures and American manufacturers have made markets for the products of American farmers, and together they have established a high standard of American living and made possible the high scale of American wages.

"Sow a character and you reap a destiny" was one of the beautiful but meaningless apothegms flung into the lap of Judge Parker by Editor Knapp, of the St. Louis Republic, in introducing his Democratic brethren of the shears and paste pot to their candidate. With about equal relevancy and more wit he might have said "Plant a corpse and raise a tombstone."

The Democratic campaign managers openly tell the public they wish to conduct the campaign free from mud-slinging and personalities, but they seem to have secretly given instructions to revile and abuse the Republican candidate in every way possible. Chairman Taggart's newspaper, the Indianapolis Sentinel, is cartooning the President as a dog.

"Political empirics" well describes the species of constitutional hair-splitters who see the constitution rent in tatters every time a new condition demands the exercise of some government power not dreamed of in the philosophy of Thomas Jefferson. If the political empirics of 1861 had had their way there would have been no union left for their successors to weep and groan over in 1904.

Carl Schurz's appearance on the stump in Southern Illinois is another straw on the back of the double-winged Democratic mule. When he applauds Parker's gold telegram the free silver Democrats writhe; when he calls for merit in the public service there is a general exodus to the nearest free lunch counter, and when he talks about surrendering the Philippines there are groans of disapproval.

The platform on which Theodore Roosevelt stands reiterates the time-honored Republican principle in favor of fostering home industries in order that American workmen may be steadily employed and well paid. The Democratic platform is verbose and evasive, but, sifted of all its platitudes it simply reiterates the Democratic hostility to any tariff that will protect American industries.

"Let us compare candidates," said Miss Democracy to a stalwart young Republican.

"Comparisons are odious," he replied, "but since you insist, what has your candidate done that he should aspire to the presidency?"

"Nothing. He is a man of peace. Pray what has yours done?"

"He has done everything that came his way with all his mind and heart and strength. He has the soul for action that would put life under the ribs of death."

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS

Indiana Senator Well-Fitted for the Vice Presidency.

HE HAS DIGNITY AND FORCE

And His Training and Experience Will Enable Him to Preside Over the Senate with Credit to the Nation—McKinley's Friend.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—Every one here who is any way connected with the government has a great amount of personal interest in the nomination of Senator Fairbanks of Indiana for second place on the Republican ticket. The Indiana Senator has a personality all his own, and his figure merely from a physical point of view is so striking he has been a marked man in Washington ever since he came here. Straight as an arrow, thin, unusually tall, with bright red cheeks, with a becoming amount of senatorial dignity, and yet with a genuine democracy which is seldom equaled by public men, the Republican candidate for the vice presidency is more than usually popular as public men go.

Aside from this, however, the people who are on the inside of public affairs in Washington know, as people of the rest of the country may not know, that Senator Fairbanks is one of the comparatively few men in public life who have actually made their impress upon the affairs of the government. In every church, every club, every village debating society, in every Congress and every Parliament, there are always a select few who do the great bulk of the work, who are men of action, who are selected by their associates to perform the things which have to be done, who have the executive gift which makes them wise in council, and whose advice and assistance are sought when great things are to be done.

Courteous and Modest.

Constantly courteous, invariably kindly, always reserved, consistently modest, never seeking to put himself in the front rank, Senator Fairbanks is not usually credited by the world at large with the extraordinary influence he really possesses here in Washington. His associates in the Senate, the members of the cabinet, and those whose duty it is to execute the law have learned, however, the quiet force of the Senator from Indiana, and ever since he came here with McKinley in 1897 Senator Fairbanks has been one of the inner circle. He has grown stronger day by day until his nomination for the vice presidency was absolutely forced upon him because, in the opinion of his associates in the Senate and the party leaders generally, he was the best equipped man for the position, and was by his training and by his political association of presidential size, so that he might be ready at any time to exercise the duties of chief executive if it should become necessary.

Few people are aware of the unusual degree to which William McKinley gave his confidence to Senator Fairbanks. The two men were old friends, they represented much the same element in the party, and in the early months of 1897 following the bitter political battle of the previous autumn McKinley and Fairbanks were in constant touch and the President-elect began to lean upon the Senator-elect. This trust in the wisdom of the statesman from Indiana was never lessened, but as month after month went by the Indiana Senator was more and more drawn into the deepest confidences of the President.

There were trying times in Washington during the latter part of 1897 and in the early part of 1898. The United States and Spain were drifting inevitably toward war. The sentiment in this country was overwhelmingly in favor of interference in behalf of the suffering people of Cuba. The pressure for action grew daily stronger. In the public press, in Congress, in the churches, on the streets, everywhere from the Atlantic to the Pacific there was a constantly growing sentiment that the United States must put an end to the shocking conditions in Cuba.

McKinley Knew Public Sentiment.

When he was elected William McKinley well knew what this public sentiment was and where it was likely to lead. No man ever lived who was more skilled in feeling the pulse of the public than the President who laid down his life at Buffalo. When he came to the White House, nevertheless, he was determined to exhaust every device known to diplomacy, short of actual warfare, to bring Spain to terms and to bring peace to Cuba. Trained in the arts of war himself, William McKinley well knew that war was not to be entered upon lightly. He was for peace from the beginning.

During the first six months of the McKinley administration the tension here in Washington was extraordinary. Public sentiment of itself might have forced a war because of the outrages continually committed by the Spaniards upon the poor people of Cuba. Then came the explosion of the Maine, which touched the spark in the magazine, and within a few weeks the people of the United States were raging with the lust of blood.

Still William McKinley stood steadfast. He knew war was nearly inevitable, but he was in a position to know also that this country, rich though it was in men and resources, was not ready for war. He was in a position to know that there were no rifles, no cannon, no clothes, no tents, no provisions of war for even the most moderate army. He had not exhausted diplomacy, and even then he knew that time was necessary to prepare the country for war. The great public which was ignorant of the real situation and which did not realize that a mistaken public policy had allowed our army to run down to a point where we were not fitted to fight even a little nation like Spain, still thundered for war and began to suspect the good faith and the bravery of a man like William McKinley.

McKinley Consulted Fairbanks.

All this is history, which the world knows and which need not be recapitulated in detail. What the world does not generally know is that in the small circle of men who were daily and nightly and sometimes even hourly called into council by William McKinley to advise him as to the best thing to be done to preserve the honor and the dignity of the nation, Charles Warren Fairbanks was always foremost in the list. He was summoned to the White House night after night, and during a time when the gravest matters were under consideration the most important of all the conferences were held in the Fairbanks home on Massachusetts avenue. There were gathered the senators and the cabinet officers who represented the inner council of the nation, the men who possessed the absolute confidence of President McKinley. It was in the upstairs library of the Fairbanks home that some of the most important decisions of these trying times were first formulated.

There were scarcely half a dozen of the big men of the nation present at those historic conferences, and it is a sufficient indication of the capacity for public service which Senator Fairbanks has manifested to refer to the fact that although he had been in public life less than a year his value as a constant adviser of the President in the face of an inflamed public sentiment and on the eve of almost inevitable war grew greater day by day. Other men who participated in those conferences remember and bear cheerful testimony to the extraordinary capacity of the Indiana senator for looking at all sides of a question of public policy and for giving his opinion dispassionately, without the slightest suspicion of personal bias and with something like a sacred deference to the best interests of the nation.

The history of those momentous conferences will never be written, as a matter of course. McKinley has gone, Hobart has gone, Hanna has gone, and only a few are left of the men who actually shaped the destinies of the nation in the early months of 1898, who persisted in a wise conservatism when delay was necessary, and who provided the means for carrying the war to a successful and a glorious conclusion. That he was even included in the brilliant list of the confidential advisers of William McKinley in the face of war is a sufficient honor for any man.

An Honor for the Indianian.

It is an additional honor for the Indiana senator, who has been chosen as the Republican nominee for the vice-presidency, that his associates in public life, in their private conversation, invariably refer to his broad-gauge ability to grasp public questions, to his personal integrity, and to his deep study of constitutional and international law.

It is a fortunate thing for the republic that a man of this stamp should have been chosen for the nomination. The result is that in the event of the triumph of the Republican ticket, which now seems absolutely secured, the President inaugurated next March will have had the benefit of more than three years of actual experience in the duties of his office, while the vice-president who will take the oath of office at the same time will have behind him not only the benefit of more than seven years in the United States senate, but also of his membership in the inner circle of public men who actually do things, and who in times of trial determine the policy of the nation.

"The mass of the Democratic party feel outraged at the way in which their leaders sold them to Wall Street. I do not believe that the six and a half million men who followed Bryan, with cheers on their lips and warm convictions in their hearts, can now be delivered like cattle to the Clevelandites who knifed the ticket or bolted it in 1896. I believe that the great majority of the men who voted for Bryan are men of conviction; I can but hope that they will realize that I am fighting their battle now." Thomas E. Watson's speech accepting Populist nomination.

President Roosevelt said in his speech of acceptance, "A party is of worth only so far as it promotes the national interest." Judged by that standard, the Democratic party is worthless.

THE MAN WHO DARES.

A NOTABLE EXCEPTION.

Richard Olney Has Not Joined the Democratic Pessimists.

Since Judge Parker and the Democratic party have chosen to make an issue of the aggressive and progressive activities of the Republican party which in the span of one generation have placed the United States in the van of the world's civilization, it may be well to recall that there is at least one Democrat who has not joined in his party's pessimistic wails.

Richard Olney, the choice of the Massachusetts Democracy for President at St. Louis, Attorney General and Secretary of State during Cleveland's second term, and author of the ringing phrase in support of the Monroe doctrine—"To-day the United States is practically sovereign on this continent, and its fiat is law upon the subjects to which it confines its interposition," is a Democrat who has something stronger than diluted ass's milk in his veins.

In an article printed in the Atlantic Monthly for March, 1900, on the "Growth of Our Foreign Policy," Richard Olney anticipated and confuted almost every pitiful plea for national stagnation and dishonor uttered by Judge Parker in the two instances when he has ventured to open his mouth. Where the Democratic candidate counsels that the United States shall live for and within itself alone, Mr. Olney boldly proclaimed that such a policy had "tended to belittle the national character" and has "led to a species of provincialism and to narrow views of our duties and functions as a nation."

Where Judge Parker in his unfamiliarity with the meaning of the phrase, due to his seclusion from the world at Esopus, proclaims that the United States "became a world power over a century ago," Mr. Olney, with broader knowledge of the world, says that "Historians will probably assign the abandonment of the isolation policy to the time when this country and Spain went to war over Cuba."

Nor can there be any serious question but Mr. Olney is right.

And in this connection it was that Cleveland's virile Secretary of State said, "The United States has come out of its shell and ceased to be a hermit among nations, naturally and properly." He also emphasized the necessity for preparation to cope with larger responsibilities in these terms:

"It goes without saying that the United States cannot play the part in the world's affairs it has just assumed without equipping itself for the part with all the instrumentalities necessary to make its will felt, whether through pacific intercourse and negotiation or through force. We cannot assert ourselves as a power whose interests and sympathies are as wide as civilization without assuming obligations corresponding to the claim.

"The equipment required for our new international role must not be discussed at any length. We must have it—the need will be forced upon us by facts the logic of which will be irresistible—and however slow to move or indisposed to face the facts, the national government must sooner or later provide for it."

There was much more to the same effect, every word ringing with sterling and enlightened appreciation of the American determination to meet the obligations of our expanding national opportunities. Without failing to recognize that the triumphs of peace are the true objective of a republic, Mr. Olney grasped the eternal truth that peace and liberty and progress can only be insured by full provision to maintain them by force.

The nation which goes about with nothing but an olive branch in its mouth—in other words, without increasing its expenditures for coast defenses, for ships and guns, for men and arms—cannot expect its voice will be heeded, in the councils of nations. Every dollar the United States is spending on its army and navy to-day is an insurance against war and national dishonor.

Parker Has Trimmed His Sails.

(Philadelphia Inquirer.)

When Judge Parker voted for silver, in 1896 and 1900, he did not know the gold standard was going to be so popular in 1904.

WHAT IT MEANS.

The Significance of the Vermont Victory.

While it would be the sheerest folly for Republican managers to accept the Vermont victory as a certain augury of Roosevelt's election next November, or, to relax in their efforts to insure that result, it cannot be denied that the 32,000 plurality is a most reassuring and significant fact. That this is so is not because a succession of statistical coincidences where a shrinkage of the Republican plurality in Vermont in September has presaged a national Democratic victory in November but because the influences affecting the individual units in one State in this election are national in their nature and are effective throughout the republic.

If the issue in the November election were confined to the tariff question it would be impossible to infer from Vermont's 32,000 Republican plurality what would be the drift in New York, Connecticut or Indiana, because the voters of these three States study the tariff question through very different spectacles from those of the farmers of Vermont. From the day in 1861 when her late Senator Justin S. Morrill introduced the war revenue tariff measure, which bore his name in the House of Representatives, Vermont has never wavered in her support of the Republican policy of protection. Other States have wobbled, as the politicians have played upon the credulity of their industrial classes, but Vermont has stood as firm as her own everlasting hills.

But in the present campaign the Democracy has chosen to thrust its traditional clamor for free trade into the background and has arrayed itself against the American spirit of aggressive, progressive expansion, of which Theodore Roosevelt is the living embodiment.

To-day the Republicans stand for national action, advancement and life; the Democrats for national inaction, retrogression and death. The issue is between DOING and DON'T.

Such an issue appeals to voters in Vermont precisely as it appeals to those of Oregon or Arkansas. The restricted local view and interest is swallowed up in the broader prospect, and men vote as Americans and not as citizens of this or that State.

To this issue Oregon last June responded "Go ahead!" and Vermont merely echoes back across the continent "Go ahead!"

Even Arkansas shows signs of waking from the lotus-eating dream of Democracy that a nation can advance without exertion and force by marking-time in front of the marble effigies of Jefferson and Jackson, who if they were alive would be marching in the ranks of action and progress.

This, then, is the significance of the Vermont election, that on the issue contained in the word "Forward!" personified, if our opponents will have it so, in Theodore Roosevelt, represented in every line of financial, industrial and diplomatic achievement, demanding increased expenditures for the army, the navy, the postal service and every department of government care of the people's interests—Vermont represents the onward trend of American thought.

This, and not the mere fact that Vermont went Republican by 32,000 votes, gives an assurance of a great Republican victory next November.

"On the whole, our people earn more and live better than ever before and the progress of which we are so proud could not have taken place had it not been for the up-building of industrial centers, such as this in which I am speaking."—From Roosevelt's speech at Providence, R. I., August 23rd, 1902.

First Voters' Campaign Buttons.

The National Republican Committee, Auditorium, Chicago, is distributing thousands of artistic Roosevelt and Fairbanks First Voters' buttons. They are free for the asking. Apply to the Chairman of your State Committee. Show your colors.

BLUNDER BY DEMOCRATS

They Nominated Candidates Who Voted for Free Silver.

PEOPLE CAN FORGIVE ERROR

Which Is Now Practically Admitted, but Will Not Trust the Party with Power Because of the Blunder.

When an individual makes and reiterates startling statements which later on are proved to be absolutely false, his further utterances on any subject whatsoever are liable not to be taken seriously, and this is putting the case mildly. Even though the statements were uttered in honest belief as to their accuracy, the fact that they were later on proven to be wrong, furnished evidence of mental capacity to make further gross blunders from time to time.

In this respect the record of the Democratic party on the silver issue has for that party the same sinister significance that falsifications from an individual, who is found out, would have for that individual.

We may all be willing to charitably admit that in its advocacy of the great free silver error in 1896 and 1900 the Democratic party was honestly wrong. There is no patriotic American who would like to think, hint, or suggest, that Bryan was not actuated by honest and sincere belief in his cause when he uttered his famous "Cross of Gold" and "Crown of Thorns" speech in 1896, nor is there any American with optimistic faith in the honesty and patriotism of the leading public men of the United States who would want to think for a moment that Alton B. Parker, the candidate of a great political party for President of the United States, voted against his honest convictions as to what was for the good of his country when he voted for free silver in 1896, and then again voted for free silver in 1900.

Cannot Be Trusted.

But while the American people will never impute dishonorable motives to the leaders of the silver cause in 1896 and 1900, yet nevertheless it will hesitate in the future to place implicit trust in those who sought to lead them into a disastrous error in those years. Had the majority of the voters of the country in 1896 and 1900 not been of better judgment than Judge Parker was during those two years the United States would have had the silver standard; all the currency of the country would have been debased to the bullion value of silver; just debts would have been scaled off over fifty per cent.; the laborer, whom the Bible says is "worthy of his hire," would have been paid his wages in cheap dollars of not half the value of the honest dollars based on the gold standard; the country would have suffered unparalleled hard times; its credit would have sunk as low as that of Turkey, Venezuela, and of other nations which repudiate their just obligations.

It was for such calamity as this that the Democratic free silver error stood in 1896 and again in 1900, and Parker and Davis both times stood with this error, contributed money to further it along, and voted for it.

Now the error is practically admitted. Both Parker and Davis, while refusing to say that they now believe in the gold standard, nevertheless say that it is "irrevocably established by law"—that is when on December 18, 1899, the gold standard was established by a vote of 179 Republican yeas and only 11 Democratic yeas, against 142 Democratic nays and no Republican nays, in the House of Representatives, and by a vote of 44 Republican and 2 Gold Democratic yeas against 23 Democratic and only one Republican nay in the Senate. IT WAS SO WELL ESTABLISHED THAT PARKER AND DAVIS NOW CONSIDER IT "IRREVOCABLY ESTABLISHED."

"Silence Is Confession."

The American people will be willing to forgive the Democratic record on the silver question. They will not demand humiliating verbal confessions from Democratic leaders of the fact that they were terribly wrong in 1896 and 1900. As Daniel Webster once said—"Silence is confession"—and the fact that the Democrats now want silence on the "paramount" issue of 1896 and the "tantamount" issue of 1900, is sufficient confession of past error.

But while the American people in receiving Democracy's silent confession of past error, can forgive, yet it cannot forget. It will not be in haste to put into the White House the representative of a party whose free silver principles put in jeopardy the business stability of the country. IT WILL NOT VOTE TO HONOR WITH THE HIGHEST OFFICE IN THE LAND A CANDIDATE WHO IN 1896 AND AGAIN IN 1900 VOTED FOR A POLICY THAT WOULD HAVE FINANCIALLY DISHONORED THIS COUNTRY AND MADE IT LOWER THAN TURKEY AND VENEZUELA IN INTERNATIONAL OPINION AS TO ITS CREDIT.

Show the Truth.

Republicans, forecasting events from the September election in Vermont, should not allow themselves to be overconfident of results of the presidential election in November.

There is no doubt as to the fact that Roosevelt will win, but he ought to be given a great vote of confidence, an outpouring of national affection and trust, aside from a mere majority of electoral votes.

A rebuke is deserved for the men who so falsify facts and sentiments, so distort, prevaricate and invent, as to make it appear that Theodore Roosevelt is anything but the strong, thoughtful, loyal American citizen that he is.

The silly bosh about "Imperialism" and "Militarism," the groundless flubdub as to fancied personal dictation by their executive to the American people should be rebuked by the people in such manner as can never be forgotten.

Let Republicans appear en masse at the polls in November, to show what they think of Theodore Roosevelt.

ROOSEVELT THEIR CHOICE

Former Silverites and Democrats Decline to Support Parker for President.

ALL PREFER PROSPERITY TO PARALYSIS

Views of D. C. Tillotson, Late Chairman of the National Silver Republican Party — Reasons Given by Others.

Many Democrats will vote for Roosevelt and Fairbanks this fall. A large number have publicly announced their change of faith, but others have simply said to their friends that they prefer the known and tried Roosevelt to the hesitating, evasive and untried Parker. The names of some of these men, including Oscar Straus, John A. McCall, Major John Bryne, Patrick Egan, Richard Price Morgan and Eugene A. Philbin, have already been printed. Among those not heretofore noted are: Ernest Crawfort, Judge W. M. Chandler, Dr. George H. Carpenter, William McLain, W. E. Williams, John Ennis, William D. Harrison, John T. Doyle, Charles P. Blaney and Daniel Buchannan.

From Baxter Springs, Kas., comes the information of wholesale desertions on the part of Bryan Democrats, and the forecasters predict that Cherokee, which gave Bryan 1,800 majority in 1896, will go solidly for the Republican ticket. Prominent among the Democrats who have announced their intention of supporting President Roosevelt are: T. H. Goodwin, mine owner; E. W. Dow, president telephone system; Samuel J. Crawford, former governor of Kansas; James H. Chubb, former member fusion legislature; J. C. Haskett, dry goods merchant; Samuel Binns, hay dealer; Edward Hodgkins, retired merchant; D. Orr Chubb, politician; W. S. Baxter, editor and C. E. Collins, politician.

End of Silver Republican Party.

An important accession to the Republican ranks is D. C. Tillotson, of Topeka, Kas., chairman of the national committee of the Silver Republican party in 1900. In a letter to J. W. Babcock, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, Mr. Tillotson says that the Silver Republicans are satisfied that the Roosevelt administration tried to do its duty with the people, and for that reason he and his friends will support it. This statement is of importance because the Silver Republicans voted for Bryan in 1896 and 1900, and it is believed all will now return to the regular party organization. In a letter to Representative Babbcock, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, Mr. Tillotson says:

"Present conditions make any further attempt to maintain a silver party organization a mere farce and with changed conditions come changed political relations.

"It appears to me that the Democratic party has forfeited its claim upon all voters except such as vote the ticket from tradition. Indeed, the only Democrat who in a generation has stood for an idea is constrained to admit that the candidate of his party is the beneficiary of a fraud practiced upon the convention which nominated him.

"The Democratic party, through its attitude and the attitude of its candidates, admits that the Republican party is right on the money question. It admits that the Republican party has perfected the legislation needed for controlling the trusts and monopolies, a perfection that the Republican party itself has never claimed. It admits that, if successful, nothing in the way of tariff legislation can be effected except such as may be approved by the Republican party, yet it seeks to make tariff tinkering an issue.

"It condemns the acquisition of the right to build the Panama canal, but says ratify the act by keeping the goods. It sympathizes with the Filipinos, but fails to recognize that the acquisition of these islands was ratified by the people in 1900.

"It presents us with a candidate whose political virtues are of the negative sort. He claims that the body politic is sick and as a remedy proposes four years of paralysis. If this attitude is in good faith it would appear that there is no good reason for supporting the party or its candidate, if in bad faith then there is every reason for not supporting them.

"With no definite programme to advocate and no settled policy of government to assert the opposition is devoting its energies to an attack upon President Roosevelt. His opponents are compelled to admit that he is a man of virility, of high moral purpose in both civil and official life and one that does not evade official responsibility.

"While there are many honest and upright citizens among his opponents yet the fact remains that the President's vigorous and aggressive execution of his office has led the manipulator of predatory wealth, the professional agitator and the political grafter to make common cause against him. These are thoroughly convinced that the President is not safe, but legitimate and vested rights have no cause of complaint.

"The voter has to choose between one or the other of the candidates of the dominant parties or throw his vote away as a mere protest by voting for some third party candidate. It appears to me that the President is entitled to a vote of confidence, and above all party considerations the election of President Roosevelt is required as a vindication of moral courage and official integrity in the government of men—a vindication not of the candidate, but of the American people."

Parker's Letter a Disappointment.

Ernest Crawfort, of Jamestown, N. Y., Democratic county committeeman and delegate to the Democratic State convention which instructed for Judge Parker, has severed all connections with the Democratic party and has declared his intention of voting for President Roosevelt. In a letter to Walter Edson, chairman of the county committee, Mr. Crawfort says, among other things:

"You will consider my relations with the Democratic party severed because that political organization has ceased to be the declared exponent of governmental policies and economic principles whose ultimate triumph is deemed more essential than the inauguration of any particular political regime. The final decision to cast my vote for Theodore Roosevelt is not a hasty conclusion. I conceive the political duty of a young man is first to his country; and secondly to that party whose policies applied to governmental affairs will conduce to industrial satisfaction, promote national commercial expansion, and assure the constitutional operation of law regardless of wealth, color or station."

Mr. Crawfort asserts that he did not vote for the indorsement of Judge Parker at the Albany convention, and that following the Democratic nominee's sensational telegram to the St. Louis convention Judge Parker's letter of acceptance was a keen disappointment.

An American, Not a Democrat.

Judge Walter M. Chandler, a lifelong Democrat of New York, has announced his intention of voting for Roosevelt and Fairbanks. In stating his position Judge Chandler says that it took him eight years to reach "the lofty plane of moral courage and patriotic resolve to be an American and not a Democrat." He purposes also to permanently remain in the Republican party, preferring to follow the "dictates of reason and not of impulse." "I supported the Democratic ticket in 1900," said Judge Chandler, "on the single issue of the retention or non-retention of the Philippine islands. I now regard the Philippine question as a closed incident; on every other cardinal issue of the present campaign I am in hearty accord with the Republican party. Destitute of living issues, wanting in righteous civic motives, totally disorganized and demoralized, Democrats have forgotten or have at least abandoned the manly and enlightened methods of polemic warfare that made illustrious and forever memorable the days of Douglas and Lincoln."

Does Not Like Davis.

Dr. George H. Carpenter, of Ridgely, W. Va., who two years ago was prominently mentioned as a Democratic candidate for Congress, has declared himself in favor of Roosevelt and Fairbanks. He has also stated that he will not support John J. Cornwell for governor of West Virginia. In announcing his renunciation of the Democratic nominees Dr. Carpenter said: "I see nothing in the Democratic ticket or platform to attract my vote. Judge Parker has acted for a class of Democrats in whom I have no faith. He is unknown. The men who recommended him are distrusted. West Virginia is the worst corporation-ridden State in the Union, and the influence of Parker's running mate has been the chief cause in making it so."

After Seventy Years.

William McLain, of Ottumwa, Ia., who says he has been voting the Democratic ticket for seventy years, has announced his intention of supporting President Roosevelt. In making this statement Mr. McLain says that the President has demonstrated that he is a safe and capable man to have at the head of the government, and that he believes in letting well enough alone. Mr. McLain is 96 years old and cast his first Presidential vote for Andrew Jackson.

Parker Too Uncertain.

W. E. Williams, of Boonville, Ind., who has been active in Democratic councils heretofore, will use his influence in support of the Republican national ticket. In declaring his intentions Mr. Williams places the welfare of himself and his neighbors above a party name after this fashion: "There has been an increase of 100 per cent in the value of lands in Warrick county in the last eight years. It used to be while Cleveland was President that lands sold for from $6 to $10 an acre. Now the same farms bring $20 an acre. Parker is an uncertain quantity. The Democrats have no issue, but it is inevitable they would tinker with the tariff and bring about business stagnation."

Union Labor Men Renounce Democracy.

John Ennis and William D. Harrison, of Stamford, Conn., who have for years been prominent in Democratic politics and active in union labor politics, have renounced Parker and Davis and will support Roosevelt and Fairbanks. "The Democratic party repudiated every truly Democratic principle at the St. Louis convention," said Mr. Harrison. "Besides, it has nominated a man who has never placed himself on record on any question before the people. No one knows where he stands, and I cannot see how any one who has been a consistent Democrat for the last fifteen years can support Judge Parker."

Enthusiastic for Roosevelt.

John T. Doyle, of Stockton, Cal., who has held a number of high offices under Democratic rule, is enthusiastically supporting Roosevelt and Fairbanks. Mr. Doyle asserts he is no longer able to support the platform of the Democratic party. City councilman, member of the board of police and fire commission and member of the board of managers of the Stockton State Hospital for the Insane are some of the offices which Mr. Doyle has filled.

Roosevelt Is Progressive.

Charles P. Blaney, of the legal firm of Keating & Wolradt, of New York, in reply to the appeals of the Lawyers' Constitutional Club in behalf of Judge Parker, gives the following reasons for his support of President Roosevelt:

"President Roosevelt appeals favorably to me because his administration has given to the country a progressive and liberal management of its affairs. Through its agency the United States has received the valuable privileges relating to the construction of the Panama canal, privileges which would not, and could not, have been acquired but for the firm and determined position quickly taken by the President. Furthermore, the present method of dealing with the Philippine question seems to me to be the only practical solution of that difficult problem."

Wisconsin Man Changes.

Daniel Buchanan, of Chippewa Falls, Wis., one of the leading and best known Democrats in Northern Wisconsin, has bolted Parker and Davis and announced his purpose of supporting Roosevelt and Fairbanks. At one time he was a candidate for Congress on the Democratic ticket and took an active part in politics. At the recent Republican county convention Mr. Buchanan was elected a delegate to the Congressional convention.

ONLY ONE ISSUE LEFT.

It Is the Offices, and the Democrats Will Never Abandon It.

There is one issue the Democrats have not and never will abandon—the offices. With a light heart and an easy conscience they are willing to swallow the gold standard, to enter a nolle prosse as to the "tariff robbery," to construct the Panama Canal and to postpone independence for the Philippines until the Filipinos have donned clothes, but the offices—these they must have or the last excuse for their party's existence is gone.

Editor Pulitzer is writing page upon page of open letters in the New York World, which prints them because he owns it, to prove that Theodore Roosevelt and he alone is the issue. "The paramount issue of this campaign," the editor writes, addressing himself direct to the President, "is not as you would have it, free trade or free silver, but YOU YOURSELF — Theodore Roosevelt. This issue inforced upon the country by your unusual temperament and talent—your own strong, able, ambitious, resourceful, militant, passionate personality, your versatile and surprising genius."

If this were not meant to be alarming it would fittingly describe one side of the personality of the Republican standard bearer worthy of being printed in flaming type and posted at every cross roads in the country. Add to it the unquestioned attributes of honesty, courage and patriotism, and you have the true measure of the head of the Republican ticket. Mr. Pulitzer cannot find that the possession of any of the impulsive and willful traits he has attributed to the President has led him into hasty, arbitrary or ill-considered acts, or into any policy inimical to the public welfare or that has not been fully justified by the event.

No higher tribute could be paid to the President than the way in which he has been singled out by Mr. Pulitzer as the one engrossing, overshadowing issue of the campaign.

Now, why does Mr. Pulitzer wish to get rid of a President of such known and approved qualities to make way for the untested and unexperienced master of Rosemount?

The answer is plain—THE OFFICES. Mr. Pulitzer is a Democrat—a transplanted Missouri Democrat. He knows that the national Democracy is very hungry and very thirsty and that it is weary of feeding upon the husks that fall to the share of the opposition party at Washington.

So long as Mr. Roosevelt is in the White House Mr. Pulitzer knows that every office, outside of the classified service, will go to a Republican, provided there is no Democrat so much better qualified for it that to ignore his claims would create a national scandal.

What Mr. Pulitzer and the Democracy want is that the only touchstone of fitness for federal offices shall be the frayed maxim of David B. Hill, "I am a Democrat." Upon this issue he has no misgivings as to the "firm and irrevocable" convictions of the Sphinx of Esopus. In Judge Parker's eyes the author of the maxim "To the victors belong the spoils" was the greatest statesman, not excepting Boss Tweed, New York has ever produced. And Mr. Pulitzer believes that a Democratic mummy of the Marcy school in the White House would not permit any question of fitness to interfere between the faithful and the federal pay roll.

At present the sturdy, robust republicanism of Theodore Roosevelt stands between the Democracy and the offices. How to remove this stumbling block in the path of the lean and hungry wanderers of 1896 and 1900 is the supreme, the only issue left to the Democracy.

If a national election could be decided by the voters wanting a job, irrespective of their fitness for it, the Democracy under the leadership of Mr. Pulitzer would be invincible.

ADVISERS OF CANDIDATES.

Trust Magnates with Parker and Statesmen with Roosevelt.

Two old saws—"Birds of a feather flock together" and "Men are known by the company they keep"—are applicable to the present campaign. Here are some of the men who stand close to the two presidential candidates, and are known as their political advisers:

For Parker—August Belmont, Wall street magnate; George Foster Peabody, ditto; David B. Hill, of unsavory political record; Cord Meyer, of the sugar trust; Patrick McCarren, legislative agent of the Standard Oil Company; John B. MacDonald, Belmont's "handy man."

For Roosevelt—Elihu Root, former Secretary of War; John Hay, Secretary of State; William H. Moody, Attorney General; William H. Taft, Secretary of War; George B. Cortelyou, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor; Joseph G. Cannon, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

We are more fortunate than our opponents, who now appeal for confidence on the ground, which some express and some seek to have confidentially understood, that, if triumphant, they may be trusted to prove false to every principle which in the last eight years they have laid down as vital; and to leave undisturbed those very acts of administration because of which they ask that the administration itself be driven from power.—President Roosevelt.

"SIZING UP" A. B. PARKER

Democratic Candidate Began His Career as a "Boss."

A PROTEGE OF DAVID B. HILL

"Practical Politician," Who Is Now Surrounded and Supported by Tammany Hall Leaders—Brief Glance at His Political Record.

Ever since that July day when the Democratic National Convention of 1904 adjourned, after nominating for President of the United States Alton B. Parker, of New York, the people of the country have been trying to find out something about the man for whom they are asked to vote early next November.

It has been hard work. Outside of the State of New York Alton B. Parker was practically unknown before the meeting of the Democratic convention at St. Louis. He still remains, to the vast majority of voters throughout the country, unknown, except by his name and place of residence, with such additional light as has been thrown upon him by newspaper portraits.

In the matter of supplying pictures of Judge Parker, his home, his wife, children, grandchildren, son-in-law and other relations there has been no stint. The country has gazed its fill upon newspaper cuts representing Judge Parker, trimmed, so to speak, with various and assorted young relations, and in all of these pictures Mr. Parker has presented that bland, open and somewhat patronizing front with which mankind faces the world when it is striving to "look pleasant" and at the same time keep some infant prodigy still under the process of photography.

To be sure, the voters have seen pictures of Mr. Parker galore, and pictures of his house and of his family. They have been told that he was, when nominated, a judge, high up on the bench of the State of New York, and "the rest is silence." It is true that Mr. Parker, when notified of his nomination, pronounced a "speech of acceptance," but that proved such a merry-go-round of flat and meaningless words as fairly stunned the unterrified in their lairs. It gave no inkling as to what kind of a man the Democratic nominee might be, except that he possesses the not uncommon faculty of talking a great deal and saying nothing.

Searching the Record.

And so the American people sat down and studied, by such means as they had at hand, the man who asks their votes for the office of Chief Executive.

"It seems like a sort o' 'unsight and unseen' game," said an old Illinois farmer. "I guess we'd better not trade, this time!"

There remained and remains for the awakened gaze of the American people the record of Mr. Parker's life, so much of it as has been in the public eye. With his private life let it be said, once for all, there is no reproach.

Alton B. Parker was born at Cortland, New York, in the neighborhood where he now lives, more than fifty years ago. He grew up in Ulster county, and began the practice of law there as a young man. From the beginning he was known as a politician of the kind which gains ends rather as a manager than as a candidate. In plain language, he was a "County Boss" in the Democratic fold. While a very young man he directed a campaign for Judge Shoonmaker, in whose office he had studied law. Encouraged by his success in this effort he sought for himself the post of Surrogate, as the Probate Judge is called in New York State. He was elected, and held the office for many years.

In this office Judge Parker continued his silent and underground activities in politics of the New York variety; a variety in cities exemplified by Tammany, and in the country districts not one whit behind Tammany in zeal, cunning and unscrupulousness.

Favored by Hill.

Says a recent writer, speaking of this period of Judge Parker's life:

"Politics in New York is hard and iron-bound; it is without sentiment, and has no principle save the principle of success. This is as true of country as of town, as true of the cornfields as of Tammany Hall. Victory is the only virtue, defeat the only crime—in New York. Judge Parker knew these things; he saw no visitors, courted no dreams, lapsed into no trances. Patiently, practically, he added one man to another, and the two to somebody else, until the result of his additions was the control of the county of Ulster."

The steady success of Judge Parker, his even, business methods, cold and bloodless in calculation and results, attracted the attention and the favor of David Bennett Hill. In 1885, when Mr. Hill was about to make his first canvass for the governorship of New York, he chose for the practical manager of his campaign Judge Parker. Thus at the age of thirty-three years Judge Parker became Hill's political manager. He elected his man.

Mr. Hill, early in his administration as Governor, rewarded his faithful manager by appointing him to the Supreme Bench of the State of New York. Judge Parker has, practically speaking, occupied the Supreme or the Court of Appeals bench ever since.

There is Judge Parker's public record. A practical politician, a manager of campaigns, a discovery and protege of David Bennett Hill!

And now, at the end of this plain, unvarnished tale, it remains to be noted that from beginning to end there is not set down in all the pages devoted to Judge Parker and his candidacy one single utterance of inspiration, enthusiasm, patriotism, or even one word suggesting a broad and generous appreciation of public needs and public interests, small or great, in all the years during which Judge Parker has "handled" local campaigns.

His Counselors.

Next to a man's acts, judged by his avowed motives, there is no safer guide to his character and his mental qualities than his choice of associates and fellow workers. Turning from the meager tale of Judge Parker's political life to his political counselors and intimates, whom do we find?

Two forces: David Bennett Hill and Tammany! "Blue-Eyed Billy Sheehan" is Judge Parker's friend and neighbor at Rosemount. To him Parker addressed his famous telegram at the St. Louis convention. Daily Judge Parker is surrounded by the Sheehans, O'Briens and the McDonalds of Tammany. There is no hiding from an argus-eyed people, and the best proof of Judge Parker's lack of knowledge of the American people is that he does not know that his association with Tammany will not be excused or condoned by them. In New York, he possibly argues, Tammany is endured, with restiveness, it is true, but still endured. Outside of New York this is not true, but Judge Parker does not know the true temper of the American people outside of New York. How should he!

The "Enigma of Esopus" is no longer an enigma. Put forth by the cunning hand of David B. Hill, supported by the restrained savagery of Tammany, the astute politician and campaign manager of Ulster County, posed, for a few days, wrapped about in his judicial robes as in a garment of veneration and mystery.

A look at his record, a glance at his political associates and friends, and the tableau dissolves amidst the choking smoke of the flash-light.

PARKER WON'T GO TO FAIR.

Esopus, N. Y., Sept. 2, 1904.—"It is now announced that Mr. Parker has changed his mind, in regard to his trip to the Fair at St. Louis, and in all probability he will not leave Rosemont again during the campaign."—Press Dispatch.

Dear! Dear! What can the matter be?
Dear! Dear! What can the matter be?
Dear! Dear! What can the matter be?
Parker won't go to the fair!

He promised to travel across the wide prairies,
He promised to let loose some old-time vagaries,
He wanted to ride on the Pike dromedaries!
But now he won't go to the fair!

Dear! Dear! What can the matter be!
Parker won't go to the fair!

He said that for once he would set forth and travel,
Would brave all the dangers of dust and gravel,
He said all the mysteries he would unravel,
But now he won't go to the fair!

Dear! Dear! What can the matter be!
Parker won't go to the fair!

Why won't the big bosses let Parker go roaming?
And why do they keep him shut up in the gloaming?
St. Louis is waiting—her beer glasses foaming,
But Parker won't go to the fair!

Dear! Dear! What can the matter be!
Oh, dear! What can the matter be!
Dear! Dear! What can the matter be!
Parker can't go to the fair!

AWKWARD QUESTIONS.

Democrats Object to Answering Financial Interrogatories.

When the "gold" message of Alton B. Parker reached the Democratic convention at St. Louis William J. Bryan suggested that the currency views of Mr. Parker ought to be more explicitly defined in some detail, and that the convention therefore should prepare a list of questions connected with various phases of the currency issue for the candidate to answer, but Master of Ceremonies Williams rushed to Parker's defense with the statement that the candidate should not be asked to answer "A LOT OF FOOLISH QUESTIONS."

This was the same "public be d——d" attitude that arrogant corporations used to take in refusing to answer questions of pertinent interest to their stockholders or to the general public, until the Republican party remedied matters by passing a law compelling publicity, and especially established the Bureau of Commerce and Labor to secure it.

Mr. Bryan, all the Democrats in the convention at St. Louis, and in fact all American voters of whatever political belief, had a perfect right to expect detailed and explicit publicity from Candidate Parker of his views on governmental financial policies, so that they could know whether or not, or to what extent his views were their views. But this publicity was denied them, because the managers of the convention deemed it of more importance to protect their candidate from questions which he would not want to answer for fear of making a "break," than to protect the voters of the country from possible misunderstanding as to financial views which might not bear the limelight of public discussion.

The managers of a corporation conducted on unsound lines are always apt to consider as "foolish" questions, which, if answered, might result in an expose. And it is the same way with the Democratic managers, who think their only safe policy on the currency question is to refuse to give information as to what their policy really is.

The Vermont Landslide.

Chairman Bullard of the Vermont Democratic State committee said, the night before the election: "We feel that if the figure (of the Republican plurality) is below 25,000 this year it is a sure indication that the national election will go Democratic."

Well, the Democratic manager himself made the estimate. He counted the chances of the Democratic party in the present campaign as might be indicated by the September vote in his own State. Representing his party, he made the estimate and the result has been appalling—for the Democrats—the Republican plurality being 31,500. There has been a Republican landslide of about one-fourth over the normal vote in the State of Vermont.

A low wage scale is not consistent with the most wholesome development of the country and of its people. The consideration of the pending measure, as Mr. Blaine said of the Chinese exclusion act, connects itself intimately and inseperably with the labor question.—Senator Fairbanks in the Senate, January 11, 1898.

I believe emphatically in organized labor. I believe in organization of wage earners. Organization is one of the laws of our social and economic development at this time.—From Roosevelt's speech to Locomotive Firemen at Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 8, 1902.

PARKER EXCORIATED

THOMAS E. WATSON'S RECENT SPEECH TO SOUTHERNERS.

Raising of the Negro Question by Democrats Denounced as Hypocrisy—Roosevelt Preferred to Hill's Candidate Who Is Bossed by Wall Street.

Thomas E. Watson, Populist candidate for the Presidency, in a speech at Atlanta, Ga., on Sept. 1, declared that the Democratic attack on President Roosevelt for the latter's alleged friendliness to the negro was a piece of Democratic hypocrisy and he challenged Parker to indicate his own position on the race issue. On this point Mr. Watson said:

The South should demand to know the facts about Parker. How does he stand upon this alleged question? Is his position at all different from that of Roosevelt? If so, in what respect? The South should demand explicit reply to the following questions before it votes for him upon the assumption that he differs from Roosevelt on the negro question:

1. Would you refuse to eat at the same table with Booker Washington?
2. Would you refuse to appoint negroes to office in the South?
3. If elected will you refuse to receive on terms of equality at the White House such negroes as Bishop Turner, Booker Washington, and T. Thomas Fortune?
4. Do you approve the mixed schools of New York, inaugurated under Grover Cleveland—in which social equality is practically made a matter of compulsion?
5. If such schools—wherein black children and white children are educated together—are a good thing for your native State of New York, would they be a good thing for Georgia and South Carolina? If not, why not?

Negro Cry Is Hypocrisy.

Taking up the discussion of the negro question, as far as its bearing on the present national campaign is concerned, Mr. Watson said that the Democratic national leaders have prostituted the name of Democrat and are demanding that they shall be followed blindly in spite of the fact that they have renounced every principle of Democracy. Asking, "Will the real Democrats follow the name rather than the principle?" he continued:

In the South we are told we must submit to the surrender to Wall street because of "the nigger." What a blessed thing it is for Democratic leaders that they always have "the nigger" to fall back on. For thirty years they have been doing business on "the nigger," and to-day he is their only stock in trade.

Note the hypocrisy of it. In their national platform of 1872 they solemnly protested their allegiance to the doctrine of "equality," regardless of race or color, and pledged themselves to maintain the emancipation and the enfranchisement of the blacks.

In 1876 at St. Louis, Henry Watterson being chairman of the convention, they solemnly declared their devotion to the constitutional amendments growing out of the civil war.

In 1880, in 1884, in 1888, the national conventions of the Democratic party reaffirmed these declarations on the negro question, and thus stood pledged to oppose any reopening of the questions settled by the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments. Yet after all these formal pledges we are now browbeaten and intimidated by Democratic leaders, who say we must indorse their capitulation to Belmont, David B. Hill, and Pat McCarren because of "the nigger."

Negro Powerless in Politics.

"What can the Southern negro do?" asked Mr. Watson. "He has been disfranchised in nearly every Southern State excepting Georgia; and in Georgia they do not dare disfranchise him, because Democracy in Georgia cannot be maintained by the white vote." He continued:

Therefore, the cry that we are in danger from "the nigger" is the most hypocritical that unscrupulous leadership could invent. Grant, Sherman, and Sheridan, with all their armies, could not revise the law of nature in the prostrate South.

The white man is master—wherever he plants his foot the world over. Do you tell me that Roosevelt can do against the prostrated South what Thad Stevens could not do against the exhausted South? Roosevelt could not do it even if he would.

The Democratic leaders who talk this stuff, and the editors who write it, laugh and wink at one another as they pass, they know what a humbug it all is, and how it is being used to make the people forget, or condone, the inglorious surrender to Wall street which they made at St. Louis.

In the West Virginia Democratic convention, the State of the Democratic nominee for Vice President, the "white supremacy" resolution was voted down, and on Aug. 1, 1904, Parker himself, in writing to the negro James A. Ross, addressed him as "My dear sir," just as though Ross had been a white man.

Surrender to Wall Street.

Turning to other issues, Mr. Watson said the Democratic leaders had surrendered to Wall street because, as Senator John W. Daniels, of Virginia, put it, they were "tired of being in the minority." He continued:

Not afraid of Roosevelt's militarism? No. Not afraid of Roosevelt's niggerism? No. All that is fudge and subterfuge. "Tired of being in the minority," there was the milk in the cocoanut.

Not tired of being in the wrong? No. He did not even pretend that he had been in the wrong. Simply because they have been in the minority they are ready to drop the principles which they swore for eight years were right, and to adopt those which even now they do not dare say are right. Great God! what an attitude for the leaders of a great national party.

If I could become politically tipsy enough to vote for Parker, on the platform of 1904, as constructed by Parker himself, I would take one more drink—a small one at that—and vote for the other twin, Roosevelt. Give me the original every time, rather than the blurred, indistinct copy. Give me the genuine article, rather than the spurious substitute.

What Has Parker Done?

Mr. Watson then paid his respects to Candidate Parker personally. He asked:

Why should Georgians support Parker, of New York, rather than a fellow Georgian? What do you know of Parker? What has he done that was notable? What has he ever said that was memorable? What has he ever written that stamped him with individuality?

David B. Hill declared at St. Louis that he had been intimate with Parker for thirty years, and that he did not know how Parker stood on the money question. Was this statement true? If so, Parker is the most negative public man on the American continent. Was the statement false? If so, David B. Hill is the boldest liar between the two oceans. Think of a man living on intimate terms with Alexander H. Stevens and Abe Lincoln for thirty years and not knowing how he stood on the greatest political questions of the day?

The populist leader declared than the people could not secure reforms in the Democratic party when it is "bossed by the same old Wall street crowd which debauched Cleveland's second administration." He declared that at St. Louis all the worthless empty honors had been given to southern Democrats, who in return denounced Bryan and helped to "knife the Jeffersonians." Now, "because Dave Hill allowed John Sharp Williams to have a chairmanship" the whole South must be "driven under the lash of party discipline away from the gospel of our fathers and into political slavery to the Hamiltonians of New York."

Her Leap Year Inspiration

By TROY ALLISON

Copyright, 1904, by K. M. Whitehead

Miss Sevier was worried.

She sat at the front bedroom window impatiently tapping the arm of her wicker rocker with one hand and using a finger of the other to keep place in the book that hung the length of a listless arm on the other side of the chair. The attitude of the two hands was a fine index to her disposition. She was listless and bored by the monotony of her life, but there was a strongly combative element in her nature that made it impossible for her to accept it with the placidity shown by the other women she knew.

She was tired of teas. She had amused herself calculating just how many gallons she had drunk in the ten years of her social career. At twenty it had seemed highly elating to put on her newest gown and drink tea with a crowd of people. She could even remember that the addition of a bunch of violets to her costume had at one time given a decided pleasure.

But at thirty she forgot to pin on the violets, even when there was a huge bunch in front of her on the dresser, unless her maid suggested that it would improve madam's toilet.

HE OPENED THE BOX WITH AN EXPRESSION OF CURIOSITY.

She sighed in recognition of the fact that real life doesn't work out like novels.

The book was a new one and in its second edition, and her lack of interest in it proved conclusively to Miss Sevier's mind that her trouble was real and deep rooted.

Some of her energy finally communicated itself to the other hand. She threw the book on the table near and commenced an energetic rocking that kept pace with her thoughts.

"Money is the root of all evil, and I've always had too much of it. I wonder which is the worse, a deficit or an excess. I believe that as a child it was a pleasanter feeling to want more candy than to have eaten too much.

"The worst feature of this money is that it has always attracted a crowd of flatterers and worthless friends and has caused so many that I really cared for to let their pride come between me and them. I have known John Carrington for five years and would catalogue his possessions—one estate in Virginia, yielding an uncertain income; one fine tenor voice and enough proud reticence to supply all the F. F. V.'s ever heard of."

When she mentioned Carrington's name, the hero of the discarded novel gracefully acknowledged the better man and accepted her lack of interest in him with a humility uncommon to a star of a second edition.

Miss Sevier's restless glance took in the novel.

"That fool in the novel had a tenor voice, too, but he wasn't handicapped by a lack of self appreciation.

"If I had asked him to sing 'For you it is a rose; for me—it is my heart,' at least 300 times in the last three years, if I had played his accompaniment and put in it all the feeling a longing heart could possibly show when supplemented by my poor technique, that hero would have forgotten all about my money and asked me to marry him.

"I know he loves me, but I don't believe he will ever master enough courage to tell me so unless I donate all my money to a hospital or do the proposing myself."

There was a tap at the door, and Miss Sevier's young niece came rushing in.

Esther always rushed, so her immediate family were never much startled by her sudden entrances and exits.

"Auntie"—she tried to make her request and explain her plan all at once—"may I write and ask Tom Carter to take me to the party tomorrow night? The girls are all going to ask, and I wanted to know if I might."

"What's the cause of Mr. Carter's sudden popularity," her aunt asked, with a decided amount of astonishment in her eyes.

"Now, auntie, you know we are not all going to ask him, but any one we would like to take. It's a leap year party, you know."

"I see," returned Miss Sevier slowly, "and you simply want me to understand that one Mr. Thomas Carter is the very nicest boy among your acquaintances, eh?"

"He's really nice and the very nicest," Esther answered, a red flush spreading to the roots of her fair hair. "May I, auntie, please?"

"If all the other girls are of the same opinion, perhaps you would be wise to get your note written at once," teased her aunt.

The girl gave her an impulsive kiss and then looked at her with a twinkle in her eye.

"I would like awfully to write it on a sheet of your best paper," she coaxed.

After her sixteen-year-old niece had disappeared, having taken some of the best paper and the sealing wax to match, Miss Sevier went back to the window and stood gazing abstractedly at the house across the street.

The house had been there for years, but she seemed to study it with intense interest.

"I know he loves me," she murmured, and she may or may not have referred to the grocery boy that was just then ringing the bell of the house opposite.

She went to her writing desk and cut a very creditable looking heart out of a piece of the best paper that had been the object of Esther's admiration. Across the face of the heart she printed in faint scrawling letters, "To you it is a rose," then rang for her maid to get out her street dress and tell James to have the carriage at the door in twenty minutes.

When John Carrington reached home after a trying day in his downtown law office he found that his landlady had put a long florist's box on the window ledge, where it would keep cool. He opened the box with an expression of curiosity that the masculine countenance often wears when its owner is sure there is no one to see it. There was one long stemmed American Beauty, and Carrington's sensitive face turned crimson when he saw that its stem was thrust through a hastily cut paper heart.

That night Miss Sevier's listless mood seemed to have passed away, and she showed an unusual amount of interest every time the doorbell rang.

When she had almost decided that it was too late to expect a caller Carrington walked into the room. He had let himself in without ringing and stood before her, still in his overcoat, his hat in his hand. On the lapel of his coat was the half blown American Beauty.

"Frances, I have never had the cheek necessary to ask if you could care for so unsuccessful a lawyer as I have proved," he said slowly, "but I would like better than anything on earth to know that you sent me this rose."

She drew a paper from the folds of her dress and showed him the sheet from which the heart had been cut.

A second later she rubbed her slender patrician nose against the rough shoulder of his overcoat.

"I think it would be pleasanter if you would hang this rough coat on the hall rack for an hour or so, John. I wish I had told you three years ago that I never had much regard for law."

Fleet Footed Zebras.

Sir Cornwallis Harris' description of the common zebra is as follows: "Seeking the wildest and most sequestered spots, haughty troops are exceedingly difficult to approach, as well on account of their extreme agility and fleetness of foot as from the abrupt and inaccessible nature of their highland abode. Under the special charge of a sentinel, so posted on some adjacent crag as to command a view of every avenue of approach, the checkered herd whom 'painted skins adorn' is to be viewed perambulating some rocky ledge on which the rifle ball alone can reach it.

"No sooner has the note of alarm been sounded by the vidette than, pricking their long ears, the whole flock hurry forward to ascertain the nature of the approaching danger, and, having gazed a moment at the advancing hunter, whisking their brindle tails aloft, helter skelter they thunder down craggy precipices and over yawning ravines where no less agile foot could dare to follow them."—Saturday Review.

A Scotch Priest's Beard.

Amid the highlands of Scotland many good Catholic priests of the mountains and islands have permission to protect their throats from the raw damp of the winters by beards, often of quite patriarchal dimensions. "I remember," says a writer, "a good old Scottish padre who was elected (much against his will) bishop of a highland see and went to Rome to receive episcopal consecration with his cheeks adorned with whiskers much more voluminous than the 'clerical inch' which custom or courtesy used to allow to all Catholic ecclesiastics. The cardinal prefect of propaganda, who was to perform the consecration ceremony, was horrified and insisted on the sacrifice of the whiskers before the consecration took place. The bishop elect submitted under protest. But he was no sooner back in his highland fastness than the whiskers blossomed forth again."

Ancient Slot Machines.

It is worth while recording that the "penny in the slot" automatic machine was known in the time of Hero of Alexander, who describes in his "Pneumatics" "a sacrificial vessel, which flows only when money is introduced." When the coin is dropped through the slot it falls on one end of a balanced horizontal lever, which, being depressed, opens a valve suspended from a chain at the other end, and the water begins to flow. When the lever has been depressed to a certain angle the coin falls off, and the valve, being weighted, returns to its seat and cuts off the supply. Hero's date is a little uncertain, but he is supposed to have lived B. C. 117-81.—Notes and Queries.

A Poem for Today

WITHOUT AND WITHIN

By James Russell Lowell

MY coachman, in the moonlight there,
Looks through the side-light of the door;
I hear him with his brethren swear,
As I could do—but only more.

Flattening his nose against the pane,
He envies me my brilliant lot,
Breathes on his aching fists in vain,
And dooms me to a place more hot.

He sees me in to supper go,
A silken wonder by my side,
Bare arms, bare shoulders, and a row
Of flounces, for the door too wide.

He thinks how happy is my arm
'Neath its white-gloved and jeweled load;
And wishes me some dreadful harm,
Hearing the merry corks explode.

Meanwhile I inly curse the bore
Of hunting still the same old coon,
And envy him outside the door,
In golden quiets of the moon.

The winter wind is not so cold
As the bright smile he sees me win,
Nor the host's oldest wine so old
As our poor gabble sour and thin.

I envy him the ungyved prance
By which his freezing feet he warms,
And drag my lady's-chains and dance
The galley-slave of dreary forms.

O, could he have my share of din,
And I his quiet!—past a doubt
'Twould still be one man bored within,
And just another bored without.

A Poem for Today

ROCK OF AGES

By Augustus Montague Toplady

ROCK of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee!
Let the water and the blood,
From Thy riven side which flowed,
Be of sin the double cure—
Cleanse me from its guilt and power.

Not the labors of my hands
Can fulfil Thy law's demands;
Could my zeal no respite know,
Could my tears for ever flow,
All for sin could not atone—
Thou must save, and Thou alone.

Nothing in my hand I bring—
Simply to Thy cross I cling;
Naked come to Thee for dress—
Helpless look to Thee for grace;
Foul, I to the fountain fly—
Wash me, Saviour, or I die.

While I draw this fleeting breath,
When my eye-strings break in death,
When I soar to worlds unknown,
See Thee on Thy judgment throne,
Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee!

A Poem for Today

THE CROWDED STREET

By William Cullen Bryant

LET me move slowly through the street,
Filled with an ever-shifting train,
Amid the sound of steps that beat
The murmuring walks like autumn rain.

How fast the flitting figures come!
The mild, the fierce, the stony face—
Some bright with thoughtless smiles, and some
Where secret tears have left their trace.

They pass to toil, to strife, to rest—
To halls in which the feast is spread—
To chambers where the funeral guest
In silence sits beside the dead.

And some to happy homes repair,
Where children, pressing cheek to cheek,
With mute caresses shall declare
The tenderness they cannot speak.

And some, who walk in calmness here
Shall shudder as they reach the door
Where one who made their dwelling dear,
Its flower, its light, is seen no more.

Youth, with pale cheek and slender frame,
And dreams of greatness in thine eye!
Go'st thou to build an early name,
Or early in the task to die?

Keen son of trade, with eager brow!
Who is now fluttering in thy snare?
Thy golden fortunes, tower they now,
Or melt the glittering spires in air?

Who of this crowd to-night shall tread
The dance till daylight gleam again?
Who sorrow o'er the untimely dead?
Who writhe in throes of mortal pain?

Some, famine-struck, shall think how long
The cold, dark hours, how slow the light;
And some who flaunt amid the throng
Shall hide in dens of shame to-night.

Each where his tasks or pleasures call,
They pass, and heed each other not.
There is Who heeds, Who holds them all
In His large love and boundless thought.

These struggling tides of life, that seem
In wayward, aimless course to tend,
Are eddies of the mighty stream
That rolls to its appointed end.

The Mountain State BUSINESS COLLEGE

Gives a training that turns [illegible] talent into money. [illegible] Does it quickly, thoroughly, [illegible] Full and complete courses in [illegible] SHORTHAND and TYPEWRITING. No "fad" pays tuition. Board [illegible] rent for five months. Skilled teachers. Large attendance. Healthful study and [illegible] rooms. Modern and convenient furniture. The M. S. B. C. has a National [illegible] and its graduates are sought after by business men everywhere. Now is the best [illegible] to begin a course. No vacation. Individual instruction. Elegant Art Catalogue sent free for the asking. Address, A. G. SINE, President, PARKERSBURG, WEST VA.

The Boy Makes the Mule Go,
And the Mule Makes the Cart Go.
WITH OUR NEW PROCESS
We Make the Bread Go!
Because It Is Best.
A Trial Will Convince You.
OAKLAND MODEL STEAM BAKERY,
HENRY LAUER, Proprietor.

Carey's Magnesia Flexible Cement Roofing for Flat or Steep Surfaces

Is suitable for all classes of buildings as it affords thorough fire protection and is a non-conductor of heat and cold. It will last the lifetime of the roof-boards. It is fire-proof and is rated the same as metal or slate roofs. Call or write for samples and prices.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,
Agents for Garrett County, Oakland, Md.

First National Bank
OF GRANTSVILLE, MD
Now Open for Business.
EQUIPPED WITH A
Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe and Vault.
Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound banking.
Deposits by mail and all correspondence given prompt attention.
We Solicit Your Account.

Paid-up Capital, - - $25,000
Liability of Stockholders, 25,000
Total Liability, - $50,000
PAYS 3 PER CENT.
on time deposits. Interest computed and paid semi-annually.
DIRECTORS.
C. H. JENNINGS, U. M. STANTON, G. C. KELLER, ELI STANTON, W. A. HITCHINS, J. S. HERSHBERGER, FRANK WATTS
OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - President.
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President.
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier.

The Up-to-Date Grocery,
First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.
Exclusively a Grocery Store.
CASH OR PRODUSE—One price to everybody and that the lowest consistent with a complete line of High-Grade Groceries.
Everything New, Clean and First-Class.
Fresh Vegetables on THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS.
Largest Line of CRACKERS in Oakland—Fresh Every Week.
W. H. BARTLETT.

THOS. LITTLE.
This is the season of year to make changes, and I will make a GREAT REDUCTION in the prices of
China and Porcelain Ware.
I have a large stock of this goods and they must go at the remarkably low price of 10c each. Many of these pieces are cheap at 25c. But I have concluded to sell all at the low price of 10c each.
They consist of Decorated, Gold Trimmed Meat Plates, large and small, Bakers, Nappies, Pitchers, Bowls, Cups and Saucers, large and small plates, just the thing for every day use.
Also a Fine Line of Imported China at Less than Cost.
Come Early and get the Choice Pieces.
HO S. LITTLE

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 6 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

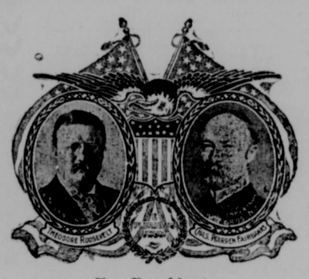
REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, SEPT. 29, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.



For President:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

New York.

For Vice-President:

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,

Indiana.

For Congress:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

Allegany County.

IT SEEMS like a dream, but was not something said a short time ago about the price of silver regulating the price of wheat?

THE Democratic party wants the country to take its protection in homeopathic doses, which is equivalent to prescribing panic for hard times.

NEXT November Judge Parker will feel that the bird he had in his hand was worth more than the great big eagle the convention assured him was roosting in the bush.

THE South owes its phenominal prosperity to Republican policies, because the party legislates for the whole country and recognizes no section or class.

AFTER all is over and the votes are counted, the Democrats deep down in their hearts will feel like they did in 1896 an 1900, be glad they were defeated.

IRELAND is a good example of what free trade as preached by England can do for a country. Her industries have been destroyed, her population has decreased, and she now buys her manufactured goods from other lands.

WAGES OE RAILWAY EMPLOYES.

The Democratic Text-Book has recklessly ventured on the discussion of wages and admits that "railroad labor affords the most accurate barometer of wages." Then it seeks to show that the wages of railway employes advanced only one-half per cent from 1892 to 1902. The editor of the Democratic bible very discreetly passes entirely over the Democratic Administration of Grover Cleveland and goes back to the prosperous days of the Administration of Benjamin Harrison when wages were higher than ever before known.

From 1892 to 1897 we had a Democratic Administration for four years; wages went down and also the number of men employed decreased according to the estimate of Samuel Gompers, more than three million. This was true of railroad labor as well as of factory labor. In 1893 at the close of the Harrison Administration there were 173,600 men employed by the railways, and in 1894, after one year of Democratic Administration this number was reduced to 779,600, a decrease of 94,000 employes. The wages of those remaining were reduced, and the men engaged in railroad work did not receive either the work or the wages that they did under Harrison.

In 1898, after one year of Republican Administration, the number of men employed by the railroads was again substantially as in 1893, when the former Republican Administration closed and in 1903 the work and wages on the railways had increased until there was one million, three hundred and twelve thousand, five hundred and twenty-seven employees receiving wages amounting to $757,000,000. This is an increase of nearly 70 per cent. in employment and wages for railway men, and it runs through all departments of the railway business from engineers to common laborers. As to the rate of wages, it can be safely left for the railway men themselves to say whether they are better off now than they were under the Cleveland Administration. They know that they have received substantial increases in wages, and that engineers, firemen, conductors and brakemen, receive from fifteen to twenty per cent. higher pay now than they did ten years ago. The admission of the Democratic Text-Book that railway labor is the best barometer of labor conditions now and in 1894 is fair, and workingmen may safely accept it. Last year the railways paid $300,000,000 more to their employees than they did in 1894, and that $300,000,000 marks the difference in earnings for railway men under Republican and Democratic administrations.

THE COMMON SENSE OF IT.

Discussion of political proceeds these days mainly along the broad lines of Presidential politics. The spectacular battle is the one of the heavy artillery. That is well and good; but it must not be forgotten that the flanks must be protected. Picket lines must be thrown out, the reserves must be at hand and a sharp lookout maintained to see that while the main battle is raging, the enemy does not come around the rear and ham-string the horses.

In other words, there is a Republican House of Representatives to be elected to support and sustain the hand of a Republican President, if the people decide for one, and to work in harmony with the Republican Senate, already elected, and which cannot be ousted by the next election.

It is undeniable to the interest of the business man, the farmer, the office man on a salary, and the man who works with his hands, guided by an intelligent brain to fashion and artifice the raw material into the fabric of commerce. It is to the interest of all of these that they should weigh well and consider all the issue of this campaign when about to make up their minds on the Congressional ticket.

In the first place, it cannot be denied that the American voters have very significantly expressed their preferences heretofore as between Republican and Democratic Congresses. A moment's run back over the trails of memory will recall the camp fires of successive Republican victories on the field of national politics.

It was after the Fifty-third Congress had wrecked its will upon national legislation and left a heritage of disaster and industrial misfortune to the entire country that the people began to consider the importance of the Congressional elections. They realized that while the process of building up prosperity under legislation was long and slow, it was mighty easy to tear down good times with bad legislation. They were then experiencing a demonstration of that fact in the operation of the Wilson Tariff Bill, which was rapidly closing up all the factories, turning men off railroads, curtailing the market of the farmers for their produce and making havoc generally.

The result of this contemplation was the election of a Republican House of Representatives for the Fifty-fourth Congress. We have had a Republican House ever since, and if the good Lord is as merciful to us this year as for the past ten years, we will have another Republican House this fall.

The questions at issue are the same now as they have been in the past; it is a question of protection or free trade; of perfecting the financial system or weakening it; of continuing the good work in the Philippines or "scuttling." There are numerous subsidiary issues, but these are principal ones and the people have spoken at the polls on all of them. There is no new or strange doctrine.

The whole question is one of good sense, Americanism and the best interest of all the people, the answer being to return a Republican House of Representatives.

Sewing Machines.

Two years ago we commenced selling the New Royal Sewing Machine, contracting direct with the manufacturer, and have the first one yet to find any fault with one of these machines. They are all guaranteed for 5 years, made with the latest and most improved attachments, and in style and finish cannot be excelled. We are offering these machines from $13.50 to $25.00 according to style and finish. If in need of a machine and you look into the merits of the New Royal, we are sure you cannot help but be pleased. And when you want needles or any little repairs, you can easily obtain them for you have a Standard Machine that is not put out under any fictitious name by catalogue houses or department stores. J. M. DAVIS & SON. 3t

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

HOT FOOTING IT AFTER THE COLORED MAN.

Ex-Governor Frank Brown Carries His Crusade Into Garrett County

WHERE THIRTY COLORED VOTERS

Are Registered—Game Hardly Worth The Candle—Wants to Form Organization of His Own and Scalp A. P. Gorman.

Ex-Governor Frank Brown, of Maryland, came all the way from his home in Baltimore last Sunday afternoon, arriving here about six o'clock, to "confer" with the leaders of his party in this section relative to the formation of a Parker and Davis League. To a person with a little bit of foresight it is evident that the former Governor is playing politics for "Brown" and not for Parker and Davis, as in every county these so-called "Leagues" have been formed, the expenses being met from the private purse of Mr. Brown, whose object is to form a little organization of the "leaders" in every section of the State and then when the time is propitious launch himself upon the unsuspecting public as a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Mr. Gorman, whose term will expire a few years hence. By the formation of these "Leagues" Mr. Brown will draw about himself the "leaders" in every county and the representatives in the Legislature will of course dance to the tune played by Mr. Brown.

The ex-Governor was preceded to Oakland by his fidus Achates, Rowlerson, whose visit recalled to memory one made by him in former years when he attempted to run a Democratic convention here and narrowly escaped physical injury at the hands of some of the Garrett countians who made it quite plain that they could conduct their own affairs. Rowlerson left Oakland that night a wiser but poorer man, the campaign funds which he brought with him having fallen into the hands of one who knew too well but not wisely, how to disburse money not his own.

Mr. Brown in his conferences with the local bosses at the Oakland Hotel, where headquarters were established, made no effort to conceal the fact that he considered the race question as the issue. He declared that the people of Maryland had to do something to protect themselves from the "nigger." It was necessary to prepare for next year, when the constitutional admendment question would be brought forward. The fight must be kept up, he declared. He referred to the alleged deplorable condition in Southern Maryland, where because of the prominence of the negro, land was only worth from $2 to $3 an acre. As in previous addresses he charged President Roosevelt with bringing the race issue to the front.

There is great danger indeed from negro supremacy in Garrett where the negro vote is about thirty in all. But then Mr. Brown must have some excuse for visiting Garrett county and this answered as well as any.

Another meeting will be held here on Friday when the organization of the "Brown League for the Overthrow of Gorman" will be completed. All Democrats to show their loyalty to Parker and Davis must be present.

DEER PARK JOTTINGS.

Court is about over and again we scratch off some items of Deer Park and vicinity and hope our silence for the past two weeks will be excused as we were a frequent visiter to our county capital during that time.

Our genial manager of the B. and O. Hotel at this place reports a fairly prosperous season and expects to close this popular resort on Saturday, October 1st, and the gayety of the summer of 1904 will be a thing of the past, but hope to see our popular manager back again next year and bespeak for him a more presperous season in 1905, as there will no great World's Fair to attract the many patrons of this resort.

Mr. J. Swan Frick and wife, who have been in Europe the past three or four months, will be here in a few days to spend the autumn at their palatial summer home, "Hunting Ridge."

Mr. Pennington, chief architect of the B. & O. R. R. Co., will remain at his summer cottage for some weeks on account of his son who, as reported, was seriously wounded, but we are glad to report is considered out of danger.

Merchant W. C. Jones returned from the World's Fair a few days ago where he and his son Charles spent some two weeks taking in the sights of this most wonderful fair of this or any age, in honor of one of the greatest purchases ever made by any nationality in the history of the world, and negotiated peacefully by two of the greatest men of modern times, one the greatest statesman of America, the other the greatest military genius of Europe. Mr. Jones on his return stopped off at Delaware, Ohio, where he left his son Charles A. to attend the Wesleyan University of Ohio, situated some twenty miles from the above named place and connected by an electric road to the University.

Our young friends Isaac and William Cormany, after spending their vacation at their home here, returned to Washington last week to take up their duties in the Interior Department where they are held in high esteem by Commissioner Hitchcock, the chief of that important department of the U. S. government.

Your correspondent, together with Rev. E. Manges, Mr. John Felty, Miss Nellie Hoye, of Oakland, and other friends and relatives, were entertained at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Engle on Sabbath last, and in the evening through the courtesy of Mr. Felty were driven to Oakland in time to meet No. 55 on which Ex-Goy. Frank Brown was aboard, and we found quite a number of Oakland's prominent citizens awaiting to greet the genial Ex-Governor, familliarly called "Farmer Brown," and after a cordial greeting we were all invited to meet him on Monday at the Oakland B. & O. Hotel, and to our surprise an invitation to all present was extended by him to stay and dine with him, and as we glanced around the festal board the following familiar faces were observed devouring the rich viands of mine host, viz: Chief Judge Hon. A. Hunter Boyd; chairman of county executive committee, Mr. C. M. Miller, of Swanton; Mr. G. S. Hamill, attorney, of Oakland; editor of Journal, Jos. D. Hamill; Mr. Thomas Little, of the executive committee; E. J. West, one of the court officials; Dr. E. H. Bartlett, ex-chairman of county committee; R. T. Browning, ex-State Senator and present Assistant Fish Commissioner for Western Maryland; G. S. Hamill, Jr., attorney at law; Mr. Edward Taggart and John A. Delawder, two of the oldest men now living in Oakland; Dr. C. J. Fazenbaker, of Swanton and Messrs. Chas. J. West, James A. Hinebaugh and the writer, of Deer Park, making a total of fifteen, with our honored host. After a social chat and extending our thanks we all departed to our various vocations.

Many of our young people were invited to the wedding of Miss Victoria Pysell to Mr. Parley Deal, on Saturday last, 24th inst. This youthful couple was attended as bridesmaid by Miss Bessie Deal, sister of the groom, and Mr. Gay Wheeler as groomsman. The bride is about seventeen and the groom some nineteen years, the bridesmaid less than sixteen, the groomsman in his eighteenth year. All the parties are petite in stature and report says it was one of the cutest little couples and the most youthful they had ever seen united in the holy bonds of matrimony. They are all deservedly popular and we wish them all the bliss of this life and more abundant joy in the life to come. Rev. Manges officiated and reports a pleasant time and a sumptuous feast.

We were glad to meet our brother in church fellowship on last Sabbath, Mr. P. J. Lohr and wife, who has purchased the Friend farm near town and he and his good wife will be quite an acquisition to our little church and we extend fraternal greetings and hope they may at all times feel at home with us and by their presence cheer the heart of the good pastor.

We were made happy during our attendance at court by meeting many friends from different parts of the county, and more especially glad on Sabbath night (25th) at the Oakland Evangelical church in meeting Mrs. Mitchell, of Pennsylvania, whom I had not seen since we stood at the death bed of her loving brother, the late William Hinebaugh, a man I loved living and mourn dead. It made me sad as I looked the audience over and but seven of all that congregation of twenty years ago were familiar to me. Oh, what changes twenty years can make.

But I pause, and say

MORE ANON.

KILGOUR RETIRES FROM CONTEST

Unwilling to Oppose Col. Pearre for Congressional Honors.

A telegram from Rockville states that "Col. William Kilgour, who several weeks ago announced his intention of asking for the Democratic congressional nomination in this district, to oppose Col. Geo. A. Pearre, has changed his mind and has notified his friends that he does not now desire his name to be used in connection with the nomination. The convention meets here next Wednesday and Col. Kilgour's withdrawal removes from the field the only avowed candidate."

Call for Your Letters

Mrs. Anne Matthews, Lula Forason, Miss Jessie Jaycox, Marie A. Harbin, Lola Harding, Lucy Ervin, Mattie Garlitz, Mr. E. C. Nahan, Austin Merrill, John Spiker, Chas. Reams, Joe King, Thos. Kesner, A. V. Enlow, Geo. Casteel, W. M. E. Singer.

SEPTEMBER TERM OF COURT ADJOURNED

Tuesday Morning After a Session Extending Over Two Weeks.

VACATING JAIL UNDER ADVISEMENT

By the Court—Before Anything In This Matter Can be Done Arrangements Must Be Made With Other County for Care of Prisoners.

Tuesday morning the September Term of the Circuit Court adjourned after a session extending from Monday, the 12th inst., during which time a great many cases were disposed of.

The petit jurors were discharged on Friday afternoon, their services being no longer required as agreements had been made by the attorneys in cases undecided then not to ask for Jury trials, the matters to be left the discretion of the Court.

Judges Boyd and Henderoon were present during the two days session this week, Judge Keedy having returned to his home at Hagerstown on Saturday morning.

In adjourning the court Judge Boyd stated that the matter of vacating the jail in Oakland owing to its unfit condition for the confinement of prisoners was being held under advisement by the Court as nothing along this line could be done until an arrangement had been entered into with the authorities of another county for the keeping of the prisoners sent from here, adding that it was the intention of the Court to recognize the recommendation made by the grand jury in this connection and that such an order would be passed.

The cases disposed of since the last report published in these columns follow:

CRIMNAL TRIALS.

6. State vs George Marvel; false pretense; trial before court; paroled. Thayer—Offutt & Renninger.

7. State vs Geo. Marvel false pretense; trial; verdict not guilty. Thayer—Offutt & Renninger.

8. State vs Chas. Weimer; assault; dismissed. Thayer—Hamill & Hamill.

9. Same vs same; plea of guilty, fine $20 and cost.

10. State vs Dennis C. Hare; wife beating; dismissed. Thayer—Young & Renninger.

11. State vs Dennis C. Hare; rape; trial before jury; guilty as to assault and battery. Thayer—Young & Renninger.

18. State vs Michael C. Fuller assault and battery; submitted to court; verdict guilty; fined $100 and costs. Thayer—Williams, Renninger.

19. State vs Oscar Fuller; assault and battery; trial before court; verdict guilty; fined $50 and costs. Thayer—Williams, Renninger.

20. State vs Peter Fuller; assault and battery; trial before court; verdict guilty; fined $10 and costs. Thayer—Williams, Renninger.

23. State vs William Gray; larceny; jury trial; verdict guilty. Thayer—Hiendel by court.

24. State vs Kimmell Fuller; assault and battery; stet. Thayer—Renninger.

27. State vs Mike Rice and Gertrude Rice; larceny; trial before court; verdict not guilty. Thayer—Peddicord.

31. State vs Luke Kisner, Vernie A. Jackson, Alvesa Kisner; malicious destruction of property; verdict not guilty. Thayer—S. Hamill, Williams.

32. State vs. Thos. Rush; burglaly; trial before court; verdict not guilty. Thayer—Hamill, Williams.

35. State vs Henry Rosenberger; sale of liquor without license; plea of guilty; fined $50 and cost. Thayer.

CIVIL APPEALS.

17. P. S. Fazenbaker vs Peter Wilt; judgment for plaintiff for $11.62. Sincell—Renninger.

CIVIL TRIALS.

5. A. W. Helbig, vs Peter P. Lohr; continued; Peddicord—Heindel.

25. N. C. Welling vs C. A. Hessen; verdict for defendant. Hamill—Peddicord.

39. Ora Rice vs A. R. Raymond; trial before court; sub curia.—Renninger—Sincell.

42. Peter F. Spicker vs L. H. Haltemman et al; settled. Renninger, Hamill—Sincell, Heindel.

58. M. C. Hoye, adm., vs J. Shartzer et al; continued. Hamill, Jr., Semmes—Renninger, Offutt

13. E. G. Perrine et al vs Jno. R. Browning, trial before court; sub curia. Peddicord, Mitchell, Howard—Hamill, Semmes.

91. Jos. Roy vs I. W. Thompson; continued; Hammill, Jr., Semmes—Heindel.

Still Hustling.

The Hustling Store Company has decided to clean up its entire stock of goods amounting to at least $7000 at whatever the goods will bring at public sale and also at private sale from day to day and then put in new Stocks to be sold at the lowest prices. Get prices at the Hustling Store before purchasing elsewhere.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

New Fall Styles, 1904.

Women's Tailor Made Suits.
Women's Tailor Made Skirts.
Women's Tailor Made Coats.
Women's Queen Quality Shoes.
Men's Griffon Brand Clothing.
Men's Kirshbaum Overcoats.
Men's All America Shoes.
Men's Bion Shoes.
Men's Crawford Shoes.

We have spared no pains in making a selection of goods from the leading factories in the United States.

We want every teacher visiting Oakland next week to make our store a visit.

WE ARE ORIGINATORS OF

High Grade Merchandise

IN THIS SECTION.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

The Garrett National Bank

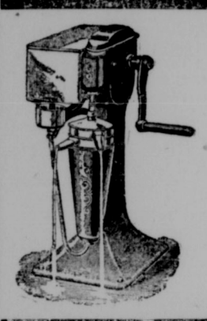
OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, 20,000.00



A Great Separator.

There is A BEST in everything. It must be BEST MADE—EASIEST USED—MOST EFFECTIVE—MOST SIMPLE. By actual comparison—in actual use.

THE TUBULAR SEPARATOR

Has proved it has these points in its favor. That's what puts it away ahead of all other separators—that's why I sell it. Get hold of facts.

J. E GNAGEY, Accident, Md.

A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure
HAS NO SUBSTITUTE

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Mr. Edward J. Hamill, of Blaine, is in Oakland this week attending the Teachers' Institute.

Mrs. S. E. Shirer went to Grafton this morning to visit friends and relatives for a week or two.

Mr. Carl White, who spent a week with relatives at Uniontown, returned to his home Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Orvil Feather, of Cranesville, are visiting Mrs. Cecelia Coddington at her home on Liberty street.

Mrs. Julius Scherr and son William of Eglon, are here this week as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Renninger.

Paul Naylor, son of Mr. A. D. Naylor has gone to Morgantown where he has become a student in the University.

Attorney W. R. Offutt was in attendance at the Democratic Congressional convention held at Rockville yesterday.

Dr. Z. H. Moon, of Keyser, West Va., son of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Moon, of this county, was here a few days recently on business.

Messrs. Roy Hamill, of Oakland, and Russell Browning, of Blaine, left yesterday morning for a visit of ten days to the Fair at St. Louis.

FOR SALE—A pair of large bay horses, weighing 1400 pounds, six and seven years old. Apply to H. D. Dean, Oakland, Md. 30—4t.

Mr. Chas. A. Deffinbaugh, of the Democrat, made a business trip to Cumberland Tuesday night, returning to Oakland yesterday evening.

Miss Jane Baird, of Lonaconing, who was the guest for geveral weeks of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Tower, returned to her home Tuesday morning.

Mr. Harry M. Hebden, recently of Baltimore, but now located in Boston with a New England book publishing concern, was in Oakland on business Monday and Tuesday.

Among the many teachers who called at this office during the institute this week were Prof. J. C. Beahm, of the Accident school; Mr. Lloyd K. Fike, of the Keyser Ridge school, and Mr. H. L. Thomas of near Grantsville.

Mrs. Robert I. Anderson and daughters Misses Annie and Nettie left Oakland last night for Baltimore where they will reside in the future. Mrs. Anderson and her family have many warm friends in Oakland who regret their departure.

Mrs. Albert Ashby and little child of Crellin, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Vaughn at their home on Water street.

Mrs. J. O. Michaels and daughter Miss Mamie left here yesterday evening for York, Pa., where they went to join Mr. Michaels who has embarked in business in that town.

Mr. Geo. W. Moon, of Sang Run, who was here two or three days attending the Institute, was summoned to Grafton Tuesday by a telegram announcing the serious illness of his brother-in law, Mr. A. W. Shaw.

Mr. Stephen Casteel, of near Oakland, who has spent the past two or three years in Idaho and other Northwestern States, returned to Oakland yesterday afternoon via St. Louis, where he left his brother who will arrive here within a week or two.

Mr. Eli McMillan, of Accident, who returned to that place recently after an extended visit to relatives in Los Angeles, Cal., and other points, came up to Oakland Saturday and after remaining here a few days with friends departed for Hagerstown where he will be the guest of his son John McMillan, Esq., a few weeks.

Capt. James A. Hayden retuened home from Uniontown Friday last. He had been over there for a day or two attending the reunion of his old regiment—the Eleventh Pennsylvania Reserves, where he met many of his former comrades, his colonel and former captain included.

By notice given elsewhere in these colums the Board of Supervisors of Elections has appointed Mr. Thomas J. Browning Judge of Election and Officer of Registration in place of John F. Browning for District No. 14, owing to the physical condition of the latter which disqualifies him to act.

Messrs. A. D. Naylor and D. A. Vaughn, of Oakland, left last night for St. Louis, where a week will be spent attending the Fair. Mr. Vaughn, during his trip, is the guest of one of the life insurance companies he represents in this community, the company paying his entire expenses.

Mrs. Nelson Thomasson and daughter, of Chicago, who occupied their summer home, "Monte Vista," near town, since early in the spring, left Tuesday morning, the former going direct to her home in Chicago. Miss Thomasson will spend a few weeks with friends in Pennsylvania before her return.

WANTED—Special Representatives in this county and adjoining territories, to represent and advertise an old established business house of solid financial standing. Salary $21 weekly, with expenses advanced each Monday by check direct from headquarters. Horse and buggy furnished when necessary; position permanent. Address Blew Bros. & Co., Dept. A. Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill. 6t

The Hustling Store at Mountain Lake Park will continue to hustle out its large stock of general merchandise until the entire stock is disposed of. All goods at cost except groceries. Come see the large stock of double and single wood heaters. Nothing to equal them on the market. One new six lid nine-inch hole steel range for sale.

Messrs. Browning Bros., the meat dealers, whose place of business was located on Second Street, sold their building Monday to D. E. Offutt who has had it removed from the Ravenscroft lot to Mr. Offutt's ground in the rear of the Garrett National Bank building. The house will be placed so as to face and be on a level with Railroad street and will be rented.

DIED AT SWANTON.

Rev. Charles C. Pearson, a Prominent Minister, Expires Suddenly.

Incident to a gradual wasting of health for several years, Mr. Charles C. Pearson, a prominent minister of the Protestant Episcopal church of the Diocese of W. Va., died in Swanton, Maryland, about 7 o'clock p. m. Friday, September 16th, 1904.

Mr. Pearson was born in Fairfax county, near Alexandria, Virginia.

After ordination into the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal church he served that ancient faith for many terms in various pulpits of his native State, in Kentucky and West Virginia, and at the time of his death was, as he had been for many years, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, Berkeley Springs, the Diocese of Bishop Peterkin. In all of these charges during an exceptionally long and unbroken period of service he occupied and maintained a front rank among the clergy of his day. In his life and teachings he unwaveringly clung to and enunciated the broad type and conservative churchmanship that has so clearly marked the Virginia church from its Colonial foundation.

At an early stage in his bright career he married Miss Julia Nowell, of South Carolina, a lady of gentle breeding, refined and accomplished, who survives him with one son, a journalist of New York. Mr. Pearson was a gentleman of most genial and engaging personality; possessing a model form graced by an easy and superior manner; and in the chancel and council of his denomination stood second to few, if any, of the more influential and forceful ministers of his day and time.

The end was a beautiful crowning of an untarnished life. He whose banner this servaut of the Cross had so long and so well upheld for the salvation of humanity seemed to be present at the supreme test and to mercifully permit the silver cord to be gently loosed. As the shadows of a tranquil autumn evening were gathering, sitting in a chair pleasantly repeating a verse from "that sweet story old," his features relaxed into a smile and in an instant the plumed spirit had fled from darkness to light.

RELLIM

Stoves

We have a stock on hand of more than one hundred stoves of all kinds, sizes and prices, running from a $10.00 Cook Stove to a $40.00 Steel Range, and Heating Stoves from $5.00 to $20. The above has been selected with the greatest care, not only in regard to price, but to the requirements needed for the trade in this part of our country. Stoves are manufactured for the section of the country that they are sold in, and according to the kind of fuel used, and prices are made by the manufacturer according to quality, style and finish. The stove business is a trade to itself and it requires years of experience to know when you have the best goods that can be bought for the money, and best suited to the trade you are selling. If you contemplate buying a stove of any kind, call and look our line over before buying, we think we can please any and all, both in regard to price and kind.

J. M. DAVIS & SON.

Engagement Announced.

From Tuesday evening's Cumberland Times the following is Taken:

"Society learns with pleasure of the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Eleanor Humbird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson Humbird, and granddaughter of the late Jacob Humbird, to Mr. William Rennix Offutt, son of Mr. Daniel E. Offutt, of Oakland.

"Miss Humbird is a member of the younger set, and is an accomplished young lady, deservedly popular among a large circle of friends.

"Mr. Offutt is a graduate of the University of Virginia and is a rising young lawyer of Oakland.

"The wedding will take place November 23rd and will be one of the social events of the early winter."

Will Get on Ticket.

Sylvester L. Young, of Hagerstown, is securing names on a petition to be presented to the secretary of state to have his name placed on the ticket this fall as the Socialist candidate for Congress for the Sixth district. Mr. Young was nominated in convention and Attorney General Bryan decided that he was not entitled to a place on the ticket as the Socialist party did not poll the required nnmbor of votes at the last election. He will have to secure 300 signers to the petition, which he says he can do.

A Card From President Sine.

I have sold to Messrs. J. W. Smith and B. F. Shaffer, what was known as my branch school located at Cumberland, Md. The new owners will conduct the school hereafter under the name of "The Tri-State Business College." This change in the ownership of the Cumberland school will enable me to devote my whole time and attention to the further building of Parkersburg's famous school—the Mountain State Business College.

September 26, 1904.

4t ALBERT G. SINE, President.

For Rent.

An 8-room dwelling in residence section of town. Apply to or address J. M. Litzinger, Oakland, Md.

A VERY SUDDEN DEATH.

William T. Stansberry Found Dead in Bed Friday Morning.

Mr. William T. Stansberry, of Morgantown, West Va., employed as a construction boss by the Preston Lumber and Coal Company on the extension of its railroad from Crellin toward their lands in Preston county, West Va., was found dead in his bed at Crellin on last Friday morning when he was called.

Mr. Stansberry retired Thursday night and complained of a dull feeling in his nead, brought on, he thought, by the explosion of a number of dynamite charges fired during the day, but otherwise was apparently sound in health. After his death was discovered a physician and Coroner Gonder were summoned. After viewing the remains and making an examination of the body the physician, Dr. Legge, gave a certificate of death caused by an attack of cerebral appoplexy.

The remains were brought to Oakland and after being prepared for burial shipped to Morgantown.

Mr. Stansberry was a young man and expected to meet his wife here Friday evening, she coming from her home on train No. 46. Before her departure from Morgantown a telegram was sent to her informing her of Mr. Stansberry's death. She came on to Oakland, however, and accompanied the remains home.

Married.

DIEHL—PYSELL—On the 24th inst., at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Pysell, near Deer Park, their pretty, accomplished and youngest daughter, Catharine Victoria to Mr. Parley Diehl, of near Deer Park. The ceremony took place at high noon in the presence of about sixty guests and was performed by Rev. E. Manges, pastor of the Lutheran church, Oakland. Gay Wm. Wheeler was best man and Miss Bessie Diehl, the pretty sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. Guests were present from New York city, Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, Shepherdstown, Keyser, Terra Alta, Accident, McHenry, Deer Park and Oakland. The bride received many and valuable presents.

On this occasion Mr. Pysell celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday. He was born near Edie, Somerset county, Pa., Sept. 14th, 1829. He is still quite active for a man of his age. He thinks of retiring from farming. He and Mrs. Pysell have been industrious and economical and have a right to rest from their labors and enjoy the fruits of their toil.

TREACY—SWEENEY—In St. Mary's Catholic church, Baltimore, yesterday morning at 8 o'clock, by Rev. Father Kenny, Mr. Owen T. Treacy, of Oakland, and Miss Mary Sweeney, of Baltimore. Immediately after the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the residence of the bride and the couple departed for St. Louis where the honeymoon will be spent. At the church the ushers were Mr. James Treacy, of Oakland, brother of the groom, Messrs. Dennie and James Sweeney, brothers of the bride, and Mr. T. Kenney. Miss Annie Treacy and Mr. Michael Canty, both of Oakland, were present at the ceremony. The wedded couple are well known in Oakland where they have many friends who join in wishing them a long and prosperous wedded life.

MOON—WILSON—On Monday, at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. J. M. Davis, in Oakland, Dr. Zachariah H. Moon and Miss Della Blanche Wilson. The groom is a son of Mr. Abraham Moon and is a veterinary surgeon practicing at Keyser, W. Va. The bride is a daughter of Mr. James H. Wilson, of District No. 13, one of the foremost citizens of the county, and is highly esteemed by all who knew her. May the young couple have a long and prosperous married life.

Died.

MOSHOLDER—At Hutton, Md., on the 20th inst., Miss Georgie, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elias Mosholder, aged 10 years, 2 months and 13 days. Georgie suffered very keenly from inflamatory rheumatism which finally caused her death. She was a good girl; bright and loved by everyone. Funeral services were held in the Lutheran church at Oakland and interment took place here in the cemetery.

"She heard the voice of Jesus say Come unto me and rest."

Attorney A. I. Kelso will leave tomorrow for Oklahoma City, Okla. Ty., where he will locate for the practice of his profession. He will go from here to Ohio where he will join his wife who has been visiting her home folks for the past week and they will go to St. Louis, where they will spend ten days at the big Exposition and from there they will go on to their new home. Mr. Kelso and his estimable wife have many friends here who will be sorry to see them leave our town. Mr. Kelso is a good lawyer, being a good student and gives all business entrusted to his care the very closest attention. There is no doubt but what he will succeed.—Kingwood Journal.

Dixon & Kelso

Will sell for the next 30 days

Floor Oil Cloth, Linoleum

—AND—

UNDERWEAR

At Greatly Reduced Prices,

As follows—

Best Heavy Floor Oil Cloth, worth 35c. yd., for 28c.
" " Remnant Linoleum, worth 50c yd., for 35c.
" " Inlaid " " 75c. " " 50c.

Men's Heavy Fleece-Lined Shirts and Drawers, worth 65c for 47c.
Men's Heavy All-Wool Shirts and Drawers, worth $1.25 for 97c.
Boys' Heavy Fleece-Lined Undershirts and Drawers, worth 40c. for 25c.
Misses' best quality Vests and Pants, worth 40c. for 25c.
Ladies' best All-Wool Red Flannel Vests and Pants, worth $1.25 for 97c.
Ladies' Fleece Vests and Pants, worth 40c. for 25c.

We can handle 10,000 to 15,000 bushels good Potatoes, at 40c. per bushel. Can commence delivery at any time. Will also pay 65c for good, clean grain BUCKWHEAT.

Yours, to please,

DIXON & KELSO.

BUILDING, PAVING, PRESSED FACE. BRICKS VITRIFIED FOR FOUNDATIONS VITRIFIED FOR SEWERS, STREET PAVING BLOCKS.

Best Quality for Building, Casing, Sidewalks and Streets.
Beautiful Shades, Red, Light Granate and Mixed Colors.
Capacity 80,000 Daily. Prompt Shipments.

QUEEN CITY BRICK & TILE COMPANY
—AND—
CUMBERLAND GRANATE BRICK COMPANY
Cumberland, Maryland.

SEPTEMBER MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Names of Those to Whom Licenses Have Been Issued This Month.

During the month of September marriage licenses have been issued by Clerk E. Z. Tower to the following parties:

Isaac Weataergolt and Elizabeth Bolyord, both of Grant county, W. Va.

Enos Coleman Teats and Charity Maude Wiles, both of Preston county, W. Va.

James Jones Vansickle and Nannie J. Turney, both of Garrett county.

Clarence E. Sweitzer and Daisy L. Browning, both of Garrett county.

Thomas Phillips and Laura E. Feister, both of Grant county, W. Va.

Andrew Shartzer, of Oakland, and Harriet Stone, of Kingwood, W. Va.

Charles H. Saucer and Lulu O. DeMoss, both of Preston county, W. Va.

Ralph W. Teter and Hallie M. Schock, both of Braxton county, W. Va.

Bronson Simmons and Lillia Stierenger, both of Preston county, W. Va.

Silas Francis Savage and Myra M. Frazee, both of Garrett county.

John Bertie Sandridge and Bertha Wentz, both of Upshur county, W. Va.

Robert L. House and Nannie McClusky, both of Allegany, Pa.

Alburtus Summers and Isa Brown, both of Preston county, W. Va.

Daniel F. Wyer and Orah Davis, both of Marion county, W. Va.

Leroy Lenner and Ida Folk, both of Garrett county.

Edmond R. Hickman and Vady Cline, both of Ritchie county, W. Va.

Charles Bradley and Maggie Davis, both of Grafton, W. Va.

Phineas Orndorff and Sidney M. Fisher, both of Garrett county.

Harry L. Bowman and Addie L. Sanders, both of Garrett county.

Clarence E. Hawkins and Mary E. Rowand, both of Marion county, W. Va.

Thomas J. Marshall and Ella L. Kerns, both of Clarksburg, W. Va.

John E. McClung and Alice E. Lindsay, both of Harrison county, W. Va.

Arthur Preston Parker and Mollie Fike, both of Preston county, W. Va.

Henry Kitzmiller and Ada Snyder, both of Garrett county.

Arthur Deems and Bessie Cosner, both of Tucker county, W. Va.

Gilmor Bittinger and Minnie Miller, both of Garrett county.

Z. H. Moon and Della Blanche Wilson, both of Garrett county.

Alvey B. Wilburn and Ada Hoover, both of Garrett county.

Henry H. Baker and Laura C. Baker, both of Grantsville, this county.

Robert B. Bowers, of Columbus, O., and Josephine E. Chisholm, of Oakland.

Three were marked "don't publish."

New Goods, Just Opened.

The Latest Things Out In

Pongees, Draperies, Satteens, (these are beauties). Seersuckers, Granite Cloths, Flannelettes, Sacking, Chambrays, etc.

We have them,
You want them,
Come get them.

The Latest Things Out In

Hats, Caps and Shoes,

and Men's and Boys

CLOTHING.

Also fine line Clothing Samples,

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

Proposals for Building Sidewalks

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, for the erection of a sidewalk fronting the opera house block in Oakland, beginning at the corner of Green and Second streets and ending at the north property line of H. Lauer, and extending from the property line along said block to the wood curbing.

Proposals will also be received for the erection of a walk from Second street to Railroad street walk.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of N. S. Heindel, First National Bank building, Oakland, Md.

Proposals must be on file with the clerk of said Mayor and Council not later than six o'clock, September 19th, 1904, and endorsed on the back, "Proposal for erecting sidewalks."

By order of the Mayor and Council of Oakland.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,

Plumbing,

Gas Fitting,

Steam and Hot Water Heating.

Center Street,
Keyser, W. Va.

PHONE 62.

OLD JUNK

By FRANCES McELRATH

Copyright, 1904, by Frances McElrath

"I SHOULD like to know any man that has a better right to charity than old Thomas White. He's done his part taking care of the county for forty years, and now I say he may go to the poorhouse holding up his head like a man—like a man, sir."

Old Reuben Marsh could advocate another's dependency as he stood secure behind the counter of his own shop. The notion shop was tiny, and the income derived from it was meager, but it afforded support for Reuben's simple household, and it meant all the sweetness of independence to the old man.

"I shall contribute willingly to Thomas White's support," he said, his voice rising to a shrill crack of emphasis. Then he peered closely at the paper in his hand. "This is my order, John," he said to the bright faced young traveling man to whom he was talking. "Have the stationery here by next week. Good morning, John."

Kathie came out of the sitting room behind the little shop. She waved her hand lightly to Reuben as she tripped across the floor. John Tracy opened the door for her, and they walked together down the street.

John turned his speculative, business seeing eyes on the window of the notion shop as they passed it.

"Your grandfather ought really to make a handsome thing out of his business way up at this end of town," he remarked, "but he's growing rather too shipshape in his methods lately. He keeps his goods packed away so carefully no one knows any more what he has for sale. But I expect," he said, turning to his companion, "you'll be looking out for that end of the business when you finish school."

Kathie's pretty face flushed pink.

"I must leave you here, John. Good-by!" she said.

She walked away briskly up the hill to the boarding house beside the girls' college. It was almost time for the college term to begin, and she knew that Jennie Fry was coming over from Nestor that afternoon to secure her room for the year.

Jennie met her at the boarding house door.

"Oh, Kathie," she exclaimed as they embraced, "Uncle Phil says he can get it for you! As soon as you graduate at Christmas you must make your application!"

"How splendid!"

"We shall have such good times together!" said Jennie, administering an anticipative hug. "I'm sure you'll like Nestor much better than Bilton."

"Couldn't help it," agreed Kathie. "Well, that's all I came for. I must run home again now and tell grandpa and Aunt Mary about it."

A little later when Kathie entered the sitting room behind the shop she found her aunt standing at the window holding a letter.

"Aunt Mary," Kathie began, "I know something fine!"

Mary Marsh turned toward her. There was an unusual flush on her face.

"Did father tell you?" she asked.

"What?"

"About Preston."

"Preston?"

"Yes. He's got a short leave to come home, and he wants me to go back to China with him at once."

"Why, Aunt Mary!"

"We're to be married next Monday."

"You are!" Kathie gathered her aunt's slim form into her vigorous young embrace. Mary Marsh's engagement had been a matter of such long standing her family had almost forgotten that it might ever terminate in a wedding.

"MISS ROME WANTS THESE THINGS FOR THE COLLEGE."

Mary's preparations absorbed the household until the wedding took place. Kathie managed the simple wedding. She was lately developing a considerable faculty for managing. Old Reuben, dressed in a well brushed ancient suit of black, gave his daughter away.

He looked across the table at Kathie as they were eating supper together the night after Mary left home.

"Well, Kathie," he observed, "so you're the only one I have left now to take care of!"

"Oh, grandpa," she returned earnestly, "I'm not going to be a burden on your hands! Indeed, I'm going to take care of you instead! I don't mean that you shall work much longer."

Reuben smiled indulgently. "There's a good deal of work left in the old man yet," he replied proudly.

"That may be, but you're not going to do it. As soon as I graduate at Christmas time I'm going to make you close your shop."

Reuben laid down his knife and fork.

"Hey!" he said reprovingly.

Kathie colored. "I mean," she explained, "that Jennie Fry's uncle says he can get me a position in the new school that's to be opened in Nestor the 1st of February, and then"—

"Then I shall be sorry to lose you my dear," Reuben broke in, with dignified asperity. "But if it's for your happiness"—

"Why, of course, grandpa, you'll come with me! I want to take care of you now."

Reuben's steady blue eyes looked quietly at Kathie.

"I've supported this family during three generations," he said. "I've always been hardworking. When I was a boy at sea I supported my father and mother. Then when I settled down I had my own family to raise, and then"—

"And then after father died you took care of mother and me. Yes, indeed, grandpa, you've taken care of every one. You have certainly earned the right to be taken care of yourself now."

"I have certainly earned the right to go on taking care of myself!" quavered the old man in retort.

Kathie said no more. She never had argued with her grandfather. Of course she could not leave him. "I'll have to give up the school!" she thought disconsolately.

The college opened the day after Mary Marsh's wedding, and Reuben was up at daybreak polishing his little shop into shining brightness. The college was largely attended this term, and he had laid in a proportionately large supply of goods.

The old man's memory was failing slightly. As Kathie went through the shop on her way out to college she saw him peeping into various boxes carefully, noting their contents before customers should come in.

Her intention was to tell Jennie Fry that she must give up all idea of the Nestor school, but it was a hard thing to do, and when as she was opening the subject Jennie gave her a squeeze and began talking of how Kathie must join the musical club at Nestor her heart quite failed. "We'll play duets together," said Jennie.

"Yes," Kathie agreed slowly, "but—do you really think grandpa would be happy there?"

"Why, certainly," asserted Jennie. "There's the dearest little house back of ours that I'm sure you can get. It has a garden that your grandfather will just love."

"Kathie!" Miss Rome, one of the teachers, called "Here, my dear," she said pleasantly when Kathie reached her desk, "is a list of the stationery we shall need through the term. Please see to getting it."

Kathie took the list and went out. She started mechanically for her grandfather's shop, but after going a few blocks she suddenly stopped. Then she turned abruptly in the opposite direction and walked very fast to Sam Green's large department store in the far end of town.

"Mr. Green," she said, "Miss Rome wants these things for the college."

Sam looked over the list.

"Why, Miss Kathie," he replied surprisedly, "I can fill the order, of course, but I usually leave things of this sort for your grandfather's trade."

"Well, Mr. Green"—Kathie's heart was beating rapidly with a new determination she had made—"I'm not working up grandpa's trade now," she said. "In fact, as soon as I graduate in December I'm going to take the school in Nestor and make him give up working."

Reuben waited expectantly for the large order of stationery supplies for the college to come in. He was in the habit of receiving this order every fall, and he had come to regard it as a regular source of income. After a week went by he mentioned the matter to Kathie. She evaded his questioning eyes as she answered him:

"They got the supplies from Sam Green this fall."

"Indeed!" Reuben uttered a note of consternation. "Ah, well," he said, cheerfully recovering himself, "I mustn't expect to get all the college trade."

"My dear," he said as Kathie was starting away next morning, "if the opportunity comes you might let the young ladies know that I've an exceptionally fine assortment of laces and veils this season."

The girls did not come to buy his veils. Kathie carefully avoided speaking of them. In fact, she diverted such bits of trade as she knew of to the other stores.

As the days went by Reuben's genial old face took on a graveness new to it. He was not selling his goods, and that meant he was not supporting his household. The little shop did not yield large enough profits to lay anything aside.

"Don't worry, grandpa, if you do go a little into debt," Kathie said one evening. "If it seems best after all for me to take the Nestor school I can easily save something from my salary to pay up here."

Reuben gave a little sigh. Presently he got up and took an old mariner's compass down from a shelf. The instrument was closely associated with his days of vigorous manhood.

Kathie watched him. "Grandpa's failing!" she declared. And she told herself that it was well that just at the right moment she had been able to take matters into her own hands. She would not acknowledge to herself that her determined young will, overmastering her grandfather's, was breaking him.

"Grandpa," she said, looking up from her studies one evening, "there's the dearest little house that Jennie says we can get at Nestor. It has a lovely garden for your flowers next summer."

Reuben made no reply. He did not look at Kathie. He sat with his eyes fixed on his compass. All at once he made a last desperate move to hold the ground which was shifting from under his feet. He got up, put on his hat and coat, tucked his compass under his arm and went out. Kathie called after him, but he did not answer.

In about an hour he returned, however, still carrying his compass. He set it upon the table, still with a pathetic little smile.

"I guess," he said, pointing to the instrument, "that we've gone out of fashion together. Sam Green says it would only sell for old junk. I thought maybe if I could raise some money with it I'd put an advertisement for the shop in the newspaper."

"Now, don't you worry about that shop any more, grandpa!" Kathie cried energetically. "Just sit down here by the fire and drink this hot milk."

Reuben took the cup obediently. He drank the milk, but he did not relish it much.

Kathie was a good scholar. She graduated with honors just before the holidays. The 1st of January she was to go to Nestor to make final arrangements about the school and to engage the little house she and Jennie Fry had spoken of so often. The day before she planned to go to Nestor Jennie came in to talk matters over.

Reuben, hearing the girls talking, had slipped into the sitting room from his shop and listened to the conversation. He had been quite dropped out of family consultations lately.

"GOOD AFTERNOON, MR. MARSH."

After Jennie left Reuben went slowly away again to his shop. Kathie was busily packing a little later when she heard the shop door bell ring. The bell rang whenever the door was opened. Presently it rang again. "Grandpa seems to be having customers," thought Kathie. She was surprised a moment later to hear a third ring. Not long after there came a fourth ring, then a fifth.

"Well!" ejaculated Kathie.

She laid down her work and, opening the sitting room door on a crack, peeped into the shop. She could not see the customers, but her grandfather was talking to them animatedly.

"Who are the people?" thought Kathie.

"Yes, sir," Reuben was saying. "Just one moment, please, until I wait on this gentleman. Yes, indeed; take it to the light and examine it. Now, madam, this is the sample. Here is the very thing; not a shade of difference. You'll take three yards of the wide? Yes, yes, ma'am; I'm pretty busy. You see, I'm all alone just now. My granddaughter has stepped out on an errand, but she'll be in presently and help wait on my customers. Oh, indeed, she helps in the shop considerably. We keep our little business together. Kathie's a good girl, a very capable girl, and she turned to with a will to work in the shop when she finished school. Yes, ma'am, she stood by her old grandfather. She remembered how he'd stood by her ever since she was a baby. She was a weakly child, ma'am. Her mother and I used to walk the floor half the night with her sometimes when she was teething. She used to like to creep about the shop here when she was a little mite. Yes'm, we've always lived in this house. You see, I am too old to go away now. An old man is like a tree with deep roots; he can't be transplanted easily. And so we're going to stick to the little shop still. There, ma'am, is your parcel. Now, what can I do for you, sir?"

Kathie's face was a study of scarlet bewilderment.

"Who is grandpa talking to?" she murmured, and, overcome with curiosity, she stuck her head quite into the shop.

Save for Reuben it was empty. The old man, standing behind his counter, holding up this article and that, tying up packages, opening boxes, chattering away entertainingly, was waiting on a shopful of purely imaginary customers.

Kathie realized the soul of the situation with a hard pang. The scalding tears sprang to her eyes.

"It's a tragedy!" she said.

With a little sob she softly closed the door and ran to her own room. She threw on her things and hurried out of the house by the back way. She had seen John Tracy, the young drummer from whom her grandfather bought goods, on the street that morning.

"John's in town, and he'll help me," she thought.

John was readily found at Sam Green's. After talking with him a few minutes Kathie hurried back home.

There had been a long lull in the ringing of the shop bell, but after awhile it began again—once, twice, three times!

Kathie dropped her work excitedly and ran into the shop.

Her grandfather had fallen into a quiet reverie. When the bell rang he looked across the counter without changing his expression. John Tracy and two other men had come in, but old Reuben fancied them his customers—still the creatures of his recent dream. It was not until John spoke that he roused up.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Marsh," John said brightly. "I've brought some of my friends around to look at your neckties. I expect we'll all want a few of them."

"Hey?" said old Reuben. "Ah, yes, yes!" He turned to the shelves bewildered.

"Here they are, grandpa," said Kathie at his elbow. "And, see, there come Sallie Vane and Nettie Thurston. They want some veils, I know. Oh, see what a lot of people are coming!"

All that afternoon until dark the shop bell kept ringing. Kathie stood at her grandfather's side measuring goods and showing articles. Some of the people that came in bought goods; some merely asked to see them.

"Go to Marsh's, anyhow," John told every one he met, "even if you just look at something. It will encourage the old fellow."

When the shutter was set up at 6 o'clock Kathie threw her strong, penitent arms about Reuben's neck.

"Grandpa," she cried, "trade's picking up. We can never leave this, of course. Why, we'd always feel that we'd risked a fortune if we left here now for Nestor. I'll write Mr. Fry tonight that we can't possibly give up our business for the school. There are forty teachers he can get instead of me."

Reuben's face was like a ruddy old apple when he blew out the shop lamp and walked into the sitting room for supper.

"No need of you leaving home to teach just yet, Kathie, child," he chuckled cheerfully. "I'll just pilot this craft for us both awhile longer."

"And I'll just keep my hand on the rudder and do what I can to make it go straight," thought Kathie, planning how she and John should dress up the shop window the next day.

The Triumph Of the Torpedo

By SIR WILLIAM LAIRD CLOWES, British Naval Authority

THE original Whitehead torpedo was a weapon that traveled on the surface of the [illegible]r only, while the modern automobile torpedo is esse[illegible]ly a submarine engine. Many years, nevertheless, have now elapsed since THE MARVELOUS WEAPON, by steady evolution, became extraordinarily perfect and formidable, although it is but right to add that its improvement has been continuous from first to last and is not yet at a standstill.

Strange to say, however, the significance of the automobile torpedo as a factor in naval warfare is only now beginning to receive adequate recognition. The weapon has always had its enthusiastic champions, of course, although until quite recently they have been the few, while its detractors have been in the majority. According to some, THE TORPEDO WAS LITTLE BETTER TH[illegible]N A BOGY; according to others, it was suitable for use only against vessels at anchor, or vessels with incompetent, if not criminally careless, crews on board; according to yet others, it could never be employed with advantage against ships of the civilized and well disciplined races, especially if such ships chanced to be under way.

It was admitted that the automobile torpedo HAD WON SUCCESSES during the civil war in Chile, during the revolutionary fighting in Brazil and during the conflict between Japan and China; "but," said the wiseacres, "wait until one of the leading naval powers is concerned, and then you will see that, although the torpedo may be all very well against South Americans or yellow men, it won't work against civilized Europeans. WE KNOW NOW WHAT THE JAPANESE, ACTING NOT AGAINST CARELESS AND IGNORANT CELESTIALS, BUT AGAINST THE FINEST OFFICERS AND BEST SHIPS OF A LEADING EUROPEAN NAVY, HAVE BEEN ABLE TO DO WITH THIS ENGINE OF DESTRUCTION.

And this terrible engine, in its most highly developed form, costs only about $2,000. A big battleship costs anything from $5,000,000 to $7,500,000; yet, as events have shown, it may easily fall a victim to its small and absurdly cheap foe. Of course, I do not mean that the mere outlay of, say, $2,000 is likely to be the sole expenditure involved in the crippling of a 13,000 ton Cesarevitch. The torpedo, if used at sea, must be discharged from a vessel of some sort BY MEN WHO MUST INEVITABLY RUN SOME RISK. But the craft which are usually employed on torpedo work are small, costing, it may be, no more than from $75,000 to $300,000 apiece, and having but small crews

Is there, then, it will be asked, no way of safety for the big ship? Undoubtedly there is. The nose of the modern torpedo is furnished with a "cutter" which will shear a way through any ordinary steel net that may be hung around a ship for its protection, but there are nets, and our navy possesses them, which are cutter proof, and, moreover, these nets, although at much inconvenience, can be kept hanging round the threatened vessel, even while it is moving at low speed through the water.

SUCH DEVICES, COMBINED WITH THE KEEPING OF A GOOD LOOKOUT BY MEANS OF FAST SCOUTS, THE CULTIVATION OF COOLNESS AND ACCURACY AT GUN PRACTICE BY NIGHT AS WELL AS BY DAY, A PROPER KNOWLEDGE OF THE USES AND LIMITATIONS OF THE SEARCHLIGHTS WITH WHICH EVERY MODERN VESSEL IS PROVIDED, AND THE MAINTENANCE OF PERFECT DISCIPLINE IN ALL CIRCUMSTANCES, SHOULD DEPRIVE THE TORPEDO AND THE TORPEDO BOAT OF SOME OF THEIR TERRORS. NEVERTHELESS THE MENACE MUST ALWAYS BE A SERIOUS ONE INDEED.

Consumption Is Quite Curable

By Dr. G. SIMS WOODHEAD, Professor of Pathology, Cambridge University, England

IN recent years the pessimistic views of the physician, based on the pessimistic foundation laid by the earlier pathologists, though gradually giving way before the evidence afforded by more recent research, are hard to scotch and still more difficult to kill.

YET CONSUMPTION, I VENTURE TO SAY, SHOULD BE LOOKED UPON NOW AS AMONG THE MOST CURABLE OF DISEASES—WHEN TAKEN EARLY ENOUGH, TREATED UNDER PROPER CONDITIONS AND FOR A SUFFICIENTLY LONG PERIOD.

I took the opportunity, after I had been appointed pathologist to the Edinburgh Royal infirmary, to make a careful search for evidence of what I might speak of as HEALED TUBERCULAR LESIONS, and I found that in old people such evidence was to be found in at least one out of every three who came to the postmortem table.

Nay, more, I soon became firmly convinced that even in those cases that succumbed to tubercular disease there was usually more or less marked evidence of A STURDY WAR WAGED BY THE TISSUES AGAINST THE INVADING TUBERCULAR PROCESS, and that in most cases the tissues failed in their endeavor to check the advancing process simply because they were placed under disadvantageous conditions.

Our Duty Toward Immigrants

By Bishop SAMUEL FALLOWS of the Reformed Episcopal Church

WE as Christians are called upon to take care of the world coming to our shores. We take them, wealthy or poor, and for better or worse. IT IS FOR US TO MAKE THEM BETTER AND WEALTHIER. No matter how unwashed, unkempt or malodorous, we must get to the viewpoint of their lives and help them. It is our duty. It is probably partially for that that we have this magnificent country. And to do this we must employ Christian sympathy. CONCILIATION IS NECESSARY. MEN MUST NOT BE HELD AT ARM'S LENGTH.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroal now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later thsn December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (tor French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

GRANULATED

Fertilizer Lime!

FOR FA RERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

C. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—21t

Now is the Time! Don't Wait!

Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work

A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, } FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY,

First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.

FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

The Keyser Preparatory Branch

OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.

A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.

Special instruction for public School Teachers.

Instruction in Music.

A Splendid New Building Provided by the State.

A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.

Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.

No Tuition in Commercial Department.

Small Tuition charged Students from other States.

Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.

Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.

For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal,

L. L. FRIEND,
Keyser, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1904. NUMBER 32

NEW TELEPHONE COMBINATION

An Agreement For The Extension of Long Distance Service

BY INDEPENDENT COMPANIES.

Does Not Touch Cumberland But Goes Through George's Creek Region and on West Through Garrett County.

The Baltimore Herald in its issue of Saturday, gives the following story of a telephone combination:

Important developments are pending in the independent telephone field. One is the opening of a new line to Mt. Savage, Md., near Cumberland, by the Maryland Telephone and Telegraph company, and another the formation of independent telephone companies.

As soon as the Maryland's new line is opened it will bring its subsribers in communication with the coal district around Cumberland, and, through traffic agreements with independent companies in Pennsylvania, with Pittsburg, Johnstown and a number of smaller places in that region. The company has been at work on the new line for about three months, and in another month expects to have it completed. The line will be built to a point on the state line about four miles beyond Mount Savage and twelve miles from Cumberland, where it will connect with the line of the Somerset Telephone Company, which, with the Johnstown Telephone Company, will give a thorough circuit to Pittsburg.

"When the connections are completed," said an official of the Maryland this morning, "we will have 42,000 additional 'phones connected by lines offering the best possible facilities, and over 100,000 new 'phones.

At Pittsburg the Maryland will connect with the Pittsburg and Allegany Telephone Company, the independent company in Pittsburg, and an enterprise in which Mr. George R. Webb, the leading spirit of the Maryland Telephone Company, is interested. Over the Pittsburg and Allegany's wires the Maryland will reach as far west as Cleveland and its territory.

Though the Maryland's new line will pass within a quarter of a mile of Cumberland, it is not contemplated at present to connect with the local company there.

Near Cumberland the Maryland will connect with the Piedmont and Keyser Company, which has about 1200 'phones in the coal district. All told, it will be possible to talk from Baltimore to Piedmont, Mt. Savage, Lonaconing, Oakland, Deer Park, Frostburg, Somerset and Johnstown Pa., and also to Wheeling and Grafton over the lines of the Garrett Telephone Company.

The independent companies are planning to organize state associations and to join these together in an organization that might be compared with the Trunk Line Association. The larger body will adjust rates between the various companies thus avoiding vexations controversies and delays, at the same time will act as a kind of clearing house. The western companies will send in their calls east to the association and the eastern companies their calls west. These will be set against one another and settlement made only for the balance.

This organization of these independent corporations is one of the steps toward the national amalgamation of the independent telephones companiss. At one time it was said that Standard Oil copital would take over a very large number of them and compete with the Bell, but, if this plan was ever considered by the Standard Oil people, the project was abandoned or temporarily laid aside and the plan now going into effect substitnted.

Within a month or so representatives of the independent companies in Maryland will meet at Hagerstown to organize an association in Maryland. The Maryland and Frederick Telephone Company of Frederick, the Del-Mer of Wilmington, the United of Pennsylvania—which operates lines connecting with Winchester, Harper's Ferry, Martinsburg and points in the valley of Virginia—the Garrett Telephone Company, the Piedmont and Keyser and the Somerset Telephone Company of Pennsylvania will be among the members of the association.

A meeting of the Pennsylvania Association was held yesterday in Harrisburg, and Mr. W. T. Burrough, traffic manager of the Marvland, represented the local company. Among the companies that sent delegates was the Keystone of Philadelphia, one of the strongest independent concerns in Pennsylvania.

Register on Tuesday next if you want to vote this fall. That will be your last chance this year.

Subscribe for The Republican.

OFFUTT'S.

Don't Slight —THE— Underwear.

Don't say that the old garmeuts will have to do. No doubt they have thinned down enough for you to see thruugh them anywhere. Have the kind that will admit of your braving the bitter weather of winter without fear of discomfort. We sell the very garments you should have for Men, Women and Children, in Wool and Cotton, fleece-lined. When you examine them you'll say so, too, but when you get into them you are sure of it. ALL SIZES.

D. E. OFFUTT & SONS.

REPUBLICANS OF WESTERN MARYLAND

With Old Time Majorities Can Swing the State to Roosevelt.

VISIT OF CHAIRMAN HANNA.

Much Pleased With His Trip and Very Much Encouraged With the Out-Look in Western Maryland and Throughout the State.

"If Western Maryland returns the old time and ever-welcome Republican majorities in November, Maryland will once more be designated as a commonwealth whose voters are for the party of prosperity and progress. In other words, if Allegany, Washington, Garrett and Frederick counties are once again recorded in the Republican column with an overwhelming vote for Roosevelt and Fairbanks, the electors of the state will cast their votes for Roosevelt and Fairbanks."

Such was the statement of Hon. John B. Hanna, chairman of the Republican state central committee for Maryland, to a representative of the press Monday evening in Cumberland. He appeared in the best of spirits and was altogether satisfied with his trip through Western Maryland. Mr. Hanna has just returned from New York, where he conferred with the national leaders of the party and inquired into the general conditions throughout the country. In speaking of his trip to New York and his observation there, Mr. Hanna said:

"At the Republican national committee headquarters everything is in the best of shape. The leaders are confident of a Republican victory, but have not quit working for the reason that it is necessary to forever fight the party of opposition to American progress. New York, West Virginia and Indiana, the "Democratic doubtful states," are safely in the Republican column. But we Marylanders feel that we, too, must get into the band wagon and for that reason I appeal to you to turn out in large numpers in November and once more rescue our state from the party which has opposed every movement which tends to the advancement of our country. Once more I say, it is up to Western Maryland and again I repeat that increased Republican majorities from this section of the state will place Maryland in the Republican column. We will expect much from you in November.

THE MASON AND DIXON LINE

English Astronomers Stopped at Sideling Hill, Frightened By Indians.

A gentleman who has been making some researches in the archieves of Washington county, says:

"When in the course of their now famous boundary survey, Mason and Dixon, the English astronomers, carried their work westward over the outlying ranges of the Blue Ridge, and into the Conococheague Indian country, they were met by the chiefs and head men of the tribes about and warned against making a path further through the country. They complained that already a great path come from the northward, with many people, wagons and horses, big path came from the East by the rivers, and if a path were made over the mountains to the westward the game would go with it, and the Indians would suffer for food and clothing, besides having nothing for trade. After a day's rest and numerous peaceful parleys the survey line was quietly carried across the Conococheague valley and over a series of smaller ranges lying a little to the North and Northeast of Fairview and Bear Pond Mountains, and known as the "Sideling Hills" where the Indians again became threatening because of the strange instruments used, which the Indians regarded as 'bad medicine to make white man's path go crooked.

"The English astronomers, being unused to dealing with our natives, after some consultation with the settlers about the Conocheague, and being advised of the great difficulties before them, concluded to give up the undertaking at this point, going back by wagon, never to return. The Mason and Dixon line was completed, including a remeasurment from the Delaware by the American astronomers, Andrew Ellicott and David Rittenhouse, on behalf of Virginia and Pennsylvania, respectively, who completed and reported to their respective states November, 1784.

Subscribe for The Republican.

CLOSING SESSIONS OF INSTITUTE.

Full of Interest to the Last—Resolutions of Condolence.

(Continued from last week.)

THURSDAY'S SESSION

Institute opened with a song service, and prayer by Rev. Davis.

After a short talk by Supt. Browning, Byron W. King was introduced for the third iustitute session. Nothing else is needed to show the favor in which he is held. He lectured upon the importance of school work; characterizing it as the most important of all work. The great importance of the work of making children hungry for knowledge, placing something higher within their reach, and make them determined to reach it. He also gave a short drill in physical culture.

Prof. Gibson had another period for music, which he did not fail to make lively and interesting.

At the opening of the afternoon session Prof. Gibson gave another period to music, which was as interesting as ever.

After recess Prof. McBee presented the claims of the high school as well as its benefits. He made a strong plea for the high school.

Dr. King presented the "Merchant of Venice," with new ideas upon Shylock. His talks on Shakespeare, as well as the lectures of Dr. Brumbaugh upon the same subject, certainly were very profitable to the teachers, giving new and broader ideas, clothing literature with a beauty and interest not before realized by many.

FRIDAY'S SESSION

On the last day of the institute, the pecular circumstances of partings casts their influence upon everything.

The institute has been an unparalleled success. The instructors invested it with an earnestness, broadness, and an intensity not before experienced here.

Prof. Gibson rendered his farewell selection which was highly appreciated. His rendering of his farewell song "Flee as a Bird" was excellent.

After an explanation of reports by the Superintendent, and the reading and adoption of the resolutions, a vote of thinks was extended to Dr. Bartlett the institute adjourned.

RESOLUTIONS

Fellow teachers, we are about to close the work of the most successful institute ever held in Garrett county. The order and attention have been all that could have been desired, and the benefits beyond estimate, therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this institute that the lovers of the public schools should frown upon those hostile expressions conceived in malice, bred in envy and born of avarice, that are calculated to discredit, belittle, and injure the fountain of national and moral inspiration.

Resolved, That the thanks of this institnte be extended to instructors, namely: Dr. M. B. Stephens, Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh, Prof. T. S. Gibson, Dr. DeWitt Miller, Dr. Byron King, Prof. John T. White and Prof. Murdaugh, for the able manner in which we have been entertained and instructed and for the inspiration we have received from these superb educators.

Resolved, That the thanks of the institute be extended to the citizens of Oakland for the encouragement, kindness and hospitality so generously extended to the teachers, instructors and friends of the institute.

Resolved, That the thanks of the teachers be extended, first, to our Superintendent, E. A. Browning, for his untiring efforts, crowded with such signal success in behalf of the institute; to the members of the School Board for the liberal encouragement and assistance extended by them to the success of the institute.

Resolved, That the thanks of the institute be extended to Miss Prevost for her contribution to our entertainment.

WHEREAS, The teachers of Garrett county are a band of co-workers bound together by the ties of common interest in the great cause of education; and

WHEREAS, It has pleased an all-wise and merciful Providence to remove from among us during the past year our esteemed and beloved fellow teachers: Emma DeBerry, Roy DeWitt, Lewis A. Leatham and Lee Slabach; and

WHEREAS, They have rendered faithful and efficient service to the whole profession of teaching; therefore be it

Resolved, First, That the schools of Garrett county sustain a great loss occasioned by their sad and lamented death; second—

That the Teacher's Institute assembled extend to the bereft ones our heartfelt sympathies in this their sad bereavement; third—

That these resolutions be printed in the papers of Garrett county.

Respectfully submitted,

IRA CULP,
H. W. BROWNING, } Committee.
J. C. BEAHM,

Register on Tuesday next if you want to vote this fall. That will be your last chance this year.

INSTITUTE THOUGHTS.

Education a Power for Good—The Institute an Incentive to Teachers.

Last week was a great week; not in military display, but great in the manifestation of a power more wonderful than sword or cannon.

I have attended educational meetings in New York, Virginia and Ohio, but the institute at Oakland was one of the best in its adaptation I ever attended.

Who made it possible for us to emerge from the barren waste of sloth and inactivity into the beautiful oasis of classic life and real joy? Someone worked up the interest and arranged the program; somebody searched long and well for men of ability to instruct us, and we do not hesitate to say that he found and secured some of the best talent in the greatest nation on earth.

But the institute is past and we teachers have resumed our respective duties, and as we re-enter the school room I believe we come with renewed courage to grapple with school room problems, with better plans to execute the daily program, and, above all else, I trust we come with that life and system by which we may hope to inspire the boys and girls in our care to nobler efforts in the classes and thus lift them into higher ideals of education.

Fellow-teachers, we have been, as it were, on Nebo's Heights for one week's dringing from the fountain of liberty and education, now let us with a tactful hand deal it out skillfully to the little ones. The children in our schools must get the benefit of the institute or else we ourselves are a failure.

For five days we have stood face to face to the great orb of educational light. Let us now reflect it with a growing warmth upon the young minds entrusted to us.

I believe it was Dr. Bartlett who said: "The institute will be a success when the teachers return to their schools and there reduce to practice what they have learned."

J. C. BEAHM.

Accident, Md., Oct. 5, 1904.

POSTMASTER GENERAL DEAD.

Termination of a Life of Tireless But Honest Energy.

Postmaster General Henry C. Payne died Monday evening at his apartments in the Arlington Hotel, Washington, D. C. His death occurred at 6:10 o'clock. At the bedside were his wife, the immediate relatives, his pastor and the physicians. The cause of death was given as disease of the mitral valve and dilation of the heart. The President has been officially notified and will issue a proclamation formally announcing the postmaster general's death to the cabinet members. President Roosevelt called at the apartments shortly before the end and was much affected. He left saying: "Payne was one of the sweetest, most lovable and thoughtful men I have ever known."

The funeral services will be held at St. John's Church here. The funeral party will leave here Friday afternoon for Milwaukee aboard a special car. The hours for the funeral and departure will be according to the time of the President's proclamation.

First Assistant Postmaster General Wynne is now acting and will issue an order closing all postoffices in the United States domain a portion of the day of the funeral here. It is probable that Wynne will fill the gap until the appointment of his successor. Chairman Cortelyou is the likely candidate.

CHAIRMAN HANNA IN OAKLAND

Reception to State Leader By the Garrett County Republicans.

Hon. John B. Hanna, chairman of the Republican state central committee for Maryland, was in Oakland Monday, conferring with a number of local Republicans. Fully one hundred members of the party called upon Mr. Hanna at the hotel and expressed their willingness to assist in every way possible to further the campaign. Mr. Hanna plainly told the local leaders that is was up to Western Maryland to carry the state and a large majority from this section would result in the electoral vote of the state being cast for Roosevelt and Fairbanks. He also impressed strongly upon the minds of the local followers of the G. O. P. the necessity of the return of Col. George A. Pearre to Congress.

As a result of Mr. Hanna's visit here, preparations are being made which will result in the early organization of Republican clubs. His visit aroused all of the old time enthusiasm which will terminate in an old time Republican majority in Garrett county.

MEETING OF REPUBLICAN CLUB.

Large Attendance and Much Enthusiasm—Active Work Taken Up.

At a meeting of the Roosevelt, Fairbanks and Pearre Republican Club, of Oakland, on Muesday evening, one hundred and seventeen new members were enrolled. There was much enthusiasm.

The Club will take up active work in the campaign and will hold regular meetings at Republican headqearters in the Opera House.

A meeting of the Club will be held Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. An invitation is extended to all Republicans to attend and become members of this Club.

BITTINGER.

The wide awake young republicans of this district organized a republican club at this place last week.

The teachers who were attending the several sessions of the annual Teachers' Institute held at Oakland last week, returned to their posts this Monday morning.

Mrs. Hester Fazenbaker has been employed as teacher by the trustees of the Black Hawk school.

Misses Eliza and Ida Ralston were home over Sunday.

Attorney G. S. Hamill was in town over last Friday night.

The good people of Bittinger held their Annual "Harvest Home" celebration on last Saturday and Sunday.

A number of our young men left here last Monday for some point in the lumber regions of West Virginia, where they had secured empioyment.

Miss Laura Facenbaker is confined to her home, suffering a siege of Typhoid feyer.

Mrs. Ramhoof and family, of Frostburg, were visiting frends and relatives in this place last week.

Mr. G. W. Engle came up from Baltimore last Saturday for a few days with his family.

Notice.

I will operate my cider mill at Kearney every Friday until October 16th. After that date I will operate cider and apple butter mill daily except Saturday as long as apples may be brought.

Thanking the public for past patronage and soliciting a continuapce of the same, I remain,

Yours most respectfully,
W. H. MUMAW.

WE HAVE THE LATEST

In Styles and Best in Quality to Show you in SHOES

...A FULL LINE OF...

DOROTHY DODDS

Just received; light and heavy weight soles, Blucher and Bal Cut, Patent and Dongola.

WALK-OVERS

Talk for themselves. A look, a try-on, a sale. We only ask the pleasure of showing the line and we know the goods will do the rest.

H. L. DAUGHERTY, ... Oakland, Md.

ALWAYS BE READY TO FIGHT SMALLPOX

Vaccination Regarded as Imperative—Disease Flourishes in Winter.

Now that the winter is about at hand, when smallpox always gets the firmest hold, some facts regarding the efficiency of vaccination, and collected for The Daily News by an expert should prove of general interest: While there is at present not a single case of smallpox within the city limits, it is by no means impossible that the disease may not recur at an early day; hence the importance in urging upon the school authorities the necessity of having all pupils vaccinated.

It has been repeatedly shown by statistics of first class authorities that vaccination in infancy has saved an enormous number of children, who under former conditions would have died. Before vaccination, the deaths from smallpox were mainly among children; since vaccination, the mortality is greater among adults. After the age of 15 the protective influence of the primary vacination has to a large extent disappeared; and unprotected adults form a larger proportion of the population than in pre-vacination periods, when an attack of smallpox in children was far more common, and, as a rule, if survived, gave immunity for life.

It was at first thought that one successful vaccination protected the indiyidual for the rest of his life, but this is now known to be the case, especially if done very early in life. The protective influence gradually wears away in the time so that it becomes necessary to revaccinate after the lapse of about ten years. If vaccination is done during the infancy and and revaccination ten years later, then almost absolute protection against smallpox is obtained for the rest of life.

The attempt to explain the reduction of the prevalence of small-pox by improved sanitation fails when applied to the fact that while formerly most deaths from smallpox were among children, and since vaccination has been practiced the mortality is greater among adults, the fact that the occurrence of small-pox is rare among certain classes of workers who are required to be vaccinated, such as postoffice employees, civil service officials, nurses, policemen, etc. that the disease pass by the vaccinated children, but attack the unvaccinated living in the same house.

The whole subject of vaccination has been inquired into with the greatest care and impartiality by two great commissions: The German vaccination commission of 1884 and the royal commission of England 1888. Their principal conclusions are entirely in accord and can be stated concisely as follows:

1—Vaccination protects against smallpox. But revaccination is necessary ten years later.

2—When a vaccinated person does contract smallpox the disease is always milder, and the likelihood of death is very small.

3—The vaccinated condition of the surrounding country increases the protection against smallpox which the individual has acquired by vaccination, and hence vaccination, is beneficial, not only the individually.

4—By care in vaccination the danger is reduced to such a minimum as to make the benefit of vaccination infinitely outweigh any possible injurious effects.

The purity of all vaccine virus now on our market is guaranteed by an act of Congress (1902 providing the government inspection and regulation of all vaccine farms. The virus now to be had is marked purity, and differs greatly from the old-fashioned ivory point which was so frequently contaminated before being used.

The modern point is made of glass, is enclosed in an aseptic glass scabbard, and sealed with parafine which effectually protects it from contamination. When needed, it is drawn from its scabbard and serves not only to carry the virus, but also a scarifying instrument (instead of a lance or candle.) Each point is used but once. Recently, by the use of glycerine, a process has been discovered for rendering the virus itself very pure. So that the whole outfit is now quite satisfactory.

While it cannot be denied that in times past, the old vaccination resulted at times in serious consequences, the modern pure virus inoculated into a clean arm and properly cared for afterward, never has and never will cause serious results.

NOTICE.

Change in Business.

The firm of Jno. W. Haney & Sons having sold its milling business, plant and feed store at Friendsville, Md., to The Friendsville Milling Company, hereby gives notice that all persons knowing themselves indebted to the above named firm must call and make settlements of their accounts on or before Oct. 1st, 1904. All accounts remaining unsettled at that date will be placed in the hands of an officer for collection.

JOHN W. HANEY & SONS,
22-4t Friendsville, Md.

Sub scribe for The Republican.

PLEASANT FIELDS OF HOLY WRIT

SAVE for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ,
I might despair. —Tennyson.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Fourth Quarter. Lesson I. 2 Kings ii, 12-22. October 1, 1904.

Copyright, Davis W. Clark.

The Widow's Oil Increased.

The Old Testament abounds in rural scenes, quaint and fascinating. Here is one. See, if you will, a young man plowing. The place is called the "meadow of the dance," because, perhaps, near by the harvest-home is celebrated with rustic festivity on the village green. This soil is ready for the plowshare, having been drenched by copious showers after a long drought. Across these broad acres eleven yoke of oxen are dragging as many plows. Our hero guides the twelfth yoke, and his hands upon the twelfth plow, he is a son of the owner and overseer of the hands. Sweat of honest toil is on his brow, and earth stains are on his person and clothing. He is the impersonation of manly independence and industry. He is not ashamed to be a plowman, though his father is a man of wealth. Yonder is the ancestral manor and the capacious barns. The measure of a man's competence in those days was live stock, and the father of this young man could set twelve yoke of oxen in a field at once. But this scion of wealth is no leech upon his father's bounty. That is the svle of man God delights to honor. How many before and since the days of Cincinnatus Providence has called from the plow-handle to positions of honor and trust. And God is going to call this young man, though he is all unconscious of it, and put upon him the holiest and most responsible distinction possible to a mortal. And it is no matter of caprice. The young man is worthy and qualified. He is not laying pipes or rolling logs to secure promotion. He is simply acting well his part in the station Providence has given him. He is loyal to God, to his father's interests and to his own sense of duty. That is the spirit which prepares for promotion. Such a mind makes life a success, whether promotion comes or not.

Across this field, running diagonally, probably, was a footpath, sacred to public convenience, never turned up by the plow. It is a way side on which the seed of the parable fell. On such a path Jesus and His disciples walked one Sabbath, when the Pharisees rebuked Him for plucking the ears of corn. The young man has just crossed the path and is planting the plow in the soil beyond, and, absorbed in running a new furrow straight, is unconscious of the approach of a stranger. That stranger is of commanding mein. He is accustomed to stand undaunted in the presence of royalty. Armies of aliens could never affright him. Tall, stalwart, venerable. He gazed a moment on the young plowman, then smiling, as if of recognition, he loosens the sheepskin mantle from his shoulders and places it squarely and firmly upon those of the plowman. By that token the young man, who might have died an obscure rustic, is lifted to the goodly company of the ever-living men of Providence. All who saw the sign knew its significance. As oil on the head means installation in the kingly office, so the sheepskin mantle on the shoulder meant induction in the nobles and more responsible office of prophecy. The young man yields instant obedience to the call of Providence. But in the excitement of the moment, when there must be a perfect tumult of emotions in his heart, he forgets not his parents. He asks a furlough long enough to bid them farewell. He cries, "Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother!" When a boy can forget his mother, nothing noble can be expected of him. Again he loses not the fraternal spirit toward his fellow-plowmen. He does not feel himself exalted above them by what has happened to him. On the spot he slays his own oxen and roasts them upon the plow he will never follow again, and with this extemporized barbecue he gives the whole company a farewell banquet.

What made this young man a good plowman makes him also a good prophet. Long after the woman of Shuman spoke to him "as the holy man of God, which passeth by us continually," For sixty-five years he continued to discharge the duties of his high office.

The plowman of this picture is Elisha. He who casts his mantle upon him is Elijah. Each of these holy prophets is true to his mission, but how unlike in character and deed! The contrast between them is the contrast between Mount Sinai and the Mount of Beatitudes. Elijah is God's flail beating the idolatry of Israel into small dust. He is the prophet of drought, of fire, of curse, and of death. Ahab and Jezebel, the captain of fifties, and the priests of Baal go down before him. A prophet such as had not appeared in Israel since Samuel. More august, more terrible even than, indeed, the most unique and imposing character of Jewish history. His first appearence is marked and extraordinary. He suddenly and unannounced stood before Ahab and abruptly delivered his awful message. He is an apparition, calculated to strike with terror the boldest of kings in that superstitious age. He makes no set speech, he offers no apology, he disdains all forms and ceremonies. He does not even render the costomary homage. He utters only a few words preceded by an oath, "As Jehovah the God of Israel liveth, there shall not be dew nor rain these years but by my word."

To all this Elisha's career presents a marked contrast. Elijah was the man of the mountain, desert and cave—the anchorite, the religious ascetic; Elisha became a man of the city, had his own home in Samaria. He was gentle and affectionate. The exceptions are those which prove the rule of his general beneficence His first act is to sweeten the water of the city fountain in Jericho, and is of his whole career. He miraculously supplies water for the troops of Israel, Judah and Edom. He raises to life the Shunammite's son. He neutralizes the poison that is in the pot, from which the sons of the prophet ate. He heals Naaman of leprosy. He caused the axhead of the unlucky workman to swim. Encourages his young seryant at Dothan, who, at sight of the enemy, closely investing the city, cries, "Alas! my master, how shall we do?" Opens his eyes to see the mountain full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha. The one destructive miracle, the havoc among the mocking youths of Bethel is exceptional, like Jesus' cursing the barren fig-tree.

The Teacher's Lantern.

The comparatively small significance and range of the incident suggested for this date affords opportunity for a broad view of the character, career, and influence of the Prophet Elisha, which has just been taken. Attention is now turned to the particular circumstance.

The imaginative mind of the Jew is in evidence in the suggestion made by Josephus and others, that this was the widow of Obadiah, and that the debt was occasioned by his feeding the hundred prophets during the drought. He borrowed the money because he would not support them out of Ahab's treasury. The highest pitch of fancy is reached when it is soberly suggested that the creditor is Ahab's own son, Jehoram. All that can be said is, "No evidence."

The grim crudity of the social ethics of the Hebrews at this time is shown in that it legalized the sale of children for their father's debts. Yet the last century at this point was hardly up to the Jewish standard. Debtor's prison is a paradox. It is to put a man where labor is impossible, although labor is necessary to discharge it. Servitude for debt is certainly more reasonable than imprisonment for debt. Charles Dickens's satire tumbled the debtors' prison in a heap.

The incident gives an interesting glimpse of the social life of Israel three thousand years ago. That there was a widow of the sons of the prophet shows that these communities were cenobitic, but not celibate. They did not all lead the cloister life.

That widow showed gumption. She did not waste time inveighing against the cruelty of the creditor. The law was on his side. Her appeal was to the chief of the prophetic society. She stated her case and claim clearly, and followed the program to the dot. There was a dash of passion in it, for she uttered (literally) a heart-disturbing plea.

She was thrown upon her own resources. All she had was just enough inferior oil for anointing her person a single time. But she must use what she has, not what she has not.

The door was to be shut, for it was to be a sacrament undisturbed by curious eye or tongue. Prayer, faith, and praise were to be the only guests.

Well says old St. Bernard, "He puts the oil of his mercy into the vase of our trust." It is only a question of receptivity. When the last borrowed pot was filled the oil "stayed."

She will not move a hand in disposition of this treasure until she has the prophet's orders. "Satisfy your creditor first" is the direction. Nothing is our own until all debts are paid.

One pot of oil over against a debt, and that debt large enough to enslave her sons. But no human resource is to be despised. It is the unit which is to be multiplied. She must also personally use what she has. Even the prophet can not pour out the oil for her.

"Go borrow thee vessels." Find receptacles. As Dean Trench says, "Dig channels for the streams of love."

CHESUNUT SEASON NEAR AT HAND

Already Some Have Been Brought to Town and Shipped to Foreign Markets.

One of the most pleasant out-door occupations at this season of the year is the gathering of chestnuts, and little parties are already in the woods, although it is as yet too soon. It would be wiser to wait for a week or two, when the nuts will be quite ripe. Gathered now, they show the signs of immaturity—the shells, instead of being brown, have a whitish appearance, and the meat, which should be sweet and delicate in flavor, has a mealy and starchy taste. Within a fortnight, however, if the impatient children will wait, aided by frost, the green burr and its brown contents will be in perfect condition.

The mountain is a favorite chestnuting ground. So rich is the field that there is little to do but reap, and at the end of the afternoon's quest the seekers often come back laden. This, however, may not be the case the present season, as, by all accounts, the crop is not likely to be so large as usual. In the early spring the omens were good, as the blossoms were plentiful, but there must be a warm summer for the chestnuts, and the summer just departed was cool, and toward the close came the long drought, which also is unfavorable for the nuts. The recent heavy storm likewise damaged the branches and blew thousands of buurrs from the trees before the nuts were ripe. It may be, nevertheless, that the crop will prove larger than the dealers have looked for. The early scarcity has made prices high, but they are certain to decline, however, as the season advances.

The arrival of the chestnut season is made known to dwellers in the city who never leave its precincts by the appearance of the small merchants who, with his little stand and charcoal pot, takes his place on the corners, the aroma of the roasting nuts rising upon the sharp autumn air. These vendors are mostly Italians, and one wonders how they obtain a livelihood at such modest occupation as dealing out chestnuts at five cents a measure. Yet the children, especially in the neighborhood of the schools are many, and and there are not a few older customers, for the liking for chestnuts does not appear wholly with youth. With some it never disappears. Nor is the liking for chestnuts confined to the roasted—boiled, to many palates are more luscious, and in many houses, especially in the country, the boiling of chestnuts is great fun.

Chestnuts make an enjoyable part of the school lunch in the fall. Pleasant it is, too, to eat chestnuts in the country houses in the autumn evenings and if cool enough for a bit of fire something is added to the flavor of the refreshment. There are also mysterious rites with chestnuts relating to love and wedlock, which have come down from times past, and are described in books devoted to this sort of lore.

The little brother of the chestnuts is the chinquapin—much smaller and of a different taste, yet not without sweetness. These tiny black nuts are seen just now in the markets and are worth $2 a bushel. They do not, however, enjoy anything like the popularity of the chestnut.

LETTER TO F. A. THAYER
Oakland Md.

Dear Sir: Your business is, when a house burns down, to give the owner some money to build a new one. It is a good business. Queer that the world got on so long without it.

We paint the one that burnt down and the new one too. What is better, we paint the houses that don't burn down.

You insure the houses that burn; we insure the houses that don't. You have the ashes and smoke; all the houses are ours.

We paint lead-and zinc; Devoe. We sell the paint to painters; we don't paint.

Lead-and-oil is the old fashion paint. Devoe is zinc ground in with lead and linseed oil: the best paint in the world: and the cheapest, because it takes fewer gallons than mixed paints and it wears twice as long as lead-and-oil. Nobody wants poor paint; there's lots of it, though, in the world.

A. M. Griffin, Plainfield, N J, writes: "Mr. Aaron Higgins, of Plainfield, always used 15 gallons of mixed paint for his house. Last Spring he bought 15 gallons of Devoe and had 4 gallons left."

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & Co

P. S. J. M. Davis & Son sell our paint

Notice to Trespassers.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon my farm lying two miles south of Oakland between the West Union Road and the Sollars Road, for any purpose whatever. All persons so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

30—3t. DICE SPIKER.

Comparatively new cook stove cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. 2t*

BAUMGARTNER'S BIG BARGAINS!

5c SUGAR BOWLS, CREAM PITCHERS, THREE PAPERS PINS, ½ GAL. TIN BUCKETS, CAKE PLATES, AND LOTS MORE. 5c

Come around and see what 5 and 10c will do.

THE LITTLE MAN.

THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS. BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000
Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

L. E. HANSON,
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland
PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD
CHEAP EXCERSIONS
TO THE
St. Louis World's Fair
EVERY WEDNESDAY IN
AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.
Only $14.50 Round Trip from OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.
2100 Madison Square, PHILA., PA.
Mention this paper.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE
WORLD'S FAIR,
ST. LOUIS.
Three THROUGH Trains DAILY
Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars, VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RAES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS
From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

ONLY $4.00 TO WASHINGTON AND RETURN,
ONLY $4.50 TO BALTIMORE AND RETURN,
Saturday, September 17, via BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD,
Special train will leave Oakland at 12 night, affording an opportunity to spend all day Sunday among the attractions of either Capital or Monumental City. 2t

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE
Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.
All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.
JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

COAL.
I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of
Bituminous Coal,
mined from my mine west of town.
Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.
Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be promptly filled.
E. Z. TOWER.

MAGIC REMEDY
Cures Diarrhoea, Cramps in the Stomach, Colera Morbus, Dysentary or Flux, in a few minutes. A positive cure. Keep a bottle handy; it will save many a doctor's bill, and possibly your life. At dealers. 25c; by Mail, 30c—in safety mailing case.
KEYSTONE COMP'Y BLAINE W. VA.

CANCER CURED
permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1520 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

INDIGESTION
"I was troubled with stomach trouble. Thedford's Black-Draught did me more good in one week than all the doctor's medicine I took in a year."—MRS. SARAH E. SHIRFIELD, Ellettsville, Ind.
Thedford's Black Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Thedford's Black Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.
THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT
More sickness is caused by constipation than by any other disease. Thedford's Black-Draught not only relieves constipation but cures diarrhoea and dysentery and keeps the bowels regular.
All druggists sell 25-cent packages.
"Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine to regulate the bowels I have ever used."—MRS. A. M. GRANT, Sneads Ferry, N. C.
CONSTIPATION

"As One of the Family"

By JAMES K. HEARNE

Copyright, 1904, by M. Wiegl

Everybody in Greenville regarded Manning as "one of the family." He was the confidant, adviser and friend of man, woman and child, from old Grandfather Pennel, who declared himself to be 102, though he was born in 1817, to little Robert Sefton Browne, who had arrived in Greenville only three months before under the guidance of a friendly stork.

On envelopes and billheads he was "Mr. William Manning." At all other times he was "Bill" or "Uncle Bill," according to the age of the speaker. Manning had no particular business to occupy his time. His father had left him an independent income, and he had only the affairs of others in which to take an interest. It was the universality of his knowledge that made him so good an adviser. He could judge both sides instead of only one.

This had continued for some years, when suddenly Miss Amanda Penrose came to Greenville. She was a distant cousin of Grandfather Pennel's stepdaughter, and this she considered sufficient reason why the Pennels should take her under their rooftree. Mrs. Pennel III. declared hotly that, considering the fact that Lillian Douglas, who had been the daughter of Pennel's second wife by her first husband, had been dead for three years, Miss Penrose had no right to claim relationship.

Grandfather Pennel smiled amiably at the disputants, but in the end always decided in favor of Miss Amanda, inclined thereto by the fact that she was willing to admit that he was 102, even though she knew better.

In the course of time the pitched battles between Susan Pennel and Miss Amanda ceased. Miss Amanda, silent and smiling, was far too much for blunt, outspoken Susan. In the end she bowed her head to the affliction and suffered, if not in silence, at least without direct opposition to the intruder.

Having gained her victory Miss Amanda unwisely proceeded to make life as unbearable to Susan as is possible only to a woman. In a short while Miss Amanda had driven Susan to revolt.

SHE WAS RATHER FLUSTERED AT FINDING MANNING ON THE DOORSTEP.

She sought out Manning and found in him a ready sympathizer. He was already beginning to feel that this assertive spinster threatened his domain. She had subdued the family of Pennel, and from certain little indications it seemed to him that she sought to dominate the domestic affairs of the rest of the village.

"I wouldn't complain," said the weeping Mrs. Pennel; "but, you see, William, you're like one of the family, and I feel that I must tell some one."

"That's all right, Susan," he said cheerily. "I'll look in in the morning and see what can be done."

She took her departure, still sniffling, but visibly comforted. Manning sat down to look over the situation. Here he met with a foeman worthy his steel. From all accounts she was energetic, but for all of that well balanced and alert. It appealed to Manning as a case for strategy.

He decided that it would be wise to first ascertain the position of the enemy, observing the probable force he would have to encounter. He put on his hat and strolled over to Grandfather Pennel's for dinner. He was used to dropping in anywhere for dinner. Miss Amanda met him at the door, for Susan had not returned. She was somewhat flushed, for she had been arguing with Grandfather Pennel, who insisted that the war of 1812 did not happen, since he did not remember it. He had figured that he must have been ten or eleven years old at the time and could not understand how such a war had been fought without his finding it out. Ordinarily Miss Amanda was discreet and waived disputed points, but her ancestors had fought in the war of 1812, and she would not admit even to Grandfather Pennel that it had not occurred.

She was rather flustered at finding Manning on the doorstep. She had heard much about him and in a way feared his control of public opinion. Manning had not regarded her very closely heretofore. Now he scrutinized her very carefully as he handed her his hat and prepared to enter the sitting room. She was a more attractive woman than he had supposed, he admitted to himself. The heat of the argument had left a pretty flush upon the withered cheeks, and even Susan would have admitted that she had good eyes.

Manning soothed Grandfather Pennel by assuring him that he remembered the old gentleman telling about the war of 1812 years ago and suggesting that he had probably forgotten all about it. This was an adjustment satisfactory to both sides and gave Miss Amanda a respect for his skill as an arbitrator. Having settled the old man, Manning turned his attention to his prospective foe.

She had been a schoolteacher in her younger days and was better read than the average. She was a fluent talker as well. Manning was almost sorry when dinner was announced, even though Susan Pennel's dumplings were supposed to improve any chicken stew ever made.

After that he found that an opponent required more study than he had supposed. He was regularly at the Pennels, so regularly that at length Susan took him to task. It was over at his home, and he sat in the cozy armchair where he had heard the confessions of half the village.

"I don't like to speak of it, William," she was saying nervously. "I don't suppose I had any right in the first place to ask you to get that woman out of the house, but you see you're like one of the family, and I thought you might help me."

"Amanda's a mighty fine woman, Susan," he answered, nervously picking at a loose button on the chair arm, "a mighty fine woman; but, you see, she's never had any husband to domineer. You can't blame her when you realize that, you know. Now, I think the best way will be to get a husband for her."

Susan sniffed. "You don't happen to know of any one who wants her for a wife, do you?" she asked scornfully. Manning blushed.

"No one," he said slowly—"that is, no one except myself. You see, I've been like one of the family to the whole town so long that I never before realized that it would be nice to have a family of my own."

He Took Brooms.

Two old fellows in New Hampshire were the sharpest things in the way of bargaining. Cy Pettingill made brooms for a living and Ezra Hoskins kept a store. One day Cy came in with a load of brooms and the dickering began.

Cy was a man who could see a bargain through a six inch plank on a dark night, and Ezra could hear a dollar bill rattle in a bag of feathers a mile off. Well, they began, and their conversation was something like this:

"Ezra, I want to sell you these brooms."

"All right, Cy; I'll take them."

Cy said: "I don't want any store bargains. I'll want cash for them."

They talked and gadded awhile, and then Ezra said: "I'll tell you what I'll do, Cy. I'll give you half cash and half trade."

Cy took a fresh chew of tobacco, pulled a straw out of one of the brooms and said:

"That'll be all right, Ezra."

After he had put the brooms in the store Ezra said: "Here's your money, Cy. Now, what do you want in trade?"

Cy looked around for a spell, cocked his eye up to the ceiling, stuck his cud in his cheek and said:

"Well, if it is all the same for you, Ezra, I'll take brooms."—Columbia Record.

Chilblains.

Chilblains are induced by cold acting upon an enfeebled system and a weak circulation. The weakness of the system is a more considerable factor than the degree of cold, for some people suffer from chilblains all the year round. Sufferers from Raynaud's disease, a curious complaint associated with coldness of one or more of the extremities, are very subject to chilblains, and with them local defects of blood supply, due to irregular contraction of the blood vessels, are the chief causes of the discomfort.

Anything that interferes with the blood supply may in cold weather cause a chilblain. Badly fitting boots, which press irregularly and keep the blood out of small areas of the skin, are a common cause. Tight kid gloves act in the same way. The circulation in the ears is always limited, and thus chilblains are common in these organs.

Chilblains do not form so long as the subject is conscious of the chill, but only after prolonged cold has paralyzed the feeling of the part. The itching and burning are nature's efforts to restore the circulation—efforts that may be successful or may end in ulcerous destruction of the skin.

Love Trussed Letters.

In France during the sixteenth century love letters were known as chapons. In the course of about a hundred years this became changed into poulets, and as such they are still known across the channel, according to French and English dictionaries, which translate the word as meaning either chicks, or love letters—billets de galanterie.

Originally the expression was no doubt a slang one, due, according to one French author, to the fact that these old time love letters were, before the days of envelopes, folded much in the same manner that a fowl is trussed. It is not impossible, however, that it arose from attempts to use chicken skins as parchment, for in mediaeval France they experimented with all kinds of writing materials. A Bible "remarkable for the whiteness and fineness of its vellum" was supposed to be written on the skin of a woman but proved to be upon that of a new born Irish lamb.—London Answers.

Bowser Sleeps Out of Doors

He Puts Up a Hammock In the Back Yard on the Advice of His Doctor and Has a Trying Time of It.

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]

SOON after the Bowsers had finished dinner the other evening a package arrived at the basement door, and as the girl brought it up to the family room Mrs. Bowser glanced at it and said:

"There must be some mistake. I have ordered nothing sent up today."

"There is no mistake about it," replied Mr. Bowser. "That is a hammock I bought this afternoon."

"But we have no place for a hammock."

"Haven't we got a back yard?"

"Yes, but there is no shady spot for a hammock."

"I am not looking for shady spots, Mrs. Bowser. I want you to talk sensible for once in your life. Do you know that I have got to harden myself up for hot weather or run a terrible risk of a physical collapse?"

"No, I didn't know it. I thought you were in splendid health. Only last night I heard you telling Brown"—

"Never mind what I told Brown. A man may be at death's door and yet not like to have people talking about it and sympathizing. I may look well and have a good appetite, but the fact remains that a puff would blow out the flame of life. I have kept this fact from you for weeks and weeks, but I feel that you ought to know it."

THE HAMMOCK WAS SLUNG BETWEEN TWO OF THE CLOTHESLINE POSTS.

"And that hammock is going to save you from being puffed out?" she asked as the family cat came out from under the piano to take a hand in the game.

"I hope and trust it is. Acting under the advice of one of the best doctors in town, I am going to try to harden myself and shall put that hammock up in the back yard this evening."

"And that will harden you?"

"And I shall pass the night in the hammock—many nights. The doctor says I must have a free circulation of air, and that instead of avoiding the night dews I must revel in them, so to say. Man was never born to sleep in a bed as we do. Adam rested at night under a tree. So did all other men for hundreds of years. Whenever you find the hardiest men you find men who keep in the open air by day and night. I have coddled myself up too much."

"Well, when you have a sore throat, a cold in the head, and are aching from head to foot with rheumatism, perhaps you'll keep on coddling," she answered. "Any doctor who told you such stuff for truth is an idiot."

"There you go!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he began to pace up and down the room, followed by the cat. "I might have known you wouldn't talk sense. I never start in to better my health but you oppose the idea. If you are hoping I may collapse on the street and be brought home as dead as a doornail, why don't you say so and have done with it?"

"Go ahead with your hammock cure," she quietly replied. "If the doctor said it would harden you up, then, of course, it will. Don't put the blame off on me, however."

"Blame? Blame? How can I blame you?"

"I don't know, but you probably will."

"I'll probably do nothing of the kind! By George, but I wonder if there is another such aggravating woman on the face of this earth!"

Mrs. Bowser had nothing more to say. Mr. Bowser kicked things out of his way as he walked and the cat rubbed against the legs of the piano and saw fun ahead. Half an hour later the hammock was slung between two of the clothesline posts. It was a fairly dark evening, and Mr. Bowser congratulated himself that none of the neighbors had got on to his little scheme.

At 10 o'clock he was ready to try the cure. He tried to draw Mrs. Bowser into an argument about it, but she kept clear and went upstairs as he started out. Bareheaded and with coat and vest off he fell into the hammock with a grunt of satisfaction and began counting the stars in the vault above.

Unnoticed by him the cat had followed at his heels. The night cure was a thing new to him, and he went wandering about the yard in search of summer novelties. Ten minutes had passed, and Mr. Bowser had just indulged in a sneeze which set the hammock swinging, when the head of a neighbor's cat appeared above the fence. For a few brief seconds the Bowser cat and the interloper exchanged glances of hate, distrust and defiance and then coiled on top of the fence.

"By the great horn spoon!" ejaculated Mr. Bowser as he rolled about and finally fell out of the hammock. By the time he had hit the earth the interloper was a licked feline and was heard scrambling over a fence three yards below.

It was evident that the cure had a few drawbacks, but after cursing softly to himself for a minute the patient climbed back into his hammock and tried to make himself believe that he already felt better. He shut his eyes tight, determined to sleep, and the premonitory tingle of a second sneeze was being faintly felt when there was a yelp and a hiss, and the cat went up the fence and over it like a flash, and a dog was left whining and growling within ten feet of the hammock. The canine had crept under the alley fence, and the Bowser cat hadn't waited to ask any questions.

"By thunder, but can't a man find five minutes' rest in his own back yard?" shouted Mr. Bowser as he rolled out and looked for a clothes prop as a weapon of offense.

He ran that dog three times across the yard before the animal could find the hole he came in at and get out again, and when he returned to the hammock the romance of the night was gone. If he hadn't caught sight of Mrs. Bowser peering from one of the back windows he might have decided to call things off till next night. That settled matters, however. He dropped into the hammock and huddled himself up, and the cat came back and sat on the fence and looked down upon him with guardian eyes. Ten minutes stole silently away, and the crickets had begun to sing low and drowsily when something fell from the sky with a great clash and clatter and missed Mr. Bowser and his hammock by only a few inches.

"By the clubfooted king, but who did that?" he demanded as he rolled out to find that the "something" was an old tin pail.

He had scarcely uttered the words when an Early Rose potato whizzed by his ear and struck the fence with a bang, and it was followed by a Florida cabbage stalk which emitted a moaning sound as it grazed the top of his head. The cat realized that she wasn't in it and took a skip, but Mr. Bowser wasn't to be bluffed.

"You reptiles, but I'll have you jugged for this!" he shouted as he looked around and failed to locate any one. "Do you know"—

An old corset from an ash barrel came sailing his way like a vulture of the night, and he felt the fan of its wings as he ducked his head. Then there were missiles which he believed to be onions and tomatoes and green corn cobs and ancient lemons, and all he could do was to jump up and down and demand that his hidden foe stand forth and be slaughtered.

He thought he caught sight of some one on the alley fence, and he made a wild charge, but he had no sooner reached it than the heavens rained tin cans, bottles, old hats and shoes, and he was compelled to turn and flee for his life. Mrs. Bowser came downstairs to find him in the sitting room, white faced, big eyed and panting, and after a look at him she said:

"Have you got hardened up for the hot wave as soon as this?"

"Woman, how dare you look me in the face?" he demanded as he turned on her. "Don't you suppose I know all about your little plot to have me killed, murdered, assassinated in my own back yard? I say, how dare"—

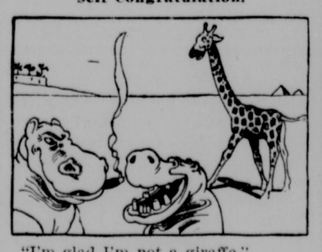
"You'd better come to bed," she quietly replied, and as she went upstairs he slowly followed and hadn't another word to say. M. QUAD.

Perks.

Sax—When a man is dishonest he generally gets what he deserves in the long run.

Fax—Yes, but think what a lot of other things he gets in the meantime—Brooklyn Life.

Self Congratulation.



"I'm glad I'm not a giraffe."

"Why? Because you'd have a lot of sore throat if you had that neck?"

"No. Because the cops would find it so easy to spot me."

The Bachelor Girl.

Be very careful not to call this lady an old maid,
Unless you wish in dire contempt some fathoms deep to wade.
Emerging from a battle with her glances somewhat frayed.

She loves to be a bachelor and also be a girl,
Although full forty summers o'er her head have deigned to whirl—
So do not dare at her another epithet to hurl.

She doesn't care to live at home, but much prefers a flat,
She has no fear of burglars and would even face a rat
She always has a clear idea of just where she is at.

It's fun enough to talk to her, when she that favor grants,
Although you'll find she seldom will give you much of a chance,
But if you marry her, look out! She's sure—oh, well, you can guess the rest.
—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Mountain State BUSINESS COLLEGE

Gives a training that turns your talent into a money making power. Does it quickly, thoroughly, practically. Full and complete courses in BOOKKEEPING, PENMANSHIP, TYPEWRITING, SHORTHAND and TELEGRAPHY. $110 pays tuition, board and room rent for five months. Skilled teachers. Large attendance. Healthful study rooms. Recitation rooms. Modern and convenient furniture. The M. S. B. C. has a National reputation and its graduates are sought after by business men everywhere. Now is the time to begin a course. No vacation. Individual instruction. Our new Art Catalogue can be had for the asking. Address, A. G. SINE, President, PARKERSBURG, WEST VA.

The Boy Makes the Mule Go,
And the Mule Makes the Cart Go.

WITH OUR NEW PROCESS
We Make the Bread Go!
Because It Is Best.

A Trial Will Convince You.

OAKLAND MODEL STEAM BAKERY,
HENRY LAUER, Proprietor.

Carey's Magnesia Flexible Cement Roofing for Flat or Steep Surfaces

Is suitable for all classes of buildings as it affords thorough fire protection and is a non-conductor of heat and cold. It will last the lifetime of the roofboards. It is fire-proof and is rated the same as metal or slate roofs. Call or write for samples and prices.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,
Agents for Garrett County, Oakland, Md.

First National Bank
OF GRANTSVILLE, MD
Now Open for Business.
EQUIPPED WITH A
Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe and Vault.
Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound banking.
Deposits by mail and all correspondence given prompt attention.
We Solicit Your Account.

Paid-up Capital, - - $25,000
Liability of Stockholders, 25,000
Total Liability, - $50,000
PAYS 3 PER CENT.
on time deposits. Interest computed and paid semi-annually.

DIRECTORS.
C. H. JENNINGS,
U. M. STANTON,
G. C. KELLER,
ELI STANTON,
W. A. HITCHINS,
J. S. HERSHBERGER,
FRANK WATTS
OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - President.
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President.
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier.

The Up-to-Date Grocery,
First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.
Exclusively a Grocery Store.
CASH OR PRODUSE—One price to everybody and that the lowest consistent with a complete line of High-Grade Groceries.
Everything New, Clean and First-Class.
Fresh Vegetables on THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS.
Largest Line of CRACKERS in Oakland—Fresh Every Week.
W. H. BARTLETT.

THOS. LITTLE.
This is the season of year to make changes, and I will make a GREAT REDUCTION in the prices of
China and Porcelain Ware.
I have a large stock of this goods and they must go at the remarkably low price of 10c each. Many of these pieces are cheap at 25c. But I have concluded to sell all at the low price of 10c each.
They consist of Decorated, Gold Trimmed Meat Plates, large and small, Bakers, Nappies, Pitchers, Bowls, Cups and Saucers, large and small plates, just the thing for every day use.
Also a Fine Line of Imported China at Less than Cost.
Come Early and get the Choice Pieces.
HO LITTLE

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

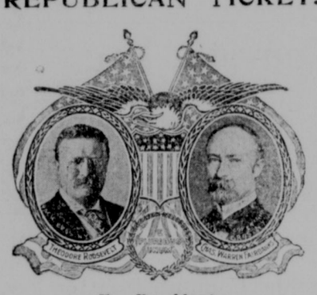
REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, OCT. 6, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.



For President:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

New York.

For Vice-President:

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,

Indiana.

For Congress:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

Allegany County.

THIS issue is delayed on account of the editor being called to the funeral of his mother-in-law, in Kingwood, W. Va. We are indebted to Editor Deffinbaugh of the Democrat, for valuable services in getting out this number.

SENATOR GEORGE F. HOAR died at 1.49 Friday morning of last week. For months he had been ill, and during the last three days he had slept most of the time. He maintained to the last the wonderful fight he had made against death from the first.

"I BELIEVE in the doctrine of protection because the facts of our national experimence thoroughly exemplify it truth. No great American statesman, except the half-forgotten leaders of the slave power, have disowned the protective system."—Hon. J. P. Dolliver, in the American Economist.

THE word has gone forth that David B. Hill and William Jennings Bryan are both going to Indiana to make political speeches. It is merely a suggestion, but why not put them on the same platform and have them engage in a joint debate on the money question. Bryan says he has nothing to take back.

"WE have prospered marvelously at home. As a nation we stand in the very forefront in the giant international competition of the day. We can not afford by any freak or folly to forfeit the position to which we have thus triumphantly attained.—"President Roosevelt at Minneapolis, April 4, 1903.

THE Democratic party professes a most sacred reverence for the constitution, yet by nominating an octogenarian for Vice President it has shown utter disregard for the provision of the constitution which, on death or inability of the President, devolves his duties upon the Vice President. No party has a right to trifle with great public interests in that manner.

"THE upshot of all this is that it is peculiarly incumbent upon us in a time of such material well-being, both collectively as a nation and individually as citizens, to show, each on his own account, that we posses the qualities of prudence, self-knowledge, and self-restraint. In our Government we need above all things stability, fixity, economic policy,"—President Roosevelt at Providence, R. I., Aug. 23, 1901

"IF a tariff law on the whole worked well, and if business has prospered under it and is prospering, it may be better to endure some incoveniences and inequalities for a time than, by making changes to risk causing disturbance and perhaps paralysis in the industries and business of the country."—President Rooseyelt at Minneapolis, April 4, 1903.

Register on Tuesday next if you want to vote this fall. That will be your last chance this year.

JUDGE PARKER AND PENSIONS.

Judge Parker in his letter of acceptance, says that he will revoke the pension order of President Roosevelt but he will use his influence with Congress to pass an old age pension bill. There is one great embarrassment to this proposed programme. His influence would not go far with a Democratic Congress in regard to pension legislation, though it always declares in favor of liberal pensions in its platform. There are fourteen pension laws now on the statute books which constitute the pension code. These laws were all passed by Republican Congresses. Not one of them originated in a Democratic Congress. Some Northern Democrats voted for these Republican bills but the majority of Democratic members of Congress voted against them. The record has been kept. It shows that in the passage of these fourteen pension bills 648 Democrats voted against them and only 417 voted for them. On the other side 1,068 Republicans voted for the pension bills and none voted against them.

If Judge Parker is to use his influence in favor of an old age service pension law he will have to appeal to a Republican Congress. He might have some influence with a Democratic Congress in favor of free trade legislation or a bill to give independence to the Philippines but when he came to recommendations in favor of an old age pension he would find the majority of his party opposed to his recommendation. The Democratic party in Congress is controlled by Southern men who are opposed to pensions for Union veterans. They represent people who did not fight for the Union but against it. They may accept the result of the civil war as final, but they do not love the old veterans who brought about that result and they are opposed to giving them pensions from the national treasury while the Confederate veterans can be pensioned only by their States.

The Southern Democrats will applaud Judge Parker's declaration that he will revoke President Roosevelt's pension order. They will endorse his action revoking the order if he should be elected President and carry out his promise. When they have done that the Southern Democrats in Congress will let the matter rest right there. They will have succeeded in undoing some of the pension legislation of the Republican Party. The South now has two-thirds of the Democratic caucus of the House and they will continue to have a majority of the caucus if the Democrats secure control of the House. No pension bill can pass a Democratic Congress without first receiving the approval of the Democratic caucus. What Southern Democrat would dare introduce or vote for an old age pension for Union veterans? Would John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, who will be Speaker of a Democratic House? Let the old soldiers ask him.

The only hope of such a pension bill is a Republican house, and if the old soldiers and their friends want to continue the present pension laws and regulations they should vote the straight Republican ticket from head to foot. They should vote to continue President Roosevelt and a Republican Congress. The pension laws are of Republican origin and the only way to continue them is by Republican administration both executive and legislative.

MR. DAVIS' INCONSISTENCY.

The latest example of the wabbling of the Democratic party on public questions is furnished by the recent speech of its candidate for Vice-President, Mr. Davis, in which he said he favored a tariff that not only furnished revenue but provided protection to home industries. That is fine Republican doctrine and sounds strangely from a Democrat.

Some allowance must be made for Mr. Davis, however. He was talking to a West Virginia audience, and it is well known of course that West Virginia, from necessity and of bitter experience, is a protectionist State. Mr. Davis was afraid to stand up for the free trade doctrines of his party in that State.

His speech is fairly characteristic of the present attitude of his party, not only on the tariff question but on other public questions. The party is trying to straddle them. Following the example set by the party action on the gold question, when the convention went one way and the candidate went the other, the party is now splitting on the tariff.

The Southern and Western wings want free trade, as near as they can get it. To them the tariff is a robbery. The class to whom Mr. Davis talked know better and would not have free trade. But, which wing is to rule? How are the people to know whether they would have free trade or modified protection under Democratic rule?

If they want the protective tariff there is only one way to insure it and that is to help elect a Republican House of Repreeentatives this fall.

Tuesday next, October 11, is the last chance you will have to register this year.

PARKER'S LETTER

Judge Parker has announced his acceptance of his nomination for the presidency by the Democratic party in a letter submitted to the public last Wednesday.

The letter deals in generalities and is in no particular specific as to remedies for the imaginary governmental evils existing and impending, which the letter portrays.

The letter is mediocre, pessimistic and commonplace, and it will not strengthen the judge and his party with the people. The texts of the various paragraphs in the letter are not new or original. These subjects and the same line of argument are perfectly familiar to the people. They consist in the main of criticisms and attacks upon the Republican party and its established policies and have long since been worn threadbare by Democratic orators in and out of Congress. Judge Parker goes along in the old familiar beaten Democratic path in a "weak, negative and nerveless production" discussing imperialism, the tariff, reciprocity, pensions, the constitution, the Filipinos, the Panama canal, etc.

His fusilade upon the national accomplishments and policy of the Republican party is without effect or influence, because in each case his promise is false and because he can suggest no remedies for the evils he professes to discern. As an exchange aptly puts it, "He handles the tariff question with a pair of tongs" and his elaboration of his crude reciprocity ideas is prefaced by this admission: "Today the marvelous growth of our manufacturing industrries has far exceded the consumptive capacity of our domestic markets." If this be true, as it is, and as Judge Parker admits in his letter, what response can he and his party expect from the people to his proposed experimental changes in the tariff laws? The judge's reference to imperialism is silly and pointless; his acceptance of the gold standard as fixed is merely an endorsement of the act of the Republican party, an act which he tried to prevent by his votes four and eight years ago, votes of which he but re-vote cently boasted.

His comments on the recent pension order lose their force in the closing appeal and the bid he makes for the of the old veterans.

In imitation of Grover Cleveland he calls aloud for retrenchment in the expenditures of the government, but as an exchange says: "Not a single item is suggested. Not a single item is suggested. Not a single specification of saving is indicated. A criticism which does not name an objection and cannot name an an amendment is pointless."

The letter contains nothing else worthy of comment..

Hon. Arthur Pue Gorman, who has superseded Mr. Thomas Taggart in the Democratic management, must have known of the contents of this letter of acceptance and must have anticipated its force with the people when he went to New York and told Parker to go home to Esopus and henceforth make no utterances for the public, but keep perfectly quiet and unobtrusive until after the election.

Sewing Machines.

Two years ago we commenced selling the New Royal Sewing Machine, contracting direct with the manufacturer, and have the first one yet to find any fault with one of these machines. They are all guaranteed for 5 years, made with the latest and most improved attachments, and in style and finish cannot be excelled. We are offering these machines from $13.50 to $25.00 according to style and finish. If in need of a machine and you look into the merits of the New Royal, we are sure you cannot help but be pleased. And when you want needles or any little repairs, you can easily obtain them for you have a Standard Machine that is not put out under any fictitious name by catalogue houses or department stores. J. M. DAVIS & SON. 3t

Delightful Weather at the World's Fair

Thousands are taking advantage of the delightful weather to visit the World's Fair at St. Louis, which is now at its best.

The excellent through vestibuled trains of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, with Drawing Room, Sleepers, and superb Dining Car Service, passing over the most picturesque route in America, makes the trip a pleasure rather than one to be dreaded. Broad vestibuled coaches with comfortable seats and sanitary ventilation are provided for the Cheap Coach Excursions which are run every Wednesday. 32-3t

Still Hustling.

The Hustling Store Company has decided to clean up its entire stock of goods amounting to at least $7000 at whatever the goods will bring at public sale and also at private sale from day to day and then put in new Stocks to be sold at the lowest prices. Get prices at the Hustling Store before purchasing elsewhere.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

FEARER.

There passes through our town from West Virginia almost daily what is called "stump" in print; in return on a lumber wagon is what is called "Gussaway" in a jug or jugs for snakehunters. As this wagon was passing the Mayor's residence, which was being painted, the driver called to an old man and said: "Hello, old G. with your button, come here. I want you to try some of old 'Gussaway' or old H. G. D. If you don't take the stump for the old man if you get two smacks at this you will be a red-hot H. G. D. democrat all your days."

"Yes," said G. with the button, "for I'd be a lunatic. Now I'll just take this rock and not your 'stump,' and tell you all you want to hear of H. G. D. and his party. You know away back in the sixties, when that man fed you snakehunters the same stuff he is feeding you today and filling his pockets with dollars worth one hundred cents, and not fifty cents, as Gussaway voted; yes, and you know how we made the buzzards fly around the snakehunters' carcasses in the lower end of our State. You ought to be down there with the copperheads and old Arthur Pew Gorman who made the whole country stink with the carcasses of sheep when he and Wilson lifted the protection from wool and the farmers had to kill their sheep. He's down in New York today with the same poison you snakehunters take which will ruin any nation. Show me one thing your Gussaway or A. Pew ever did for our country. Pew did stand for gold, but where is he now? Where are your leaders? I can't find them and don't think the voter will hunt them up as you do snakes. You should change and come on the Lord's side, for the good book says 'a fool changeth not.' Our platform is like this rock, it has the grit and foundation, and the only thing I find fault with our party is that it has made times so good that any one can get your 'stump' poison. That's what makes your brain so narrow and why you don't believe in expansion. If your brain and the good your party has done our country were confined in a mustard seed they would have as much play room as a frog in the Pacific Ocean. Our old Eagle is spreading his wings to plant 'Old Glory' on the North Pole. 'Teddy' and his party don't expect the people to live on promises, like Parker made the other day, when Joe Cannon gave him a spat on the pension question. Then you say we foster trusts. Better have trusts and lots of good money and good times than to have Coxey's army and no money, no work and no 'trust,' as under Grover's administration. The devil trust you and your party, I can't. We make our fight in this campaign on what we have done for our country and you make yours on what you are going to do, and we judge the future by the past. 'He that is ruled by the wicked shall mourn.'"

At this juncture the old man G. was handed a paper and it was his discharge, and he walked off saying: "That's all right. I have fifteen other jobs waiting on me." He has not been seen on our streets since.

A Card From President Sine.

I have sold to Messrs. J. W. Smith and B. F. Shaffer, what was known as my branch school located at Cumberland, Md. The new owners will conduct the school hereafter under the name of "The Tri-State Business College." This change in the ownership of the Cumberland school will enable me to devote my whole time and attention to the further building of Parkersburg's famous school—the Mountain State Business College.

September 26, 1904.

4t ALBERT G. SINE, President.

8 Cents

Eight cents a pound is what a young woman paid for twelve pounds of flesh.

She was thin and weak and paid one dollar for a bottle of Scott's Emulsion, and by taking regular doses had gained twelve pounds in weight before the bottle was finished.

Eight cents a pound is cheap for such valuable material. Some pay more, some less, some get nothing for their money. You get your money's worth when you buy Scott's Emulsion.

We will send you a little free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, CHEMISTS,
409 Pearl Street, New York
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

BLOOMINGTON.

A Polander, name unknown, was found dead early yesterday morning, on the W. Va. C. R. R. tracks, at the Maryland end of the foot bridge at Piedmont. Both legs were cut off and the body mutilated. Twenty-two dollars in cash was found on his person. The remains were taken to the undertaking establishment of E. J. Fredlock and Co., of Piedmont.

Rev. A. R. Suedegar, is home from the Hoffman hospital, Keyser. The stump of the amputated limb has entirely healed and the reverend gentleman is in good health and fine spirits.

Mr. Aden Duckworth, who has been quite ill for the past six weeks, is reported in an improved condition. He is now able to take nourishment and gradually gaining in strength. Mr. Duckworth is a stalwart republican and expects to cast a vote for the Republican candidates in the coming election.

Miss Daisy Lakel, who has been spending the past few weeks with the Harshbarger family, left for her home in Pittsburg on Monday.

Misses Lotta and Alma Kemp are visiting relatives in Baltimore.

Mr. Ross of Oakland, Clerk to the County Commissioners, was in town on business on Tuesday.

Mr. David Scott, aged about 79 years, is dead at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Randall, of Savage. Mr. Scott was born in Scotland and came to this country when quite a young man. He leaves a large family of sons and daughters, all of whom are married. His remains will be interred in Philos cemetery at Westernport on Thursday, beside those of his wife, who died some years ago.

The report that fifty men would be discharged from the Buxton mine on last Monday proved to be unreliable.

Messrs. John and Dan Raley, Thos. Conley, James Beard, John Miller, Russell Pattison and Scott Elliott returned on Monday from a weeks camping out, on Backbone mountain. They report squirrels fat and in good shape but hard to find.

Born unto Mr. and Mrs. John Grant, of Buxton, on last Tuesday morning, a girl.

Mr. Thos. Wildman of Hampshire Hill, is at the St. Louis Exposition.

Messrs. William Moody and Michael Flynn were at Oakland on Tuesday.

A Mr. Smouse is principal of the Bloomington school.

The largest potato crop of the finest quality ever harvested in District No. 4 has beed dug this fall.

Chestnuts are plentiful and command good prices.

The Piedmont Pulp and Paper company are excavating and building foundations for another row of dwelling houses along the county road on the hill side, above Luke.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanson Buckhannon and family are visiting relatives near Weston, W. Va.

Mr. Austin Ward has moved to Davis and resumed employment with the Beaver Lumber Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dawson, of Cumberland were guests of his brother, Mr. Charles Dawson, of Savage on Sunday last.

Mr. James Cross, of Tunnelton, is in town this week with friends and relatives.

Miners' Sunshine Council No. 81, J. O. U. A. M. will present a flag to the Savage school next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Lawyer Renninger, of Oakland is booked for the presentation speech. Prof. Offner, principal of the school, will reply in behalf of the school.

Stoves

We have a stock on hand of more than one hundred stoves of all kinds, sizes and prices, running from a $10.00 Cook Stove to a $40.00 Steel Range, and Heating Stoves from $5.00 to $20. The above has been selected with the greatest care, not only in regard to price, but to the requirements needed for the trade in this part of our country. Stoves are manufactured for the section of the country that they are sold in, and according to the kind of fuel used, and prices are made by the manufacturer according to quality, style and finish. The stove business is a trade to itself and it requires years of experience to know when you have the best goods that can be bought for the money, and best suited to the trade you are selling. If you contemplate buying a stove of any kind, call and look our line over before buying, we think we can please any and all, both in regard to price and kind.

J. M. DAVIS & SON.

WANTED—Special Representatives in this county and adjoining territories, to represent and advertise an old established business house of solid financial standing. Salary $21 weekly, with expenses advanced each Monday by check direct from headquarters. Horse and buggy furnished when necessary; position permanent. Address Blew Bros. & Co., Dept. A. Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill. 6t

IT is learned on high authority that President Roosevelt doesn't propose to call a session of The Hague peace conference until after the close of the Japanese-Russian war. The soundings taken by Secretary Hay show that these governments are opposed to the call until the conclusion of the hostilities for fear that an attempt at intervention by England, France or Germany might occur.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

New Fall Styles, 1904.

Women's Tailor Made Suits.
Women's Tailor Made Skirts.
Women's Tailor Made Coats.
Women's Queen Quality Shoes.
Men's Griffon Brand Clothing.
Men's Kirshbaum Overcoats.
Men's All America Shoes.
Men's Bion Shoes.
Men's Crawford Shoes.

We have spared no pains in making a selection of goods from the leading factories in the United States.

WE ARE ORIGINATORS OF

High Grade Merchandise

IN THIS SECTION.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

The Garrett National Bank

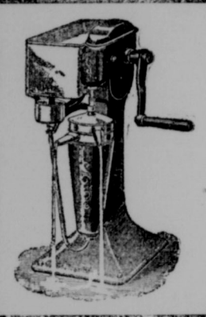
OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL.
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, - $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, - 20,000.00



A Great Separator.

There is A BEST in everything. It must be BEST MADE—EASIEST USED—MOST EFFECTIVE—MOST SIMPLE. By actual comparison—in actual use.

THE TUBULAR SEPARATOR

Has proved it has these points in its favor. That's what puts it away ahead of all other separators—that's why I sell it. Get hold of facts.

J. E GNAGEY, Accident, Md.

A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

HAS NO SUBSTITUTE

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Messrs. Harland L. Jones and William Grant are in St. Louis.

Mrs. C. F. Shoeder, of Grafton, was visiting friends in Oakland Saturday.

Mrs. T. F. Burke and family have gone to St. Louis to spend some time.

Editor Bolden, of the Grafton Sentinel is home from his trip to Colorado.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Sincell, of Keyser, W. Va., spent Sunday in Oakland.

Mr. Olin F. Durst, of Lonaconing, Md., spent Sunday and Monday in Oakland.

Mr. D. M. Dixon and family are again in their own residence on Oak street.

The new postoffice at Cumberland will be formally opened to the public next Wednesday.

Presiding Elder Ward and Rev. Dr. Scott left for the M. E. Conference at Grafton Tuesday evening.

Mr. Harry McComas has accepted a clerical position under Mr. Jos. E. Harned, of the Oakland Pharmacy.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. W. Leathers are occupying the rooms over the Leathers harness shop for the winter.

Hustling Store, at Mt. Lake Park, will close out everything, regardless of cost, except staple groceries. 31-2t.

Attend the meeting of the Roosevelt, Faiabanks and Pearre Club at the Opera House on Saturday evening.

Dr. E. K. Goldsborough, one of our summer residents, has returned with his family to their home in Washington, D. C.

Miss Carrie Colerdeau, who has been visiting relatives and friends in Oakland, has returned to her home in Philadelphia.

Our thanks are extended to Commissioner Stump for a basket of delicious grapes left at the REPUBLICAN office last Friday.

Mrs. M. A. R. F. Carr, of Cumberland, spent several days last week in Oakland as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Dr. E. H. Bartlett.

Miss Grace W. McConnor, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Norman S. Heindel, returned to her home in Baltimore Wednesday morning.

An employe of the saw mill at Round Glade, near Oakland, named George Savage has hid hand so badly lacerated by a revolving saw last Friday, that the amputation of one of his fingers was necessary. Dr. J. E. Legge performed the operation.

Next Tuesday is the last day of registration and all Republican voters should see that they are fully equipped for the battle of ballots in November.

Messrs. D. E. Offutt, Sr., G. S. Hamill, Byrne Hamill, C. B. Johnson and Charles Bosley left yesterday for the World's Fair, to be absent ten days.

Miss Irene Haulenbeek and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Elmer Haulenbeek, are entertaining at "Uplands," near Deer Park, Miss Kathryn Hanson, of North Calvert street, Baltimore city.

A surprise party at the home of Miss Mary Casteel, a short distance north of Oakland, Monday evening in honor of her guests, was attended by a number of Oakland's young people.

Mr. John Ault and a force of men have been employed for the past week in removing the Browning Bros. meat store from its former location to where the small Offutt building stood on railroad street prior to the fire.

A man named James Flynn, charged with robbery of Mr. Wm. Moody's store at Bloomington, this county, some time ago, was captured by Sheriff Frantz and lodged in the county jail Monday. Flynn was arrested at Garrett, Pa.

We understand that Mr. V. V. Washburn, the very efficient B. & O. Agent here, expects in the near future to transfer to Hancock, Md, and that the agent now at that point will come here. Mr. Washburn desires to make the change believing that he will enjoy better health on lower ground.

While driving along the Bloomington road, in Westernport, Tuesday, John Stagg's team of horses backed a wagon, loaded with peaches, over the road down a fifty-foot cliff, wrecking the wagon against a large tree, badly cutting and bruising the horses and severely bruising the driver, Mr. Stagg.

If your Uncle Henry Davis had the least notion that the Democratic ticket would be successful, he would probably be willing to chip into the campaign barrel to the extent of a million or so, but he seems to think that fifty thousand is enough to blow in on a wild goose chase.

The Baltimore and Ohio has just issued the announcement that the big locomotive now on exhibition at the World's Fair at St. Louis will be put on the mountains as soon as the Fair is over. It is the largest locomotive in the world, and weighs 149½ tons. It will be put on the 17-mile grade between Piedmont and Altamont, to assist the heavy trains over the mountains.

A flood of molten metal, which fatally injured three men and seriously burned a dozen others, was let loose by an explosion in the cupola of the Scottdale plant of the United States Pipe and Foundry Company at Connellsville, Pa., Wednesday. While the cupola was being cleaned, the bottom dropped out, releasing the metal. The stream hit the water, throwing chunks of metal all over the room.

The Hustling Store at Mountain Lake Park will continue to hustle out its large stock of general merchandise until the entire stock is disposed of. All goods at cost except groceries. Come see the large stock of double and single wood heaters. Nothing to equal them on the market. One new six lid nine-inch hole steel range for sale.

For Sale or Rent.

An 8-room dwelling in residence section of town. Apply to or address J. M. Litzinger, Oakland, Md.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

Rev. Henry E. Friend Caught Retween Two Moving Trains and Painfully Injured.

Sunday evening about 5 o'clock, Rev. Henry E. Friend, pastor of Mt. Lake Park and Deer Park circuit, M. E. church, started from Mt. Lake Park to Deer Park to fill his regular appointment at the latter place. As usual he took the railroad track and when about one mile east of Mt. Lake Park a freight train, which had been standing on the south siding, pulled onto the South track going east. Mr. Friend continued on the north track and on account of the moving freight train, did not hear nor see the approach of a second section of No. 55 passenger train, going west on the same track on which he was walking until it was within a few feet of him. Mr. Friend jumped to the right, between the tracks, the engine of the passenger train striking him and breaking his left arm just above the wrist, dislocating his wrist and mashing his hand and fingers. He was thrown against the moving freight train but fortunately retained his feet and received no further injuries. Mr. Friend, notwithstanding a considerable loss of blood and enduring great pain, continued on his journey to Deer Park. He was brought home at once by Mr. C. A. Jones, Dr. H. W. McComas was summoned, the facture and dislocation reduced and the injured hand dressed. Mr. Friend suffers a great deal of pain, but is thankful for what he considers a miraculous escape from death.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The season is about over, yet many are still here enioying the delightful fall weather.

Miss Ida Coldeway, of Louisville, Kentucky, and Prof. A. A. Line, of Carlisle, Pa., who have been guests at "Haydenhurst" during the season, left for their homes Tuesday evening.

J. Grant Hayden has purchased a grocery store at Westernport, Md., and will remove to that town and made it his permanent home.

Mr. Charles Hopkins, who has been critically ill for several weeks, is able to be up and about the house.

Many sales of property have been made here this fall and prospective purchasers and renters are on the grounds almost every day.

The splendid board walk has been extended entirely across the glade from the station to Hazel Glade Drive.

Over fifty families will reside in the Park during the winter.

Our school started off in good shape under the management of Prof. Gnegy, principal, and Miss Popp, assistant. The new school building is comfortable and large enough for present needs. The full attendance will be about seventy-five.

Mr. J. A. Enlow's family, who have been at the Park this season, left for their winter home in Cumberland Tuesday.

Mr. Garthright's auctions at the Hustling store are largely attended.

Mr. Forward and family, who have had charge of Chautauqua Hotel this season, will soon leave for Flintstone, Allegany county, where they will conduct a hotel during the winter.

Mr. John L. Ruhl and family expect to remain at the Park for some weeks before returning to their home in Clarksburg, W. Va.

The water is being drawn from the lake, preparatory to making some improvements and enlargement.

C. G. Hammond, one of our merchants, was in Grafton this week on business.

Lee N. Hayden is clerking in Hammend,s store.

H. N. Cuppett, the live merchant at Mt. Lake station, has broken ground across the railroad in Loch Lynn preparatory to the erection of a store room 26x60 feet.

A Republican Club will be organized in the public school building at at Mt. Lake Park on Friday evening, Oct. 7th, at 7.30. All are invited to attend and become members.

Well Known Conductor Dying.

The many friends of Mr. Pat Mullen, the well known Baltimore and Ohio conductor, will learn with genuine regret of that gentleman's critical condition at his home at Piedmont. Mr. Mullen is reported as being in a dying condition, and his family and friends have given up all hope of his recovery. Mr. Mullen has been with the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company for a great many years, and for twenty years has been a passenger conductor on trains between Cumberland and Wheeling. He was taken ill about five weeks ago and has been sinking steadily since.—Cumb. News.

Public School Tax.

Comptroller of the Treasury Atkinson made the distribution of the state public school tax for the quarter ending October 2. The amount is $200,000, the largest ever distributed for the first quarter of the year, the tax rate having been increased 4½ cents. The distribution includes the following: Allegany, $9,732.51; Garrett $3,249.62.

WALTER A. JOHNSON NOMINATED

For Congress in the Sixth Congressional Distrtict.

The Democrats of the Sixth Maryland district in their adjourned convention at Hagerstown Wednesday, nominaten Walter A. Johnston, of Kensington, Montgomery county, for representative in Congress. The convention at Rockville last week failed to find a candidate. Mr. Johnston is 39 years of age and is a lawyer who practices in Washington, D. C. He has been twice a member of the Maryland legislature and was chairman of the judiciary committee of the last house. He is attorney for the town of Kensington.

Mr. Johnston was taken up after about a dozen names were considered, all refusing except Mr. Palmer Tennant, of Hagerstown, who, while not a candidate, was receptive, but Col. Buchanan Schley, the Democratic boss of Washington county, would not permit his being named, Tennant being "persona non grata" with the ring.

Died.

MORRIS—At her home in Kingwood, W. Va., Tuesday morning, after a brief illness, Mrs. D. Y. Morris, mother of Mrs. Benj. H. Sincell. Mrs. Sincell was with her mother at the time of her death. A more extended notice will he given in our next issue.

FAIRALL.—At the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. R. S. Jamison, this morning about 10 o'clock, after a brief illness, William Fairall, aged 51 years. Deceased was born and spent his entire life in this county and was well known, especially in Oakland, where he has resided for more than forty years. His wife, a daughter of the late R. B. Jamison, Esq., died a number of years ago, leaving four children, one daughter and three sons, all now living. Deceased is also survived by five sisters and two brothers.

WOLF.—Tuesday evening, the four year old child of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wolf, of Oakland. Interment was made in the Oakland cemetery today.

Democratic Club at Oakland.

At a meeting held last Friday evening in Offutt's Hall for the purpose of ouganizing a branch of the Parker and Davis League of Maryland, there were about 40 or 50 people present. Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee C. M. Miller called the meeting to order and Dr. Bartlett, Sr., was made temporary chairman.

The addresses of the evening were made by Mr. Miller, Dr. Bartlett and Mr. G. Semmes Hamill. The following officers were elected: President, Mr. G. Semmes Hamill; vice-president, Mr. Charles A. Deffinbaugh; secretary, Mr. William R. Offutt; treasurer, Mr. D. M. Mason.

Lutheran Church Services.

Services at St. Mark's Lutheran ch. next Sabbath as follows: Preaching at 10.30 a. m.

In the Lutheran church at Deer Park next Sabbath at 7.30 p. m.

Some of Baltimore's "400" have been kicking up a powerful rusty because an industrious mechanic has put up a shop in their neighborhood and disturbs their slumbers by hammering early in the morning. They applied to the courts and failed to get relief, and they are in a bushel of trouble, not knowing what else to do. About the surest way to stop a mechanic from hammering is to vote the Democratic ticket.

SENATOR STEPHEN B. ELKINS, in conversations with friends upon several occasions this week, denied that he was lukewarm in his feelings toward the Republican national ticket. He was indignant that such a view of him was entertained.

Real Estate. Insurance.

If you want to

BUY OR SELL
WRITE OR SEE

L. A. RUDISILL,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.

Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,

Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.

Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.

Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.

Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

Dixon & Kelso

Will sell for the next 30 days

Floor Oil Cloth, Linoleum

—AND—

UNDERWEAR

At Greatly Reduced Prices,

As follows—

Best Heavy Floor Oil Cloth, worth 35c. yd., for 28c.
" " Remnant Linoleum, worth 50c. yd., for 35c.
" " Inlaid " " 75c. " " 50c.

Men's Heavy Fleece-Lined Shirts and Drawers, worth 65c for 47c.
Men's Heavy All-Wool Shirts and Drawers, worth $1.25 for 97c.
Boys' Heavy Fleece-Lined Undershirts and Drawers, worth 40c. for 25c.
Misses' best quality Vests and Pants, worth 40c. for 25c.
Ladies' best All-Wool Red Flannel Vests and Pants, worth $1.25 for 97c.
Ladies' Fleece Vests and Pants, worth 40c. for 25c.

We can handle 10,000 to 15,000 bushels good Potatoes, at 40c. per bushel. Can commence delivery at any time. Will also pay 65c for good, clean grain BUCKWHEAT.

Yours, to please,

DIXON & KELSO.

BUILDING, PAVING, PRESSED FACE. BRICKS VITRIFIED FOR FOND ATIONS VITRIFIED FOR SEWERS, STREET PAVING BLOCKS.

Best Quality for Building, Casing, Sidewalks and Streets.
Beautiful Shades, Red, Light Granate and Mixed Colors.

Capacity 80,000 Daily. Prompt Shipments.

QUEEN CITY BRICK & TILE COMPANY
—AND—
CUMBERLAND GRANATE BRICK COMPANY
Cumberland, Maryland.

DR. D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.

Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.

Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.

STATE'S ATTORNRY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R.R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily ..... 1.54 A. M
No. 3—Daily ..... 7.17 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday ..... 9.26 A. M
No. 55—Daily ..... 4.53 P. M
No. 1—Daily ..... 10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily ..... 12.27 A. M
No. *4—Daily ..... 6.04 A. M
No. 2—Daily ..... 6.31 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun ..... 5.12 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily ..... 4.34 P. M
No. 12—Daily ..... 8.32 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT AUG. 28, 1904.

SOUTHWARD		STATIONS	NORTHWARD
No. 3	No. 1		No. 2	No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†11 59	†7 40
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	7 08
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 45
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 33
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. Junc	10 51	6 26
4 47	8 27	Barnum	10 36	6 10
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	6 02
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 44
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 40
6 25x	9 50x ar	Elk Garden lv	x8 10	x4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	†5 08
5 55	9 42	Hayard	9 28	5 02
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 52
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 48
6 43†	10 32†	Thomas	†8 38	†4 18
7 10†	11 00† ar	Davis	8 05	†3 40
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 33	4 13
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 40
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 37
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 30
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 56
8 15†	11 59† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 40
	NOON

No. 45	No. 3	No. 1		No. 2	No. 4	No. 46
P. M.	A. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
5 30x	6 30†	2 35x	lv Elkins ar	x8 20	12 30†	s9 15
3 45	6 47	2 51	R.C. Jct	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 51	2 54	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 52
4 01	7 04	3 06	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10s	7 15†	3 15x	ar Bel'g'n lv	x7 35	11 45†	s8 35
					A. M.
P. M.	P. M.	P. M		P. M.	P. M.
x8 30	12 35†	lv	Elkins ar	x9 55	†2 00
8 46	12 52		Beverly	9 39	1 44
9 10†	1 15†	ar	Hutt'e ar	x9 15	1 20†

No. 53	No. 51			No. 54	No. 52
A. M.	P. M.			P. M.	P. M.
x6 20	x12 25	lv	Elkins ar	x2 35	6 50x
7 49	1 24		Fishing Hawk	1 49	5 28
8 34	1 46		Glady	1 30	4 50
9 42	2 19		Burner	12 57	3 48
x10 15	x2 35	ar	Durbin lv	x12 40	3 15x

† Daily x Daily except Sunday. s Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

Winter Goods.

We have Underwear for Men, Women and Children, 25c, up.
Fine line Dress & Overshirts.
Flannels, Blankets and Comforts.
Sweaters for Men, Women and Children.
All-wool Tricot Cloth 25c. yard.
Gloves for everybody.
Good line of Floor Oilcloths.

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

Proposals for Building Sidewalks

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, for the erection of a sidewalk fronting the opera house block in Oakland, beginning at the corner of Green and Second streets and ending at the north property line of H. Lauer, and extending from the property line along said block to the wood curbing.

Proposals will also be received for the erection of a walk from Second street to Railroad street walk.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of N. S. Heindel, First National Bank building, Oakland, Md.

Proposals must be on file with the clerk of said Mayor and Council not later than six o'clock, September 19th, 1904, and endorsed on the back, "Proposal for erecting sidewalks."

By order of the Mayor and Council of Oakland.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,

Plumbing,
Gas Fitting,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.

Center Street,
Keyser, W. Va.

PHONE 62.

In the Land of Sodom

By E. Crayton McCants

Copyright, 1903, by E. Crayton McCants

KEOWEE lies on the railway. The mail trains, bringing people—drummers and such like wandering folk—and news from the outside world, pass it twice each day, and once in a great while some citizen gets a telegram, so Keowee is of its own right a postoffice and a voting precinct and accounts itself enlightened. North of the village the Saluda river flows, and to the west is Belleville, but ten miles to the southeast, straight as the crow flies, over the blue outlines of the opalescent hills, are the marshy low grounds of Halfway swamp, and beyond the swamp lies Sodom.

No land of wickedness, however, is this Sodom of the ragged clay shale ridges, nor are there any slime pits there. Instead its gullied and stony fields are belted by green hill pines, and its people spend much of their time in strenuous high keyed praise, for Sodom is a neighborhood of negroes and might have been named just as aptly Gomorrah or Caesarea Philippi.

The church at Sodom is old—the weathered stones of the burying ground mutely bear witness to that—and long ago its rough walls were stained a neutral gray and green mosses came to harbor on the shingles of the roof. Very proud are the people of Sodom of this their church, and very proud they are of Amaziah Wilkins, who preaches here.

A lean, spare man is Amaziah Wilkins, but sinewy withal and black. Little enough does he seem like a preacher, least of all like the negro preachers who, growing fat and grandiose in manner, cling to the well paying towns and come not to Sodom to tarry there. But, although his church is poor and cannot pay him much, Amaziah is a prosperous man. Indeed, such is his industry that the white folk "over the swamp" have learned his value as a harvest hand and the merchants of Keowee know him as one who is good for his debts and as a shipper of clean, unmortgaged cotton.

And at the times when he speaks in the church there sits on the choir seats a handsome woman lithe of body, erect and black. Talithy her name is, and she is the preacher's wife. To him she has brought her strength, and, like him, she has honor in Sodom as she bends to the Master's work.

But woven into all this there is a story, a story which began many years ago on the river farms that are north of Keowee. It was winter then—a hard winter on the black folk—and there were some who were hungry. In one little cabin there were a woman and a half grown boy. Day by day their small store grew smaller, and the time came when there was nothing. Then the woman wept, but the boy, seeing that food must be had, went out to consider. He could not reason very well, but he knew that through the long hot days of summer they had wrought, he and his mother, until their backs were bent with toil and their hands calloused with labor, and he knew that he was hungry; also he knew that, though the white men had plenty and to spare, their hands were soft. It all seemed wrong to the boy. Nice points of law did not appeal to him. He thought that the producer should eat. Therefore when night had come—the cold, dark night when people harbored indoors and none was abroad to see—the boy went to a white man's barn and, making a hole in the planking, took cotton therefrom and sold it, and he and his mother were fed.

But afterward when the white men suspected him he was afraid and hid himself in the canebrakes and in the tangles of river swamp that border these, and his mother brought him food.

But he was only a boy, after all. The swamps were cold, and he was very lonely there. And when the midday sun shone warm on the pine clad hillsides he crept out there close to a cabin and talked with a child at her play, a girl child black like himself.

"Don't you tell on me, little gal," he said. "Don't you tell folks dat I'm down here. Kase ef you do den de white folks is a-gwineter come—come wid guns an' wid great big dogs, an' dey'll cotch me an' kyar me off, an' yer nuvver will see me any mo'."

Then the child's eyes opened wide with wonder, but she promised, and day after day she came to the pine woods to see this strange big boy who trapped snow buntings for her while he was in the swamp and who brought her pearly white mussel shells from the sand bars that skirt the river. Thus for a long time they amused each other, and as the spring came on the boy grew careless, so that the father of the child saw him and learned of his hiding place.

And because of the price on the head of the boy this man sold his knowledge, and the white men came, and through the whole of a long spring day these—the negro and the white men—tracked the boy through brake and brier and tangled swamp, and as sunset came the boy, being hard pressed, found a "dugout" hidden by the river bank and sought to float away where the remorseless dogs could by no means follow. But as he launched the canoe the negro who had sold him came close upon him, and when the fugitive would not halt the other ran quickly across a bend, striking the stream far below. There he climbed far out on a dead and leaning tree, thinking to halt the boy or to shoot him as he passed. But as the boat came into view the man stepped farther out and the dead tree snapped under his weight so that he fell, and the swirl of the yellow water caught him and sucked him down.

The boy looked first at the dark body shooting downward and then at the bank. The white men were on the bank and the panting, slavering dogs. Then out of the boiling foam a black head was thrust.

"Help, help!" There was terror in the cry, terror and wild despair.

The boy hesitated. It was an awful thing to leave a man to drown. With a quick stroke he shot his light craft forward, and as the head rose again he caught it with his hands. On the bank a white man lifted a gun.

"In shore!" he commanded shortly.

The boy obeyed. Afterward they bound him and led him away, and no one cared—for the man he had rescued was too nearly dead to care—save one old woman in a lonely cabin and a black girl child weeping under the pines. And the world went on mingling its joys and its woes, and the years passed by, and one day Amaziah Wilkins, a lean and silent man, came footsore into Sodom.

"HELP! HELP!"

At first he was only a laborer there hoeing in the cotton fields by day and at night poring by the light of a pine knot fire over the puzzling problems found in spelling books and in readers. Later he went to school for a session or two in some faroff place little known to Sodom, and when he returned his compatriots found in him a man "mighty in pr'ar." Later still he was licensed to preach, and when Unk George Bramlett "fell on sleep" and was laid to rest in Pine Pleasant's burying ground Amaziah was chosen to fill the vacant pastorate. There were those, however, who opposed this, and chief among them was Amos Cummins, a coal black man shrewd of wit and thrifty, who long ago had come from "de farms up on de ribber" to dwell in the land of Sodom. But the other party triumphed, and Amaziah knew little of the strange tales that went about as to how Amos Cummins had seen scars on the new preacher's wrists, scars such as only prison irons could make, and how a prison guard passing through Sodom had called him not Wilkins, but some other name. So with painstaking effort Amaziah went about his work, for frugal industry had given him a home and a little farm.

And with his prosperity, now that position and income were his, love came into the preacher's life, and he thought with longing of a woman pleasant and comely—Amos Cummins' daughter, the woman was—who had wrought next him in the cotton and in the harvest fields. Surely, now that spring was come, with its young grass springing by the bare, gray roadsides, with its little birds building their nests and its fields a-throb with life, it was not good that he should be longer alone. Yet he hesitated. There was that which the woman must know. He did not dare tell her that, and so that thought was put away.

And, reflecting the content of his people, for a time Amaziah grew content with himself and spoke as one having authority and as a man clearly chosen of God, but when the June blossoms were gone and the July drought had come, when the sunlight proved a burden and the rains refused to fall, then the preacher remembered the manner of man that he was and saw in the parching earth the hot displeasure of his angry Lord.

Then the people began to talk. Simple folk are these, who, like their pastor, see in their puny fortunes the purposings of God. Surely they were not crushed without due cause. Who, then, had sin? This man they knew and that— But the pastor? Ah, Amos Cummins had opposed the pastor, and there had been tales abroad. Why should the preacher be so silent? Why not tell all about himself—where he was born, where he had been and why he came hungry to Sodom? And as the whispers went they grew, and in the end the preacher stood alone.

Then a meeting day came, the last in the hot July, and with it the last hope had also come. Rain now would still bring a "top crop" to the cotton and make the "bottom" corn. But a week hence, with the uplands already lost, then, save to the thirsty cattle and the dried up, festering streams, rain would be but a mockery, come too late to save.

But it was meeting day and the people fared to church there to make once more their feeble prayer for rain.

At the church a company was already gathered, and presently some of the older women came, mothers in Israel whose counsel was to be regarded. For a space all were silent, then a woman spoke. "Hit seem lak de Lord don' keer," she remarked dejectedly. "He sholy don't keer any mo'."

Amos Cummins shook his head and groaned.

"De Lord done sot his face ag'in Sodom," he replied, "an' dat bekase of sin an' bekase of much onrighteousness!"

There was a pause. A field sparrow flew up from the ground and perched on a nearby twig, but partly closing its extended wings and with its mouth open and panting. Amos Cummins glanced at it and pointed.

"You see dat?" he asked. "You see dat burd? Eb'n de beastesses an' de flyin' fowels of de air suffers fer de sins of man"— He hesitated and looked around him. "Of one man!" he added almost fiercely.

"A-a-h-h-h!" The crowd knew now of whom he spoke—the preacher whose wrists were scarred. Yes, they knew their Jonah, but they waited.

"We got ter pu'ge ourse'ves!" the old man went on impressively. "We got ter cas' out dis man! We got ter mek dis yer chu'ch clean an' walk 'um'ly 'fore our God. Den de hebben gwineter open, open ter de drappin' of de rain!"

"Who gwinter move dat, Amos?" they queried. "Who gwinter fetch hit ter de notice of de chu'ch?"

"I is!" he answered firmly. "I is, dis ve'y day."

Down behind the church where the pine straw lies deep in a sheltering hollow the preacher was down on his knees. He knew nothing of the plot up yonder nor of the sullen anger against him, but he felt that heaven had cast him off, and he wrestled manfully with himself and with God. In this his hidden place the last rays of yesterday's sun had bidden him good night; here in the long dark watches the little stars had lighted his upturned face, and here the gray dawn had found him. Now, even though the day was passing, still he was here agonizing and praying, for it seemed to him that a great sin encompassed him, that his guilt was written large upon him and that of a verity he was the Achan within whose tent the damning wedge was hid. Knowing this, he knew his duty. But it was hard—so hard! For others he did not care, but for Talithy to know, she whom he loved— Blindly he sought some easier way. Almost he was resolved to slip away in the night and to see Sodom no more.

Very slowly the man arose and took his way toward the church. With tense muscles and hard set jaw he went down the aisle straight to the rude old chancel. As he turned he saw but one face of all the throng, and that was Talithy's.

"Brethren," he began (the assembly stilled—what had the man to say?), "dis congregation is a-sufferin' bekase of sin, an' dat sin is mine." The woman in the choir seat started and clasped her hands, then sank back and sat very still. The congregation stared. Who could have told the man of their resolve? "I's took my trouble ter de Lord," the preacher continued, "an' I hopes he is p'intin' de way, but I don' know. Hit seems like he is fur from me now. Anyhow, I's come ter resign dis church, fer I ain't a-gwine ter preach any more. I oughtn't ter have started, I reck'n, an' de reason of hit all is dis:

"One time, away back yonder, I tuk some of a white man's cotton. I was hongry, an' my ole mammy was hongry, too, but dat don' matter now. I stole de cotton, an' I was cotched. Dey tracked me wid dogs, de white folks did, an' all day long I run, a-dodgin' of the dogs an' a-backtrackin' an' a-wadin', but long 'bout night I tuk ter de ribber. De ribber was a-risin' dat night, an' de swift water was a-lappin' at de banks, but a black man clumb out on a tree jes' de same ter try ter stop me, an' de tree broke, an' he fell right in de swiftes' water." The speaker paused. "I always thought dat was a mighty fool man," he added reflectively.

Amos Cummins squirmed in his seat.

"He was," he now ejaculated crisply. "He was a plumb fool!"

But the other went on unheeding.

"He couldn' swim, dat black man couldn', an' I had ter stop an' git him out'n dar. Dat's how come I got cotch. Men"—his voice almost sank to a whisper—"dey sent me ter jail bekase of dat steal-in', an' atter I got out I come here ter

"I'S COME TER RESIGN DIS CHURCH."

Sodom. You knows hit all now 'cept how I tried ter do right, how I thought de Lord was a-gwinter let a jailbird preach.

The preacher sat down and bowed his head in his hands.

"I resigns de church," he said very humbly. The congregation was silent and sat motionless. The story had stirred all to a sudden sympathy. Out in the west a dark cloud was rising from behind the hills, but they did not see it, and over old Amos' hard black face there had come a sudden change. Slowly he arose from his seat and came to where the preacher sat.

"Brudder Wilkins," he said, "I ain't knowed who yer wuz 'fore dis, but I's dat black man what you pulled out'n de water dat day."

The preacher looked up with a sudden interest, but it was Talithy's eyes that he sought, not those of Amos.

The woman smiled at him and nodded gravely.

"Hit's de trufe," she said. "I used ter play wid yer dar in de pines, Brudder Wilkins. I's knowed who yer wuz ever sense you come ter Sodom."

Somewhere back in the body of the church a woman began to sing:

"Out of my trouble deep,
Hear thou my cry;
Come to my rescue, Lord,
Save or I die!"

And the people rose and joined in the pulsing refrain, and as their clear, strong voices rang out and woke the echoes there came from beyond the far stretched and parching fields a muttering roll of thunder and a sound as of falling rain.

How to Keep the Boy on the Farm

By Governor MYRON T. HERRICK of Ohio

THE problem of the farmer has been to retain THAT PRICELESS PRODUCT—THE BOY. The ambitious young American demands both profit and pleasure in return for his labor. You did not give him either of these. Both of these he found in the great cities.

The great cities called him, and he responded to the call. THEY FOUND THE COUNTRY BOY INVALUABLE FROM EVERY POINT OF VIEW. His vigorous constitution, healthy mind and the ability to endure the continuous strain of that strenuous life which comes with the fiercest competition in the professions and in all lines of manufacture and business in great cities brought to him the highest market price for his abilities.

This draft from the farms was so constant that in many states the farms were about deserted, and only the incompetent and old remained, living in the memories of the past. YOU WERE TOO SLOW FOR THEM. With the market for our agricultural products and with the technical education in agriculture the country boy is finding at home one of the things which his ambition craves, and that is a profit for his labor from the soil, a market for his brain and brawn. But this possibility is not yet fully appreciated.

GIVE THE FARMER BOY WHO HAS HIS OWN WAY TO MAKE A THOROUGH EDUCATION—NOT NECESSARILY A CLASSICAL EDUCATION, BUT A TECHNICAL ONE, THAT FITS HIM FOR THE GREATEST OF ALL INDUSTRIES—FARMING.

But you cannot stop here. One other reason for his desertion of the farm is that he is a social being. You have overlooked his amusements and his recreations, and these things are QUITE AS NECESSARY in his retention as that he should receive a compensation for his labor. There is every reason why social life in the country should be made as attractive as that of the city.

Science has unhitched the mules from the street car and from the thrashing machine. Now that you have done this, and have demonstrated to the farmer boy that he can find a profit in the farm, why not take up with the same intelligence the problem of permitting him to participate in more of the social pleasures and enjoyments which this beautiful world affords?

WHEN THE AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS OF THE UNITED STATES LANGUISH IT IS A MENACE TO OUR FREE INSTITUTIONS, FOR IN THAT INDUSTRY LIES A FORCE WHICH HAS EVER STOOD FOR HONESTY, LIBERTY AND CONSERVATISM, AND IT AT ALL TIMES HAS HAD THE INTELLIGENCE AND COURAGE TO TURN ASIDE FROM LEADERS OR PARTY DEPARTING FROM THE FOUNDATION PRINCIPLES UPON WHICH OUR FREE INSTITUTIONS REST.

Why There Are So Many Bachelors

By the Rev. Dr. MADISON C. PETERS, Baptist, Philadelphia

I WOULD make all the improvements of the manners and the accomplishments of education subordinate to the duties of the home—the means to make home happy.

The state of life into which it has pleased God to call our daughters is plainly for the most part that which entails the duties of the housekeeper and the home maker, and FOR THOSE DUTIES THE LEARNING ACQUIRED IN THE SCHOOLS OFTEN DOES MUCH TO UNFIT THEM.

The result of this unfaithfulness in the foundation education is seen in the EXTRAVAGANT HABITS OF OUR MODERN HOUSEKEEPING and the ignorant waste where the young woman finds herself unable to direct her servants in cases where she is not required to do the actual work herself.

And wearying of her attempts to be queen in her own home she allows her little kingdom to live without a head. Her husband finds that the expense of married life is far greater than he anticipated and the comforts less.

IT IS THIS EXTRAVAGANCE AND INCOMPETENCE AMONG WOMEN THAT ACCOUNT FOR NEARLY FOUR MILLION SINGLE MEN PAST THIRTY IN THIS COUNTRY. It costs so much now to support a wife that it has become a prevalent sentiment that a man must acquire his fortune before he marries, that the wife must have no share nor sympathy with him in the pursuit of it and the young married people must set out with as large an establishment as is becoming to those who have been married for twenty years.

This fills the country with bachelors who are waiting to make their fortunes, endangering virtue, promoting vice; IT DESTROYS THE DESIGN OF THE DOMESTIC INSTITUTION and it encourages inefficiency among women who are expecting to be taken up by fortune and sustained without any care on their part.

Women's Outside Activities And the Home

By Mrs. WILLIAM TOD HELMUTH, Former President of the International Council of Women

I DO not think there is the slightest danger of the home life being affected by the outside activities of women—that is, as long as there is sympathy between husband and wife. He will be interested in her work as she is in his. OF COURSE THE DEMANDS OF THE HOME MUST BE MET BEFORE ANYTHING ELSE. But a woman who is interested in definite work of a practical or philanthropic character is far less likely to neglect her home than the frivolous being who lives only for a round of social dissipation, whose activity takes the form of flirting with another woman's husband or seeking her so called soul affinity.

By far the most striking advance made by American women is in the field of business, in my opinion. FROM A SHELTERED, HELPLESS CREATURE WOMAN HAS DEVELOPED INTO A CAPABLE, INDEPENDENT HUMAN BEING.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroad now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later than December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

GRANULATED

Fertilizer Lime!

FOR FA RERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

C. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—2it

Now is the Time! Don't Wait!

Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work

A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, } FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY,
First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.
FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS
HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

The Keyser Preparatory Branch
OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.
A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.
Special instruction for public School Teachers.
Instruction in Music.
A Splendid New Building Provided by the State.
A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.
Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.
No Tuition in Commercial Department.
Small Tuition charged Students from other States.
Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.
Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.
For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal.

L. L. FRIEND,
Keyser, W. Va.

CORNERSTONE LAYING BY MASONIC FRATERNITY.

With Ancient Ceremonies at the Bloomington Methodist Church.

ADDRESS BY MR. O. H. BRUCE.

Who Expiated Upon the Beauties of Masonry—Rev. Mr. Snedegar, the Pastor, Who Is Recovering from Injuries, Was Present.

From last week's issue of the Piedmont Herald the following account of the laying of the cornerstone of the Methodist Episcopal church at Bloomington, is taken:

The corner-stone laying of the Methodist Episcopal church at Bloomington, Garrett county, Md., which we mentioned last week would be laid on the Sunday following by the Masonic fraternity, came off last Sunday afternoon, Sept. 25, and proved quite an attraction for the home-like village just to the west of us. The ceremony was in the immediate charge of Hiram lodge of Westernport, but was participated in by members of Mt. Carbon lodge, of Piedmont, as well, and had the support of many of the members of other lodges, but who sojourn among us. The fraternity met in the lodge room across the river in Westernport at 1:30 p. m. and at two o'clock left in procession according to Masonic form, taking up the line of march through Westernport, Piedmont, and Lake, thence across the railroad bridge to the West Virginia side of the river, and on to Bloomington by the way of Savage. There were some sixty Masons in line led by Mr. John T. Zais as Tyler and under the marshaiship of Mr. Elmer J. Rowe. In the procession were carried the Great Light of Masonary, the Bible, the Candlesticks, the Silver vessels containing corn, wine, and oil. Arriving at the place in Bloomington where the building is being erected, the lodge took its place in front of the foundation, the officers forming the inside rank of a hollow square, and the members ranged on an outer line with these. Before the ceremonies proper began, the Rev. W. W. Davis of Piedmont officiated for the pastor at Bloomington in holding a short religious service and superintending the collection. The pastor Rev. Mr. Snedegaa, who was seriously injured a few weeks ago, and who since the amputation of a part of his leg, has been at the hospital at Keyser, was present and occupied an honored seat on the platform, to the gratification of his many friends present. The Masonic ceremony was performed by the officers of Hiram lodge of Westernport, according to the ritualistic features of that work, Mr. Wm. B. Ownes the worshipful master of its lodge presiding and conducting the forms. Everything seemed to move very smoothly, the officers receiving congratulations of their friends and acquaintances, and the people of Bloomington expressing themselves as very much pleased with the service. At the conclusion of the work two addresses were delivered, one by Mr. O. H. Bruce, who spoke on "Masonry" and one by Rev. W. W. Davis, who spoke from the stand point of the "Church." A selected choir of young people rendered several selections of music.

The number present to view the service was quite large, a council of the Junior Order of American Mechanics occupying a prominent place in the audience, and many of the lady members of the Order of Eastern Star accompanying the Masonic fraternity to the scene.

ADDRESSE BY O. H. BRUCE.

Worshipful Master, Brethren of the Craft, and Ladies and Gentlemen:

The scene and its occasion are very suggestive, and very inspiring. Here, amid the shadows of the mountains—Gods of the mountains—God's greatest sentinels in the whole realm of his creation, and as well the objects of man's constant wonder and perpetual admiration—the oldest fraternal organization among men comes to assist in the erection of an edifice to be dedicated to the promulgation of the essentials of the most estimable possession of man, viz: the elements of revealed religion. And it should not be considered in any sense out of place that this co-operation should exist. Divine as the organized church may be, and treasured and nurtured as it undoubtledly is by the Father's care, it nevertheless has no greater preeminence in maintaining the great principles of "the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man," than has this ancient and honorable fraternity we call Freemasonry.

The co-operation therefore of two such bodies in publicly and persistently declaring, the one for the need of such an edifice, and the other for its willingness and readiness to assist in supplying that need, is both timely and opportune. From time immemorial this has been the custom of our society; and so long as it remains true to the great principles that called it into being, and that have preserved it through a thousand conflicts, and that give to its followers pleasure and satisfaction contiuually, it will continue to co-operate in all good works, only asking that it shall be allowed to work out its allotted destiny without unjust criticism, unwarranted interference, or the attempts of ignorance and superstition to belittle its great, and grand and beneficient mission among men.

On so interesting and auspicious an occasion as the present it is not expected, I persume, that any extended references he made to the history of Freemasonry; nor indeed is it necessary to do so in this enlightened age when that history has become an open book, every page of which has been visited by the flashlight of earnest inquiry; and sayings, and prophecies, and the achievements of the brotherhood have received the commendation, endorsement, and admiration of the best and truest men of every age. Suffice it to say in this particular, that no institution among men has been subject to more widespread investigatton, more jealous inquiry, more persistent and unflagging persecution than has the organization known world-wide among men as "Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons."

From out this history, creditable alike to it, its principles, and its followers, it has come honored by its steadfast course in the right, and strong beyond measure by reason of its glorious triumphs. It has been enabled to do this because it was conceived in the truth, born of the truth, and has abided by the truth throughout its whole career; and the truth has made it free. Its greatest glory has been, is now, and will continue to be, that it has never deviated a hair's breadth from the course originally marked out for it, but that its great over-shadowing landmarks are as plainly read on its trestle-board today as when first traced out by the hand of its divine grand master before the world was, or the morning stars sang for joy because of the great truth that was to be the guiding star of the childeen of men throughout the generations yet uncreated. This guiding star, these landmarks, this great everlasting truth, is nothing less than the oft repeated underlying principle of Freemasonry, so familiar to every one who has trodden the Mosaic pavement, stepped within the indented tessel, or knelt upon the blazing star, and that is: "the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

This organization is unique among the societies of man in that it has added nothing to its original body, its laws, its ethics, or its principles; neither has it seen the necessity for taking anything therefrom; no not one iota of the great trust committed to it has been set aside; but on the contrary the society has been content to move in an even pathway, satisfied yes abundantly satisfied, is it can rendered unto the Father the homage due, and unto the brethern the wages of justice and equality. By reason of this undeviating course, and because these principles are fixed, and are essential to the life of the institution, Freemasonry has had the honorable history that has been hers, and has been able to reflect that honor and glory upon all who have been true followers of the art it practices, or the science it teaches.

Its standards have been elevating in their tendencies, and its deeds have been ennobling in their influences. Its relation to the Father of all good is such as to keep constantly before its votaries His power, His grace, His beneficence, and His claim upon all of the children of men for obedience. Its relation to man is such that his cry for aid has never gone unheeded, his welfare has ever been remembered. For him the foot has gone out of its way that he might be served; for him the arm has been outstretched that he might be aided; and the counsel and admonition that have been his have been such as to call him back from error's ways and strengthen him in all good purposes.

Within Masonic halls neither charity, nor love, nor unrestrained affection have been strangers, but on the contrary every moral and social virtue have united to cement the members in one common brotherhood. This is the epitome of its history, and as such serves to confirm the justice of every claim made in its behalf as an honorable and useful fraternity among men.

It was in the full consciousness of this honorable record that our worshipful master, as he concluded the beautiful ceremony of laying this corner-stone, was able to say in your hearing: "Know all you hear me. We proclaim ourselves free and lawful Masons, true to the laws of our country; professing to fear God, and to confer benefits upon mankind. We practice universal beneficences towards all."

But Masonry is not to be judged solely on its record in the past. The record it is making in the present is to be taken as well, and by friends and foe, for serious consideration. We submit therefore as a challenge for contradiction the claims made in the worshipful master's proclamation. Say you: "Masons true to the laws of their country?" There are none truer! Say you: "Masons professing to fear God?" There are none who make a recognition of his existence, his power, his watchfulness, and his care, so preeminently a tenet of their institutions as do the Masons! Say you: "Masons conferring benefits on mankind?" Indeed the essence, the very germ-life of the whole world-wide, inseparable Masonic fraternity is to give, and to give where needed, and to give so as to enrich, and to bountifully! Say you: "Masons practicing universal benevolence towards all?" Most assuredly so! Their charity is not confined within the household! Their deeds of kindness and mercy are not limited to the initiated! Their treasure houses are not sealed to any who stands in need! Neither are their sympathies, their sorrows, nor their tears withheld from any of the sons of men! But of a truth, their beneficences is as boundless as is creation, and their desires are as earnest as a faithful following of the principles of Freemasonry can possibly make a man!

GOOD ROADS IN MARYLAND

The people of the State are fast awaking to the fact that the poor condition of roads, wherever they occur, has not been altogether the result of shortness of road appropriations, but due, in part to the manner in which the money has been applied, and that the same amount of money scientifically applied will in comparatively few years guarantee a system of satisfactory roads which the outlay and toil of years has failed to procure. The State Aid Road Law, which was passed at the last legislature, has already aroused more than ordinary interest, as is shown by the many applications to the Maryland Geological Survey for plans and estimates of the cost of modern macadam roads, which many of the Boards of County Commissioners purpose to make under the new road law.

The most earnest advocates of scientifically built roads have never urged that a system of modern roads could be secured at once, but it has been repeatedly pointed out and demonstrated by experience that a system of good roads can be gradually and conveniently built up by adding each year small pieces of modern roads wherever the conditions most demand improvement. As an example of the comparison between the results produced under the wasteful method of the past and the results of scientifically built roads, it has been shown that had Montgomery county spent one-half of the amount of money its roads have cost in the past fifteen years in the building of modern roads during the same length of time, forty-five miles of good macadam roads would now furnish easy access to all the main points of the county. But such is not the case, and forty-five miles of good macadam roads have not been built during this time in Montgomery or any other county of this State. It has been shown also that should the counties of Maryland take up the total amount of State aid under the Shoemaker law, it would be possible to build one thousand miles of modern or State roads within ten years, enough to insure easy traffic between all parts of the State. And the residents of the counties under the new law have the matter entirely in their own hands, for they know that by the pledge of two-thirds of the property owners along a piece of road to pay ten percent of the cost of building, the Road Commissioners of the county can be forced to petition for the allotted share of the State aid. Again, it is well to emphasize the fact that the Shoemaker law puts within reach of the real producers in a community a very good thing at a very reasonable price to the county; namely, one-half the actual expense.

Recent mention has been made of movements in Montgomery, Harford, Prince George's and Caroline counties to take advantage of the State aid road fund. A number of the counties have provided themselves with expert road engineers to handle or direct most of their work. Prince George's county is planning on a large scale, Harford county has actually begun some of its work, and Baltimore county wants to build a mile of State road in each of her fifteen districts.

The County Commissioners of Wicomico county have called a large public meeting, to be held Salisbury, to discuss whether Wicomico county will take up its $10,000 allotment of the State road fund in the interest of better county roads. To obtain the State fund, it is necessary for the county to appropriate an equal sum, and the Commissioners wish to know whether the people are willing to be taxed to do this. Mr. A. N. Johnson, Highway Engineer of the Maryland Geological Survey, will be present to explain the features of the new law, and to point out the best material available for Wicomico roads and the estimates upon the cost. The Commissioners desire a full attendance, and the meeting is expected to be an important occasion.

War Hero and War Victim

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

July 22, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

IN moments of exalted daring there were sacrificed to the north during the civil war General Phil Kearny at Chantilly, Sept. 1, 1862; General W. F. Reynolds at Gettysburg, July 1, 1863, and General J. B. McPherson at Atlanta, July 22, 1864, and to the south "Stonewall" Jackson at Chancellorsville in 1863. All of them fell while acting from what may be called a strained sense of duty. They were not in battle proper, and, with the exception of Reynolds, were hit when outside of their own lines. Reynolds had but a single line of men between him and the enemy when he fell, and that line was fighting almost hand to hand.

Of these four choice spirits in war McPherson was undoubtedly the ablest commander, judged by what he had accomplished. Kearny was good at the head of a division. Reynolds had distinguished himself as a division and corps commander and fell in his first essay as commander in chief on the field, while Jackson, who startled the world as a lieutenant to Lee, achieved very little whenever he was brought in contact with his peers, as he was on two or three important occasions. McPherson was a military success from the very start, and he started almost at the lowest round of the ladder—captain in the regular army.

Beginning as captain on Grant's staff, McPherson reached the rank of brigadier general of volunteers the first twelve months of the war, serving with glory at Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth and Iuka. He was always ambitious to lead fighting troops and was given a chance at Corinth in October, 1862. Leading the advance in pursuit of the enemy after the bloody battle of Corinth, he was immediately promoted major general and given a division in Grant's army.

In Grant's overland campaign against Vicksburg McPherson commanded the right wing and was assigned to the permanent command of the Seventeenth corps when Grant set out to flank the stronghold at Vicksburg. This was just one year after his promotion from the rank of captain. During the march to the rear of Vicksburg McPherson exercised a command equal to that of Sherman and showed the stuff that was in him. His line attacked the enemy almost daily, and he led the columns in person. His troops led off in the attack on Jackson, Miss., carrying the intrenchments at one bound and hoisting the stars and stripes over the Confederate statehouse while the hostile tread still resounded in the city streets.

At the battle of Champion Hills McPherson's men did about all the work, and the fighting was so vigorous that Grant sent word to him during the heat of battle, "You are making history today." During the siege which followed McPherson was the compeer of Sherman and a lieutenant trusted and honored by his chief. He arranged the terms of capitulation when the post surrendered and as a recognition of his skill and personal daring was promoted to the rank of brigadier general in the regular army.

When Grant at last turned over his command in the west to Sherman, March, 1864, and assumed the control of all the armies McPherson succeeded Sherman at the head of the Army of the Tennessee, then over 60,000 strong, and when Sherman set out on his campaign to Atlanta McPherson followed him in person with about 25,000 of his troops, the Fifteenth corps, under General John A. Logan, and the Sixteenth, under General G. M. Dodge.

In the battles before Atlanta the new commander of the Army of the Tennessee proved his fitness for the role and displayed the highest and best quality of a soldier—capacity for leadership. His army fought at New Hope church and Dallas in May, and, after the addition of the Seventeenth corps, under General Frank P. Blair, at Kenesaw mountain in June. As the forces drew near the intrenched city McPherson was on the left and well to the east while Sherman's main strength lay along Peach Tree creek on the north. On the 20th of July a fierce battle took place at Peach Tree creek. About this time General John B. Hood superseded General Joseph E. Johnston at the head of the Confederate army defending Atlanta, and an attack at Peach Tree creek was the first step in a new policy. Hood was a fighter and fought with a gambler's recklessness and daring. His battle of the 20th was a bold lunge with the army corps of Stewart and Hardee against Sherman's center. But "Pop" Thomas, the "Rock of Chickamauga," was there, and Hood nearly dashed his brains out, so to speak, losing 5,000 men against less than 2,000, and withdrew to his own lines.

On the 22d of July Hood made a second sortie, surpassing the first in boldness and involving a blind night march of fifteen miles for Hardee's corps, from Peach Tree creek to a point on the Confederate right beyond McPherson's line or near Decatur. The Georgia railway, supplying the army in Atlanta, ran through Decatur, and McPherson's army was drawing dangerously near to it. The plan for the Confederate sortie of the 22d aimed at the complete destruction of McPherson. Hardee was to move his corps silently from the works in front of Thomas, march away beyond McPherson's left flank and form and attack the Seventeenth corps, under Blair. Hood's own corps, led by General B. F. Cheatham and occupying trenches east of Atlanta, was to follow Hardee for a distance, pass beyond and take up the battle against any Federal forces sent to support Blair's left. Blair rested his flank upon a wooded elevation known as Bald hill. Among the happenings of the event was the fact that Dodge's Sixteenth corps during the afternoon and night of the 21st had been placed in support of Blair's line.

On the morning of the 22d McPherson ordered this corps to move to the left of Blair and extend his line to the south. At noon Dodge had both his divisions, Sweeny's and Fuller's, halted near Blair's flank and was making dispositions to carry out his orders. McPherson at the moment was at Sherman's headquarters consulting with his chief. Suddenly there was an outburst of musketry away beyond Blair's left, where no hostile troops were supposed to be. Mounting in hot haste, McPherson galloped to the scene of attack.

Sweeny's division met the first attack, but Fuller's men, infantry and artillery, were promptly pushed up in support. The Confederates emerged from the thicket upon open ground, there to find muskets and cannon in menacing array to receive them. Banners waved, officers shouted and implored, great guns played in unison, and blinding volleys of musketry swept over the field. Participants were maddened with the rage and conflict, and spectators were spellbound. McPherson was looking on from an elevated spot and with delight saw the rash assailants hurled back by the sturdy veterans of the Seventeenth corps. But the boldness of the attack told him that it was no mere collision, for the Confederates, if there at all, would be in force. The attack had found Dodge out of line as it had been ordered to be formed, and McPherson now repeated his commands for Dodge to assume position on the left of Blair. At the same time he saw that the Confederate flank was overlapping Blair's left and that there was a dangerous gap between the two corps, Blair's and Dodge's—a gap in the line of battle and an enemy whose strength was unmeasured rushing forward to the attack.

Every soldier knows what that situation means to a commander. It was such a gap, caused by a faulty movement, that cost the Federal army the battle of Chickamauga; it was such a gap that General Hancock saw and promptly closed by ordering a forlorn hope charge on July 2 at Gettysburg, warding off disaster. McPherson ordered Blair, whose line was steadfast, to send a brigade quickly to his extreme left to occupy the space between his Seventeenth corps and Dodge's Sixteenth while the latter was taking a new position. Then he passed along the line, sending aids in all directions to carry his instructions. When he came to the ground where he had ordered a brigade from Blair to fill the gap he found no line at all.

Could it be that the commander had missed his way and gone too far? If so, he might be lost and the fatal gap left open to the enemy, and if he had not arrived some other troops must be brought up at once. Here was an emergency no vigilant general could intrust to the care of other hands. He had two or three aids and an orderly for escort, and without halting he led the way along the unoccupied ground toward the Confederate position. Just now a new element came into the conflict. During all of this fighting Hardee had been working up the Federal line on Blair's front, and in accordance with the plan Cheatham's troops had reached the field. Cleburne's division of this corps was just passing on to support Hardee and became entangled in the woods where McPherson's party was looking up the missing Federal brigade. Three of Cleburne's men, belonging to the Fifth Tennessee, among them Corporal Robert Coleman, made a short cut to reach the column beyond the obstructions and suddenly encountered McPherson, with his aids, riding between the lines. Coleman singled out "the shining mark" of the group and, all unaware of what he was doing, shot down the commander of the Army of the Tennessee.

McPherson fell headlong from the saddle and died instantly. Meanwhile Coleman's comrades had fired, killing a horse under one of the aids and wounding the general's orderly. Coleman was soon afterward captured by Sherman's men and learned who his noble victim was. He declared that he would always regret that shot, made on the impulse of the moment.

So fell the leader of an army with 40,000 men within call, every one of whom would have died to save him.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offiers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R.R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1905.

The following time table on the B. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily		1.54 A. M
No. 3—Daily		7.17 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday		9.26 A. M
No. 55—Daily		4.53 P. M
No. 1—Daily		10.20 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 1—Daily		12.57 A. M
No. *8—Daily		6.04 A. M
No. 2—Daily		6.31 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily exceptSun		5.12 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily		4.34 P. M
No. 12—Daily		8.32 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN, Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT AUG. 28, 1904.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†11 50	†7 40
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	7 08
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 45
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 33
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June	10 51	6 26
4 47	8 27	Barrnina	10 36	6 10
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	6 02
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 44
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 40
6 25x	9 50x ar	Elk Garden lv	x8 10	x4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	†5 08
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	5 02
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 52
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 48
6 43†	10 32†	Thomas	†8 38	†4 18
7 10†	11 00† ar	Davis	†8 05	†3 40
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 33	4 13
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 00	3 40
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 37
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 30
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 56
8 15†	11 59† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 40
	NOON

No.45	No. 3	No. 1		No. 2	No. 4	No.46
P. M.	A. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
3 30§	6 30†	2 35x	lv Elkins ar	x8 20	12 30†	§9 15
3 45	6 47	2 51	R.C. Jct	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 51	2 54	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 52
4 01	7 04	3 06	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10§	7 15†	3 15x	ar Bel'g'n lv	x7 35	11 45†	§8 35
					A. M.

P. M.	P. M			P. M.	P. M.
x8 30	12 35†	lv	Elkins ar	x9 55	†2 00
8 46	12 52		Beverly	9 39	1 44
9 10†	1 15†	ar	Hutt'e ar	x9 15	1 20†

No. 53	No. 51			No. 54	No. 52
A. M.	P. M.			P. M.	P. M.
x6 20	x12 35	lv	Elkins ar	x2 35	6 50x
7 49	1 24		Fishing Hawk	1 49	5 28
8 34	1 46		Glady	1 30	4 50
9 42	2 19		Burner	12 57	3 48
x10 15	x2 35	ar	Durbin lv	x12 40	3 15x

† Daily x Daily except Sunday. § Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

Great Big Bargains.

$75 will buy Lot No. 241, on corner Hazel Glade Drive and Park front; worth $300.

$50 will buy Lot No. 242, adjoining above; worth $200.

$75 will buy Lot No. 219, on corner D street and Park front; worth $225.

$50 will buy Lot No. 218, adjoining above; worth $200.

$50 will buy Lot No. 220, fronting on D street, and

$50 for Lot No. 221.

No Building Conditions on these Lots.

Apply to

L. A. RUDISILL,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

NOTICE OF

Registration of Voters.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY,

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 15th, 1904.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 33, as amended by the Acts of 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1904, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respection Election Districts of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on

Tuesday, October 4,

Tuesday, October 11,

and on

Tuesday, October 18,

for revision only,

(No one can Register after Tuesday, Oct. 11)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts and for the purpose of performing all other duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland.

Election District Number One—
Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—
Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—
Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the old Postoffice Building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—
Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Thos. Garvey's house in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—
Accident.

The Officers of Registratton for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—
Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—
Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Corrigan property, Third and Alder streets, in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—
Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—
Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration for the Ninth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the shop of Thomas Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—
Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Building owned by Dr. J. W. Laughlin in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—
The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—
Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the storeroom of C. E. Ellithorpe, in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—
Kitzmillersville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in Kitzmillersville.

Election District Number Fourteen—
Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the Opera House building in the town of Oakland.

WILLIAM HAMILL,
A. C. BROWNING,
Officers of Registration for District No. 1 of Garrett county, Md.

JASPER GUARD,
DAVID K. HERRING,
Officers of Registration for District No. 2 of Garrett county, Md.

JOHN CUSTER,
THOMAS H. BITTINGER,
Officers of Registration for District No. 3 of Garrett county, Md.

WM. J. BARNARD,
JOEL PAUGH,
Officers of Registration for District No. 4 of Garrett county, Md.

JAMES E. McGETTIGAN,
WM. M. FRAZEE,
Officers of Registration for District No. 5 of Garrett county, Md.

NATHAN C. BROWNING,
J. ALVIN FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for District No. 6 of Garrett county, Md.

E. H. BARTLETT,
LINCOLN CALLIS,
Officers of Registration for District No. 7 of Garrett county, Md.

JAMES W. MASON,
JONAS YUTZY,
Officers of Registration for District No. 8 of Garrett county, Md.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
DANIEL B. LAYMAN,
Officers of Registration for District No. 9 of Garrett county, Md.

WILLIAM SEABOLD,
S. P. SPECHT,
Officers of Registration for District No. 10 of Garrett county, Md.

PETER F. MICHAEL,
STANLEY M. JACOBS,
Officers of Registration for District No. 11 of Garrett county, Md.

HENRY WILEY,
SIMON J. ORENDORF,
Officers of Registration for District No. 12 of Garrett county, Md.

L. C. HAMILL,
W. SCOTT PEW,
Officers of Registration for District No. 13 of Garrett county, Md.

JOHN F. BROWNING,
B. C. SCOTT,
Officers of Registration for District No. 14 of Garrett county, Md.

EDMUND JAMISON, President,
CHAS. M. MILLER,
E. E. SOLLARS,
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Md.

CHAS. A. DIFFINBAUGH, Clerk.

Mortgagees' Sale

OF VALUABLE

REAL ESTATE

Adjoining the Town of Oakland, Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Louisa Chambers to the undersigned mortgagees, dated the 16th day of April, 1903, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 43, folios 413, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having been made under said mortgage, we hereby give notice that we will offer at public sale to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY,

The 15th Day of October, 1904,

at the hour of eleven o'clock a. m. of said day, in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland aforesaid, all that lot, piece or parcel of ground situate, lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, which on the plat of Dailey's Sub—divisions of lots Nos. 57, 58, 71, 72, and 2, of Pennington's Addition to the Town of Oakland is known and designated as Lot No. 31, and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning for the same at a planted stone marked 31 standing on the North side of Crook street and the West side of Third street, and North 67 West, 60 feet from the end of the first line of Lot No. 30 of the subdivision of Lot No. 2 of said addition, and running thence with Third street North 23 East, 68½ feet, then North 67 West, 130 feet, South 46½ West, 76 feet to Crook street, and with it South 67 East, 158½ feet to the beginning, containing

9,881 1-8 SQ. FEET.

The improvements consist of a comparatively new and

Commodious Dwelling

containing eight rooms, a stable and other necessary outbuildings, and is a very desirable property.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
FRED. A. THAYER,
Mortgagees.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

The Democrats favor "liberal pensions" for the old soldiers, and denounce the alleged executive usurpation of President Roosevelt is causing to be issued the order recognizing total disability at the age of 70, and a half disability at the age of 62 years. The Democratic spellbinders may not be able to see the inconsistency of their professions, but it will not be difficult for the old soldiers to see it. The one act alleged executive usurpation pointed out by the Democrats and so loudly complained of by them, is that in behalf of the old soldiers. That order has two excellent precedents. President Cleveland's Commissioner of Pensions, Judge Lochran, who was a strict constructionist, interpreted the Pension Act of 1890 as recognizing total disability at the age of 75 years. President McKinley's Commissioner of Pensions, Mr. Evans, further interpreted that act as recognizing half disability at the age of 62 years. There was no fault found with these rulings.

The Democrats used the ruling of Commissioner Lochran as proof of Democratic friendship for the old soldier. The order of President Roosevelt's Commissioner of Pensions, Mr. Ware, is in line with the precedents established by Cleveland and McKinley, but it goes further in the direction which the old soldier, have claimed is justifiable and was intended by Congress in the passage of that Act. It is also in line with the Acts of Congress providing that officers of the regular Army may retire at the age of 62, and are compelled to retire at the age of 64.

The present Administration has fixed the age of total disability at 70 years, of half disability at 62 years, and has provided a graduated scale between these two extremes. If the Democrats favor liberal pensions, why do they denounce as executive usurpation an order in line with the precedent already established by a Democratic President and a Republican President? If Democrats are in favor of a service pension as some of those from the North have claimed, why did the Democrats in Congress vote against an appropriation of $1,500,000 as a deficiency to carry into effect this order of Commissioner Ware?

The Democrats denounce the present Administration for reckless extravagance and for executive usurpation, and yet the pension order is the only act giving them excuse for either claim. The Democrats on the committee of appropriations made only one minority report. That was against the appropriation of $1,500,000 for pensions under this order. They accepted all the other great appropriaiton bills and complained only because they were not larger. They drew the line on the appropriation for the old soldier. That was the one extravagance of the Roosevelt Administration. It was also one of executive usurpation which they specified. The Democrats of the North may be honest in their profession of friendship for the old soldier, but that party is controlled by the Democrats of the South, who are now, as they always have been, opposed to pensions for the Union veterans. The South will continue to control the Democratic caucus in the House of Representatives, and dictate the policy of that party toward pensions, whatever the professions of Democratic candidates for Congress in the North and West. If the Democrats control the next House, it will be in order for them to demand the revocation of this pension order in which they have discovered reckless extravagance, and executive usurpation. If Judge Parker is elected President to be consistent he must revoke the order.

Notice.

FOR SALE.—I will offer at private sale my farm situated opposite Shaw, W. Va., on the Maryland side of the river, containing 175½ acres, all under fence, of which 125 acres are improved with dwelling, outbuildings and good orchard. On it are seven springs of good water. About 20 tons of hay was cut on it this year, besides oats, corn and all other crops. Will sell on easy terms. Reason for selling, have more land than I need. For particulars call on or address

E. HARVEY,
31-4t Elk Garden, W. Va.

"THE hum of industry has drowned the voice of calamity and the voice of despair is no longer heard in the United States, and the orators without occupation here are now looking to the Philippines for comfort. As we opposed them when they were standing against industrial progress at home, so we oppose them now as they are standing against national duty in our island posession in the Pacific."—President McKinley.

IF the old soldier remembers Cleveland's pension vetoes, the general hostile attitude of Democracy toward the pension roll, and then adds what Parker has said on the subject of pensions, he will be convinced that the Democrats do not look upon it as a roll of honor, and that in the hands of the Solid South he can expect but scant consideration.

STILL HUSTLING.

THE SALE AT

The Hustling Store Company,

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK,

On September 24th, was a great success where many of our patrons and friends securned bargains in all lines of goods. It was an opportunity rarely offered citizens of Garrett county and met with such favor that we will conduct a similar sale on

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1904,

beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning, when we will offer at public auction, among other things the following—

2 Horses, 1 Mare.

1 Road Wagon, 2 Covered Spring Wagons.

Lot Harness, 2 Sleds, 1 Sleigh.

1 Harrow, 20 Trunks, 4 Iron Beds.

Springs, Mattresses, Chairs.

10 Heating Stoves for coal.

6 Wood Heaters, (air tight).

1 of the best Steel Cooking Ranges made, fitted with high warming oven and six 9-inch holes, oven 20x22, 13 1-2 inches high.

Lots of Blankets.

Women's, Men's & Children's Shoes.

Hats and Caps.

Gum Shoes by the barrel.

5 double barrel Guns.

Pants, Overcoats, Shirts.

Queensware, Hardware, Cross Cut Saws, Wash Boilers, Washing Machines.

Pillows, Suit Cases.

Blankets, Sheets, Bed Spreads.

And many other articles.

TERMS OF SALE—All sums under $10 cash; on sums of $10 and over a credit of six months will be given by purchaser executing his note with approved security. These terms must be complied with before any goods are removed.

New and seasonable goods will be arriving each week which will be offered at public and private sale throughout the winter.

The Hustling Store Company.

P. T. GARTHRIGHT, Prop'r.

Washing Machines.

We are agents for the WhiteLily which was put on the market some 18 months ago, and that stands today the largest manufacture of any one style of rotary Washing Machines in the world. This is a very broad statement when you take into consideration that they are practically a baby concern just 18 months old, but the Company claim that they can back up this statement with solid facts. At no time have they been able to supply the demand. The machine is sold on a guarantee to give satisfaction, and any child 10 years old can operate it. Send for circulars showing cuts, styles and price of the most wonderful Washer ever made, and makes wash day what it should be a pleasure instead of a drudge to the house-wife. Price $7.50. Wringers $1.50 to $3.50.

3t J. M. DAVIS & SON.

LOST—Large Newfoundland dog. Reward if returned to R. H. West, Oakland.

LOST!

On Hooppole Road a lady's Diamond Bar Pin. Finder will be liberally rewarded by returning to the Deer Park Hotel.

Mortgagees' Sale

—OF—

REAL ESTATE

In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Sidney A. Lewis and Amanda Lewis his wife, to Elijah J. M. Button dated the 11th day of July, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 43, folios 558, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, default having been made under the covenants of said mortgage, the undersigned named as attorney therein, hereby gives notice that he will offer at public auction to the highest bidder on Saturday, the 22nd Day of October, 1904,

at the hour of eleven o'clock a. m., in front of the Court House door in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, all that piece or parcel of ground situate in Garrett county, and State of Maryland, containing

49 1-2 ACRES,

mentioned in and conveyed by said mortgage and being the same piece of property which is fully described in a deed from L. T. Yoder et al. to Asberry Wolf dated the 4th day of April, 1896, and duly recorded among the land records of Garrett county aforesaid.

This property lies about seven miles north of Oakland, is partly cleared and is improved by two dwelling houses, two stables and other necessary outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Attorney for the Mortgagee named in said mortgage.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the Subscriber, of Garrett county, Maryland, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

MARY A. SPEICHER,

late of Garrett county, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 27th day of September, 1904.

CHARLES C. SPEICHER,
Administrator,
Accident Md.

Order of Publication.

Rebecca A. McMinn, Plaintiff, vs. Howard J. McMinn, Defendant.

No. 1232 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county.

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by Rebecca A. McMinn, plaintiff, against Howard J. McMinn, the defendant.

The amended bill states that on the 25th day of May, 1896, the plaintiff was married to the defendant at Garrett county, Maryland, with whom she resided in said state and county until sometime about the month of February, 1899. That after said marriage the defendant frequently beat the plaintiff in a shameful manner with great cruelty and brutality, and that his vicious conduct became so intolerable that the plaintiff was forced to leave his house and take safety and refuge elsewhere, and was obliged to swear out a warrant for his arrest for her safety.

That at the March Term, 1899, of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, the defendant under the name of David J. McMinn, (by which name he was commonly known), was indicted and convicted in two separate cases for assaulting and beating the plaintiff. That the conduct of the plaintiff towards her husband has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, and that the defendant has not contributed anything to her support or her children for over five years, and that he has declared his intention of living with her no longer, and that there is no possibility of reclaiming her husband or their ever living together. That said abandonment by said defendant of said plaintiff was without just cause or reason and has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation. That there were two children born to them from said marriage, to-wit: Grace Mabel and James William, seven and five years of age, respectively, infants.

That the said defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant, the custody and guardiauship of the said minor children, general relief and an order of publication against said non-resident defendant.

It is thereupon, this 20th day of September, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 21st day of October, 1904, give notice to said absent defendent of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of November, 1904, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to pass as prayed.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.

Office and residence, Alder St., east of post office.

Meeting of Stockholders.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Garrett Leather Company will be held at the Commercial Hotel in Oakland, Maryland, on Saturday, October 8th, 1904, at five o'clock p. m.

O. C. CRANE,
Secretary.

Mortgagee's Sale

OF VALUABLE

REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Isaac V. Thompson and Laura Thompson, his wife, to the First National Bank of Oakland, Md., dated the 16th day of September, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 45, folio 51, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under said mortgage, the undersigned, as attorney named in said mortgage, hereby gives notice that on

SATURDAY,

the 8th Day of October, 1904

at 2 o'clock p. m., in front of the courthouse in the town of Oakland, Garrett county aforesaid, he will offer at public auction to the highest bidder all the following described real estate, to-wit: All those parcels of land in Garrett county aforesaid of which the late Henry Thompson died seized and possessed, known as

"FAIR SWEEP,"

and also another parcel of land purchased by the said Henry Thompson from N. B. Harvey and beginning for the same at a buttermut tree standing at the corner of the Military Lot formerly owned by Philip Davis and running thence North 70 perches, North 45 degrees West 29 perches, West 52 perches, South 45 degrees West 30 perches, to the outside line of "Avon's Vale" and with said line South 45 degrees East 153 perches to a line fence between the lands of said Henry Thompson and Thomas K. Harvey, and along and with said line fence North 3 degrees West 52 perches, north 27 degrees East 46 perches, East 6 perches, North 89½ perches, West 89½ perches, South 89½ perches, West 89½ perches to the beginning, containing as a whole

One Hundred and Forty-five Acres and Fifty-four Perches.

Said property is mostly cleared and in cultivation. Improved by a good dwelling house, barn and other out buildings, a good orchard with a variety of fruits and the place is well watered. By the terms of the will of the late Henry Thompson his widow holds a life estate in said farm and the same will be sold subject thereto.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

FRED. A. THAYER,
Attorney named in the Mortgage.

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY.
THREE COURSES OF INSTRUCTION.
AGRICULTURAL. MECHANICAL.
SCIENTIFIC.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements: bath-rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

New buildings with every modern improvement, and old buildings thoroughly renovated by opening of first session. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, with annual deposit, ($150) one hundred and fifty nine dollars, for scholastic year. Daily visit by physician to College. Catalog giving full particulars sent on application. Attention is called to the Short Course of ten weeks in Agriculture. Write for particulars.

Term Commences, Thursday, September, 15.

Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Maryland.

The Maryland School for the Deaf,

37TH SESSION,

Reopens September 14th, 1904.

Non-Sectarian. For the deaf and dumb and those whose hearing is too defective for attendance on public school. Speech and lip-reading taught, as well as grammar school and academic studies.

Location very healthful. Board and Tuition free to residents of Maryland.

Apply to
CHAS. W. ELY, Principal,
Frederick, Md.

ORDER NISI.

David Sloan vs. Jefferson S. Green.

No. 1233 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

Ordered this 5th day of September, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by D. Lindley Sloan, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 5th day of October, 1904; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 30th day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sale to be $400.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Appointments By Supervisors of Elections to Fill Vacancies.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 15, 1904.

George Stahl, appointed Republican Officer of Registration and Judge of Elections by this Board at a meeting held June 25, 1904, for Election District No. 8, is found to be disqualified to serve as such by being incapacitated by physical disability, and in his place and stead Jonas Yutzy, whose postoffice address is Sunnyside, Maryland, is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

Wm. Moorehead, appointed Democratic Clerk of Election for Election District No. 4 is found to be disqualified to serve as such, and in his place and stead Lawrence Garvey, whose postoffice address is Bloomington, Md., is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county.

EDMUND JAMISON, President.

Appointment of Judge of Election and Registration Officer to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 27, 1904

John F. Browning, appointed Democratic Officer of Registration and Judge of Election by this Board at a meeting held June 25, 1904, for Election District No. 14, is found to be disqualified to serve as such by being incapacitated by physical disability, and in his place and stead Thos. J. Browning, whose postoffice address is Thayerville, Maryland, is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county.

EDMUND JAMISON, President.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1904. NUMBER 33

REV. J. B. WORKMAN COMES TO OAKLAND.

Was Appointed Pastor of St. Paul's M. E. Church.

DR. SCOTT GOES TO TERRA ALTA.

People Loath to see Him Leave But Will Welcome New Preacher—Other Appointments for Oakland District—Mt. Lake Charge Vacant.

The Fifth-Eighth Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church of West Virginia which met at Grafton last Tuesday, complete its labors Monday of this week and adjourned after the appointments for the current year had been announced

Prior to the appointments being made known there was considerable uneasiness apparent among the gentlemen composing the Conference as none knew exectly what was to happen—whether they were to be returned to their old charges, removed to new ones in the district or be sent into entirely new territory.

Rev. J. B. Workman, who has been pastor of the Davis congregation for the past five pears, has been appointed to the pastorate of the St. Paul's church in Oakland. Dr. Scott, who has very acceptably been in charge here for three years has been appointed pastor at Terra Alta. While the people of Oakland, irrespective of denomination, have become greatly attacked to the Doctor and will be sorry to learn of his removal to another part of the district, they will nonetheless heartily welcome Mr. Workman who has been looked upon as a strong man in the Conference.

The appointments for the Oakland district are as follows:

Dr. R. B. Ward, presiding elder.
Albright, E. O. Woodyard.
Aurora, L. A. McNemar.
Bayard, D. F. Carder.
Brandonville, J. H. Koch.
Kranesville, J. Weigel.
Davis, G. Bleakley.
Etam, A. Engle.
Gormania, E. J. Westfall.
Grantsville, B. F. Hilbish.
Horton, J. H. Funk.
Mt. Lake Park, to be supplied.
Newburg, D. H. Friend.
Oakland, J. B. Workman.
Terra Alta, Dr. H. Scott.
Parsons, M. Knotts.
Rowlesburg, E. P. Idleman.
Sinclair, E. C. Bedford.
St. George, G. W. Strothard.
Thomas, Daniel Westfall.

DEATH OF AN ESTIMABLE LADY.

Mrs. D. Y. Morris Sudden and Unexpected Demise At Kingwood.

At her home on High street, Kingwood, West Va., Tuesday morning, Oct. 4, 1904, after an illness of a few days, Mrs. Mary Elinor, beloved wife of Mr. David Young Morris.

The deceased was born, in the house now owned and occupied by Mr. James W. Parks, September 16th, 1845, being the eldest daughter of the late John P. Byrne, for many years Clerk of the Circuit Court of Preston county. Mrs. Morris was educated at Morgantown and Winchester, Va., where she formed acquaintanceships and held the esteem and friendship of many of her associates up to the day of her sudden and inexplicable demise.

On November 4th, 1868, she was united in marriage to Mr. Morris, then a recently discharged soldier who went out in the defense of his country and served it faithfully and nobly three years. To Mr. and Mrs. Morris were born two daughters, they being Adeline, wife of Mr. W. A. Thomas of Kingwood, who preceded her mother to the spirit world more than nine years, and Lillian Byrne, wife of Mr. Benj. H. Sincell, of Oakland, Md.

Since early in life Mrs. Morris was a member of the Kingwood Presbyterian church and by precept as well as example signified her faith at all times and under all circumstances. She was a thoroughly conscientious noble Christian lady, an estimable neighbor, a loving wife and a devoted and indulgent mother. She was at all times a friend to the needy, especially when sickness invaded the homes of those whom she knew—truely a friend who practiced Charity in all that the word implies. She was held in high esteem by the lowly as well as by those in other walks of life.

Her greatest pleasure was to render unto others those little favors which seemed to breathe with them the spirit of love and the milk of human kindness.

Mrs. Morris leaves surviving her besides her husband and daughter, her mother, Mrs. Mary Ann Byrne, and a sister, Miss Julia, both residents of Kingwood, and also six grandchildren.

Her funeral will be held this afternoon at two o'clock from her late resdence.—Kingwood Journal.

Call For Your Letters.

Mrs. Sallie Bowser, T. R. Smith, Mr. W. F. Jackson, Jessie Bloming, R. W. Ross, Chas. Yeager, Harry Grant, Rev. A. Mick, Ara Liller, V. L. Descoe, Seaber Bros.

ATTENTION! REPUBLICANS.

Republican Meetings, to which all irrespective of their party affiliations, are cordially invited to attend, will be held at

Finzell, Monday, October 17th.
Strickland S. H. Tuesday, 18th.
Blaine, Wednesday, Oct. 19th.
Bloomington, Thursday, 20th.
Bond, Friday, October 21st.
Swanton, Saturday, Oct. 22nd.

These meetings will be addressed by

Hon. GEO. A. PEARRE,
Hon. D. E. DICK,

several local speakers and will open at 7.30 p.m.

AUSTIN BROWN,
Chairman Republican Committee.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

To be held in Baltimore. October 27 and 28.

"LOOKING FORWARD" IS THE MOTTO

Prominent Speakers Will Attend from All Parts of the State and Country—Six Sessions Will be Held—Sunday School Literature

The program for the thirty-fifth biennial convention of the Maryland State Sunday School Union has been issued and is replete with the topics of live subjects and addresses by active workers. The convention will be held in Grace Methodist Episcopal, Cummings Memorial and Lafayette Square Presbyterian churches, Baltimore, October 27 and 28, and it is confidently expected that fully 1000 delegates will he present.

The convention motto is given on the program as "Looking Forward," and it is explained to mean looking forwark into the community, into the church and into Christ. "Others" is the suggestive motto selected for the gathering and a poem by Mr. Charles D. Meigs of Indiandoolis, Ind., adorns the front sage. The poem follows:

"OTHERS."

The Prayer of the Maryland Sunday School Union.
By C. D. Meigs.

Lord, let me live from day to day
In such a self-forgetful way
That even when I kneel to pray
My prayer shall be for—OTHERS.

Help me in all the work I do
To ever be sincere and true,
And know that all I'd do for You
Must needs be done for—OTHERS.

Let "Self" be crucified and slain,
And buried deep, and all in vain
May efforts be to rise again
Unless to live for—OTHERS.

And when my work on earth is done,
And my new work in heaven's begun,
May I forget the crown I've won
While thinking still of—OTHERS.

Others, Lord; yes, others.,
And none of 'Self' for me,
Help me to live for others,
That I may live like Thee.

Prominent among the out-of-town speakers who have engaged to be present at the convention are Mr. W. C. Pearce, Chicago Ill., International Teachers-Training Superintendent; Dr. Charles Gallaudet Trimbull, Philadelphia, Pa., editor-in-chief of the Sunday School Times, and Mrs. J. Woodbridge Barnes, Newark, N. J., International Primary Superintedent. In addition to these, there will be prominent ministers and lay workers from different sections of the State, together with county Sunday school officials. All of the speakers are specialists on the subjects which have been assigned to them, and will speak with authority and from a thorough knowledge of conditions.

Six sessions will be held, beginning Thursday morning, October 27, and continuing until Friday night, three meetings a day. The sessions will be held morning, afternoon and evening with sufficient intervals for social intercourse and refreshments. It is intended that these services shall afford the Sunday school workers of Maryland considerable instructionand enthusiasm and the results will readily show in the renewed interest taken in each school in the State. It is hoped that the workers who attend the sessions will return to their schools and give them the benefit of the instruction afforded by the convention, thus building up the Sunday school work all over the State.

The delegates will be selected on the basis of the numerical strength of each school. Each school will be entitled to one delegate for every 100 pupils or fraction thereof, and each county will be entitled to two delegates, who shall be appointed by the county executive committee or county secretary. It is estimated that there are 250,000 pupils inthe various schools of the State, and on the basis of representation the entire number of schools should be entitled to 2500 delegates. It will not be possible, however to induce this number to attend the convention, although they could be cared for were they all to attend. It is also estimated that each delegate that attends the convention represents 20 workers; thus, on the basis of 1000 expected delegates, putting the the total number engaged in Sunday school work in Maryland at 20,000.

The convention delegates and speakers will be entertained in Baltimore homes this year, as in the past, on what is known as the "Harvard" plan—lodging, breakfast and supper. Lunch will be provided by churches in the vicinity of the convention church for the delegates, visitors are expected to make other arrangements for their entertainment. On arriving in the city the delegates will report to headquarters in Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, where they will be greeted by the local entertainment committee, registered and assigned to homes prepared for them. They will also be welcomed at the office of the State Union, 316 North Charles street.

A feature of the convention each year has been what is termed an "educational bazar." This is an exhibit of Sunday school publications, appliances, etc., and carries with it an education similar to that afforded by a trip to the World's Fiar, This year it is planned that the educational exhibit shall be located in Grace Methodist Episcopal and Cummings Memorial Ref. Episcopal churches, and the booths will be presided over by the special representatives of each firm making an exhibit. The bazar will be in charge of a local Sunday school worker, who will devote his entire time to the work. There will be eight sections in the exhibit as follows:

1. Section of Bibles.
2. Section of Sunday-school Periodicals.
3. Section of Sunday-school Book Helps for Teachers and Scholars.
4. Section of Sunday-school Maps.
5. Section of Sunday-school Art and Architecture.
6. Section of Sunday-school Music.
7. Section of Sunday-school Records.
8. Section of Sunday-school Manual Work.

All the leading publishers and dealers who are putting out the best school literature and appliances have signified their intention of being represented, and many of the exhibits are now in Baltimore ready to be placed.

USE PRINTERS' INK.

Towns That Wish to Grow and Prosper Should Advertise.

One of the first requisites of a good business man in this age of mercantile activity is that he should understand the art of advertising. The same rules that govern private concerns should govern the business affairs of towns and cities. Every civilized town that has industrial aspirations and hopes to grow and prosper must needs let the world know what it has to offer by way of inducements.

Manufacturing enterprises, educational institutions, business and professional men are ever seeking desirable lacetions, and it is a noticeable fact that comparatively few cities and towns are attracting them. This is because many towns which possess good water power, good shipping facilities, good school and residential advantages, lack the life and enterprise to let the wold know what they possess. They do not grow because they are unknown. They are like the drowsy merchant who doesn't think it worth while to advertise, but prefers to sit and watch the spiders spin webs across his doorway.

Every new enterprise that locates in a town adds to the prosperity and business possibilities of every dealer in the place, and every citizen who has his own good and the good of the community at heart should take a hand in getting his town into touch with the busy, wide awake world.

Enthusiastic Club Meeting.

The Roosevelt, Fairbanks and Pearre Republican Club of Mountain Lake Park and Loch Lynn met in the Assembly Hall, Mountain Lake Park, Tuesday evening at 7.30. Notwithstanding the heavy rain the room was filled to the extent of its seating capacity. With but one exception all the business places of Mountain Lake and Loch Lynn were closed at 7.30 p. m. in order that the merchants and their clerks might attend. After the routine business was transacted a recess of thirty minutes was taken to enable the secretary to enroll the new members. Upon reassembling it was announced that the enrolment numbered 101. The report of the Vigilance Committee was exceedingly satisfactory, showing that quite a number of new voters had been registered which otherwise would have been lost. By request Capt. J. A. Hayden then took the chair and conducted a query box. This proved to be a most interesting innovation and won the approbation of all. Great enthusiasm marked the meeting from beginning to end. The Club adjourned at a late hour to meet again next Tuesday at 7.30 p. m., at which time a special program will be rendered.

Comparatively new cook stove cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. 2t*

BIG DEMOCRATIC GUNS VISITED HERE TUESDAY.

Vice Presidential Caneidate Henry G. Davis and Senator Hill in the Party

SEN. DANIEL. OF VIRGINIA. SPOKE.

Also Ex-Governor William Pinkney Whyte, of Maryland—The Deer Park Band Present and Rendered a Number of Airs.

The rather elaborately advertised whirlwind campaign of Senaior Henry G. Davis, Democratic nominee for the vice presidency, and his party composed of Senator David Bennett Hill, of New York, ex-Governor William Pinkney Whyte, of Maryland, Senator John B. Daniel, of Virginia, and others of more or less importance in the political world, visited Oakland Tuesday morning, the special train bearing the gentlemen composing the party reaching Oakland about nine o'clock, and stopping at the Glades Hotel crossing the speakers went to the porch of the hotel and from it speeches were made to a few Democrats and a number of Republicans.

Mr. Chas. Miller, of Swanton, presented the speakers, the first one being Senator Davis, who referred to the fact that this was one of his old homes and before him was twenty men whom he knew personally, He did not touch upon political subjects.

Mr. Davis was followed by Senator Daniel, of Virginia. Just as he arose to speak the sun came from behind the clouds where it had been obscured and the Senator first words were: "Behold the sun of Austerlitz." He asserted that God never made a better party than the Democratic party, but was honest enough to confess that this same party made many grave mistakes. Touching upon the silver issue Mr. Daniel said that he preached free silver ten years before Bryan ever thought of it. As is usual with Democrats he quoted Lincoln to give weight to his argument.

Senator Hill, in a very short address predicted that New York would cast its vote for the Democratic nominees, but to accomplish this hard work was necessary.

Ex-Governor Whyte followed Mr Hill and said that because he sat on the knee of Andrew Jackson he could not help being a Democrat. He discussed the Philippine question for a few moments and closed by an attack on the principles of the Republican party and President Roosevelt.

The train went on west in half an hour after its arrival here and at Terra Alta, Rowlesburg and Tunnelton speeches were made along the lines as those delivered here earlier in the day.

The Deer Park band was present, coming over in carriages, and during the intervals between addresses rendered a number of good selections.

Notice.

FOR SALE.—I will offer at private sale my farm situated opposite Shaw, W. Va., on the Maryland side of the river, containing 175¼ acres, all under fence, of which 125 acres are improved with dwelling, outbuildings and good orchard. On it are seven springs of good water. About 20 tons of hay was cut on it this year, besides oats, corn and all other crops. Will sell on easy terms. Reason for selling, have more land than I need. For particulars call on or address

E. HARVEY,
31-4t Elk Garden, W. Va.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN.

OFFUTT'S.

Don't Slight —THE— Underwear.

Don't say that the old garmeuts will have to do. No doubt they have thinned down enough for you to see thruugh them anywhere. Have the kind that will admit of your braving the bitter weather of winter without fear of discomfort. We sell the very garments you should have for Men, Women and Children, in Wool and Cotton, fleece-lined. When you examine them you'll say so, too, but when you get into them you are sure of it. ALL SIZES.

D. E. OFFUTT & SONS.

WE HAVE THE LATEST

In Styles and Best in Quality to Show you in SHOES

...A FULL LINE OF...

DOROTHY DODDS

Just received; light and heavy weight soles, Blucher and Bal Cut, Patent and Dongola.

WALK-OVERS

Talk for themselves. A look, a try-on, a sale. We only ask the pleasure of showing the line and we know the goods will do the rest.

H. L. DAUGHERTY, ... Oakland, Md.

PLEASANT FIELDS OF HOLY WRIT

SAVE for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ,
I might despair. —Tennyson.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Fourth Quarter. Lesson III. 2 Kings iv, 25-37. October 16, 1904.

Copyright, Davis W. Clark.

Elisha and the Shunammite.

This lovely idyl shines in the trouble stream of public life. We stumble upon the comparatively small domestic incident in the midst of wars and kingscraft. Hospitality, contentment, mother-love, bereavement, grief, faith and importunity,—all are shrined in this story. It casts its light upon the character of the prophet and upon the human life of thirty centuries ago.

Shunem, of the tribe of Issachar, and lying between Samaria and Carmel, was in the wheat belt of Palestine, and on the highway of travel. Here, on his own estate, lived an independent farmer, whose wife was characterized by thrift, piety and contentment. She recognized Elisha as a servant of the Lord, and, as such, extended her hospitality to him. The room she made for him on the wall has passed into a proverb, "The prophet's chamber." This hospitality was marked by a thoughtful consideration of the needs of a professional man. The location of his apartment on the roof, approached by an outside staircase, made it possible for the prophet to come and go at will, without observation on the part of the family. He could have as much privacy as if he was in his own home.

Another jewel set in the filigree of this story is Contentment. When the prophet asked his hostess, in appreciation of her generosity, if he should name her husband for preferment at court or in the army, her answer was, "I dwell among mine own people." She might have said:

"My crown is in my heart, not on my head,
Not decked with diamonds and Indian stones,
Nor to be seen; my crown is called content.
A crown it is that seldom kings enjoy."

Another jewel shines out in the dark hour of her bereavement—Faith. She believed that the son given to her under such unusual conditions, and taken from her in such an inexplicable manner, could be restored to her. She would, undoubtedly, in due time have shown the grace of resignation, but it is to her credit that she did not too quickly say, "The Lord hath taken away." Not until she had made strenuous efforts at recovery was she ready to say, submissively, "Blessed be the name of the Lord."

The prophet, from his eyrie on Mount Carmel, saw the Shunammite approaching. The unusual hour, towards evening, and not a Sabbath or new moon, as well as the speed with which she traveled, excited his apprehension. But he failed not in courtesy. His servant was dispatched with salutations. The emptiness of the average greeting is here illustrated. It was a mere passing of the word of day. The woman's business was with the prophet not with his servant. It is said that in the East you asked after a person whom you know to be ill, invariably the reply will be, "Well, thank God," when the very next sentence is to inform you that he is dying.

A moment later the bereaved mother was clasping the feet of the man of God. Gehazi, self-appointed guardian of his Master's dignity, cold and obtuse, was for thrusting the woman aside. Sympathy is penetrative, and Elisha had

"A tear for pity, and a hand,
Open as day for melting charity."

He said to his officious servant, "Let her alone; for her soul is vexed within her, and the Lord hath hid it from me."

The outcome of the incident is familiar. The prophet's expedient of sending his staff to be laid on the face of the dead child; the mother's importunity, expressing itself in the asseveration, "As the Lord liveth and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee;" the failure of the expedient of the staff, the night journey to Shunem; the restoration of the child; the announcement, "Take up thy son," brief, pathetic, beautiful. It has been aptly said, "Success is never voluble."

The Teacher's Lantern.

The world was surprised and delighted when Layard uncovered the bass-reliefs which depict scenes of an extinct civilization. But all the while we had in the Bible authentic pictures which vivify the common life of thirty centuries ago.

This little domestic incident is enshrined in a writing which bears the dignified and ambitious title of the "Book of the Kings."

The hospitality which is inspired and graced by piety will not fail of its reward. Need of more religion in the social functions of our day.

The spiritual analogy of this incident, familiar to the Church since the days of Origen. Staff of formal religion cannot awaken the dead soul, though it were a gold and jeweled crosier. Only the breath of the Divine Spirit can quicken into life.

Origen spiritualizes the incident as follows: "The dead boy: The race fallen under death on account of sin. Gehazi's staff: The law which can not save. Elisha: The son of God, who, by incarnation, put himself in connection with our flesh, and imparted new life to humanity."

The strength of mother-love expresses itself in the command to the servant, "Slack not thy riding for me." The distance traveled, going and coming at top speed, was not less than thirty-four miles.

Gehazi, thrusting the woman aside, reminds one of the incident in which the disciples rebuked the mothers who brought the children for Jesus' blessing. It is the conventional duty of a servant to magnify the dignity of his master.

Elisha's motive in sending Gehazi has been variously interpreted, viz: To prove that miracle working was not connected in any magical way with his person or staff, but that miracles could only be wrought by genuine union with Divine power, effected by faith and prayer; did it to discount his staff, his servant, and all visible means. Some say that Gehazi failed because of his personal unworthiness, others that the prophet withdrew his power from him while he was on the way to do as he had been directed. The most natural interpretation is to say that Elisha erred in judgment when he sent Gehazi.

The Shunammite's affirmation of contentment, "I dwell among mine own people," clashes with the vulgar slang phrase, "Get there," which, being interpreted, means sacrifice, peace, domestic comfort, friends, conscience, and God for money, honors, grandeur, and parade.

NOTICE.

Change in Business.

The firm of Jno. W. Haney & Sons having sold its milling business, plant and feed store at Friendsville, Md., to The Friendsville Milling Company, hereby gives notice that all persons knowing themselves indebted to the above named firm must call and make settlements of their accounts on or before Oct. 1st, 1904. All accounts remaining unsettled at that date will be placed in the hands of an officer for collection.

JOHN W. HANEY & SONS,
22-4t Friendsville, Md.

LETTER TO P. J. STEPHENS.
Oakland, Md.

Dear Sir: You are interested in the prosperity of your town. You can contribute to its materially and give a far more prosperous look at the same time.

Perhaps the public property needs a good coat of paint.

Devoe will supply that coat with two-thirds of the number of gallons required of any other. Devoe is all paint and full measure. Devoe is the strongest paint known. Devoe will take care of the property. It will last up for half the money required by any other.

The reason is stated above: Devoe is all paint and full-measure, the strongest paint known.

E. R. Jewell, Corry, Pa., painted his house 5 years ago with a mixed paint; took 14 gallons. Last spring he repainted with Devoe; bought 14 gallons and had 4 left. Saved $15 to $20, for for painting costs two or three times as much as the paint.

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & CO

P. S. J. M. Davis & Son sell our paint

Notice to Trespassers.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon my farm lying two miles south of Oakland between the West Union Road and the Sollars Road, for any purpose whatever. All persons so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

30—3t. DICE SPIKER.

Delightful Weather at the World's Fair

Thousands are taking advantage of the delightful weather to visit the World's Fair at St. Louis, which is now at its best.

The excellent through vestibuled trains of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, with Drawing Room, Sleepers, and superb Dining Car Service, passing over the most picturesque route in America, makes the trip a pleasure rather than one to be dreaded. Broad vestibuled coaches with comfortable seats and sanitary ventilation are provided for the Cheap Coach Excursions which are run every Wednesday. 32-3t

Still Hustling.

The Hustling Store Company has decided to clean up its entire stock of goods amounting to at least $7000 at whatever the goods will bring at public sale and also at private sale from day to day and then put in new Stocks to be sold at the lowest prices. Get prices at the Hustling Store before purchasing elsewhere.

The Future Of the British Race

By Sir ARTHUR J. BALFOUR, Prime Minister of Great Britain

IN the case of every man who leaves the laboring class and becomes a member of the middle or wealthier class, his progeny are likely to be diminished, owing to the fact that MARRIAGES ARE LATER IN THAT CLASS. The result is that the more we contrive our systems of education so that every man or woman of capacity in the lower class has a chance of what is called rising in life, just by so much we do something to diminish the ACTUAL QUALITY of the breed of the country.

I cannot see any escape from the rather melancholy conclusion that everything which opens up every career to the poor child of ability does under existing social conditions tend somewhat IN THE DIRECTION OF DETERIORATING THE RACE.

Dr. Shrubsall seems to indicate that the effect of town life is to encourage the dark haired and to discourage the light haired among the population. I presume anthropologists will admit that on the whole the light haired people were those who came from northern regions, descendants of the Danes and Anglo-Saxons.

If that is so, the gradual increase in the proportion of our population who live in towns as compared with those who remain in the country can only have the effect of de-Germanizing our people, or of altering the balance of our population against the tall, light haired element descended from northern immigrations.

* * *

If, as is most probably the case, it is the most enterprising and energetic who leave the country for the towns or who leave our shores for the colonies or other countries, this fact must have a permanent effect, TENDING IN A DOWNWARD DIRECTION.

If, in addition to that, these energetic and efficient classes in towns suffered a process of elimination not to the advantage of the race, evidently the gradual draft from the rural into the urban districts gains in significance and presents elements EVEN LESS REASSURING than those we have been accustomed to take into consideration. We can improve drainage, ventilate schools, diminish overcrowding and make the urban surroundings better, but when we have solved these problems we have not touched the root of the larger questions which I have brought under your notice.

WE SHALL NOT HAVE ALTERED THE PERMANENT CAUSES UPON WHICH DEPENDS NOT MERELY THE WELL BEING OF THIS OR THE NEXT GENERATION, BUT THE ACTUAL QUALITY OF THE RACE, LOOKED AT FROM A NATURAL HISTORY POINT OF VIEW.

The Great Value of Maneuvers to the Army

By Brigadier General JOSEPH WHEELER, U. S. A., Retired

THE old school of the army was the training of the pioneers in the forests of the south and the mountains and plains of the west. Having lost our old school, WE MUST START A NEW ONE, and we are following Europe to that extent.

The American, because of the destruction of his vast forests, is no longer the rifleman he was in the days of Washington, Jackson and up to the civil war. HE MUST LEARN AGAIN.

We are approaching the condition of Europe, where every man has to be taught the use of firearms by the authorities. Maneuvers are necessary; they are the best sort of schooling for officers and men alike.

It is time the United States educated its troops regularly IN THE MOST MODERN TACTICS OF WARFARE, and I believe the best way to do this is to drill them in maneuvers. We must have educated soldiers as well as officers to keep pace with other nations.

IN ALMOST EVERY CASE WHERE THE COMMANDERS HAD HAD TIME IN THE CIVIL WAR TO MANEUVER THEIR TROOPS BEFORE THEIR BATTLES THEY WON VICTORIES. THE DEFEAT AT SHILOH WAS DUE TO THE UNDRILLED CONDITION OF THE TROOPS, THE WAGON TRAINS AND COLUMNS BECOMING IRRETRIEVABLY TANGLED.

The recent maneuvers have been the greatest military school the United States has had since the war with Spain, and I hope that next year they will be held on even a larger scale.

The Goody Goody Husband Is a Bore

By LILLIAN RUSSELL

LIFE gets to be very tiresome indeed when one can't find any one who is willing to put up an argument. One of the happiest couples I have had the pleasure of meeting HAD TO INDULGE IN A SPAT EVERY FEW DAYS just for the fun of making up.

When a husband is always in the passive, ready to accede to all that his wife says, he gets to be very tiresome indeed. It's like a good dinner that happens to be deficient in two or three of its best details—like leaving out the salad. The goody goody husband who is painfully devoted is just like a dinner MINUS THE SALAD.

Just fancy having your husband forever granting all of your wishes with never a word of opposition! When your Chauncey comes home to dinner and you say to him, "Dearest, I really must have $50 for a new bonnet and $100 more for a gown I had fitted today," now, it isn't pleasant to have him come at you with, "All right, darling, here's a check signed; just fill it out for as much as you want."

THAT ISN'T NATURAL, and no woman with any kind of spirit will stand for it for a whole lifetime.

SHE MUST HAVE A LITTLE SALAD NOW AND THEN IN THE WAY OF A SPAT OVER HER HATS AND GOWNS AND WHIMS AND PETS.

BAUMGARTNER'S BIG BARGAINS!

5C SUGAR BOWLS,
CREAM PITCHERS,
THREE PAPERS PINS,
½ GAL. TIN BUCKETS,
CAKE PLATES,
AND LOTS MORE. 5C

Come around and see what 5 and 10c will do.

THE LITTLE MAN.

THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS.
BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital.....$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits.. 250,000
Liability of Shareholders..... 100,000

Additional Security to Depositors...$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

L. E. HANSON,
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland
PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD
CHEAP EXCERSIONS
TO THE
St. Louis World's Fair
EVERY WEDNESDAY IN
AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.
Only $14.50 Round Trip from OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.
2100 Madison Square, PHILA., PA.
Mention this paper.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
The "Nation's Highway"
and "SHORTEST ROUTE"
TO THE
WORLD'S FAIR,
ST. LOUIS.

Three THROUGH Trains DAILY
Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars,
VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RAES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS
From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

ONLY $4.00 TO WASHINGTON AND RETURN,
ONLY $4.50 TO BALTIMORE AND RETURN,
Saturday, September 17, via BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD,

Special train will leave Oakland at 12 night, affording an opportunity to spend all day Sunday among the attractions of either Capital or Monumental City. 2t

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

COAL.

I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of

Bituminous Coal,

mined from my mine west of town.

Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.

Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be promptly filled.

E. Z. TOWER.

MAGIC REMEDY

Cures Diarrhoea, Cramps in the Stomach, Colera Morbus, Dysentary or Flux, in a few minutes. A positive cure. Keep a bottle handy; it will save many a doctor's bill, and possibly your life. At dealers, 25c; by Mail, 30c—in safety mailing case.

KEYSTONE COMP'Y ELAINE W. VA.

CANCER CURED

permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1520 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

INDIGESTION

"I was troubled with stomach trouble. Thedford's Black-Draught did me more good in one week than all the doctor's medicine I took in a year."—MRS. SARAH E. SHIRFIELD, Ellettsville, Ind.

Thedford's Black Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Thedford's Black Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

More sickness is caused by constipation than by any other disease. Thedford's Black-Draught not only relieves constipation but cures diarrhœa and dysentery and keeps the bowels regular.

All druggists sell 25-cent packages.

"Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine to regulate the bowels I have ever used."—MRS. A. M. GRANT, Sneads Ferry, N. C.

CONSTIPATION

WAGES AND COST OF LIVING

Grotesque Attempt by Democrats to Twist Facts for Campaign Consumption.

GROSSLY INACCURATE STATEMENTS

Country Is Not in Throes of a Disastrous Business Depression, and Workingmen Continue to Prosper — What the Figures Show.

Nothing could better illustrate the infinite capacity of the Democratic party for doing the wrong thing at the right moment than its attempt to outface acknowledged industrial conditions with the bald statement of its campaign text book—"that business depression of this year is greater than was that of 1893 and 1894."

As there are as many million American voters as there are millions engaged in industrial pursuits whose experience spans the decade, and who know this to be most fortunately false, there is no need to waste time in refuting it. The Democratic depression that prevailed from 1893 to 1897 paralyzed industry in every section of the United States, and its pinch was felt in every home. The "business depression of this year" is so largely a figment of Democratic imagination that it requires a magnifying glass to be seen, and what there is of it is rapidly fading from sight as the prospects of a great Republican victory become more certain.

But the Democratic campaign book is not satisfied with this grotesque generalization, so it attempts to controvert the Republican claim of prosperous times in farm, office and workshop with the assertion that no one is better off by reason of increased incomes, because the cost of living has increased disproportionately.

How utterly and irrationally absurd is this contention is proved by the fact that if prices were advancing more rapidly than the earnings of the great mass of the people, the great mass of the people would soon be irretrievably insolvent or their purchases would be so curtailed that the volume of business would be enormously reduced.

There is no possibility of making a scientific comparison of the relative increase in wages and the cost of living, because they are controlled by different factors. The rate of wages is controlled by industrial conditions; the cost of living is controlled by the individual. No man can fix his income at will; any man can limit his expenditures. Let conditions provide sufficient wages to the workingman, and it rests with him to say by what margin he will live within his income. The larger that income the larger his possible surplus. If better wages breeds extravagance, the result, in the language of Micawber, is misery: if they are expended with economy, the result is an accumulation of wealth and happiness.

Convincing Testimony.

Good times under Republican administration has provided the better wages, and the economy of the American people has piled up the means of contentment and happiness, as is evidenced by the following statement of the number of depositors and deposits in the savings banks of the United States for the eleven years from 1893 to 1903, inclusive:

Year.	No. Depositors.	Deposits.
1893	4,830,599	$1,785,150,967
1894	4,777,687	1,747,961,280
1895	4,875,519	1,830,597,025
1896	5,005,494	1,907,156,277
1897	5,200,152	1,939,376,035
1898	5,385,746	2,065,631,298
1899	5,687,818	2,230,366,954
1900	6,107,083	2,449,547,885
1901	6,358,723	2,597,044,580
1902	6,666,672	2,750,177,290
1903	7,305,228	2,935,204,845

The Democratic depression of 1893 and 1894, to which the campaign book inadvertently directs attention, was marked by a falling off in deposits of over $37,000,000 in one year. Between 1893 and 1903 the average due each depositor increased from $369 to $417.

More significant than the increase in deposits is the fact that in 1903 there were 2,474,629 absolutely new savings bank depositors in the United States, marking an increase of nearly 50 per cent. during a period when the total population only increased 24 per cent.

Col. Wright's Summary.

Turning now to the direct comparison of the advance in wages and cost of living during the period under review, the Democrats affect the greatest contempt for the government statistics, which, under the able, conscientious and unbiased direction of Carroll D. Wright, present the following instructive summary:

Course of employment, wages, hours of labor, weekly earnings and retail prices of food, and purchasing power of weekly earnings relatively to prices of food 1893-1903.

(Relative numbers computed on basis of average for 1890-1899-1900.)

Year.	Employes—Relative Number	Hours per week, relative number	Weekly earnings relative.	Retail prices of food rel. to average of food.	Pur. power weekly wages rel. to price of food.
1893	99.2	100.3	101.2	104.4	96.9
1894	94.1	99.8	97.7	99.7	98.0
1895	96.3	100.1	98.4	97.8	100.6
1896	98.3	99.8	99.5	95.5	104.2
1897	100.9	99.6	99.2	96.3	103.0
1898	99.7	100.0	98.7	98.7	101.3
1899	110.9	99.2	101.2	99.5	101.7
1900	115.5	98.7	104.1	100.1	103.0
1901	119.1	98.1	105.9	105.2	100.7
1902	123.6	97.3	109.3	110.9	98.6
1903	126.4	96.6	112.3	110.3	101.8

These figures present the results of an extensive investigation into the wages and hours of labor in the leading manufacturing and mechanical industries of the United States during the period named. It has designed to cover thoroughly the principal destinctive occupations, and Wright, in submitting it (see Bulletin of the Bureau of Labor, No. 53, July, 1904,) says: "It is believed that the data presented are more comprehensive and representative so far as the manufacturing and mechanical industries are concerned than any that have been heretofore published."

The figures as to income and expenditure are summarized from data gathered from 2,567 families, in 33 States, whose average income from all sources was $927 a year, whose average expenditure was $768, and whose average expenditure for food was $326 per family, or 42.54 per cent. of the average expenditure for all purposes. This data was corroborated by other information in less detail form, from 25,440 families, and so is entitled to be accepted as representative.

The most cursory examination of the above table reveals the fact that the purchasing power of wages, measured by retail prices of food, was 5 per cent. greater in 1903 than in 1893, and this in spite of the fact that the hours per week had been reduced 3.7 per cent.

But more conducive to the wide dissemination of the prosperity than these proofs of the increased purchasing power of wages, is the fact revealed in the column giving the relative number of persons employed in the establishments investigated. Between 1894 and 1903 the increase in the number of employes receiving these wages with increased purchasing power was 34.3 per cent., while in the meantime the population of the United States only increased 21 per cent.

Democracy's Last Resort.

Disheartened and disgusted with the wide distribution of prosperity in the homes, workshops and bank accounts of American wage earners, demonstrated by these figures, the Democrats appeal to "railroad labor as affording the most accurate barometer of wages." Here, they say, "a large proportion of the employes are union men, whose wages are comparatively steady."

Then the compilers of the Democratic campaign book begin to juggle with the very averages and percentages they affect to despise. They institute comparisons between 1892, when railway wages were at high tide, and 1901, when they had scarcely recovered from Democratic recession of 1893-1896. They suppress the fact that the statistical average of railway wages was less affected by the Democratic hard times than the average of other industries, for the obvious reason that as forces were reduced in numbers the proportion of high priced employes retained because of their experience was greater.

They also conclude their comparisons with the year ending June 30th, 1902, well knowing that the statistics of the Interstate Commerce Commission for that year only reflect a month or two of the advance in railway wages of that calendar year, which did not reach flood tide until July, 1903. Not until the statistics of the Interstate Commerce Commission for the year 1903-1904 are published next summer will it be possible to make an authoritative comparison of the wages of railway employes and the cost of living in the year 1903.

But the report of the Commission for the fiscal year 1903 is available, and it furnishes the following data, which throws light on the rich slice of prosperity which has fallen to the share of railway employes:

NUMBER AND COMPENSATION OF RAILWAY EMPLOYES IN THE YEARS 1897 AND 1903:

Year.	Number.	Compensation.
1903	1,312,537	$775,321,415
1897	823,476	465,001,518
Increase	489,061	$300,719,834
Increase per cent..	59.4	66.5
Increase of compensation relatively over number		7.1

That this relative increase of compensation, compared with that in the number of railway employes, does not tell the whole truth is proved by the following table:

AVERAGE DAILY COMPENSATION OF CERTAIN DISTINCTIVE CLASSES OF RAILWAY EMPLOYES FOR THE YEARS ENDING JUNE 30TH, 1897, AND 1903 (vide sixteenth annual report of the statistics of railways in the middle States for 1903, p. 45.):

Class.	Daily compensation average 1897.	Daily Compensation 1903.	Increase per cent.
Enginemen	$3.65	$4.01	9.9
Firemen	2.05	2.28	11.2
Conductors	3.07	3.38	10.1
Other trainmen	1.50	2.17	14.2
Section foremen	1.70	1.78	4.7
Other trackmen	1.16	1.32	13.8

What the Figures Prove.

It will be observed that these six distinctive classes of railway employes, embracing almost half of all the railway employes in the United States (591,475 in 1903 against 363,563 in 1897) were receiving an average daily compensation during the year 1902-3 more than 10 per cent. greater than during the year 1896-1897. Moreover, it is a notorious fact that these averages do not begin to represent the increase in the earnings of railway employes during the summer of 1903, when the rate of pay of certain classes was raised from 10 to 15 per cent. In that year, too, there were 227,912 more persons employed in the six classes named than in 1897, and according to the Interstate Commerce Commission they were receiving the increased daily average pay where they received nothing in the year last named.

Finally, returns gathered from the annual reports for the year ending June 30th, 1904, of eight representative railways in different parts of the country, having a total mileage of 16,587 miles, indicate that the compensation of their employes has increased more than 10 per cent. over the year previous, while the number of their employes has remained practically stationary, as is shown in the following table:

Number and compensation of employes of eight representative railways:

Year ending June 30—	No. employes.	Compensation.
1904	804,544	$66,499,567
1903	803,891	60,285,057
Increase	653	6,215,570
Increase per cent...	0.4	10.3

Here at last we see truly reflected the effect of the horizontal raise in the wages of railway employes made as the result of the widespread labor agitation in the summer of 1903. The advance was variously estimated at the time as from 12 to 15 per cent., and any statistics that fail to show it must be distorted by the introduction of some factor, such as a disproportion of low price labor tending to reduce the average.

In connection with the above proof of the 10 per cent. advance in railway wages in one year, it should be remembered that the decline in prices began in 1903 continues.

If the Democrats are willing to accept the pay of railway labor as the most accurate barometer of wages, the Republican party can call to the witness stand 1,312,337 railway employes to testify to the fact that, measured by what it will buy, their income of 1904 is higher than it was in 1897, and nearly half a million of them can truthfully affirm that they received no compensation whatever in 1897 where, according to the above system of average compensation, they now divide some $275,000,000 among them, or about $568 apiece.

METHUSELAH AND THE SPHINX

Come all ye Bryan Democrats,
Your peerless leader slinks:
Come all ye bloated plutocrats,
Forget your former kinks;
The banners float for and you must vote for
Methuselah and the sphinx.

Come all ye scattered Democrats
That sulk like frightened minks,
So lean that we can see your slats,
As hungry as the lynx;
The banners float for and you must vote for
Methuselah and the sphinx.

Come all ye hopeless Democrats,
While Parker thinks he thinks,
Climb off the ship like frightened rats,
Before the old thing sinks;
The banners float for and you must vote for
Methuselah and the sphinx.
—Chicago Chronicle.

Words of Cheer for the Democracy.

It has been given out to the forlorn and drooping Democracy that "Willie Hearst is loosening up"; that he has been induced to put in a few thousands to open headquarters for the National Democratic Clubs. The hungry know well that this means that Hearst aspires to be a candidate again, but they are not worrying about 1908 now.

Four years ago Hearst was president and footer of bills for the National Democratic Clubs. The members met, if memory serves aright, at Indianapolis, expecting to greet their president. But he sent one of his hired men to receive the greetings of his admirers. This dampened the ardor of the crowd, despite the fact that their fare back home was paid. The November election settled the whole concern, but it seems that the N. D. C. is to be resurrected, what little there is left of its ashes.

Democratic Financial Management.

On the 1st of July, 1892, the last year of the Harrison administration, the total bonded debt of the United States was, in round numbers, $585,000,000. On the 1st of July, 1897, the last year of the second Cleveland administration, the total bonded debt was $843,000,000, an increase of $258,000,000 during four years of perfect peace.

July 1, 1892, the annual interest charge on the public debt was $22,893,000. July 1, 1897, it was $34,387,000, an increase of $11,494,000 during four years of Democratic administration.

A party that cannot administer the government during a short period of four years without largely increasing the public debt and the annual interest account is not fit to be entrusted with the control of affairs.

Two Judges with Political Pasts.

Democracy can always be depended on to blunder. The nomination of Judge Parker was a blunder, because he received his early political training from D. B. Hill, one of the most notorious wire-pullers and workers in devious ways New York has produced. The nomination of D. Cady Herrick for Governor of New York, also was a blunder, because he was "boss" of the Democratic "machine" at Albany before his election to the bench. The Albany "machine" has a reputation as unenviable as Tammany's.

The last few years of Republican administration have added untold millions to the agricultural wealth of the country by opening new markets for farm products at constantly improving prices. The beauty of the Republican policy of protection is that it develops manufacturing and agricultural interests on parallel lines.

"We do not have to guess at our convictions, and then correct the guess if it seems unpopular. The principles which we profess are those in which we believe with heart and soul and strength. Men may differ from us but they cannot accuse us of shiftiness or insincerity."—Roosevelt's letter of acceptance.

Perhaps the policy of protection has made business prosperity more dependent upon politics than it would have been otherwise, but it certainly has contributed more largely than anything else to our extraordinary and unparalleled progress.

According to astronomers it is about 25 trillions of miles, as the crow flies, from the earth to Alpha Centauri, the nearest fixed star. It is about the same distance from Esopus to the White House by the Democratic route.

The last four years of Democratic rule left the country oppressed by misfortune and doubtful of the future. Why should any patriotic American wish to repeat that experience?

But for the Republican party the government would not have survived the storm of civil war nor taken any of the progressive steps that have marked our history since the war.

ALL NOW PRAISE HIM

PANAMAIANS COMMEND WISDOM OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Democratic Charge that the Chief Executive Was Hasty, Refuted by Recent Developments in the Isthmian Republic—His Election Desired.

THERE IS NO BETTER ARGUMENT IN REFUTATION OF THE DEMOCRATIC ALLEGATION THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IS HASTY AND INCONSIDERATE IN HIS ACTIONS THAN THE ACTUAL DEVELOPMENT OF EVENTS IN THE REPUBLIC OF PANAMA. A few weeks ago, and even recently, many of the leading Democratic newspapers in the United States have asserted that Panama was remonstrating against the administration of the canal zone as ordered by the President, and that an imperialistic policy was being pursued by him in his treatment of the Panamaians. The Democratic critics took advantage of a state of local unrest in Panama and a protest on its part against the interpretation of the treaty at the hands of the canal commission as an evidence that the President was treating the Panamaians with autocratic sway.

What are the facts? It seems that when the President gave his orders in June last to Gen. Davis, as Governor of the zone, to organize the strip controlled by the United States, the President endeavored in every way to act in strict accordance with the wording of the treaty, and for the best interests of Panama as well as the zone. It happened, however, that a CERTAIN GROUP OF POLITICIANS IN PANAMA WHO HELD NO OFFICES, AND WHO ARE THE "OUTS," LIKE THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY IN THE UNITED STATES, WERE LOOKING FOR ANY OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE TROUBLE. Without consulting carefully the treaty, they immediately made a severe attack on the United States government and the President, proclaiming in manifestos and in their newspapers that the President's orders to Governor Davis were against the spirit and letter of the treaty, and that he was disregarding flagrantly the rights and interests of Panama, thus crushing out its independence! They agitated their position so vigorously that they not only aroused a considerable element of the Panama population, BUT PROVIDED THE BACKGROUND FOR SENSATIONAL NEWSPAPER STORIES TO BE SENT TO THE UNITED STATES.

No Cause for the Flurry.

At the moment when the situation was somewhat critical in Panama, the new American minister, John Barrett, arrived on the scene with special instructions from the President to demonstrate to the Panama government and people that the President was determined that NO STEPS SHOULD BE TAKEN, INVOLVING THE RELATIONS OF PANAMA PROPER AND THE CANAL ZONE, WHICH WERE NOT CONSISTENT WITH THE TREATY AND WITH THE TRUE INTERESTS OF BOTH PANAMA AND THE UNITED STATES. After the minister had calmed the excitement to a great extent by his assurances of fair dealing and after he had given the Panamaians abundant opportunity to file with him all the complaints they had in mind, he showed them, in a respectful but diplomatic way, that THE VERY POINTS ON WHICH THEY SO SEVERELY CRITICISED PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT HAD ALREADY, BACK IN JANUARY OF THIS YEAR, BEEN EXPLICITLY EXPLAINED BY THEIR OWN ENVOY PLENIPOTENTIARY, MR. BUNAU-VARILLA, IN HIS STATEMENT TO SECRETARY HAY OF HIS INTERPRETATION OF THE TREATY. In other words, the minister proved to the Panama government and people that their own representative, Mr. Bunau-Varilla, many months before, had, on their behalf, given the United States absolute control of the two ports at the respective entrances of the canal, THUS COMPLETELY DISARMING THE CONTENTIONS OF THE CRITICS OF THE PRESIDENT that, in establishing these ports by his orders to Governor Davis, he had disregarded the sovereignty and rights of the Panama government. In addition to this, the minister also explained to them that in view of the great responsibility which the United States owed to the rest of the world in constructing such a gigantic waterway, there could be no possible division of authority, and that the United States had already, by a liberal gift of ten million dollars, paid for those very sovereign rights which they now questioned. If they had not agreed to this arrangement, they might never have got the canal, and they would probably have lost their independence.

President Was Right.

What now is the result? In comparison with the situation a few weeks ago when the editorials in the local newspapers, the discussions in the public plazas, and the telegrams to the Democratic papers in the United States, all criticised the President and said that he was acting arbitrarily, WE NOW SEE THE LEADING MEN, NOT ONLY OF THE GOVERNMENT PARTY BUT OF THE OPPOSITION, ACKNOWLEDGING THAT THE PRESIDENT IS RIGHT; we hear people in the plazas and public meetings commending the United States; we note the editorials in the Panama press praying for the election of President Roosevelt, and at a banquet given on Sept. 5 in the American legation by Minister Barrett in honor of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, this latter official, Don Tomas Arias, one of the ablest and most influential men in Panama, toasted in eloquent terms the health of President Roosevelt and expressed the earnest wish, on behalf of his government and his people, that THE PRESIDENT WOULD BE TRIUMPHANTLY ELECTED IN NOVEMBER, SAYING THAT THE BEST INTERESTS OF PANAMA AS WELL AS THOSE OF THE UNITED STATES, AS INVOLVED IN THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE GREAT CANAL, REQUIRED THE CONTINUANCE OF THE ADMINISTRATION OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO CARRY FORWARD THE WORK.

And so it is with most of the criticisms of President Roosevelt, whether they refer to his home or foreign policy. At first it is alleged that he acts rashly simply because there may be some commotion caused by the steps he has taken, and yet almost invariably the development of events proves, conclusively, that he is right, and acting with wisdom and prudence.

Is Protection "Robbery?"

The Democratic assertion that "Protection is robbery;" that the tariff is a tax on the American consumer, is best refuted by examining the effect of protection on the tin plate industry. When the McKinley bill was passed nine-tenths of all the tin used in this country was manufactured abroad. To-day the manufacture of tin is one of the most important of our home industries, contributing millions of dollars annually to our national wealth. But this is the least part of the story, in so far as the tariff is concerned—the price of tin began to go down in proportion as the United States began to produce it, and the American consumer has never paid under the McKinley tin tariff anywhere near as much per pound for tin plate as he paid when tin was on the free list.

Parker's Admission.

Judge Parker's letter of acceptance stands pat—on Republican achievements, but coyly admits that its writer would be a safer man at the National throttle than President Roosevelt so long as a Republican Senate sits on the safety valve. If the protective tariff is "robbery" he is willing to turn sneak thief; if we burglarized Panama he is willing to keep the stolen goods; if order No. 78 lets down the bars for a pension scandal he will revoke the order, but let the bars remain down just the same. It is a very pretty confession that the Republicans have administered the government so wisely, diligently and effectively that they deserve a vacation, while he tries his prentice hand at running it without reversing a single lever.

Praise from a Democratic Newspaper.

The New York Times, one of the Democratic newspapers which has been denouncing President Roosevelt's Philippine policy, recently printed an editorial leader on the settlement of the Friars' land question. The article concludes: "It is creditable both to the intelligence and the humanity of the government." If the Times was less partisan it could truthfully say that every act of the Roosevelt administration in dealing with the Philippine question was creditable to the United States.

The "Unsafe" Roosevelt.

Democratic editors and speakers are united in declaring that President Roosevelt is "an unsafe man." If that is so, he has at least been remarkably successful in his "unsafe" undertakings—in settling the coal strike, in enforcing the anti-trust law, in acquiring the Panama canal strip, and in all his delicate dealings with foreign nations.

Judge Parker is in training in earnest for November 8. On the occasion of his trip to New York to consult Hill, Sheehan, Murphy, McCarren and Gorman about superseding Tom Taggart as campaign manager, the New York Times correspondent described him as "going on a swift drive down the rocky hill road to the dock." In November there will be no elegantly equipped steam yacht to receive him at the bottom of the hill, only a gaping hole labeled "oblivion."

There seems to be one tie that binds New York's judicial candidate for the Presidency and the Democratic candidate for governor of New York—they both voted for free silver in 1896 and 1900. Neither of them apparently would have conscientious scruples about voting for a yellow dog, provided he had the regular emblem of his party branded on both ears and wagged his tail without the consent of any other nation.

Judge Parker's frantic demand that nothing further be said about Roosevelt's personality is fresh evidence that Democrats have become alarmed over the effect of their assertion that Rooseveltism is the chief issue of the campaign. The more Roosevelt's personality is exploited the more popular he becomes. Democrats have been making Republican votes by the score in quoting the President's utterances.

Judge Parker, judging from his conduct and the company he has kept, stands for Hillism in politics, which means that any unscrupulous act is justifiable if the end be gained. He is the very opposite of President Roosevelt, for his evasiveness shows that he lacks courage and decisiveness—two requisites that should not be found wanting in aspirants for the Presidency.

At one stroke of his pen Abraham Lincoln freed 4,000,000 black men. With one stroke of his pen Roosevelt has made it possible to reclaim more than 100,000,000 acres of land to agriculture, adding millions of American farm homes with their vast volume of agricultural products which will flow from this rich area of land redeemed from the desert.

What does it mean to the nation to have millions of people gradually pass from servitude of the town to the sovereignty of the country? It means the enlistment of a new army for the defense of the republic in every hour of need. This will come, under the workings of the national irrigation act.

Talk about political economy. The Democrats of Massachusetts are considering the advisability of nominating Douglas, the Brockton shoe man, in order to save money on campaign lithographs, because the pictures of Parker and Douglas are as like as two wooden shoepegs.

Edward M. Shepard in 1897 denounced Tammany as "a foul blot on civilization," and in 1904 Tammany tore a hole in the Shepard boom so ragged that the special favor of Judge Parker and Chairman Sheehan could not inflate it sufficiently to justify a nominating speech.

It should be remembered that under irrigation agriculture becomes almost an exact science. Twelve inches of water, intelligently distributed at the proper time, is sufficient to insure on the arid lands an abundant yield of the ordinary farm crops of that latitude.

Prosperous times are more truly reflected in the increased number earning wages than in any statistics of average wages, for the obvious reason that the ranks of labor are recruited from the bottom.

KILKENNY HARMONY.

That Is the Kind that Prevails Among New York Democrats.

Not since the traditional cats of Kilkenny were hung across a line by their tails has there been such an amusing harmony of subdued discord as is heard in New York, now that Judge D. Cady Herrick has been nominated by the Democrats for governor. Judge Parker wanted Edward M. Shepard, or District Attorney Jerome nominated for governor in order to galvanize his campaign into the semblance of life.

David B. Hill wanted John B. Stanchfield, because Stanchfield best represented the organization outside of New York City, to which Mr. Hill owes his ascendancy in the State Democracy. Mr. Hill had no use for Herrick, who, as Democratic boss of Albany County, has been a thorn in his side for years. But, it is said, he accepted Herrick and put him in nomination on the principle of the salesman who sold a coat marked $15 for $10, on doubtful credit, because he would lose less if the bill was never paid. Hill will lose less in Herrick's defeat than if he had succeeded in nominating his friend Stanchfield.

Senator Patrick H. McCarren, the Brooklyn boss, to whom Judge Parker owes his nomination, wanted Comptroller Grout nominated, and for a time he had Mr. Hill's ostensible support for Grout. Judge Parker and Hill went back on McCarren; the former to placate Charles F. Murphy and Tammany, and the latter because he couldn't help himself.

Tammany accepted Herrick because it was willing to accept anybody who stood for the discomfiture of Boss McCarren. As a tomahawk in the hands of Charles F. Murphy with which to dispatch McCarren, D. Cady Herrick would serve Tammany much better than either Shepard or Jerome.

Besides, did not Judge Herrick's career on the bench present sterling claims on the admiration and necessities of Tammany? His abuse of his judicial position to the political exigencies in Albany is along the line of what Tammany considers the higher walks of politics. Moreover, has he not practically pardoned an official blackmailer and protector of disorderly houses by imposing a paltry fine of $1,000 on the notorious police Captain Diamond?—a stroke of judicial leniency toward corruption in New York City peculiarly attractive to Tammany. If he would so act as judge, what prodigies of clemency to "good men" might he not perform as governor? So Tammany dropped Mayor McClellan and swallowed Herrick and his record with genuine relish and noisy gusto.

Not so, however, the Democratic press of New York City. The WORLD takes its medicine with evident nausea; the TIMES turns Herrick's picture to the wall and fixes its gaze on Judge Parker, with the reflection that one honorable nomination in four years is as far as the New York Democracy can be expected to pander to the somewhat blunted moral sentiment of its constituency. The EVENING POST openly repudiates Herrick, saying that a proper regard for its own reputation forbids giving him the negative support of silence.

From this brief resume it may be gathered that the elements for a harmonious Democratic campaign in New York are all that could be desired—from a Republican point of view.

A Boomerang.

"Make Rooseveltism the issue," demanded the New York World, and Democrats, big and little, began barking and snarling at the heels of the President, but the more they barked the more friends they made for Roosevelt. Now, Judge Parker, having seen the effect of the ill-advised issue, has asked his managers to drop Rooseveltism, but his admonition comes too late. Republicans will see that the issue is not lost sight of.

Democracy's effort to show that times have not been good under Roosevelt's administration is a ludicrous performance. The compilation of all the strikes which have taken place in the last three years, instead of showing lack of prosperity, indicates the country has been unusually prosperous. Strikes are a rarity in bad times. Workingmen demand higher wages only when business is good. They are astute enough to know that they stand a better chance of getting what they want when factories are flooded with orders than when they are running on short time.

Protection has done more for the American farmer than any other policy carried out by Republicans. If "Protection is robbery," as the Democratic platform asserts, the only persons "robbed" are the manufacturers and toilers of Europe. American workingmen certainly do not suffer from protection. They are the chief beneficiaries of the greatest of Republican policies. Without a protective tariff wages would soon drop to the European level, which is from 60 to 100 per cent. below the rate now paid in the United States.

People who say combinations of capital are due to the tariff should explain why free trade Britain is ridden with trusts. British manufacturers generally have been for years organizing combinations, and they have no tariff to protect them.

Polls of the first voters in various portions of the country indicate that 50 per cent. of the young men will vote for Roosevelt. There is something attractive about the President and his career that appeals strongly to the youth of the land.

"The expenditures of the Nation have been managed in a spirit of economy as far removed from waste as from niggardliness, and in the future every effort will be continued to secure economy consistent with efficiency."—Roosevelt's letter of acceptance.

Three words in the Democratic platform are sufficient to defeat that party. "Protection is robbery" is a phrase that is helping the Republicans more than a hundred speeches by campaign orators.

With both Republican factions guaranteeing the electoral vote to Wisconsin to Roosevelt, another iridescent rainbow dream of the Democracy goes glimmering into the realms of perpetual night.

The first, last and only claim made for Judge Parker is that he is safe. So is a grave safe. It also resembles Judge Parker in lacking enough attract to to run a campaign for constable.

SUPPLEMENT

FOR REVENUE ONLY

A DEMOCRATIC POLICY AND HOW IT WORKS IN PRACTICE.

The Wilson Tariff Law and Its Stupendous and Disastrous Failure, with Four Years of Accompanying Business Disaster.

The Democratic policy has often been announced to be "A TARIFF FOR REVENUE ONLY." And what this high-sounding policy always in practice has produced is DIMINISHING REVENUE AND INCREASING DEFICIT.

The great business depression which overtook the country during the last Democratic administration was due not merely to the anti-protection features of Democratic tariff tinkering, but to the very serious falling off in government revenues which it occasioned.

When there is a "condition of uncertainty and instability" in business, which Mr. Parker himself has admitted followed past attempts in the tariff tinkering line, the imports of certain classes of dutiable goods are always sure to fall off even with the decreased tariff, for the reason that the people consume less foreign luxuries in hard times than in good. With the foreigners flooding the American markets with articles that can just as well be produced by American labor, our own people naturally have less financial means with which to buy foreign laces, silks, teas, wines, perfumes, diamonds, works of art, etc.

As a revenue-producing measure the Wilson tariff law was a stupendous failure. Its authors showed colossal business incompetence in their failure to make it supply anywhere near the amount of revenues required to meet the expenses of the government. The revenue from the Wilson bill fell short of the estimates of its Democratic framers by no less a sum than $87,000,000, and this, including its sugar import tax, to which many of the Democratic leaders, including President Cleveland himself, had been bitterly opposed. This bill not only did direct damage to manufacturing industry everywhere throughout the country, but it had disastrous effects on the nation's credit, because in causing the revenues to drop heavily below the expenditures it forced the government to draw for its routine expenses on the treasury gold reserve, which was needed to preserve the gold standard of value, and this shrinkage in the gold reserve in turn necessitated the enormous bond issues in which syndicates secured their notorious "rake-offs."

All through 1894 trade demoralization increased, and the government revenues for the first six months of the year turned out to be about $40,000,000 less than the Democratic Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Carlisle, had estimated they would be in his report of December, 1893. Nevertheless the Democratic leaders failed to heed the warning, but went ahead with their free trade tariff bill without paying the slightest attention to whether or not the bill could produce enough revenue for running the government.

Davis Looks Out for His Own Revenue.

The House of Representatives not only struck off the import taxes on coal, iron ore, and wool, which were exclusively protective duties, and therefore logical subjects for revision, from the Democratic standpoint, but it refused to continue the sugar duties, which were a revenue tax of the most productive character. The Senate, through the influence of H. G. Davis, now the Democratic vice presidential candidate, whose vast fortune was represented chiefly in coal lands, replaced the duty of 40 cents per ton on coal, which was an utterly insignificant source of national revenue, but it restored only such part of the sugar duties as could play directly into the hands of the sugar trust. Considered merely as a law contrived to produce sufficient revenue, the Senate bill was undoubtedly superior to the House bill. The Senate sugar tariff, it is true, produced eventually hardly one-half as much revenue as had been yielded by the sugar tariff of 1883, but there was nevertheless collected from this source, in the first full year under the amended Wilson act, the sum of $29,800,000, none of which revenue would have been obtained by the government under the House bill's free-sugar provisions. But the public refused for very obvious reasons to give the framers of the Senate amendments any credit for this achievement. On the eve of the passage of the Wilson bill in the upper house it was discovered that several Democratic Senators, whose votes controlled action on the sugar duties, were speculating in Wall street in sugar trust stock. The angry public clamor over these disclosures was followed by an open letter from President Cleveland to his supporters in the House, declaring the senatorial changes to be "outrageous discriminations and violations of principle"—an assertion which, in view of the platform of the majority, was certainly not unwarranted. From the floor of the Senate, the Democratic leaders retorted publicly with much show of indignation. When, finally, after a long and stubborn struggle, the Senate tariff bill prevailed and passed both houses, President Cleveland refused to put his name to it, and left the bill to become a law without his signature.

From Bad to Worse.

The result of this haphazard reckoning on the revenue was a law which never produced a surplus. Even with its sugar import tax the yield of the Senate bill, in the succeeding year, fell short of the estimate of its authors by no less a sum than $87,000,000. For this exceedingly ill-timed miscalculation, the Democratic Fifty-third Congress is properly held responsible for the necessity of subsequent bond issues. It is true that both houses had added to the bill a tax of two per cent on incomes over $4,000, and in a vague, indefinite way had reckoned that the product of this tax would make good whatever deficiencies might arise from other schedules. The income tax did not stand the test of examination by the United States Supreme Court, and no public revenue was ever derived from it.

Even after the income tax was knocked out by the Supreme Court, and even after it was fully demonstrated that the Wilson law was a stupendous failure as a producer of revenue, the Democratic party in Congress refused to amend it so that it could produce enough revenue. The saying, "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute," in this case might have been expressed, "Millions of cost to the country in increasing deficit and loss of credit rather than one cent of protection to any industry in which Democratic leaders themselves did not happen to have some personal financial interest, like coal and sugar."

WHEN NERO PLAYED A FIDDLE WHILE ROME BURNED HE SHOWED NO MORE UTTER INDIFFERENCE TO THE INTERESTS OF HIS COUNTRY THAN THE LEADERS OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY IN CONGRESS DID IN THAT DISTRESSFUL YEAR 1894 WHEN THEY PLAYED PETTY POLITICS, AND ALSO THE MARKET FOR SUGAR STOCK, AND WITH BLIND INDIFFERENCE TO A FINANCIAL SITUATION THAT WAS ALREADY DANGEROUS, PUSHED TO ITS PASSAGE A BILL THAT IN TURN WAS TO PUSH THE NATION TO THE VERY VERGE OF BANKRUPTCY.

The Stone Instead of the Loaf.

The one single proffer of relief from the Wilson bill deficit during the entire session of the Fifty-third Congress, Democratic in both branches, was a bill directing the treasury to coin and use the $55,000,000 "seigniorage" theoretically acquired by the government in buying silver at the market price and paying it out in over-valued silver dollars.

This bill was a case of offering to the financially distressed nation a stone when a loaf was asked for, for with the gold reserve crumbling to pieces owing to the increasing desire of persons apprehending a slump to the silver basis to exchange paper and silver money for gold, and owing to the encroachments of the government itself upon the gold reserve because of the increasing deficit, it was obviously a case of trying to supply the straw to break the camel's back to furnish this additional load of silver for the gold reserve to carry at a parity with gold.

But what did the Democratic Congress care if the seigniorage bill was to further damage the credit of the country? Never for a moment did the Democrats care to go back on free trade, even to prevent a deficit in the treasury, and never for a moment did they care to go back on free silver, even to prevent the fatal consequences to the national credit that the increasing deficit involved.

The seigniorage bill, however, was fortunately vetoed by President Cleveland, who on the silver question at least was right while his party was wrong, and to whom credit is due for refusing to concede anything to the free silver sentiment during the same period when Alton B. Parker and Henry G. Davis were both actively aiding and abetting free silver with their money and with their votes.

Vindictive Treatment of the Prosperity Goose.

The Democratic party during those four years acted as if it deliberately sought to kill the goose that lays the golden egg of prosperity. It was a case of give the goose a hit in the head with a big stick, then in order to ward off any returning signs of animation, a more severe hit, this time in the heart; and then, lest there should be a few sparks of vitality left, a violent kick with the foot, and then another, and then another.

And there is nothing in the Democratic platform this year, or in the personal records of the Democratic candidates, Messrs. Parker and Davis, to suggest that the Democratic party would not again attempt the killing of the prosperity goose if it got the chance.

The Democrats want reduction in the tariff, but unless they should pursue a niggardly, drastic policy of cutting down present expenditures in furtherance of the honor and prosperity of the nation, they would need every bit of the present revenues from the tariff to make both ends meet. However, even by pursuing a policy of ultra niggardliness in expenditures for the public good, extravagance in other ways, coupled with their tariff revision policy, would probably more than neutralize such saving and necessitate large bond issues. Why should the intelligent voters of the United States give the Democratic party the slightest chance to allow history to repeat itself in another doleful chapter of incompetence, scandal, business disaster and hard times for all classes of people?

Parker and Davis belong to the same school as Cleveland as regards free trade, except that Davis has been a protectionist when protection to himself through a high tariff on coal was involved. But as regards free silver, neither of them showed the moral strength that Cleveland showed in trying to prevent the prosperity of the country from being utterly crushed—for while Cleveland fought free silver, and fought it hard, Parker and Davis both voted for it.

Parker and the Trusts.

Trust magnates having furnished the funds to carry on Parker's campaign, will now be relegated to the rear. However, Cord Meyer of the sugar trust and other representatives of grasping corporations have such a hold on the Democratic candidate that they will continue to control him. Their relegation to the rear is merely a "blind" to deceive the people. When Parker visited New York he told his managers he did not wish his remarks on the trusts "queered," and that during the remainder of the campaign the magnates who have been parading and jubilating over his nomination should be less open in their demonstrations of joy. He further said he could not get close to the people as long as the trust magnates openly shouted for him. What the judge meant was that his wealthy sponsors should "keep dark" until after election, when they could come to the front again.

"Probably the greatest harm done by vast wealth is the harm that we of moderate means do ourselves when we let the vices of envy and hatred enter deep into our own natures."—From Roosevelt's speech at Providence, R. I., August 23rd, 1902.

Under the lead of the Republican party nearly all of the time for over forty years the United States, from being a third-class power among the nations, has become in every respect first.

"The poorer classes of foreign illiterates are used to conditions with which, happily, our workmen are unfamiliar."—Senator Fairbanks in the Senate, January 11, 1898.

ASSAILING THE TARIFF.

Democrats Seem Determined to Force a Disturbing Issue.

Signs increase that the Democratic leaders are determined to force the tariff issue to the front in the presidential campaign. While Republicans will welcome the discussion of this question, well knowing that it is sure to add many thousands of votes to their majorities, they cannot but regret the selection of the tariff as the main issue, because of the unfortunate influence it will have upon the business interests of the country.

So far this year the presidential campaign has not blocked business and financial activity. Affairs proceed as usual. In all lines of business there is a hopefulness and confidence which is most encouraging. But if the country is to be confronted with another visitation of tariff revision agitation, with even a remote chance of success in the election, there is bound to be a great slump in the industrial world and a corresponding depression in all business interests.

It is well remembered what happened ten years ago, when, as President Roosevelt puts it, "the last attempt was made by means of lowering the tariff to prevent some people from prospering too much. The attempt was entirely successful. The tariff law of that year was among the causes which in that year and for some time afterwards effectually prevented anybody from prospering too much, and labor from prospering at all. Undoubtedly it would be possible at the present time to prevent any of the trusts from remaining prosperous by the simple expedient of making such a sweeping change in the tariff as to paralyze the industries of the country."

The people of the United States will not soon court again the destruction and panic of 1893. Once is enough for one generation. There will be a tremendous vote against tariff legislation by the Democrats.

The confidence of the country may stand even throughout a tariff revision campaign, but it is risking a good deal to raise that issue in the manner contemplated. They, however, have everything to gain and nothing to lose. They have got to have something to stand upon, and complete failure in every other attack made upon the Republican position has driven them upon the tariff as a standing outpost of Republicanism which can always be assailed, when nothing else affords a convenient target.

Parker's Gold Brick.

Gold Democrats are beginning to fear that Parker's gold telegram was a gold brick intended to deceive them. If Parker voted twice for Bryan and free silver and then pretended to espouse the cause of gold, what assurance, they ask, can he give that he will not change again to free silver if he is elected. With Bryan in the cabinet as an adviser, the gold standard could easily be weakened by any insidious policy that Bryan might evolve. Free silver will never be a dead issue as long as Bryan and any of his former supporters, like Parker, for instance, remain on the political stage.

Bryan's Name Cheered.

It is not believed the Hon. Charles A. Towne was very much humiliated at Fort Wayne, Ind., when his audience wildly cheered mention of Bryan's name and remained silent when Parker's name was spoken. Mr. Towne was once a leader of Silverites who went to New York from Duluth, became counsel for corporations and is now campaigning in behalf of the candidate of the trusts. Though Towne ostensibly deserted Bryan for business reasons, he is believed to be still an ardent admirer of the Nebraskan.

The Savings-Bank Test.

In 1896, when McKinley was first elected, there were 988 savings banks; now there are 1,078, an increase of 10 per cent. In 1896 the number of depositors in savings banks was 5,005,494 and the total deposits $1,907,000,000; in 1903 the number of depositors had increased to 7,305,288, and the deposits to $2,935,000,000, an increase in round numbers of $1,028,000,000. As deposits in savings banks are mainly by wage earners and persons of moderate means the great increase in the number of depositors and the aggregate deposits indicates general prosperity—the result of Republican policies and administration.

Per Capita Cost of Government.

Democrats are circulating the statement that the per capita cost of maintaining the government of the United States is greater than in any other one of the leading countries. This is not true. In New Zealand, the cost of government to each inhabitant is highest. It is $38.38. In Australia it is $37.69; in the United Kingdom, $21.39; in France, $17.84; Belgium, $17.40; Paraguay, $17.39; Austria Hungary, $12.68; Argentina, $12.08; Cuba, $12.40; Netherlands, $11.49; Portugal, $11.45; Spain, $10.09; Sweden, $9.54; German Empire $9.45; Canada, $9.30. In the United States the per capita cost of government is $7.97.

Nearly All for Roosevelt.

William F. Crerand, publisher of the Textile Trade Journal at 372 Broadway, New York, has just completed a canvass of the trade publications to learn their attitude towards the national tickets. These publications are non-partisan and as a rule do not allow political discussions to appear in their columns. Mr. Crerand's canvass shows that out of 803 of these publications 768 are for Roosevelt and Fairbanks.

Among the reasons given by John S. George, a life-long Democrat and a nephew of the late Governor R. P. Flower, of New York, for declaring his intention to vote for President Roosevelt, is this:

"The Democratic leaders are making speeches against so-called militarism and imperialism, and they are demanding that the Philippine Islands be given up and abandoned, so far as the guardianship of the United States is concerned. I do not believe that the American flag should ever come down from any pole that it is once raised upon."

July 1, 1893, the last year of the Harrison administration, the public debt was $12.55 per capita for the entire population of the United States. July 1, 1897, after four years of Democratic administration during a time of profound peace, it had increased to $13.55, an increase of one dollar per head for every man, woman and child in the United States. That is a fair specimen of Democratic mangement of public affairs.

Judge Parker's attempt to pose as a bulwark against Democratic attacks on the "personal honor and integrity of President Roosevelt" is one of the humorous incidents of the campaign. No Democrat has yet had the temerity to assail the "President's personal honor and integrity," and none is likely to make the attempt while the President is awake. Parker evidently has gone into the circus business.

The Democratic managers have compiled a list of shutdowns of mills during the Roosevelt administration. A glance at the list shows that nine-tenths of the mills and factories closed were temporarily shut down for repairs. The list is a "fake."

One of the incidental benefits of Republican rule is the general improvement in the condition of the roads traversed by rural free delivery carriers. This is particularly true in Western States, where the improvement was most needed.

The New York Herald has printed a facsimile of Judge Parker's gold telegram. It should furnish a companion piece by printing a facsimile of his silver ballot in 1896 or 1900.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

A Man of Action, Who Can Be Relied on in Emergencies.

Theodore Roosevelt occupies a unique position in the estimation of the American people. It is not that other men in public life are not honest, or earnest or incorruptible—these qualities are not rare. It is that Mr. Roosevelt combines them in an unusual way. He is possessed of great physical vitality and mental energy; he has of his own taste and his own motion entered into various occupations that have put him in touch and sympathy with all classes of men, high and low. When he was a ranchman he made the cowboys his friends so that when he became a soldier they clamored to be of his regiment. He became Police Commissioner in New York, not for "the money there was in it," as was the custom in New York, but to see that certain abuses were remedied. They were remedied in spite of the opposition of other members of the board. He became Assistant Secretary of the Navy in order to carry out certain plans of naval progress. He enlisted in the Spanish war from patriotic motives and made a record. He was elected Governor of New York on account of his public services and was nominated for Vice President against his own wishes for the same reason. In all these positions and as President of the United States he has done his duty fearlessly and honestly. The people have learned to regard him as a man of action; as a man who does things, and who can be relied on in an emergency. In common phrase he is regarded as a man "who will do to tie to."

Against such a record as this the negative record of a man who has done nothing but write legal opinions and indorse Democratic platforms amounts to nothing. As a man of executive ability and of action Judge Parker is "not in it."

Legislative Landmarks.

Some of the landmarks of historic legislation created during President Roosevelt's administration are: (1) The law for the civil government of the Philippines; (2), Corporate legislation, chief of which is that creating the Department of Commerce and Labor, with broad powers, which, in the nature of things, must steadily grow; (3), Cuban reciprocity, conferring material benefits on both Cuba and the United States; (4), The treaty and laws that make the Panama canal a certainty; (5), The law for the irrigation of the arid lands of the great West.

Against these accomplished results during one administration of the party that does things, the Democratic party has nothing to offer but empty words and high-sounding promises.

"If our opponents came into power and attempted to carry out their promises to the Filipinos by giving them independence, and withdrawing American control from the islands, the result would be frightful calamity to the Filipinos themselves, and in its larger aspect would amount to an international crime. Anarchy would follow; and the most violent anarchic forces would be directed partly against the civil government, partly against all forms of religious and educational civilization. Bloody conflicts would inevitably ensue in the archipelago, and just as inevitably the islands would become the prey of the first power which in its own selfish interest took up the task we had cravenly abandoned."—Roosevelt's letter of acceptance.

Taggart's Prophecies.

A tip to Republicans: Don't be scared by Chairman Taggart's prophecies or claims regarding the political outlook. In 1894, when he was chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee in Indiana, he claimed the State by 10,000 votes up to the night before the election. The next day the Republicans carried it by 46,000 plurality.

YOUNG MAN!

Young man, what makes the nation great?
Not mart or boundary or state,
Not argosies that sweep the sea—
'Tis none of these that make us free;
'Tis none of these that keep us grand.
What is it makes and builds the land?
'Tis YOU!

Young man, who is the country's guide?
Who stands her guard on every side?
Not men of war that ride the foam,
Nor mountains piercing heaven's dome,
Nor rivers rushing to the strand.
Who has the sure and guiding hand?
'Tis YOU!

Young man, who is the nation's guard?
Not sullen gates with cannon barred,
Not harbor mouth or mountain pass
Nor fortresses where warriors mass.
Whom does the nation choose for guard?
Who o'er her fate keeps watch and ward?
'Tis YOU!

Young man! Young man! The endless fight,
The endless stress of wrong and right
Wherein the ballot tells the tale
Is on again—you must not fail!
Start right, vote right, think right, young man—
Who keeps the land Republican?
'Tis YOU!

MR. FAIRBANKS'S LETTER.

A Clear and Effective Statement of Republican Principles.

Senator Fairbanks's letter of acceptance is a document which appeals directly to the business men and workers generally. It states clearly some of the most important, but perhaps not sufficiently understood, tenets of the Republican party in its conflict with Democracy.

In calling attention to the service done to the entire country by the establishment of the Bureau of Commerce and Labor, with a special department to deal with corporations, the Senator points out the first real attempt by the government to deal with the trust problem. He clearly sees that the regulation of the great combinations of capital by law is possible, is necessary, and he shows the consistent course of the Republican party in this regard.

As to our foreign policy Senator Fairbanks rightly considers that we have much to be proud of in the firm, conservative and thoroughly broad and Christian policy which has been adhered to during the years of Republican administration. The tremendous expansion in our trade, our foreign interests and influence has been accomplished by peaceful methods, and no remote sign of war has appeared upon our horizon in the years following the establishment of new National relations or our acquisition of a vast territory in the far East.

In his enunciation of the Republican idea of the desirability of closer trade relations with our great neighbor, Canada, the candidate for the Vice Presidency is peculiarly happy. He is plainly for a liberal movement for reciprocity between this country and the people just over the line to the north. He also emphasizes the value of the "open door" secured for us in China, and promises a continuance of the benefits of that result of our recent foreign policy.

As a whole, the letter of the Vice Presidential candidate is a strong paper, one which commands respect and confidence. Senator Fairbanks is meeting the American people face to face, from one end of the country to the other, in his very lively campaign. It is well, however, to have in hand his written opinions and aspirations as a public man on the great questions at issue at this moment.

Pretty Girls Gone Republican.

The Washington Star is perfectly right in intimating that all the pretty girls have gone Republican when it says:

Better cut ready-made clothing and better made shoes and hats are going on the shelves of the country store. Rural maidens read the fashion notes and the aids to beauty, and the girls with a home-made look are becoming scarcer.

One of the best pieces of work of the Republican party—fortunately for the party in power—has been its building up of the rural delivery system. It has accomplished a tremendous work in the extension of the work of the Postoffice Department.

Candidate and Platform.

This year's presidential election will not be won by any formal platform. The Republican platform is good, but the Republican candidate is better. The truth is Mr. Roosevelt is the real platform for both parties. He is the main point of attack by the Democrats and the main source of strength for the Republicans. He would be elected without any platform except the record of the party and his own.

Democratic Trifling.

The Democratic party professes a most sacred reverence for the constitution, yet by nominating an octogenarian for Vice President it has shown utter disregard for the provision of the constitution which, in case of the death or inability of the President, devolves his duties upon the Vice President. No party has a right to trifle with great public interests in that manner.

The bill to endow agricultural colleges by land grants and to establish agricultural experiment stations was introduced many years ago by a Republican Senator, Morrill of Maine, and was passed by a Republican Congress and signed by a Republican President. These colleges and experiment stations have been of immense benefit to agriculture. They owe their establishment to the party that "does things."

This country is now in a high state of prosperity. Never before did all the economic forces work together so unitedly for national welfare and prosperity as during the last few years. Would it be wise to exchange that condition for one not merely of uncertainty but of almost certain disaster?

It is the amount of feed a farmer can raise for his stock and not the number of acres ranged over that will gauge his profit for the year. All things equal, irrigation insures the maximum product for each acre of ground.

The question is now being discussed as to whether a shadow can occupy space. The answer must be in the affirmative to those who believe there is a money plank in the St. Louis platform.

Day Dreams

By A. M. Davies Ogden

Copyright, 1904, by A. M. Davies Ogden

The late spring afternoon sunshine flooded gloriously into the bare, old studio, lighting the dreamy, sensitive face of the young man who stood by the piano pouring out his soul in melody. It flung a golden aureole around the head of the girl who, nearly lost in a big arm chair, sat absorbed.

"Adelaide, Adelaide," rang out the notes of Beethoven's passionate love song, and the girl's eyes filled with tears as the music swayed her young, untried nature. And how well Harry Walters looked when he sang!

Her thoughts, uncontrolled, wandered back to the day when they had first met, many months before. Newly arrived in Dresden, she and her father had driven out to Potschapel to inspect the big china factory; but, at her father's request for some one to show them about, the big German in charge flung up his hands.

"Aber, I spik no English," he began plaintively. Then, at sight of a passer-by, his face brightened.

"Ach, Herr Walters," he cried, and the person addressed, turning, came back with lifted cap.

"Can I be of any service?" he asked in English. Mr. Hoffman looked relieved.

"I want somebody to show me about," he exclaimed, and the young man smiled.

"The Herr Direktor and I are old friends," he responded. "If I can be of any assistance"— The girl's eyes thanked him.

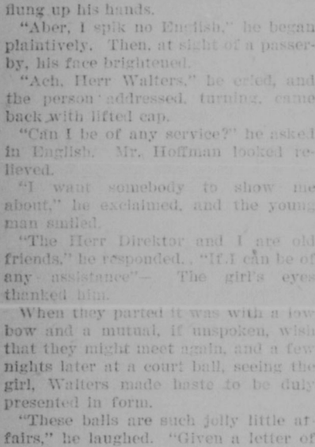
When they parted it was with a low bow and a mutual, if unspoken, wish that they might meet again, and a few nights later at a court ball, seeing the girl, Walters made haste to be duly presented in form.

"These balls are such jolly little affairs," he laughed. "Given a letter of introduction or two and they will invite even a poor musical student like myself. And how do you find Dresden? Have you 'done' the green vaults, the galleries and so forth? No? Fancy."

"Father does not care much for ordinary sightseeing," declared the girl. Walters eyed her rather doubtfully.

"If I might be permitted to take you around a bit," he suggested. "It would be a great pleasure. Oh, may I really?" As the girl nodded. "Let's start tomorrow."

Such was the beginning of their friendship, and as the days drifted into spring there were little excursions up



"MILLICENT! IS IT REALLY YOU?"

the river to be made, fingerings on the Brueh Terrasse listening to the band in the garden on the other bank; long hours spent in the galleries with pauses before the Sistine Madonna or some other treasure in that wonderful storehouse of art. Then suddenly one day Mr. Hoffman awoke to the fact that his daughter, although but seventeen was no longer a child. Realizing that this prolonged companionship with an earnest young musician might prove dangerous to one, if not to both, he took passage back to America, and to night he and his daughter were to leave for Bremen. This was goodby.

"Adelaide," sang the voice, putting into the song all that the singer dared not say, and the girl trembled responsively. With a final harmony the melody stopped. Through the door the accompanist slipped away. Mr. Hoffman turned to the window. The girl held out both hands.

"Goodby," she murmured. Walters shaken, leaned forward.

"You will not forget?" he begged. And the girl smiled, a slow, love smile.

"I will not forget."

As the train rolled its way through the night the girl's eyes filled again with tears, the facile tears of youth which turn so quickly to rainbows as hope rosily spans the years. Then, clasping a little blue ring and a cluster of forgetmenots, she fell asleep.

* * * * * * *

The windows of Cliff Towers were brilliant with lights. Strains of music floated out to the watchers in the street. Mrs. Livingston was "at home," and Bellevue avenue was crowded with arriving guests and curious spectators.

The band on the lawn began to play "Wine, Women and Song," and the beautiful Miss Hoffman stepped through the long French windows upon the terrace.

The shimmer of moonlight on the water was exquisite. What did it and the music seem to recall? Ah, Dresden! The girl shivered. How long it was since she had thought of Dresden! The man beside her started apprehensively.

"Are you cold? Shall I bring you a wrap?" he asked. She assented.

She wished to be rid of him to think for a moment. Dresden! Walters' face, his happy, boyish, half boastful talk, struggled into her thoughts. "Wait until I sing in the Metropolitan," he had laughed.

And now? Should he make his debut there she would be in her box, tiara crowned. But she would throw him some flowers in memory of the little ring now crushed and broken, with a faded spray of forgetmenots, far back in a drawer of her desk. For a moment the girl's face showed hard and cynical in the moonlight.

There was a stir within the house. The prelude of a song came to her. Then a rich tenor voice broke into the refrain "Adelaide, Adelaide." A famous tenor was singing and the girl's eyes dimmed. "Adelaide!" A step sounded behind her. She turned to see Renshaw, her lace scarf in his hand. Something in his expression warned the girl that the crisis which she had so long been evading could be postponed no longer. Her decision must be made. He was young, rich, good looking. Why could she not care for him? Had she not hoped for this, tried for this? Was it not expected of her? Her breath quickened and she lifted her head. Well, he should have his answer.

* * * * * * *

The morning was clear, but cold, and on the crowded ferryboat only two people, a man and a woman, dared brave the forward deck. The woman showed lines of suffering and self reliance in her face and a great sweetness. The man, wrapped in a heavy coat, was humming to himself, "Adelaide, Adelaide." He breathed, and the woman, with a sudden start, turned. Recognition leaped to both pair of eyes.

"Millicent! Is it really you? How I have searched for a trace of you!" he cried. "But at your former home they only said that you had gone." The girl flushed under his look.

"After father died I had to leave New York," she said simply. "I have been doing typewriting, proofreading, what I could get. You know I am poor."

"You!" cried the man again. "You! Typewriting! And I! Well, I have not made the Metropolitan and probably never will now. Some of the old dreams are lost. But for the rest—what little success I have won has been due to you. Always it has been the thought of you that has spurred me on. It has always been your eyes, Millicent, do you remember the old days?, Can we go back to them? Must all the dreams go, or have you forgotten?" There was a note of entreaty in his voice, and the girl's color deepened; then she smiled back at him.

"One can never go back. But perhaps one can start afresh," she answered. "And I have never forgotten."

When Barnum's Burned.

Barnum's museum, destroyed July 13, 1865, was one of the most amusing fires that ever occurred in New York city. It was in the daytime. Chief John Decker was in charge, assisted by Orr, Bates, Lamb, Cleary, Everett and Sullivan. Thousands crowded Broadway clear up to Park place as well as Park row, while the park in front was black with people. It was fun to see the boys at the outset of the fire bringing out Barnum's old stuffed images and wax figures. One fellow ran out with Henry Clay under one arm and General Winfield Scott under the other. Queen Victoria was dragged out by the hair of her head. Mary, queen of Scots, was tossed out of the second story window, followed by Hicks the pirate. Head Carpenter Walker of the theater, who was also a member of Engine No. 38, that lay in Ann street, got so excited that he fell headlong down the main entrance stairway with Napoleon in one hand and Walker, filibuster, in the other.

The happy family that attracted so much attention in those days were determined not to leave. The cage door was thrown wide open and the birds and animals punched with sticks to drive them out, but few would accept their liberty and were burned to death. All of the 100,000 curiosities were destroyed.

Remembered the Places.

In the days of his youth, "befo' de wah," it had been the privilege of Uncle Eph Slater to attend his master as body servant upon several extended journeys. To mention the name of another town or locality was enough to start him on his reminiscences, and so jealous did he grow of his reputation as a traveler that he always declared he had visited the place in question whether he had or not.

One day an acquaintance, Deacon Thompson, met Uncle Eph on the street and told him of the arrival in the village of the new schoolma'am, whose acquirements, he had heard, were of a high order.

"H'm," said Uncle Eph, "yeh don' say; yeh don' say. I wunner, now, hez de young lady had much trabbel?"

"I dunno 'bout dat," replied the deacon, "but my Lize tells me she dun been troo butony, algerbrar 'n' Latin."

"Uh huh," said Uncle Eph reflectively and not in the least nonplused. "I riccollicks dem little places, foh sho; but it was night w'en we passed troo 'em, 'n' Marse Richard he 'lowed it wuzn't wuth while stoppin' off."—Harper's Magazine.

Pretenses.

Batcheller—I've come to the conclusion that marriage is just a game of pretense. Askum—How do you mean? Batcheller—Well, half the married men I meet pretend they're perfectly happy, and the other half pretend they're perfectly miserable.—Exchange.

Mr. Bowser Rises Early

He Thinks It Will Be a Real Treat to See the Sun Come Up, but Has a Hard Time Doing So.

[Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure.]

"MRS. BOWSER," began Mr. Bowser the other evening as he threw aside the newspaper he had been reading, "you know there is a sun, of course, and you have heard of sunrises and sunsets, but how do you know the sun rises and sets?"

"Are you trying to make a joke?" she asked.

"Far from it, madam. I am approaching a very serious matter. Could you go on the witness stand and swear of your own personal knowledge that the sun had risen or set during the last fifteen years? In other words, have you seen it rise or set?"

"I—I don't think so."

"Of course you haven't, and neither have I. For fifteen years we have been hemmed in by brick and mortar. After the sun is half an hour high we see it over the roof of a brewery, and within half an hour of its setting it disappears behind a sausage factory."

"But you can't change the 'sun's ways, can you?"

"Certainly not, but I can change my own, and I'm going to do it. I'm going to get up tomorrow morning and take a walk and see the sun rise for the first time in years. I used to stand as a boy and see the eastern sky begin to blush, and it was a treat to see the changes until at last the glorious orb

"THE IDEA OF THAT WOMAN LYING THERE LIKE A GRAMPUS!"

o' day came rising from the depths of the unknown to start the wheels of time turning for another day. I'm going to do it again. Would you like to get up with me at daylight tomorrow morning?"

"Isn't that pretty early?" replied Mrs. Bowser at the thought of it.

"Of course it's early. Daylight is always early, but I see you prefer to lie and snooze for three hours later, and we'll say no more about it. There isn't a hog or ox or cow in this whole country that isn't awake and moving around before sunrise, and if human beings prefer to grunt and snooze and snore and yawn let 'em keep it up. I begin tomorrow morning to go back to the first principles of nature—the soft dew, the twitter of the birds, the whisperings of the millions of leaves as they awake for the day, the—the"—

Mr. Bowser became a little confused here and broke off to glare at the cat and mentally threaten his life, and as Mrs. Bowser had nothing further to say the subject was dropped. On going to bed she saw that he was determined on the matter, however. He placed his clothing where it could be found without trouble and thrust his watch under his pillow, and it seemed to her that he got out of bed to carry the watch to the light of the window at least ten times during the night. When the first milk wagon was heard moving about he got up and dressed, and she heard him muttering as he went downstairs:

"The idea of that woman lying there like a grampus instead of being up and about to see the day dawn upon the world!"

Three minutes later Mr. Bowser was sauntering down the street, followed at a respectful distance by the cat.

It was just coming daylight. Afar off a milk wagon rattled over the cobblestones with a rattle close to nature and the milk diluted 17 per cent. Leaning against a shade tree was a policeman, who nodded and dozed and yet kept one ear open for his roundsman. A dog which had passed the night under a stoop came out and sat up and looked this way and that as if he had had a bad dream, and a few sparrows began flying about and fighting each other.

"By thunder, but this is life, this is!" muttered Mr. Bowser as he leaned against a fence and drew in long breaths of the foggy, malarious atmosphere. "A man who would lie on the broad of his back and snooze when he could be out here deserves to be kicked. 'Tis the dawning of a day that may be mighty with history. 'Tis the turning of the wheel that may make or unmake nations. Now I begin to live again. Now I once more feel"—

What he felt may never be known, as a longshoreman who had been working all night and was then on his way home halted at sight of Mr. Bowser and growled out:

"Do you know of any saloon around here open at this hour? I want to get a nip before I go home, but every shebang seems to be closed as tight as a drum."

"Man, look around you," was the reply. "See the leaves quivering under the early morning air. See how the coming of day casts its lights and shadows on the buildings down there. Listen to the sounds that tell you of the awakening of the world to another day of toil."

"Say, now, old cock, but you've had two drinks this morning," said the worker, "and if you don't tell me where you got 'em I'll call you a blamed mean man."

"Drinks, man!" roared Mr. Bowser. "Are you an animal that you can stand there and talk of whisky when all around you nature is seeking to instill virtue into your soul?"

"Go easy, old man!" warned the other. "Nature is all right, and so am I, and I want a nip to go to bed on. If you don't want to tell me where you got yours, then you can go to Ballyhack for a baldheaded son of a gun!"

Mr. Bowser began to breathe hard and to grow red in the face, but the longshoreman wanted a drink worse than a fight, and after nodding his head in a threatening way several times he passed on.

The daylight grew stronger. It revealed an old straw hat hanging to the branches of a shade tree and a battered old tin pail hanging to a telephone wire. It showed the front doors of a Chinese laundry and an American butcher shop, and it betrayed the face of an iceman looking out of a third story window in a sleepy way and wondering how many of his customers would complain that day of a shortage.

There was a blush on the face of the eastern horizon—the faintest sort of a tinge—and as Mr. Bowser's eye caught it he got a new brace with his back on the fence and began to apostrophize it. He had got as far as to say, "And now the blush of maiden morn," when some one at his elbow observed:

"Say, old man, it's about my time too."

It was a tramp who might have slept on a bench in the park below.

"What do you want?" demanded Mr. Bowser as he turned on the fellow.

"Well, if you don't want to invite me to drink you might flip me a dime."

"Drink? Drink? Say, you miserable old soaker, I'll throw you over the fence if you don't get out! The idea of your interrupting my meditations at this hour to ask for something to burn your liver out!"

"Liver was burnt out years ago, sir, and how could I tell that you were meditating? What's it about? If there's anything going, put me on. I thought you were waiting for the saloons to open. When I saw that red nose of yours"—

"Go on!"

"When I saw that red nose of yours I says to myself"—

The faint blush had deepened to crimson on the eastern sky and the meadow lark was shaking the dew from his wings and making ready to soar, but Mr. Bowser's attention was elsewhere. He took hold of the tramp to move him on, but the fellow whistled a signal and fought back.

In a moment more three other Weary Willies turned the corner, followed by the drivers of two grocery wagons, and Bowser was no Port Arthur. His front and flanks were open to attack, and strategy demanded that he fall back. He fell. Mrs. Bowser heard footsteps and a rush. The cat came first, with his master a good second, and the policeman and tramps trailed on behind. There was the bang of the gate, a clatter up the steps, and then the front door opened and shut and the policeman was heard saying outside:

"I had my eye on that old reprobate for nearly half an hour, but I ought to have collared him at first. He was out for a chance to rob some drunken man, and I'll crack his head when I see him again."

"Mr. Bowser, did you get back to nature?" called Mrs. Bowser over the banister.

He heard, but made no reply. It was all her fault that he had thought of sunrises and got out on the street at that unearthly hour, but he would say nothing until the time came to take a terrible revenge. M. QUAD.

Divorces Explained.

"Most divorces are caused by a very common mistake."

"What is it?"

"Many a man in love only with a dimple or a curl makes the mistake of marrying the whole girl."—Life.

Too Deep For Pa.

Little Willie—Say, pa, why is an amateur concert called an entertainment?

Pa—My son, I cannot tell a lie; I don't know.—Detroit Free Press.

The Editor's View.

"I just think his poems are too sweet for anything."

"That seems to be the view the editor takes of them also!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

His Plea.

Dr. Pills—Well, Rastus, we find you have taken the chickenpox.

Rastus (excitedly) — Chicken box! 'Deed, marsar, I might have took de chickens, but I swears I left de coop.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Mountain State BUSINESS COLLEGE

Gives a training that [illegible] Does it quickly, thoroughly [illegible] full and complete course in Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Shorthand and Typewriting. $110 pays tuition, board and room-rent for five months. Skilled teachers. Large attendance. Healthful study and recitation rooms. Modern and convenient furniture. The M. S. B. C. has a National reputation and its graduates are sought after by business men everywhere. Now is the best time to begin a course. No vacation. Individual instruction. Our new Art Catalogue can be had for the asking. Address, A. G. SINE, President, PARKERSBURG, WEST VA.

The Boy Makes the Mule Go,
And the Mule Makes the Cart Go.
WITH OUR NEW PROCESS
We Make the Bread Go!
Because It Is Best.
A Trial Will Convince You.
OAKLAND MODEL STEAM BAKERY,
HENRY LAUER, Proprietor.

Carey's Magnesia Flexible Cement Roofing for Flat or Steep Surfaces

Is suitable for all classes of buildings as it affords thorough fire protection and is a non-conductor of heat and cold. It will last the lifetime of the roof-boards. It is fire-proof and is rated the same as metal or slate roofs. Call or write for samples and prices.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,
Agents for Garrett County, Oakland, Md.

First National Bank
OF GRANTSVILLE, MD
Now Open for Business.
EQUIPPED WITH A
Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe and Vault.
Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound banking.
Deposits by mail and all correspondence given prompt attention.
We Solicit Your Account.

Paid-up Capital, - - $25,000
Liability of Stockholders, 25,000
Total Liability, - $50,000
PAYS 3 PER CENT.
on time deposits. Interest computed and paid semi-annually.
DIRECTORS.
C. H. JENNINGS, U. M. STANTON, G. C. KELLER, ELI STANTON, W. A. HITCHINS, J. S. HERSHBERGER, FRANK WATTS
OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - President.
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President.
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier.

The Up-to-Date Grocery,
First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.
Exclusively a Grocery Store.
CASH OR PRODUSE—One price to everybody and that the lowest consistent with a complete line of High-Grade Groceries.
Everything New, Clean and First-Class.
Fresh Vegetables on THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS.
Largest Line of CRACKERS in Oakland—Fresh Every Week.
W. H. BARTLETT.

THOS. LITTLE.
This is the season of year to make changes, and I will make a GREAT REDUCTION in the prices of China and Porcelain Ware.
I have a large stock of this goods and they must go at the remarkably low price of 10c each. Many of these pieces are cheap at 25c. But I have concluded to sell all at the low price of 10c each.
They consist of Decorated, Gold Trimmed Meat Plates, large and small, Bakers, Nappies, Pitchers, Bowls, Cups and Saucers, large and small plates, just the thing for every day use.
Also a Fine Line of Imported China at Less than Cost.
Come Early and get the Choice Pieces.
HO LITTLE

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 10 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, OCT. 13, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

New York.

For Vice-President:

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,

Indiana.

For Congress:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

Allegany County.

Does Judge Parker Hold These Views?

"I think that a dollar a day is enough for any man, provided that his work is steady. Any man can live on that, and that is all unskilled labor is worth. I am sorry to have to pay more than that, and wouldn't if we had a better supply of labor hereabouts.—Candidate Parker two years ago.

DEMOCRATS always boast of what they are going to do; never of what they have done.

A QUESTION OF DESTINATION.

In his letter of acceptance President Roosevelt has made clear his intentions and those of his party, and there is no excuse for any one's not knowing the course which the Republican party has marked out for itself. But what will happen in the event of Democratic success seems to be one of those things which "no fellow can find out," and it is important, because, as the heroine of a recent Western story of the cattle country said, "It don't matter so much where we come from as it does where we're a-goin' at." If Judge Parker knows where he and his party are "goin' at" he may as well explain.

It may be, of course, that they are going "at" anything which they have a reasonable prospect of getting. There was once a Georgia "cracker" who shuffled into a railway station, and laying down a dollar bill, called for "a ticket on the next train." The agent asked him where he wanted to go. The "cracker" looked reflective for a few minutes, and then replied:

"I dunno. What trains have you got?"

Perhaps, after all, it is a proof of astuteness in the Democratic candidate to wait until he knows what trains his party has got, before deciding whither he wishes to travel, but one thing is certain, he cannot travel on two trains going in opposite directions without straining himself considerably.

IF Parker is to be credited with keeping Tillman quiet Taggart should put him on the national committee pay roll.

WHY SHOULD WE CHANGE?

Great interest is being manifested in every State of the Union over the coming elections for Congress. The lower House is to be elected anew; the upper body, the Senate, will undergo only partial rejuvenation as result of possible changes in the legislatures. Whatever the outcome may be in the legislative election, the political complexion of the Senate can not be changed.

It is possible, however, to install a Democratic majority in the House, if the voters of the land temporarily take their eyes off the gun and abate the interest in public questions which they have shown for the past five Congressional elections.

The Democrats have not had control of the House since the Fifty-third Congress. The next Congress will be the Fifty-ninth and during all that period the voters have steadfastly insisted upon the Republicans retaining the majority and directing the policies of Government. And why? The answer is simple; because at each recurring election, the Democratic party stood for some policy or political principle which the mass of the people would not approve and because by the same token the Republican Party's programe of Government was acceptable to the mass of the thinking people. The House of Representatives is the direct exponent of the people.

It is easy to trace, election by election, the reasoning of the voters compelling their action at the ballot box and which resulted in Republican majorities in the House. It was the Fifty-third Congress that passed the disastrous Wilson tariff act, which in such a brief period of time brought such woeful disaster to the industries of the country. Men did not have togo to statesmen or enconomists to trace the relation between cause and effect: on the contrary, the humblest person was the first to feel the results of the legislation—the first to lose his job and have his income cut off by the failing industries. At the next election the voters could not get to the polls too soon to vote for a Republican Congress to put the tariff back on American basis and start the wheels turning again.

Next election came the money question; the Democrats took the free silver end, the Republicans the sound money and. Again the voters put the Republicans in power. In the succeeding election the question was to defend their former votes and to keep the Republicans in power to sustain the tariff and continue sound money legislation.

After that came the war with Spain, with its consequent Philippines problem. Again the Democrats sought the un-American and unpopular policy. They were for scuttling out of the Philippines and shirking responsibility. McKinley suggested to the voters that the American way, as long as we had the problem thrust upon us, was to stay at work and work it out. The mass of the voters agreed with him and again put in a Republican House to sustain the policies of their choice, now three in number—protection, sound money and sensible and human programme for the Philippines. In the succeeding election the Democrats rushed once more to the breach in advocacy of all their idols, free trade, free silver and "scuttle," each which had voted and been voted down by the people once oftener, and again were repulsed by the voters.

What do the Democrats propose in this election that is different from their former offers which have been repeatedly declined by the people? The only difference between their present and their former positions is a difference of sincerity and definiteness of purpose. They are divided and uncertain on the tariff; their Presidential candidate is for gold, the mass of their party for silver; they do not know exactly what they want to do with the Philippines except to differ from the Republican policy.

Is there anything in their plan of action which would warrant the voters in reversing their own judgment heretofore expressed on those policies, and dividing the responsibility of the Congress?

THOSE Democrats who were fond of comparing Fairbanks to an iceberg must have bumped into him head on.

AN ALLEGORY.

Once upon a time there was a beautiful city called Columbia, which was known as the city of refuge for the oppressed of all the earth. Many flocked to its gates and none were turned away. Its founders and the worthy burgomasters who succeeded them surrounded the city with a wall which they named "Protection." Behind the security of this defense the citizens of Columbia grew and prospered. They built shops and factories, churches and schools. The children who filled the streets were trained in virtue, were educated at the expense of the city, and were inured to habits of industry. The city was a city of homes and of opportunity. Its prosperity became the wonder and envy of its neighbors, and the citizens of Columbia were urged to tear down their wall. They were told that it hampered the growth and development of the city. The citizens, however, hesitate to accept the advice of their rivals, and as their enemies increased their capacity to attack Prosperity Wall, the people appointed one of their own citizens, a great architect and builder named McKinley, to strengthen the wall, increase the defense at the gates and in every part thereof make it proof against the shots of her rivals which were directed with unerring aim against the smoking chimneys of industry.

The great architect and builder, however, had many enemies who declared that the improved defences were not scientifically constructed and that the wall threw its shadow upon the homes that rested in peace behind it, and in an evil moment another architect was appointed to modify and change the defences of Prosperty Wall. This new architect sub-let the contract to a firm bo the name of Wilson-Gorman & Co., who weakened the defences, lowered the wall, and even urged its entire demolition, saying every stone should be razed to the ground.

The result was disastrous. The shots of the enemy hurt the industsies of Columbia. Her citizens suffered from laek of employment. The rich became poor and the poor lost their homes and the sound of mourning was heard in the grass-grown streets.

The eyes of the people were opened. They longed for the good times that were gone. They discharged the architects whose work had caused so much suffering and employed another named Dingley, who restored the wall, strengthened the defences and drove the enemy away. The fires were again lighted, plumes of smoke again waived over the city, the whir of wheels and the hum of trains made music in the streets, and the people smiled again, while seven years of plenty filled the storehouses with the good things of life.

But some of the citizens forget the past suffering. They envied the good fortune of their neighbors and urged that the wall be again destroyed. They said its name was not "Prosperity" but "Robbery" and the old firm of architects whose work had wrought such disaster is again trying to tear down the wall and open the gates and fill the moat, while the enemies are eagerly awaiting the result. The fair city of Columbia, however, has learned her lesson in the hard school of experience.

THE campaign textbook of the Democratic party ought to sell well after the campaign, being placed in the same class with Peck's Bad Boy and Bill Nye's works. Among other discoveries it has made as evidence that we should abandon the Philippines, is that European women in that country "rarely bare more than one child"—perhaps the compositor omitted "at a time" and the proof reader let it stand.

JUDGE PARKER'S "ERRATA"

However Judge Parker's letter of acceptabce may have been received by his party and by the country, it is certain that he himself was not satisfied with it, as after taking two months to compose it he was frantically correcting it up to the time it went to press all over the country.

As the general public may not understand, a long document like this which its promulgator desires to appear simultaneously in the press of the country is printed and distributed through the Associated Press several days in advance, under an injunction not to print it until a certain day. Judge Parker's letter was distributed in this way, and the printed copies were in most of the newspaper offices for a day or two before the letter was printed last Monday.

Documents that are distributed in this way are supposed to be as perfect as the authors of them can make them, and probably there never before was a political paper which had to be corrected after it was given to the press in this way. Judge Parker was the first public man who after spending sixty anxious days and sleepless nights over a pronunciamento could not get it into a shape to suit him, and was compelled to follow it with despairing errata until the roar of the printing press warned him that it had gone beyond recall.

These changes were more remarkable for their number than for their importance. Indeed, the significant thing about them was their trivial character, considering his anxiety to have them made. He wanted "division" changed to "divisions" and "founders" into "framers". For "the Dingley act itself" he wished to substitute "the fourth section of the Dingley act," and for "of" he wanted "this section of." He wanted "the reciprocity clauses" stricken out and "this section" inserted. He wanted "eight" instead of "nine" and "forty" instead of "seventy" and so on. He craved over twenty of these corrections, and no doubt, would have craved as many more if there had been time.

The only explanation possible of these endless corrections is that Judge Parker was frightened or at least nervous over his paper. This is no great wonder, for he was confronted with many difficulties. The Republican party is in possession of most of the public policies that are worth anything, and there was nothing left to Judge Parker except to pick flaws in them and restate them. He did not venture to condemn them and it would not do to assent to them. His task was one of straddling and evasion, and the situation was so unfavorable for that sort of writing that he was like a medaeval martyr walking over heated ploughshares. This was all the more hazardous because he was not at all familiar with the subject-matter of his paper.

In such circumstances it was no wonder that the composition of his letter was to Judge Parker a treadmill by day and a nightmare by night, and that he corrected it, without improving it, or tried to do so, until the cry of the newsboy under his window warned him that his production was already in the hands of the public.

THAT was a happy comparison of Senator Beveridge when he said that the Democratic party was like the engineer trying to run his machine forward and backward at the same time.

HAVE THEY A FOREIGN POLICY?

The letter of acceptance of the Democratic candidate for President sheds no new light on the question of what would be the foreign policy of a Democratic administration. Like the national platform, and the other official and semiofficial declarations of the candidate and his party which have preceded it, the definition of a foreign policy attempted in the letter of acceptance is weak, evasive and contradictory. Let it be admitted, which is by no meanstrue that before the acquisition of the Philippines "we were practically invulnerable against attack by foreign States." Let it be further conceded, also in the teeth of the facts, that these tropical possessions have changed all this, what message has Judge Parker to deliver to his fellow-countrymen with regard to the new aspect of our relations toward the rest of the world? Merely, that it calls for a management of foreign affairs the more circumspect that the invasion of foreign markets by the products of the United States has excited the serious apprehension of all the great industrial peoples! In other words, our demonstrated superiority in certain lines of industry is making for us so many enemies that we must be careful to avoid giving them any other cause of offense. Was ever more arrant nonsense soberly submitted as a formula for the guidance of a great power in its intercourse with the rest of the world? It does not seem to have occured to Judge Parker that the maintenance of the commercial and industrial greatness of the United States imperatively demands the adoption of a foreign policy in which vigor and resolution shall be more conspicuous than timidity or temporizing caution. It is the policy of weakness and makeshift which leads to war, not that of frankness, directness and uncompromising decision.

To the American voter looking for information in regard to the conception which the Democratic party has formed of the responsibilities of the United States as the greatest of the powers of the Pacific, it cannot be very satisfactory to be told: "Let us adhere to the policy of Washington." Nor can it greatly add to the information of the thoughtful patriot as to what the Democrats would do in defense of the Monroe Doctrine to have the policy of Washington defined as meaning a repudiation of "the role of the American continental policeman," while at the same time claiming the rights and assuming the functions of the friend, ally and defender of other American States against European aggression. Judge Parker shows a singular lack of judicial fairness when he seeks to convey the impression that the present administration has at any time acted in South America as "a debt collector for foreign States or their citizens." As a matter of fact, President Cleveland's and Mr. Olney's South American policy was a good deal more fruitful of occasions for trouble than that of their Republican successors. Judge Parker makes no attempt to show how we can keep European States from interfering for the protection of the persons and property of their citizens in Central and South America, while leaving republics eminently prone to fall into the hands of a clique of knavish adventurers entire freedom to manage their affairs in their own way. In fact, the Democratic candidate gives no indication that he has ever seriously attempted to master perhaps the most complex, delicate and difficult of all problems before the statesmen of this republic, any more than he has master its complementary problem of the relations of the United States to the future of the Asiatic shores of the Pacific Ocean. The cheap commonplaces of the letter of acceptance in dealing with the foreign relation of the country indicate either a lack of understanding of the nature of the problems which they involve, or a lack of frankness in admitting that the Democratic party brings nothing to the solution of these problems but a policy of negation, evasion and cowardice.

THE COUNTY'S PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

New Structures are A Necessity But Will They Be Built?

Garrett county badly needs a new courthouse and jail. The former building has long since been condemned as unsafe, and in addition to this it is too small to meet the demands of the public.

All of the offices are overcrowded and the various officials are compelled to keep their record in insecure and unsafe places, which bears the inappropriate name of "vaults"—two in number. This applies to the offices clerk of the Circuit Court and Register of Wills, while in the offices of the treasurer and county commissioners are iron safes. It is safe to say that if a fire should occur the records in all of the offices would be destroyed.

The jail is in such a condition that to attempt to repair it as it now stands would be utter folly. No blame can be attached to the sheriff or his family, as it is kept as clean as is possible under the prevailing circumstances. The sanitary condition is simply indescribable.

The jail was built to accomodate about ten prisoners, yet within the last six months there have been confined within it thirty-three prisoners at one time. Not only those held for crime are made to suffer, but those who are held as witnesses before the grand jury and who are unable to give bond for their appearance.

The attention of the county commissioners was called to this state of affairs by the last grand jury, and it was hoped then that they would take immediate action to remedy the conditions; but the matter seems to be at a standstill.

At the last session of the Legislature a bill was passed authorizing the issuance of bonds to the amount of $125,000, if indorsed by popular vote, the funds derived from the sale thereof to be used in erecting a new courthouse and jail. This question has never yet been voted upon. It is safe, however, to say that by a vote of the people it will not be carried, because those voters residing north of Deep Creek do not think the issuing of any kind of bonds advisable. Why they have taken this view is not known, but presumably because they are afraid taxes might be increased.

The representative who introduced the present bill, it is thought, made an error in giving the people a chance to vote upon the question. It is said that he should have used his influence in having a bill passed authorizing the county commissioners to issue the bonds without any vote, vesting this right in them alone, and then if this they refused, an injunction could have been obtained from the court compelling the issue. It is reasonably sure, however, that Garrett county will not get these much needed building for years to come unless the present buildings should happen to be destroyed.—Cumberland News.

GRANTSVILLE.

The farmers ars making good use of the fine weather.

Mrs. A. F. Getty, of Cumberland, is here on a visit. Her friends are glad to see her. We wish her a pleasant time in our little village.

Messrs. Harry Bevans, Urban and Llewelyn Blocher, and Dr. Robinson were at Petersburg last Sunday.

Dr. G. C. Keller and wife are visiting relatives in Ohio.

Mr. Martin Winterburg, our able policeman, and Miss Mary Yutzy made a flying trip to Meyersdale Sunday last.

Last Saturday Prof. C. E. Bender and Raymond Keller took quite an extended hunting trip. They brought in a nice little bunch of grays.

The brick layers have begun work on Mr. Chas. Younkin's new house.

The local teachers' institute at Springs, Pa., last Saturday was interesting and instructive.

We are sorry to note the death of Mrs. King, of Spring, Pa. She died on Sunday morning.

The Grantsville school is progressing very nicely under the management of Prof. C. E. Bender and Miss Edna Welsh.

A STUDENT.

Subscribe for The Republican.

8 Cents

Eight cents a pound is what a young woman paid for twelve pounds of flesh.

She was thin and weak and paid one dollar for a bottle of Scott's Emulsion, and by taking regular doses had gained twelve pounds in weight before the bottle was finished.

Eight cents a pound is cheap for such valuable material. Some pay more, some less, some get nothing for their money. You get your money's worth when you buy Scott's Emulsion.

We will send you a little free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, CHEMISTS,
409 Pearl Street, New York
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

New Fall Styles, 1904.

Women's Tailor Made Suits.
Women's Tailor Made Skirts.
Women's Tailor Made Coats.
Women's Queen Quality Shoes.
Men's Griffon Brand Clothing.
Men's Kirshbaum Overcoats.
Men's All America Shoes.
Men's Bion Shoes.
Men's Crawford Shoes.

We have spared no pains in making a selection of goods from the leading factories in the United States.

WE ARE ORIGINATORS OF

High Grade Merchandise

IN THIS SECTION.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.

The Garrett National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, - $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, - 20,000.00

A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure
HAS NO SUBSTITUTE

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Mr. D. E. Offutt is at St. Louis visiting the Fair.

Mr. N. U. Bond, of Bond, was in Oakland Monday on business.

Mr. George Kanauer, of Sunnyside, was a pleasant visitor to this office Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Griffon, of Lonaconing, were in Oakland yesterday and last night.

Mrs. S. E. Shirer, who visited relatives at Grafton and Clarksburg for two weeks, returned home last night.

Messrs. C. S. Hamill and son Byrne, who went to St. Louis one day last week to visit the Fair, returned to Oakland yesterday morning.

Miss Alice Hessen of Oakland, is in the city attending the West Virginia M. E. Conferrence and visiting her father, Mr. Bernard Hesen.—Grafton Sentinel.

Mr. Julius Scherr, of Eglon, passed through Oakland Monday on his way to Fairmont to attend a meeting of the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias of West Virginia.

Mrs. E. E. Ison has gone to St. Louis to visit the Fair. From that city she will go to Washington to reside during the winter with her sons, Messrs. W. O. and H. A. Ison.

Dr. H. Scott will go to Terra Alta Saturday and on Sunday deliver two sermons to the people of that town. He will remove his household goods some time next week.

Mr. M. N. Wilson, who went out to St. Louis last Thursday to visit the Fair a few weeks, was recalled by a telegram announcing the death of his sister, Mr. Wilson arriving here Tuesday morning.

Mr. John Felty, Jr., who has been in the general mercantile business in Oakland for a number of years, on Tuesday disposed of his stock of goods to Miss Marian Hoye who took immediate charge of the store.

At the convention of the Washington District Epworth League, held on the 8th inst., Mr. H. A. Ison, son of Mrs. Benj. Ison. of Oakland, was elected District 4th Vice President for the fourth consecutive year.

Mr. Walter A. Johnson, Democratic candidate for Congress in this District, was in Oakland yesterday looking over a rather hopeless field to gain votes. He was piloted by Mr. William Miller, of Accident.

Messrs. Henry M. and Harvey Speicher, of Accident, were in Oakland Monday on their way to Greenbrier county, W. Va., where they are engaged in selling imported horses to the farmers and others of that county.

The Republicans will open the campaign in this county with a meeting at Finzel on Monday night, followed by meetings at other points in that section of the county every night during the week. Good speakers, among them being Congressman Pearre and State Senator David E. Dick, will be present and make addresses. All will be welcomed and a cordial invitation is accoodingly extended by Chairman Brown to Democrats as well as Republicans to be present at the meetiugs.

Rev. J. M. Davis, Messrs. F. A. Thayer and M. R. Hamill and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Sincell went over to Wilson Monday where they attended the funeral of Miss Ciceley Wilson, whose death occured suddenly last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Brydon, of Bloomington; Miss Hoffman, of Keyser; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Brydon and Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Brydon were guests at the Queen City Hotel last night. They will attend the wedding of Mr. John Crosby Brydon and Miss Nell Louise Harrison at Somerset today.—Cumberland News.

Mr. J. S. Cosden and Mr. Rudolph Henry Lucke, of Baltimore City, spent last Sunday at Deer Park. It was their first visit to Garrett county, and both gentlemen expressed delight at the hospitality tendered them. The seventeen mile grade with the two ponderous B. and O. engines driving No. 3 train, and the glorious scenery excited their admiration.

WANTED—Special Representatives in this county and adjoining territories, to represent and advertise an old established business house of solid financial standing. Salary $21 weekly, with expenses advanced each Monday by check direct from headquarters. Horse and buggy furnished when necessary; position permanent. Address Blew Bros. & Co., Dept. A. Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill. 6t

Among those who have gone to St. Louis from Oakland to visit the Fair within the past week were Mrs. M. A. Yost. Miss Annie Grant, Henry M. Casteel, Thos. Bishoff, Chas. E. Hillegary, Issac J. Thompson, of Gormania, and Calvin Thompson, of Thomas, W. Va. The three last named gentlemen will visit Springfield and Chicago prior to their return which will occur within three week.

Rev. Henry E. Friend, an account of whose serious injuries as a result of being caught between two moving trains on the Baltimore and Ohio appeared in these columns last week, has recovered to some extent and on Monday was in Oakland to receive medical attention where he was greeted by his friends who congratulated him upon his miraculous escape from more serious injuries and possibly a horrible death.

By announcement published in another column of this paper to-day it will be observed that Prof. J. Frank McBee, principal of the Oakland public school, contemplates the opening of an evening business school for young men and women. The enrollment will be limited to twenty pupils and the school will be continued throughout the fall and winter. Instruction will be given in bookkeeping, mathematics, writing and orthography. In opening this school an opportunity for thorough training along the lines named will be given the young ladies and gentlemen of Oakland which should be embraced at once.

Lutheran Church Services.

Services at St. Mark's Lutheran ch. next Sabbath as follows: Preaching at 10.30 a. m. and at 7:30 p. m.

Preaching at Hutton on Thursday, Oct. 20th, at 8p. m Catechize at 7 p. m.

Communion Service in St. Paul's Church.

Dr. R. B. Ward, presiding elder of Oakland District, M. E. church, will preach Sunday morning and evening in St. Paul's church, Oakland. At the morning service communion will be administered.

Married.

NEWELL—O'CONNER.—At the Lutheran parsonage yesterday morning, by Rev. E. Manges, Mr. Oliver Homer Newell and Miss Margaret Leona O'Conner, both of Claysville, Washington county, Pa.

DURST—SINCELL.—At St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran church last night, by Rev. E. Manges, Mr. Olin Francis Durst, of Lonaconing, and Miss Mary Margaret Sincell, of Oakland.

Taken to Baltimore Hospital.

Miss Julia Maroney, daughter of Mrs. Michael Maroney, of Oakland, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Baltimore, last Saturday night to be operated upon for an abdominal tumor.

CICELY MAY WILSON

Daughter of the Late George W. Wilson Succumbed After an Illness of A Few Days.

The many friends and acquaintances of Miss Cicely May Wilson, aged 25 years, daughter of the late George W. Wilson, of Wilson, this county, were shocked Sunday morning to learn of her sudden and wholly unexpected death, which occurred at her home Saturday night about midnight.

The cause of Miss Wilson's demise was, presumably, an intestinal disorder with which she was stricken Thursday afternoon while out walking near her home, being accompanied by an acquaintance who assisted the lady to the house and summoned a physician from a nearby point. Dr. Mark Wilson, of Elkins, brother of the deceased, arrived at the home Saturday but the disease had made such inroads upon the patient that nothing could be done to save or prolong her life.

Miss Wilson was the only daughter in the family, her mother, Mrs. Eliza Wilson, and seven brothers, surviving her. She was educated at Buckhannon where she was converted and became a member of the Presbyterian church. After her graduation from Buckhannon she went to Philadelphia where she received her education in music and the fine arts, being an adept in painting and sketching, returning home from the school in that city a few months ago. She was highly esteemed for her womanly qualities, kindness of disposition and fealty to her home and friends.

The funeral of the deceased was conducted Monday afternoon by Rev. John M. Davis, of Oakland, assisted by Rev. Isaac W. Abernathy, of near Wilson. The interment was made on the farm, the remains being placed by the side of those of her father, who died a few years ago. The services were held at the home and were attended by a large number of sympathetic friends and neighbors.

The Oakland Evening Business College

By solicitation of a number of leading business men of Oakland the undersigned announces that he will open an evening business college in a suitable room in Oakland on Monday evening, Oct. 24th, to continue throughout the winter months. The class will be limited to twenty pupils and will be conducted three evenings each week from 7:30 until 9:30 o'clock, and will be open to both males and females. The branches to be taught will include bookkeeping, writing, mathematics and orthography. As the class will be limited immediate application should be made for enrollment. The terms will be moderate and be made known upon application to

J. FRANK MCBEE, A. M.,
32-2t. Principal.

Old House

Mr. Wm. Poland, who resides on the Maryland side of the river, near the West Virginia Central Water Station, lives in a stone house built while George Washington was still alive, it being over a hundred years old. He is a right old man, being 76 years of age. He plowed the ground and raised corn where the M. E. church and B. & O. shops now stand in Piedmont, and says they used to never think of a railroad in this country. Now two big railroads send trains whizing past his house every day, while he sits and wonders at the progress of the people.—Piedmont Independent.

Eloped to Oakland and were Married.

Two well known and popular young people of this city hied themselves away to Oakland, the veritable Gretna Green for West Virginia couples of non-marriageable age intent upon matrimony, and there were united in marriage by one of the ministers of that town. The contracting parties were Mr. Milton Carr, a popular young railroader of this city, and Miss Mary Yates, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Yates of the First ward. After returning from Oakland they went to Moundsville where they will make their future home.—Grafton Sentinel.

Stoves

We have a stock on hand of more than one hundred stoves of all kinds, sizes and prices, running from a $10.00 Cook Stove to a $40.00 Steel Range, and Heating Stoves from $5.00 to $20. The above has been selected with the greatest care, not only in regard to price, but to the requirements needed for the trade in this part of our country. Stoves are manufactured for the section of the country that they are sold in, and according to the kind of fuel used, and prices are made by the manufacturer according to quality, style and finish. The stove business is a trade to itself and it requires years of experience to know when you have the best goods that can be bought for the money, and best suited to the trade you are selling. If you contemplate buying a stove of any kind, call and look our line over before buying, we think we can please any and all, both in regard to price and kind.

J. M. DAVIS & SON.

For Sale or Rent.

An 8-room dwelling in residence section of town. Apply to or address J. M. Litzinger, Oakland, Md.

DID NOT REACH THE FAIR

Rev. J. B. Shoup Forced to Return On Account of Sickness.

Rev. J. B. Shoup, formerly the Lutheran minister at Accident, but who for twenty years or thereabouts resided in Alabama and Georgia, and who on June 20th of this year started from Cumberland to walk over the old National Road to St. Louis, Mo., to see the sights of the World's Fair, was forced to give up his long tramp after covering a distance of about 340 miles and return on account of an attack of rheumatism with which he suffered several weeks ago, arriving in Bittinger, this county, recently, after having recuperated to some extent at the home of a relative residing at some point in Ohio.

Mr. Shoup's return to Garrett county was most opportune for the good people of Bittinger, who being without a Lutheran minister, tendered him the charge which was accepted by him and on last Sunday preached to them the first time as their minister.

Mr. Shoup's many friends in all sections of Garrett county will be pleased to learn that he is again "in harness."

FLAG PRESENTATION

Patriotic Work of the Junior Order of Bloomington.

The little town of Savage, West Va., just across the Potomac River from Bloomington, this county, was enlivened last Friday afternoon and the patriotic impulses of the people stirred up considerably by a demonstration which was participated in by the citizens of the town and surrounding country and Miner's Sunshine Council No. 81, Junior Order United American Mechanics of Bloomington, when the latter organization presented the public school of the village with a bible and an American flag.

The presentation address was made by Mr. Julius C. Fenninger, of Oakland, in which he spoke of the fundamental principles of the order and the great good it is doing all over the country.

About ninety members of the Council from Bloomington were present who raised the flag in front of the school building while the scholars sang patriotic songs.

Sewing Machines.

Two years ago we commenced selling the New Royal Sewing Machine, contracting direct with the manufacturer, and have the first one yet to find any fault with, one of these machines. They are all guaranteed for 5 years, made with the latest and most improved attachments, and in style and finish cannot be excelled. We are offering these machines from $13.50 to $25.00 according to style and finish. If in need of a machine and you look into the merits of the New Royal, we are sure you cannot help but be pleased. And when you want needles or any little repairs, you can easily obtain them for you have a Standard Machine that is not put out under any fictitious name by catalogue houses or department stores. J. M. DAVIS & SON. 3t

Organization of Republican Club.

A Republican Roosevelt, Fairbanks and Pearre Club was organized at Mt. Lake Park Friday evening of last week with the following officers: President, Dr. B. F. Laughlin; vice president, Wesley Rudisill; secretary, Chas. F. Dawson; treasurer; Joseph C. Rathbun.

About fifty members were enrolled on that evening. A committee on registration was appointed who did good work. On Tuesday evening of this week the second meeting of the Club was held, when over fifty new members were enrolled and committees appointed to look after the work in that end of District No. 7.

Collector Stone's Lunch to Editors.

An elaborate lunch will be given at the Union League clubhouse Baltimore on Friday, next at 1 p. m. by Sergeat-at-arms William F. Stone, of the Republican National Committee, to the Maryland Republican Editorial Association, which will have its meeting at the Rennert at 11 a. m. on that day. Colonel Stone will have, in addition to the members of the state press, a number of the state Republican leaders whose engagements will not interfere with their being present. Colonel Stone will be the host, and the affair promises to be most interesting.

A Card From President Sine.

I have sold to Messrs. J. W. Smith and B. F. Shaffer, what was known as my branch school located at Cumberland, Md. The new owners will conduct the school hereafter under the name of "The Tri-State Business College." This change in the ownership of the Cumberland school will enable me to devote my whole time and attention to the further building of Parkersburg's famous school—the Mountain State Business College.

September 26, 1904.
4t ALBERT G. SINE, President.

Oakland View Poultry and Truck Farm

For sixty days I will offer at private sale the above property, located one mile South of Oakland. For further particulars call on or address Chas. J. Newman, Oakland, Md. 32-4t.

Dixon & Kelso

Will sell for the next 30 days

Foor Oil Cloth, Linoleum

—AND—

UNDERWEAR

At Greatly Reduced Prices,

As follows—

Best Heavy Floor Oil Cloth, worth 35c. yd., for 28c.
" " Remnant Linoleum, worth 50c. yd., for 35c.
" " Inlaid " " 75c. " " 50c.

Men's Heavy Fleece-Lined Shirts and Drawers, worth 65c for 47c.
Men's Heavy All-Wool Shirts and Drawers, worth $1.25 for 97c.
Boys' Heavy Fleece-Lined Undershirts and Drawers, worth 40c. for 25c.
Misses' best quality Vests and Pants, worth 40c. for 25c.
Ladies' best All-Wool Red Flannel Vests and Pants, worth $1.25 for 97c.
Ladies' Fleece Vests and Pants, worth 40c. for 25c.

We can handle 10,000 to 15,000 bushels good Potatoes, at 40c. per bushel. Can commence delivery at any time. Will also pay 65c for good, clean grain BUCKWHEAT.

Yours, to please,

DIXON & KELSO.

BUILDING, PAVING, PRESSED FACE. BRICKS VITRIFIED FOR FOUNDATIONS VITRIFIED FOR SEWERS, STREET PAVING BLOCKS.

Best Quality for Builings, Casing, Sidewalks and Streets.
Beautiful Shades, Red, Light Granate and Mixed Colors.
Capacity 80,000 Daily. Prompt Shipments.

QUEEN CITY BRICK & TILE COMPANY
—AND—
CUMBERLAND GRANATE BRICK COMPANY
Cumberland, Maryland.

SELBYSPORT

Mr. Dorsey Guard spent Saturday and Sunday visiting friends at Accident.

Miss Hattie Liston spent Saturday with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kessler visited friends and relatives near Accident last week.

Mr. N. R. Selby and family spent Sunday at Friendsville.

Mr. Snyder Frantz, after spending several days visiting friends at Selbysport, returned to his home in Oakland.

Rev. Site preached an able and interesting sermon in the M. E. church last Sunday morning.

Mr. Walter Faucett spent Saturday at Accident.

Miss Gertrude Welch visited at Friendsville Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. W. H. McQuilken and Mrs. W. F. Holman, spent last Sunday as the guests of Mrs. Thomas Welch.

Last Saturday afternoon the Selbysport Athletic club defeated the Accident base ball team by a score of 13 to 21. We understand that Selbysport is to play the strong Friendsville team next Saturday afternoon. Our boys would like to have a game with Hoyes some time this month.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

A Home and Day School.

BRIAR-BEND SEMINARY,

AT MT. LAKE PARK, MD.,

In the Alleghany Mountains,

will be re-opened (D. V.)

On September 14th, 1904.

Full course of study. Music, Vocal and Instrumental. French, Latin and Bible Study. Certificates admit to leading colleges without examination.

A Home for Motherless Girls; Climate Unrivaled for Health; Only four visits from a Physician in thirteen years.

Applications received for service in ex-charge for tuition. Refererences quired.

Bills payable monthly in advance.

Winter Goods.

We have Underwear for Men, Women and Children, 25c, up.

Fine line Dress & Overshirts.

Flannels, Blankets and Comforts.

Sweaters for Men, Women and Children.

All-wool Tricot Cloth 25c. yard.

Gloves for everybody.

Good line of Floor Oilcloths.

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

Proposals for Building Sidewalks

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, for the erection of a sidewalk fronting the opera house block in Oakland, beginning at the corner of Green and Second streets and ending at the north property line of H. Lauer, and extending from the property line along said block to the wood curbing.

Proposals will also be received for the erection of a walk from Second street to Railroad street walk.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of N. S. Heindel, First National Bank building, Oakland, Md.

Proposals must be on file with the clerk of said Mayor and Council not later than six o'clock, September 19th, 1904, and endorsed on the back, "Proposal for erecting sidewalks."

By order of the Mayor and Council of Oakland.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,

Plumbing,

Gas Fitting,

Steam and Hot Water Heating.

Center Street,
Keyser, W. Va.

PHONE 62.

A Jewel of a Valet

By M. QUAD

....Copyright, 1903, by C. B. Lewis....

BEFORE the coming of my valet—my first and only one, who departed this life a few weeks since, to my great sorrow—I was plain James Burden. I was even called Jim now and then, and the "Mr." was left off my name far oftener than it was used. I was also generally supposed to be a card sharper and to work little games on confiding human nature, and more than once I overheard it said that I would go two blocks out of my way rather than pass a police station. I was in and out with luck, sometimes having money to spare and again being almost driven to lodge in a doorway. I cannot doubt that I was steadily going to the bad when I met Charles. I encountered him at the rooms of an acquaintance where he was making himself useful while waiting for a situation. It was very impudent of a valet to suggest to a gentleman, and a stranger at that, that a confidential chat between them elsewhere might lead to good results, but I decided to overlook the break for once and appoint an hour. Charles was on hand to the minute, and he brought two trunks with him. Before coming upstairs he stopped and paid my landlord the matter of four weeks' rent I owed him and ordered a bottle of wine and a fair dinner from a restaurant.

"Sir James," he said in answer to my looks of inquiry, "I have bought your wardrobe and will now dress you for dinner. Tomorrow we will seek other and more suitable lodgings. Here is the change from the twenty pound note you sent out by me."

I have no doubt the fellow had stolen the money as well as the wardrobe, but it was not for me to find out. It took my breath away for a minute to be addressed as "Sir James," but I found no fault with the title. It did not need any reflection to satisfy me that the world would receive Sir James Burden with open arms, even if doubting his title, where Jim Burden would be stopped at the door. I found two full suits to fit me reasonably well. There were also ties, collars, hats, shoes and socks, and when I was fully arrayed the valet placed a diamond ring on my finger and a pearl in my necktie. I accepted everything as my due, and it seemed perfectly natural that Charles should wait upon me at dinner and show me all deference. It was only after the meal was finished, the table cleared and I had lighted a cigar from the expensive box he had laid out for me that he quietly said:

"If Sir James will sit down for a moment I will show him something of interest."

I sat down, and he produced a pack of cards and manipulated them in a way to astonish me. I had flattered myself that I was an old hand at the business, but within the hour he taught me ten times more than I wot of.

"We will not speak of wages," he observed as we finished, "but I think you will cheerfully agree to pay me 10 per cent of your gross earnings."

I agreed without hesitation, and while I went out to look for new lodgings he went to a stationer's to order cards for me. Next day we moved into a suit of rooms in a fashionable neighborhood and astonished the landlord by paying three months' rent in advance. Charles ordered a liberal supply of wines sent me to a fashionable tailor for other clothes and directed me to the most high toned restaurants. In ten days London could not produce a more swagger man than Sir James Burden. I had the best of clothes, the proudest of gaits and gold jingled in every pocket. I gave all my needy, seedy friends the cold cut and played for higher game. Three or four clubs gladly received me, and not a man had the bad taste to question my genealogy. Through members of clubs I came to have the entree of various houses and a social circle, and for three months I never touched a card except as I played with Charles to perfect my knowledge. I was called a good fellow at the clubs, received with respect in society, and I could not make myself believe that I had once passed those houses and people without a penny in my pocket to assuage my hunger. When the three months had passed my valet, who had kept close track of my progress and had never failed to keep me supplied with funds, respectfully said to me one morning:

"WE WILL NOT SPEAK OF WAGES."

"Sir James, you are now fitly prepared to face the world, and it will be well that you begin business."

I nodded in answer, and that night at a club, after being repeatedly urged, I took the bank and came out £750 ahead of the game. Without reference to per cent, I handed my valet £500 and caught him surveying me with a look of pride and triumph. During the next week I played to neither win nor lose, but somehow I came out several hundred pounds to the good. By this time I began to have a club reputation as a stiff player. I took my losses with nonchalance and my winnings with indifference, and under the advice of my valet I contributed a pretty fair sum to a local charity. The idea was that I played as a pastime or as a gentleman hunts, drives and drinks and that my income permitted any extravagance.

"BUT WE MUST SEARCH THE ROOMS."

There was high play at houses in town and country as well as at the clubs, and I took care that I must be urged before taking a hand. At a hint from Charles, I invariably refused my winnings from women and never left the table without making a handsome donation to some private charity. I had been pursuing this policy for a year or so, and our bank account had waxed fat, when £3,000 worth of diamonds were stolen from a house in which I was a guest. Charles was with me in his proper position, but I had no suspicions of him until our return home. Then it was certainty instead of suspicions. He had cribbed the diamonds and disposed of them for one-third of their value, and he divided fairly with me. I felt it my duty to warn him from his evil ways, and when I had ceased lecturing I hoped I had made a deep impression. I was disappointed in this, however. It wasn't a fortnight before he plundered a second house and handed me nearly £1,400 as my share of the swag. Seeing that he was bent on following his own way, I had no more to say, nor when he handed me a bag of gold or a roll of notes did I express curiosity.

I must except two or three special occasions, however. One night after my return from a club and while I sat waiting for my valet to put me to bed he came running upstairs in vulgar haste, tossed a package under the sofa with careless hand and was out of his street and into his house clothes and pulling off my gaiters before my surprise would permit me to speak. I had opened my lips to reprove him for what I considered his loss of dignity when there came an imperative knock at the door, and Charles promptly opened it to admit a brace of detectives. They glanced from him to me and around the room and seemed not a little astonished.

"Gentlemen, I am honored by your call, whoever you are," I said as I pointed to the decanters and cigars on the sideboard.

"We were pursuing a thief, and we were sure he entered here," one of them explained.

"A thief in the rooms of Sir James Burden!" cried my valet in astonishment and indignation.

"Oh—ah—a thousand pardons, Sir James."

"But we must search the rooms," insisted the police.

"By no means. We must be mistaken. We beg a thousand pardons, Sir James, and trust you will have no complaint to make against us."

When Charles had bowed them out and returned to my undressing I looked at him in all sternness and said:

"Is it possible that I am mistaken in you?"

"Not at all, Sir James," he calmly replied. "I lifted a box out of a cab, but a couple of detectives saw me and gave me a close run for it. When you are in bed we will see what is in the box."

The contents consisted of bonds and jewelry, and I remember my share was a generous one. I warned Charles that I could not keep a dishonest valet about me under any circumstances, but as he appeared contrite I did not press the matter further just then. Again I gave a delicious little dinner to a party of six friends. Charles was very much to the front in that little affair, and I must say that his selections of wine and game were most admirable. I do not think I could have bettered them myself. He also served us with such care and style that every gentleman present complimented me on my possession of such a jewel. No little dinner ever passed off in better style, but at midday next day no less than three of my guests called to complain of the loss of watches and purses. It was not to complain against me or mine, remember, but of having been robbed by the cab drivers who took them home and assisted them up the steps. No sooner had they departed than I called Charles to me and said:

"It does not seem possible that you could rob a guest of mine, and yet"—

"What is it, Sir James?" he queried, with a face full of innocence.

"I almost believe they were robbed here in my house."

"By you, sir?"

"No, by you, you scoundrel!"

"Those cab drivers are a bad lot, Sir James," he quietly said as he turned away, and a day later when he handed me £250 I did not think it positively necessary to swear him as to how he had secured the cash.

I had been invited down to a gentleman's place for the fall shooting, and of course Charles accompanied me. Before we set out on our journey I warned him that there must be no foolishness and was much gratified to hear him reply:

"Sir James, I fully understand that we are going on a vacation from the cares of business, and I trust that you may have no fault to find with my deportment."

We had been at the house a week, and I believe that my host had come to think very well of me and that the servants' quarters looked upon Charles as a model of what a valet should be, when Lady Rochester's diamonds were reported missing. Some one had entered her room at night by way of the balcony, and the haul amounted to £500. Not a trace had been left behind by the robber, who was supposed to be some one from the city, and the most we could do was to extend our sympathies to the victim. For half an hour after first hearing of the robbery I had my suspicions that my valet had forgotten my warning, but when I saw him putting himself out to aid the country police and when he looked me full in the face and hoped that the robber would soon be in the toils I dismissed my thoughts as doing him injustice. A month later, however, he handed me a bag of gold and somewhat solicitously observed:

"Some of those diamonds were only paste, Sir James, and your share is not as large as I hoped it might be."

I did not ask for explanations. Charles was often enigmatical, and he appeared to be so on this occasion. My prosperity was wonderful. With title unfilled, received without question almost everywhere and having a valet who had my interests at heart, it would have been an easy thing for me to have married beauty and wealth. I drew the line at marriage, however, and no doubt that served to prolong my popularity. My prosperity was that of my valet. Indeed, I think it was rather the other way. I think he brought more to the bank account than I did, and his adroitness was marvelous. I believe he had plundered fully a dozen houses and escaped without suspicion and that he had also indulged in pocket picking to a considerable extent when fate gave him the cold shoulder. He tried rank burglary for a change, and it was a bad move on his part. While he was after the plate in a house which he supposed was only in care of an old woman the police surprised him red handed. Charles was not much of a talker, and, [illegible] convince the officers that he was [illegible] of the family," he made a [illegible] and was shot down. He had been dead for some hours when I was sent to identify him. The police were reluctant to call me, and they hoped they had not inconvenienced me and all that, and they so managed things that the reporters got hold of very little. My amazement that my trusted valet, whom I had almost deemed the soul of honesty, should have turned burglar quite took the police and enlisted their sympathy, and the affair was soon over. That Charles was a ruby beyond price was proved again when I came to look over his effects. He had drawn and preserved a blank check in my favor for all his money in bank, and I had only to fill in a few words and figures. I saw his body taken to the country and laid away, and I have contracted for a marble shaft to mark his last resting place and donated £100 in his name to a hospital. I am now in search of another valet. My tastes have grown expensive, and my station in society demands that I have a man about me, but I have no hope of finding another jewel. They may be good at serving and brushing and doing the honors in my absence, and they may be men of discretion and have my interests at heart, but to them I shall always be Sir James Burden, full of dignity and keeping them to their place.

"SOME OF THOSE DIAMONDS WERE ONLY PASTE."

All Education Pays

By Professor HARRY PRATT JUDSON, Dean of Faculties, University of Chicago

AN ingenious estimate has been made recently on the basis of a collection of some 10,000 names of American men who have secured a certain recognition for their work as to THE BEARING OF EDUCATION ON SUCCESS IN LIFE. On this basis it is estimated that a boy with only a common school education has about one chance in eighty-eight hundred for large success, that a high school training yields about one chance in four hundred and four, that a college education gives one chance in forty-two. Thus the high school graduate has twenty-two times the chance of success of the boy who has nothing beyond the common school back of him, while the boy with a college course has ten times the chance of the high school boy and TWO HUNDRED TIMES THE CHANCE OF SUCCESS WHICH BELONGS TO THE COMMON SCHOOL BOY.

That this calculation is not very exact, of course, goes without saying. It is only what the politicians call a "straw vote." There are many forms of success which are by no means included in the collection on which the calculation is based, and much of this success has been won by men who are SELF EDUCATED or who have had no opportunity beyond the common school.

Still, it seems clear that the estimate has a certain significance; that while perhaps not mathematically exact it yet is not very far from the truth. In all forms of life it will be found that EDUCATION IS A LARGE ASSET, and that it tells tremendously in the fierce struggle for the prizes which cannot be won by all, but which all are eager to get. It is the trained athlete who wins. It is the man prepared for his task who does it well. Education of school or college is intended to make the young man fit for his work.

The question which every boy has to face when he is old enough to think for himself is mainly how much preparation for his life work he can get BEFORE THAT WORK BEGINS IN EARNEST. He can be sure that the more he can get the better his work will be done and the larger his likelihood of thorough success. His school work is giving him knowledge, every particle of which will make him understand that world better—training which gives his mind the alertness, grasp and disciplined power of an effective machine—self control which marks the man of force and WITHOUT WHICH ONE IS THE SPORT OF CIRCUMSTANCES INSTEAD OF THEIR MASTER.

But how much schooling does a boy need? JUST AS MUCH AS HE CAN GET. If it is impracticable to go to college, at least he should get all that the high school has to offer. If it is possible to get a college course, it is a crime to one's future to neglect it. If there is a school or college which is not easy to enter and is hard to go through, that is just the one to select.

Besides, after the prizes are won, what is to be done with them? Many a man makes a fortune, but doesn't in the least know what to do with it. TRAINING TO LIVE MEANS MORE THAN WINNING FAME OR FORTUNE. The man of varied knowledge and sympathies is in touch with life AT SO MANY POINTS that he knows what to do with what he has, be it much or little—he knows how to get the most and the best out of life. No education is too much for this power.

A LIBERAL COURSE FITS ONE TO LIVE AS WELL AS TO WORK, AND A MAN IS MORE THAN A MACHINE FOR TURNING OUT RESULTS.

The Proper Training of Children

By Count LEO TOLSTOI

I DO not know of one influence in the bringing up of children which is not included IN THE EDUCATION OF SELF. What is the best way to dress children, to feed them, to put them to bed, to teach them? PRECISELY AS ONESELF. If the father and mother dress and sleep moderately, as well as labor and learn so, the children should do the same.

I would give two rules for education—that one should not only live well, but labor over oneself, continually improving, AND CONCEAL NOTHING IN HIS LIFE FROM HIS CHILDREN. It is better that the children should know the weak side of their parents than that they should feel that their parents have one life concealed from them and one that is open.

ALL DIFFICULTIES OF EDUCATION COME FROM THE FACT THAT PARENTS NOT ONLY DO NOT CORRECT THEIR OWN FAULTS, BUT DO NOT EVEN ACKNOWLEDGE THEM TO BE FAULTS, JUSTIFYING THEM IN THEMSELVES AND CONDEMNING THEM IN THEIR CHILDREN. IN THIS CONSISTS THE WHOLE DIFFICULTY WITH CHILDREN.

The Only Hope of Politics Is Through Women

By Rev. M. J. LAVELLE of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York

I BELIEVE that the hope of purity in politics lies with women. When the other sex has equal rights with the men at the polls, not in one or two states of the Union, BUT IN EVERY STATE, then and then only will there be no more use for reform clubs and reformers.

Women—the great majority—would not vote for a party platform, but it would be found that the man who aspired to office, his personality, HIS LIFE IN EVERY ASPECT, would be the factors which dictated the decision of women's ballots.

I believe with a woman suffragist who said recently that the only man who is worse than a repeater is the man who doesn't vote at all. If nothing else should be obtained from equal suffrage I am sure that women, if they had the right to vote, would never let an election get by without putting a ballot in the box.

THEY WOULD AT LEAST EXPRESS AN OPINION.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroad now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later than December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

GRANULATED

Fertilizer Lime!

FOR FARMERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

G. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7-21t

Now is the Time! Don't Wait!

Teeth Without Plates.

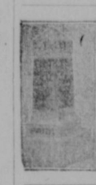
Rubber Plate and Bridge Work A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY, First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.



J. B. WILLIAMS CO.

FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

The Keyser Preparatory Branch

OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.

A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.

Special instruction for public School Teachers.

Instruction in Music.

A Splendid New Building Provided by the State.

A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.

Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.

No Tuition in Commercial Department.

Small Tuition charged Students from other States.

Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.

Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.

For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal,

L. L. FRIEND, Keyser, W. Va.

He Was a Wise Young Man and Got It All

OLD man Bryson, who was stricken with mortal sickness, called in his only son and heir to advise with him concerning the disposition of his large estate. Young Bryson had just come of age. Said the old man to his son:

"My boy, I will have $75,000 in all to leave to you when I'm gone. I thought I would make you the sole beneficiary, but in order to protect you against fraud and possible mismanagement I have been thinking of making my good friend, Lawyer Anderson, the executor of the estate. He has always been friendly to me, and I think he will deal justly by you. What do you think of it?"

The young man thought awhile and then replied:

"Well, father, you know I have never opposed you in anything. I have always tried to do whatever you have thought best, but it occurs to me that it would be much more satisfactory to me if you would just leave the $75,000 to Mr. Anderson and make me his executor."

"I bound for you, Thad," said old man Bryson. "If you understand that much about it, my boy, I suppose I'll just leave the entire estate to you without any executor."—Lippincott's Magazine.

At the Time Appointed.

Pink, the colored cook, came on Sunday morning to ask if she could "get off" to go to a funeral on Tuesday.

"Yes, you may go," the mistress replied. "Whose funeral is it, Pink?"

"Ole Unc' Abe Jacksin's wife, Aunt Cindy," Pink informed.

Late Tuesday evening Mrs. Reed remembered her promise and that Pink had been hard at work all day. "Pink," she called, "why didn't you go to the funeral today?"

"Law, Miss Molly," Pink grinned broadly, "Aunt Cindy disapp'inted us all. She ain't daid yit."—New Orleans Picayune.

Taking No Chances.

Cholly—I cannot marry your daughter.

Her Father—Why not?

Cholly—She's starting to take boxing lessons.—New York Herald.

Reason For It.

"Skorcher must be getting weak-minded," said the first automobilist.

"I haven't noticed it," replied the other.

"Why, he told me he stopped his auto once yesterday because there was a pedestrian in his road."

"But I believe the pedestrian had a gun."—Philadelphia Press.

Too Much Risk.

"Are you sure that man is a detective?"

"Yes."

"He looks like an ordinary person."

"Of course. If he looked like the story book detectives he'd be spotted by every criminal who saw him."—Washington Star.

Those Girls.

Edith—I was asked to sing last evening, and when I had done so I was complimented in the highest terms by everybody in the room.

Bertha—And yet there are people who say there is no such thing as Christian charity in this world!—Boston Transcript.

The Limit.

"It must have been pretty tough on Algy when he went out hunting the other day and did such wretched shooting that his dog howled, turned tail and ran back to the city."

"But that wasn't the worst. Even his gun kicked."—Baltimore News.

A Domestic Hero.

"John," she said, "do you think you'll ever run for president o' these here United States?"

"Mary," he said as he folded her in his arms, "I could never give myself to the commonwealth as long as I've got you!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Explained.

"Say, pa!"

"Well, what?"

"Why does that man in the band run the trombone down his throat?"

"I suppose it is because he has a taste for music."—Town Topics.

Making It Easy For Honesty.

"I tell you honesty pays in the long run."

"I suppose it's easy for honesty to do that, because there are so few people who don't try the short cut."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Cynical Theory.

"Father," said the small boy, "why do they call a speech made at a banquet a toast?"

"My son," was the answer, "it is probably because it is so dry."—Washington Star.

A Poem for Today

WHAT MIGHT BE DONE

By Charles Mackay

WHAT might be done if men were wise—
What glorious deeds, my suffering brother,
Would they unite
In love and right,
And cease their scorn of one another?

Oppression's heart might be imbued
With kindling drops of loving-kindness;
And knowledge pour,
From shore to shore,
Light on the eyes of mental blindness.

All slavery, warfare, lies and wrongs,
All vice and crime, might die together,
And wine and corn
To each man born
Be free as warmth in summer weather.

The meanest wretch that ever trod,
The deepest sunk in guilt and sorrow,
Might stand erect
In self-respect,
And share the teeming world to-morrow.

What might be done? This might be done,
And more than this, my suffering brother—
More than the tongue
E'er said or sung,
If men were wise and loved each other.

A Poem for Today

THE WAYSIDE SPRING

By Thomas Buchanan Read

FAIR dweller by the dusty way,
Bright saint within a mossy shrine,
The tribute of a heart today
Weary and worn is thine.

The earliest blossoms of the year,
The sweet-briar and the violet,
The pious hand of Spring has here
Upon thine altar set.

And not alone to thee is given
The homage of the pilgrim's knee,
But oft the sweetest birds of heaven
Glide down and sing to thee.

Here daily from his beechen cell,
The hermit squirrel steals to drink,
And flocks, which cluster to their bell,
Recline along thy brink.

And here the wagoner blocks his wheels,
To quaff the cooling, generous boon;
Here, from the sultry harvest fields,
The reapers rest at noon.

And oft the beggar, masked with tan,
With rusty garments gray with dust,
Here sits and dips his little can,
And breaks his scanty crust:

And lulled beside the whispering stream
Off drops to slumber unawares,
And sees the angels of his dream
Upon celestial stairs.

Dear dweller by the dusty way,
Thou saint within a mossy shrin
The tribute of a heart today
Weary and worn is thine.

A Poem for Today

THE OLD SWIMMIN'-HOLE

By James Whitcomb Riley

O THE old swimmin'-hole! whare the crick so still and deep
Looked like a baby river that was laying half asleep,
And the gurgle of the worter round the drift jest below
Sounded like the laugh of something we onc't ust to know
Before we could remember anything but the eyes
Of the angels lookin' out as we left Paradise;
But the merry days of youth is beyond our controle,
And it's hard to part ferever with the old swimmin'-hole.

O, the old swimmin'-hole! In the happy days of yore,
When I ust to lean above it on the old sickamore,
O, it showed me a face in its warm sunny tide
That gazed back at me so gay and glorified,
It made me love myself, as I leaped to caress
My shadder smilin' up at me with sich tenderness.
But them days is past and gone, and old Time's tuck his toll
From the old man come back to the old swimmin'-hole.

O, the old swimmin'-hole! In the long, lazy days
When the hum-drum of school made so many runaways,
How pleasant was the jurney down the old dusty lane,
Whare the tracks of our bare feet was all printed so plane
You could tell by the dent of the heel and the sole
They was lots o' fun on hand at the old swimmin'-hole.
But the lost joys is past! Let your tears in sorrow roll
Like the rain that ust to dapple up the old swimmin'-hole.

Thare the bullrushes growed, and the cattails so tall,
And the sunshine and shadder fell over it all;
And it mottled the worter with amber and gold
Tel the glad lilies rocked in the ripples that rolled;
And the snake-feeder's four gauzy wings fluttered by
Like the ghost of a daisy dropped out of the sky,
Or a wownded apple-blossom in the breeze's controle
As it cut acrost some orchurd to'rds the old swimmin'-hole.

O, the old swimmin'-hole! When I last saw the place,
The scenes was all changed, like the change in my face;
The bridge of the railroad now crosses the spot
Whare the old divin'-log lays sunk and fergot,
And I stray down the banks whare the trees ust to be—
But never again will their shade shelter me!
And I wish in my sorrow I could strip to the soul,
And dive off in my grave like the old swimmin'-hole.

Cushing's Torpedo Attack

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

October 27, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

ON the night of Oct. 27, 1864, the Confederate ironclad ram Albemarle, a mighty marine monster armed cap-a-pie, lay moored at the dock at Plymouth, N. C. Next morning she rested on the bottom of Roanoke river with a hole in her side "big enough to drive a wagon through." Cushing did the trick with his little torpedo tied to the end of a ten foot spar.

The Albemarle was believed by friend and foe to be the equal of the once dreaded ram Merrimac. She was constructed in 1863, far up the Roanoke above Plymouth, and with her massive beams and iron ribs was intended by her designers to avenge the lost Merrimac and smash the frail wooden ships of the Federals then dominating Albemarle sound. The keel of the new monster was laid in a cornfield, with a country blacksmith's outfit for implements.

In April, 1864, the ram dropped down the Roanoke and in a swift battle drove the Federal fleet from Plymouth harbor. In this fight the Yankee gunboat Southfield went to the bottom under a blow from the ram's beak. A few days later the Albemarle suddenly appeared in Albemarle sound and stood for battle against seven Federal warships. The Federal captains tried to mob the ram and take her by boarding. In this they nearly succeeded, but night put an end to the fight, and the Albemarle returned up the Roanoke, where she lay for months, a grim guardian of the town and forts.

After the luckless battles of the Federal fleet with the ram Admiral P. Lee mentioned the case to young Cushing, who had already distinguished himself as a sailor of genius and daring. There were no torpedo boats in use in those days, and after a plan to surprise the monster by a land attack had been rejected at headquarters Cushing determined to try to lance her with a torpedo attached to a spar on a small, swift boat. In New York harbor he found two launches suitable for the work and fitted them out with torpedoes and all the rigging necessary for placing and exploding them.

Cushing's boats, which were screw propellers, were taken through canals to Chesapeake bay, and one was lost in the bay, so that the project was carried out with half the force originally intended. From the Chesapeake into the sounds of North Carolina the route was also by canal, and at times the boat had to be borne on a scow, owing to shallow water. Great secrecy was necessary to prevent the people along the route, who were Confederates at heart, from informing the enemy of this strange expedition. Toward the end of October Cushing reached Albemarle sound, near the mouth of the Roanoke, and here laid his plans before his companions, who were volunteers, and gave them the choice of backing out or going ahead. There were seven with him who remained true, and eight were added from the crews of vessels in the sound.

CUSHING TORPEDOING THE ALBEMARLE.

After coaling and victualing the launch she was headed up Roanoke river toward the town of Plymouth, where the ram lay at the wharf. Cushing had located her exact position on a personal reconnoissance and had studied the ground and the Confederate positions. He had eight miles to make with the launch in the enemy's waters, and he knew that an old wrecked ship in the channel one mile below the ram was occupied by Confederate river pickets. The town of Plymouth and the forts and camps on both banks of the river held a garrison of several thousand enemies. "Thus it seemed impossible to surprise them," said Cushing in his narrative, "or to attack them with success. Impossibilities are for the timid. We determined to overcome all obstacles."

Before entering the river a cutter had been taken in tow manned with thirteen sailors of the fleet, who were to dash aboard the wreck in the river and silence the Confederate pickets stationed there. Luckily the night was dark, and the torpedo launch passed within thirty feet of the pickets without discovery, as Cushing supposed, and went ahead, leaving an enemy in the rear. An attack on the pickets so close to the ram might have raised a general alarm. Besides, Cushing had decided to fight if he could but get his handful to the scene without discovery. His plan at that stage was to take the ram by boarding, overpowering her crew with hand grenades, revolvers and cutlasses in the hands of his brave crew. He counted upon a surprise and thought that by cutting the fastenings of the ram and setting her adrift he could demoralize the men on board and make an easy capture. Once adrift, he would take the chances that her iron sides could protect his own crew from the fire of the forts and the land troops whom the melee on shipboard would arouse to action.

Cushing knew all the bearings around the wharf and proposed to steal past the ram, land his men on the bank above her, then rush the silent decks. To his amazement a large fire was burning on the bank near by, and the scene was as light as day. A voice from the ram challenged the strange flotilla and quickly repeated the cry. In an instant all was changed. First, thinking of the enemy left in the rear, Cushing ordered the cutter to cast loose and row swiftly down stream to silence the Confederate picket on the old wreck.

Disregarding the enemy's challenge, Cushing directed the launch toward the black hull of the Albemarle, but as she ran close he saw a fender made of logs fastened by chains and boomed about the hull thirty feet from the sides. This was another unlooked for obstacle and showed that the enemy had prepared for attack. At the moment of this discovery the Confederates opened a sharp fire of musketry from the ram's deck and from the shore. The launch drove ahead, coming abreast of the ram and near enough for Cushing to examine the logs as well as near enough for the southern marksmen to take better aim. Being satisfied that the logs had been a long time in the water and must be covered with slime from the river Cushing quickly decided to leap the launch over them and strike the blow with his torpedo. Cushing stood alone in the bow of the launch, and while turning to give the order to his engineer below he was struck with a charge of small shot across the back. At the first attempt the launch was forced over the logs, but the effort exhausted her steam, and she drifted slowly toward the ram.

A voice again called out from the deck, "Ship ahoy!" The men in the launch all gave facetious answers, but Cushing responded with a load of canister fired from a boat howitzer planted by his side. Then was the time for the torpedo. In order to understand the most marvelous feature of this nervy exploit it is necessary to know the mechanism by which the infernal missile was brought into use. A spar was pivoted by a universal joint to the side of the launch near the bow. It was raised and lowered by means of a halyard. On the point of the spar was a socket containing a shell held in place by a pin which had to be pulled out in order to detach the missile. The drawing of the pin and detaching the torpedo were separate operations performed by means of two lanyards in Cushing's hands. The torpedo shell was intended to float and when in the right position had to be exploded by a third lanyard. In brief, the spar had to be swung around, point forward, then lowered to the required depth, the shell next detached and forced out, and finally, when in place, fired by force brought against a percussion cap.

At the trying moment, therefore, Cushing had upon his person four lines to be handled with the utmost coolness and precision. If any one movement failed all failed. Furthermore, he had a line from one wrist to the ankle of the engineer to give signals for the control of the launch. The boat moved slowly toward the ram within ten feet of a 100 pound rifle gun, which, as words of command heard aboard the launch indicated, the Confederates were training upon the rash assailants.

Cushing kept his place bolt upright at the bow of the launch, lines in hand. Bullets flew again, one striking the hand which held the detaching line for the torpedo. In spite of the blow he lowered the spar to its place, loosened the torpedo and felt it floating into position, then at the right moment pulled the firing lanyard. The instant of the explosion a charge of canister from the 100 pound gun struck the launch, and the upheaval of water from the exploding torpedo completely swamped the slender craft.

Cushing paid no heed to calls from the ram's deck to surrender, but threw aside his sword, revolver, shoes and coat and, telling his men to save themselves, jumped into the water. There was a chop sea on, and he made little headway. "Still there was a determination not to sink," he said, "a will not to give up. At last I touched soft mud, raised myself and made one step forward, then fell and remained, half in the mud and half in the water, nearly frozen, my brain in a whirl, but one thing strong in me—the determination to escape."

GEORGE L. KILMER.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 5 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. R. F. BAETLETT.
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit Oakland through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the P. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—Daily		1.54 A. M
No. 3—Daily		7.17 A. M
No. 71—Daily except Sunday		9.26 A. M
No. 35—Daily		4.33 P. M
No. 1—Daily		10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—Daily		12.27 A. M
No. *8—Daily		6.01 A. M
No. 2—Daily		6.31 A. M
No. 72—Accom daily except Sun		5.32 P. M
No. 46—Express, daily		4.24 P. M
No. 12—Daily		8.32 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT AUG. —, 1904.

No. 53	No. 51		No. 51	No. 53
A. M.	P. M.	STATIONS	P. M.	P. M.
x6 20	x12 35	lv Elkins ar	x2 35	6 50x
7 49	1 24	Fishing Hawk	1 49	5 28
8 34	1 46	Glady	1 30	4 50
9 42	2 19	Burner	12 57	3 48
x10 15	x2 35	ar Durbin lv	x12 40	3 15x

+ Daily xDaily except Sunday. s Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD
Office and residence, Alder St., east of post office.

Great Big Bargains.

$75 will buy Lot No. 241, on corner Hazel Glade Drive and Park front; worth $300.

$50 will buy Lot No. 242, adjoining above; worth $200.

$75 will buy Lot No. 219, on corner D street and Park front; worth $225.

$50 will buy Lot No. 218, adjoining above; worth $200.

$50 will buy Lot No. 220, fronting on D street, and

$50 for Lot No. 221.

No Building Conditions on these Lots.

Apply to

NOTICE OF
Registration of Voters.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY,

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 15th, 1904.

Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the provisions of Article 33, as amended by the Acts of 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1904, the undersigned Officers of Registration of the respection Election Districts of Garrett county, Maryland, will hold their sittings from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 o'clock p. m., on

Tuesday, October 4,

Tuesday, October 11,

and on

Tuesday, October 18.

for revision only.

(No one can Register after Tuesday, Oct. 11)

at their respective places of registration hereinafter named, for the purpose of registering in their respective registries of voters all persons who possess or will before the day of election next ensuing possess the requisite qualifications under the Constitution of the State of Maryland and the laws made thereunder entitling them to vote in said Election Districts and for the purpose of performing all other duties required of them by Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of Maryland.

Election District Number One—
Swanton.

The Officers of Registration for the First Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Swanton.

Election District Number Two—
Friendsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Second Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Council Chamber in the town of Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—
Grantsville.

The Officers of Registration for the Third Election District will attend and sit for the purpose afosesaid in the old Postoffice Building in the town of Grantsville.

Election District Number Four—
Bloomington.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in Thos. Garvey's house in the town of Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—
Accident.

The Officers of Registratton for the Fifth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Mrs. Susan Englehart in the town of Accident.

Election District Number Six—
Sang Run.

The Officers of Registration for the Sixth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election Building in the town of Sang Run.

Election District Number Seven—
Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Seventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Corrigan property, Third and Alder streets, in the town of Oakland.

Election District Number Eight—
Ryan's Glade.

The Officers of Registration for the Eighth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Election building on the Northwestern Turnpike.

Election District Number Nine—
Johnson's.

The Officers of Registration for the Ninth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the shop of Thomas Johnson on the National Road.

Election District Number Ten—
Deer Park.

The Officers of Registration for the Tenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the Building owned by Dr. J. W. Laughlin in the town of Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—
The Elbow.

The Officers of Registration for the Eleventh Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the residence of Joseph Warnick.

Election District Number Twelve—
Bittinger.

The Officers of Registration for the Twelfth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the storeroom of C. E. Ellithorpe, in the village of Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—
Kitzmillersville.

The Officers of Registration for the Thirteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid in the house of Paul Shultz in Kitzmillersville.

Election District Number Fourteen—
Oakland.

The Officers of Registration for the Fourteenth Election District will attend and sit for the purpose aforesaid at the office of the Supervisors of Elections in the Opera House building in the town of Oakland.

WILLIAM HAMILL,
A. C. BROWNING,
Officers of Registration for District No. 1 of Garrett county, Md.

JASPER GUARD,
DAVID K. HERRING,
Officers of Registration for District No. 2 of Garrett county, Md.

JOHN CUSTER,
THOMAS H. BITTINGER,
Officers of Registration for District No. 3 of Garrett county, Md.

WM. J. BARNARD,
JOEL PAUGH,
Officers of Registration for District No. 4 of Garrett county, Md.

JAMES E. McGETTIGAN,
WM. M. FRAZEE,
Officers of Registration for District No. 5 of Garrett county, Md.

NATHAN C. BROWNING,
J. ALVIN FRIEND,
Officers of Registration for District No. 6 of Garrett county, Md.

E. H. BARTLETT,
LINCOLN CALLIS,
Officers of Registration for District No. 7 of Garrett county, Md.

JAMES W. MASON,
JONAS YUTZY,
Officers of Registration for District No. 8 of Garrett county, Md.

MICHAEL CUNNINGHAM,
DANIEL B. LAYMAN,
Officers of Registration for District No. 9 of Garrett county, Md.

WILLIAM SEABOLD,
S. P. SPECHT,
Officers of Registration for District No. 10 of Garrett county, Md.

PETER F. MICHAEL,
STANLEY M. JACOBS,
Officers of Registration for District No. 11 of Garrett county, Md.

HENRY WILEY,
SIMON J. ORENDORF,
Officers of Registration for District No. 12 of Garrett county, Md.

L. C. HAMILL,
W. SCOTT PEW,
Officers of Registration for District No. 13 of Garrett county, Md.

JOHN F. BROWNING,
B. C. SCOTT,
Officers of Registration for District No. 14 of Garrett county, Md.

EDMUND JAMISON, President,
CHAS. M. MILLER,
E. E. SOLLARS,
Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county, Md.

CHAS. A. DIFFINBAUGH, Clerk.

Mortgagees' Sale
OF VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE
Adjoining the Town of Oakland, Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Louisa Chambers to the undersigned mortgagees, dated the 16th day of April, 1903, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 43, folios 415, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having been made under said mortgage, we hereby give notice that we will offer at public sale to the highest bidder on

SATURDAY,
The 15th Day of October, 1904,

at the hour of eleven o'clock a. m. of said day, in front of the court house door in the town of Oakland aforesaid, all that lot, piece or parcel of ground situate, lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, which on the plat of Dailey's Sub—divisions of lots Nos. 57, 58, 71, 72, and 2, of Pennington's Addition to the Town of Oakland is known and designated as Lot No. 31, and described as follows, to-wit:

Beginning for the same at a planted stone marked 31 standing on the North side of Crook street and the West side of Third street, and North 67° West, 60 feet from the end of the first line of Lot No. 30 of the subdivision of Lot No. 2 of said addition, and running thence with Third street North 23° East, 68½ feet, then North 67° West, 130 feet, South 46½ West, 76 feet to Crook street, and with it South 67° East, 158½ feet to the beginning, containing

9,881 1-8 SQ. FEET.

The improvements consist of a comparatively new and

Commodious Dwelling

containing eight rooms, a stable and other necessary outbuildings, and is a very desirable property.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on the day of sale

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
FRED. A. THAYER,
Mortgagees.

HOYES.

Farmers are quite busy preparing for winter which is fast approaching.

Ex-Sheriff W. A. Maffett and family, of Oakland, arrived at Mrs. Anna DeWitt's last Sunday evening, and will spend a few days.

Mrs. Laura Shea, of Vanderbilt, Pa., who came to visit her sister Mrs. Maggie DeWitt some time since, has been suffering from an attack of typhoid, but is improving slowly.

We are sorry to hear of the illness of Miss Margaret Browning, of Sang Run, who is suffering from a severe attack of typhoid fever.

Mr. William Downing and brother of Connellsville, Pa., drove from Friendsville to Hoyes Tuesday evening this week and were very pleasantly entertained by Miss Mae DeWitt at her home.

There was services in the St. Dominick church last Sunday.

Mrs. Annie Baugh, of Cove, spent Monday at M. Mattingly's.

Misses Olia and Bernadette Mattingly accompanied by Mrs. Grace Owens, of West Newton, Pa., spent a week in Oakland and attended Teachers' Institute.

Misses Sadie and Freeda DeWitt made a visit to Mrs. Ella McKeen of Elder last Sunday.

Ralph Brenneman and sister, Anna spent last Sunday at Freeman DeWitt's

Miss Mary Deal arcompanied by Miss Greaser and brother, of Oakland, spent Sunday and Monday with Miss Deal's sister, Mrs. Lina Callis.

Mrs. Anna Collier, of Friendsville, was visiting her mother, Mrs. Wm DeWitt, several days the past week.

Mrs. Vespie Friend was numbered among the sick last week, but is much better at this writing

Bernadette Mattingly and Auburn Smith made a flying trip to Accident last Saturday afternoon.

Messrs Thomas Bishoff and Masden Casteel left for St. Louis Monday where they will spend about ten days taking in the big Show.

Clay Grover, wife and daughter of Hagerstown were guests of Wm Callis a few days the past week.

Dorsey Guard, who has been treaching music in this neighborhood for several months past, will leave shortly for Ada, Ohio, where he will attend musical college.

Blaine Wilburn arrived at his home at this place quite recently, bringing with him a handsome young bride, having married Miss Bertha Cross of near Accident. Some of our young men and young ladies armed with horns, bells, etc., gave them the usual serenade. The groom responded by presenting them with $5. We extend our congratulations to this young couple.

HOYES AND VICINITY.

The "frost is on the pumpkins" and the farmers are very busy gathering their fall crops.

There was no preaching at the Methodist church Sunday owing to the fact of the minister being away attending the annual Conference.

Our school is progressing nicely under the intelligent tutorship of T. C. Bittinger.

The goodly number of school teachers of this community who attended the Teachers Institute at Oakland, all report a very successful institute, and they are going to work in earnest to apply many of the excellent principles which were suggested during the week of instruction.

We are glad that the telephone lines are now connected and giving very good service in general.

The Grange meets in the schoolhouse Thursday evening. Give the Grange a chance to lend you a helping hand. It will do it, for it is working in the interests of common people.

A change has been made in the time of carrying the mail from Accident to Oakland by way of Hoyes. The mail now leaves Hoyes en route to Oakland about 2.30 p. m. and returns at 11 a. m. the following day.

The Y. F. S. C. was very hospitably entertained on Friday evening at the home of Wm. Callis.

A number of the Grangers spent a pleasant time at the home of Hamill Casteel on Thursday evening, where they had met to practice music.

H. R. DeWitt and wife, also Miss Blanche Callis, were visiting Geo. E. Bishoff's Sunday last.

Ralph Brenneman and sister were the guests of F. D. DeWitt and family last Sunday.

Henry Casteel and Thos. Bishoff started for the Exposition last Monday. The former expects to remain in St. Louis about two weeks; the latter will visit relatives at Williamstown, Missouri, and will be gone about three weeks.

R. R. Friend, of Friendsville, makes frequent trips to this community. Rumor says one of the Hoyes belles thinks of changing her place of residence soon.

We are sorry to note the serious illness of Rev. B. F. Conneway, of Elder.

Emanuel Custer is on the sick list at this writing. His wife is also disabled and contemplates going to the hospital soon.

Geo. E. Bishoff and A. P. Enlow attended a Grange meeting at Harrington last week.

Mrs. Wilton Rush and daughter and Mrs. Orval Welch, of Friendsville, spent Sunday with S. K. Welch of near this place.

A number of persons of Oakland paid a visit to their relatives, Wm Callis and family, the first of the week.

TYPHOID EEVER.

Source of Infection Should Be Carefully Sought.

The following important paper was issued by the State Board of Health in June, this year:

When Typhoid Fever appears in a family the source of the infection must be looked for in drinking water or food taken within the preceding twenty days. The patient may not have been infected at home, but if a second case occurs this second infection will in all probability be tracable in some way to the first patient. In a majority of instances the drinking water has become infected. Your first business therefore is to find out the quality of your drinking water.

You can do this by asking the local health officer for instructions about shipping us samples of your drinking water. In about a week we will be able to report on the drinking water, but in the meantime the members of the family must not use the raw water. The daily supply of drinking water must be boiled.

The insectious material of typhoid fever is produced in but one way. It grows always in the bowels and sometimes in the bladder. It therefore escapes from the stools and urine. If we kill the germs in the stools and urine as soon as they are passed there can be no spread of typhoid fever. These discharges should therefore be disinfected as soon as possible. You will need a large quantity of a good disinfecting solution.

To four gallons of water add enough salt to make a strong brine. Put this in a five gallon demijohn or jug and add a quart of crude carbolic acid. Shake it up well and you will have a good disinfectant for stools and urine.

The crude carbolic acid known as U. S. P. 90 per cent. is very good and a quart will cost about 50 cents. There is a cheaper grade known as a 30 per cent. acid, which is nearly as effective.

In spite of every precaution those who wait on the sick person will get their hands infected, and it is therefore necessary to wash the hands every time one does any service about the patient's bed or body. Whoever waits on the patient must not prepare food or drink for other persons, in the house, or if it is impossible to mind this rule, one must most carefully and thoroughly cleanse the hands before performing any household duty outside the sick room. Good scrubbing with soap, water and a brush, and then rinsing well, in a fresh water, will suffice for cleansing the hands.

The typhoid bacillus frequently lives in the bowels or in the bladder of the patient for several weeks after recovery. The urine remains infectious longest. It is therefore necessary to be very careful, and to instruct the patient to be very carefui, about these discharges for some time after recovery.

If any one else in the house falls sick within two weeks after the first patient the probability is that the infection was lodged before the precautions were taken in regard to drinking water and the disposal of discharges. But if the second case occurs more than 20 days after the first case, that will signify that we have made a mistake somewhere in our precautions.

HISTORICAL REMINISCENCES.

The Postoffices of Old Allegany and Garrett Counties.

It has occured to my mind, that many of your intelligent readers would be interested in some historic facts to be given in regard to the postoffices of old Allegany, and the new county of Garrett.

Allegany county was organized in 1790, with Cumberland as its county seat, but it had no postoffice till 1795. This was the first P. O. of the county. Up to that date all the people of the county, about 5,000, had to go to that office—in some cases not much less than 75 miles. This, no doubt, will seem wonderful to some people especially the young. The next postoffice was established at Frostburg (or town) in 1821; no doubt through the influence of Josiah Frost, the ancient proprietor of that place. And the next was at the historic Little Meadows in 1824, called Tomlinson, in honor of Jesse Momlinson, the great proprietor of the place. The office remained here till 1834, when it was moved down to the Little Crossing, where it remained with James Burton as P. M. till about 1850, when it was moved to Grantsville. Through the management of Elijah Fuller, a man of influence in those days, James Burton followed the office and remained its official while life and strength remained. The fourth P. O. in old Allegany was Selbysport, about 70 years ago. Since then the offices have come more readily and frequently. At this time there are in Allegany county 43 postoffices and same number in Garrett county, and still coming as often as necessity requires if not a little oftener. We all know a convenient postoffice with a fit official, is a great blessing. In old times a town with a postoffice was called a post town.

The old National Road for many years, tho' near the margin of the northern end of the county, was almost the life of what is now Garrett county. Between Frostburg and Grantsville there were three offices—Tomlinson, Little Crossings and Shade Mills, once the dreaded Shades of Death. All these offices have disappeared. For 14 miles along that grand old highway there is not at present one postoffice, tho' the road is in fair preservation, and much used with all manner of vehicles and other ways of movements.

The Little Crossings in times past was quite an important village and of late has been regaining what was lost. The Messrs. Stantons are the important factors there now. It is the most important point on the new Jennings R. R. from Salisbury, Pa., to the Garrett county timber regions. Little Crossings in early times meant the river or stream there. It was so named by Gen. Braddock and Washington and so remained unquestioned, but in late years the name Castleman has wrongfully come to it from below somewhere. But Little Crossings is yet the original and lawful name of that historic and beautiful river. Sometimes in early years it was called Youghioghany, this too was an error. J. B.

Sept. 27, 1904.

Washing Machines.

We are agents for the WhiteLily which was put on the market some 18 months ago, and that stands today the largest manufacture of any one style of rotary Washing Machines in the world. This is a very broad statement when you take into consideration that they are practically a baby concern just 18 months old, but the Company claim that they can back up this statement with solid facts. At no time have they been able to supply the demand. The machine is sold on a guarantee to give satisfaction, and any child 10 years old can operate it. Send for circulars showing cuts, styles and price of the most wonderful Washer ever made, and makes wash day what it should be a pleasure instead of a drudge to the house-wife. Price $7.50. Wringers $1.50 to $3.50.

3t J. M. DAVIS & SON.

Notice.

I will operate my cider mill at Kearney every Friday until October 16th. After that date I will operate cider and apple butter mill daily except Saturday as long as apples may be brought.

Thanking the public for past patronage and soliciting a continuance of the same, I remain,

Yours most respectfully,
W. H. MUMAW.

Real Estate. Insurance.

If you want to
BUY OR SELL
WRITE OR SEE
L. A. RUDISILL,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Mortgagees' Sale
—OF—
REAL ESTATE
In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Sidney A. Lewis and Amanda Lewis his wife, to Elijah J. M. Button dated the 11th day of July, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 43, folios 558, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, default having been made under the covenants of said mortgage, the undersigned named as attorney therein, hereby gives notice that he will offer at public auction to the highest bidder on Saturday, the 22nd Day of October, 1904,

at the hour of eleven o'clock a. m., in front of the Court House door in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, all that piece or parcel of ground situate in Garrett county, and State of Maryland, containing

49 1-2 ACRES,

mentioned in and conveyed by said mortgage and being the same piece of property which is fully described in a deed from L. T. Yoder et al. to Asberry Wolf dated the 4th day of April, 1896, and duly recorded among the land records of Garrett county aforesaid.

This property lies about seven miles north of Oakland, is partly cleared and is improved by two dwelling houses, two stables and other necessary outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Attorney for the Mortgagee named in said mortgage.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the Subscriber, of Garrett county, Maryland, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

MARY A. SPEICHER,

late of Garrett county, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of March next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 27th day of September, 1904.

CHARLES C. SPEICHER,
Administrator,
Accident Md.

Order of Publication.

Rebecca A. McMinn, Plaintiff, vs. Howard J. McMinn, Defendant.

No. 1282 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county.

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by Rebecca A. McMinn, plaintiff, against Howard J. McMinn, the defendant.

The amended bill states that on the 25th day of May, 1896, the plaintiff was married to the defendant at Garrett county, Maryland, with whom she resided in said state and county until sometime about the month of February, 1899. That after said marriage the defendant frequently beat the plaintiff in a shameful manner with great cruelty and brutality, and that his vicious conduct became so intolerable that the plaintiff was forced to leave his house and take safety and refuge elsewhere, and was obliged to swear out a warrant for his arrest for her safety.

That at the March Term, 1899, of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, the defendant under the name of David J. McMinn, (by which name he was commonly known), was indicted and convicted in two separate cases for assaulting and beating the plaintiff. That the conduct of the plaintiff towards her husband has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, and that the defendant has not contributed anything to her support or her children for over five years, and that he has declared his intention of living with her no longer, and that there is no possibility of reclaiming her husband or their ever living together. That said abandonment by said defendant of said plaintiff was without just cause or reason and has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation. That there were two children born to them from said marriage, to-wit: Grace Mabel and James William, seven and five years of age, respectively, infants.

That the said defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant, the custody and guardiauship of the said minor children, general relief and an order of publication against said non-resident defendent.

It is thereupon, this 26th day of September, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 21st day of October, 1904, give notice to said absent defendent of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of November, 1904, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to pass as prayed.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

POSTPONED
Mortgagee's Sale
OF VALUABLE
REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Isaac W. Thompson and Laura Thompson, his wife, to the First National Bank of Oakland, Md., dated the 16th day of September, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 45, folio 51, one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under said mortgage, the undersigned, the attorney named in said mortgage, hereby gives notice that on

SATURDAY,
the 15th Day of October, 1904

at 2 o'clock p. m., in front of the courthouse in the town of Oakland, Garrett county aforesaid, he will offer at public auction to the highest bidder all the following described real estate, to-wit: All those parcels of land in Garrett county aforesaid of which the late Henry Thompson died seized and possessed, known as

"FAIR SWEEP,"

and also another parcel of land purchased by the said Henry Thompson from N. B. Harvey and beginning for the same at a butternut tree standing at the corner of the Military Lot formerly owned by Philip Davis and running thence North 70 perches, North 45 degrees West 29 perches, West 52 perches, South 45 degrees West 30 perches, to the outside line of "Avon's Vale" and with said line South 45 degrees East 153 perches to a line fence between the lands of said Henry Thompson and Thomas K. Harvey, and along and with said line fence North 3 degrees West 52 perches, north 27 degrees East 46 perches, East 6 perches, North 89½ perches, West 89½ perches, South 89½ perches, West 89½ perches to the beginning, containing as a whole

One Hundred and Forty-five Acres and Fifty-four Perches.

Said property is mostly cleared and in cultivation. Improved by a good dwelling house, barn and other out buildings, a good orchard with a variety of fruits and the place is well watered. By the terms of the will of the late Henry Thompson his widow holds a life estate in said farm and the same will be sold subject thereto.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

FRED. A. THAYER,
Attorney named in the Mortgage.

The Maryland Agricultural College
COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY.
THREE COURCES OF INSTRUCTION.
AGRICULTURAL. MECHANICAL.
SCIENTIFIC.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements: bath-rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

New buildings with every modern improvement, and old buildings thoroughly renovated, by opening of first session. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, with annual deposit, ($150) one hundred and fifty nine dollars, for scholastic year. Daily visit by physician to College. Catalog giving full particulars sent on application. Attention is called to the Short Course of ten weeks in Agriculture. Write for particulars.

Term Commences, Thursday, September, 15.
Early application necessary for admittance.

R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Maryland.

The Maryland School for the Deaf,
37TH SESSION,
Reopens September 14th, 1904.

Non-Sectarian. For the deaf and dumb and those whose hearing is too defective for attendance on public school. Speech and lip-reading taught, as well as grammar school and academic studies.

Location very healthful. Board and Tuition free to residents of Maryland.

Apply to
CHAS. W. ELY, Principal,
Frederick, Md.

ORDER NISI.

David Sloan vs. Jefferson S. Green.

No. 1233 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Md.

Ordered this 5th day of September, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by D. Lindley Sloan, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 5th day of October, 1904; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 5th day of September, 1904.

The report states the amount of sale to be $400.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Appointments By Supervisors of Elections to Fill Vacancies.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 15, 1904.

George Stahl, appointed Republican Officer of Registration and Judge of Elections by this Board at a meeting held June 25, 1904, for Election District No. 8, is found to be disqualified to serve as such by being incapacitated by physical disability, and in his place and stead Jonas Yutzy, whose postoffice address is Sunnyside, Maryland, is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

Wm. Moorehead, appointed Democratic Clerk of Election for Election District No. 4 is found to be disqualified to serve as such, and in his place and stead Lawrence Garvey, whose postoffice address is Bloomington, Md., is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county.

EDMUND JAMISON, President.

Appointment of Judge of Election and Registration Officer to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Sept. 27, 1904

John F. Browning, appointed Democratic Officer of Registration and Judge of Election by this Board at a meeting held June 25, 1904, for Election District No. 14, is found to be disqualified to serve as such by being incapacitated by physical disability, and in his place and stead Thos. J. Browning, whose postoffice address is Thayerville, Maryland, is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county.

EDMUND JAMISON, President.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1904. NUMBER 34.

PRESIDING ELDER WARD'S REPORT TO CONFERENCE

Paper Dealing With Conditions in Oakland District M. E. Church

READ BEFORE ANNUAL CONFERENCE

A Resume of the Work Done and Things Accomplished During His First Year as Presiding Elder—Improvements Noted.

The following report was made to the recent Conference of the M. E. church by Presiding Elder R. B. Ward, of Oakland District:

To Bishop C. H. Fowler, President, and to the Brethren, Members of the West Virginia Annual Conference,

I submit this my first annnal report of the Oakland District. With a keen sense of responsibiifty, a full appreciation of human weakness, and an implicit confidence in God's providence, I entered upon the work assigned me at our last session of Conference.

This district is composed of twenty four appointments, one of which, the Albright circuit. I supplied after Conference with E. O. Woodyard, who has done faithful and efficient work through the year.

Three others, namely, Blaine, Etam and St. George were supplied at Conference, by Brothers J. E. Wells, A. Engle and Geo. W. Strothard, who have done faithful and efficient work on these charges respectively. The other charges have been served by the regular appointees of the Conference. Faithful work has been done throughout the entire district, with somewhat varying results and successes, as the report of the men will show.

Our Sunday schools are well organized throughout the district, and doing effective work in imparting religious knowledge to the children of our church, and inducing many of them to unite with the church at an early age. We hope to make them more effective.

The Epworth League in general is in a healthful condition. Most of our important points are supplied with a League organization. Early in June a District Epworth League convention was held at Horton, under the presidency and leadership of J. B. Workman. While I was not permitted to be at the convention, it was well attended, and all present reported it one of the most enthusiastic and successful ever held in the distrtct. We hope to advance.

Recognizing practical principle in the Scriptural statement, "By the sweat of thy face, shalt thou eat bread," and, "the laborer is worthy of his hire, and they that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel," and further, "God is not unrighteous to foyget your work and labors of love, which ye have showed toward his name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister," so we have tried to impress upon the churches the importance of giving our preachers a more liberal support, and to collect and pay over these amounts according to the Disciplinary law. In many instances we have impared. I am glad to report an increase of pastoral support in the district of $128 for the year.

We are glad to report more or less of the revival spirit in nearly all of the charges, notwithstanding considable hindrance by smallpox and scarlet fever during the wincer, there being scores of cases of the former and hundreds of the latter, yet the brethren went steadily on at their post of duty. More than five hundred conversions have been reported to me durirg the year.

During the year 4 new churches have been buiit or completed. One at Hambleton on the Parsons charge costing $2500, not yet dedicated. One at Terra Alta costing $10,000, dedicated in June by Dr. John Krantz, of New York. One at Sinclair appointment on Etam charge costing $800, dedicated Aug. 21st by the writer, free of debt. And one at Lake Ford, Cranesville charge, dedicated Sept. 11th, (by the same), costing $1200, free of debt.

At Bruceton a beautiful church costing $2000 will soon be ready for dedication. At Mt. Moriah, Albright charge, a church costing $1200 will soon be ready for dedication.

At Evansville the church was overhauled inside and out at a cost of several hundred dollars, and was reopen by the writer Sept. 25th., free of debt.

At Oakland a new heating plant, (hot water or steam) has been placed in the church at a cost of $750, all of which is paid. A new pipe organ is contracted for, which, when completed will cost $2500.

At Grantsville the church has been newly painted, which greatly improves appearances.

On the Brandonville charge, Webster Chapel and Centenary church have been reroofed, which has been paid for.

At Terra Alta, Rowlesburg and Davis the parsonages have been very much improved by painting and papering, the cost has been provided for.

At Evansville a troublesome debt of $400 on the parsonage has been paid during the year.

At Gormania a parsonage property costing about $700 has been purchased and partly paid for ($300), and the property fully secured.

At Aurora the parsonage has been reroofed, which has been paid for.

All the benevolences of the church have been faithfully looked after as all the reports will show.

The pastors and charges have been faithfully to the missionary collections, and notwithstanding the unprecedent success of my worthy predecessor, L. W. Roberts, in pushing the collections beyond what it had ever been, I am glad to say we will not fall below the high standard he has set up.

I have sought to be instant in season, and out of season as well. I have shunned no obvious duty, nor counted any task too severe, where the cause might be advanced, or a brother assisted in the performance of a duty set before him. God has been good to us during the year. He has given us strength for the day of toil, courage to face the storms of winter, health to enjoy the blessings of life, and hope and confidence in the future.

The men in the district have been kind, courteous, faithful and industrious. They love the church, and the service of the Master. "By their fruits ye shall know them." We are grateful to God for their graces and gifts and thankful to them for their fidelity and industry.

Death has not come into our ranks, though the Angel hovered near. During the winter Brother J. H. Koch suffered from an attack of typhoid fever and a severe abscess from which he finally recovered. Brother E. J. Westfall has been very low with pneumonia fever, but is convalescing. And last Brother H. E. Friend, on Sunday, Oct. 2d, while on his way to Deer Park, was struck by the fast train No. 55, and strange to say escaped with a bruised hand and a broken arm. He will not be at the conference, but said to tell the brethren his heart was with them.

With gratitude to God and goodwill to the brethren we close our first year in the district.

R. B. WARD.

OFFUTT'S.

—ABOUT OUR—

Comfort Shoes

—FOR—

Men and Women.

They are the greatest blessing ever invented for any one who is on their feet all day.

They soothe and comfort tired, aching feet till they feel more like feathers than lead. They ease every tender spot, support firmly, squeeze nowhere.

Uppers of soft, velvety kid; soles ample, easy, smoothe; toes roomy, comfortable; heels low, broad, flat; according to quality, $1.50 to 2.50.

They are a very paradise of rest for weary feet and a paradise of economy for weary purses.

D. E. OFFUTT & SONS.

ATTENTION!

REPUBLICANS.

Republican Meetings, to which all irrespective of their party affiliations, are cordially invited to attend, will be held at

Deer Park, Monday, Oct. 24th.
Crellin, Tuesday, Oct. 25th.
Bray, Wednesday, Oct. 26th.
Shook Shop, Thursday, Oct. 27.

These meetings will be addressed by

Hon. CHAS. R. SCHIRM,

Member of Congress from Baltimore City.

Hon. D. E. DICK,

several local speakers and will open at 7.30 p.m.

Besides the above a meeting will be held in the Opera House,

Oakland, Saturday, Oct. 29th,

at which will be present

CONGRESSMAN PEARRE

and other speakers.

Music by a Brass Band.

Everybody Invited.

AUSTIN BROWN,
Chairman Republican Committee.

EVENING BUSINESS COLLEGE ORGANIZATION

Those Intending Entering for the Term Requested to Meet Monday Evening.

Prof. J. Frank McBee, A. M., principal of the Oakland High School, has interested quite a number of young men and ladies in the organization of an evening business college to be conducted here during the winter months with classes three evenings each week.

On Monday evening of next week at eight o'clock those contemplating taking up the work and all others interested in the success of the undertaking are requested to meet in the assembly room on the third floor of the First National Bank building when the school will be organized.

Nearly the full quota of persons have signified their intention of entering the school, but there are yet a few vacancies. Application should be made at once to the principal if you desire to enroll as one of the students.

TEDDY AT THE BAT.

The "Pops" and Democrats now rave
About the phrase, "stand pat,"
And tell of money they would save
If they could pass the hat.
But things are runningmighty smooth
We're all convinced of that,
And will continue so to run
With Teddy at the bat.

We want good times, full dinner pails,
And lots of work to do,
And toward that port must set our sails
(No more of ninety-two),
But if we want all these good things
We surely must "stand pat,"
And keep the G. O. P. in line
And Teddy at the bat.

We want a man who speaks his mind
And gives to us his views,
Who does not try to win his race
By traveling in gum shoes.
We want a man who can do things,
Whether this or that,
And such a man we're sure to have
With Teddy at the bat.

"I BELIEVE in the future—not in a spirit which will sit down and look for the future to work itself out, but with a determination to do its part in making the future what it can and shall be made."—President Roosevelt at Detroit, Mich., Sept. 22, 1902.

HOYES AND VICINITY.

Mr. Henry Atkinson, wife and two little daughters of Lonaconing, spent several days the past week visiting W. A. Smith and family.

Miss Mae Dewitt was the guest of Miss Bernadette Mattingly last Sunday.

Mr. Skirk, wife and daughter, all of Friendsville, spent a few hours at the Mattingly House Monday.

Misses Bertha, Clara and Ethel Dewitt and Mrs. Minerva Custer, accompanied by Mr. Ralph Friend, spent last Sunday at Accident as guests of Mrs. Wm. Englehart.

Mr. Truman Bittinger, teacher of the Hoyes school, spent Saturday and Sunday at his home near Bittinger.

Messrs. W. A. Smith and H. H. Atkinson mad a business trip to Deer Park last Saturday. While on this trip they visited the noted Truesdale farm, and expressed great surprise at the immense scope of this farm.

Miss Sadie Dewitt was the guest of her cousin, Miss Malvie Wilburn, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Mattingly were among the callers last Sunday at Mr. John Kitzmiller's.

Mrs. Sarah Wendell, who has been dangereusly ill for some time past is not much improved at this writing.

Mr. Robert Koontz, of Greensburg, Pa., made a business trip to this neighborhood the past week.

Rev. Henry E. Frsend, who has been located at Mt. Lake Park the past year, is returning to his farm at this place.

Mrs. W. H. Owens is spend a few days at her home at West Newton, Pa., but will return shortly and spend a few weeks more at the Mattingly House.

The political meetings in the Eastern end of the county being held this week by the Republican organization have been exceedingly well attended and much enthusiasm has been manifested. At Finzel on Monday night a very large crowd of persons was present, followed on Tuesday evening by an enthusiastic meeting at the Strickland School House.

PROHIBITION NOMINEE A GARRETT COUNTIAN.

Mr. William A. Michaels of District No. 4 Named for Congress by Committee.

HE IS A WELL-TO-DO FARMER.

While He Has Not Yet Made a Public Acceptance of the Nomination It Is Understood That He Will Stand—Four Nominees Now in Field

The Prohibitionists of the Sixth Congressinal District of Maryland not to be outdone by the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties, have placed in nomination for Congress a native Garrett countian in the person of Mr. William A. Michaels, of District No. 4. Mr. Michaels was named for the position by a committee appointed for that purpose at the Prohibition picnic held at Reynolds, Allegany county, several weeks ago. He is a well-to-do and highly respected farmer of his district where he is well known. While Mr. Michael has not indicated his acceptance of the nomination through the newspapers or by any other public manner, it is generally thought that he will remain on the ticket and make the fight.

Along with Mr. Michaels on the Prohibition ticket the voters of the Congressional District will have three other candidates to choose from they being the Republican, Democratic and Socialist nominees.

"TAKING the work of the army and the civil authorities together, it may be questioned whether anywhere else in modern times the world has seen a better example of real constructive statesmanship than our people have gived in the Philippine Islands."—President Roosevelt's annual message, second session, Fiftyseventh Congress.

Subscribe for The Republican.

SINCELL & CO.

When you wear GRIFFIN BRAND CLOTHING and OVERCOATS you wear the best, that means you are as well dressed as the fellow who pays from $30.00 to $50.00 for his so-called tailor made clothes. You can get the Griffin Brand for $8.50 to $18.00 a suit, and every garment guaranteed to wear and hold its shape.

The biggest stock of high grade dress shoes for Men we have ever shown from $2.25 to $5.00 a pair. Every pair leaving the store goes with a guarantee that they will wear to more than the price paid or we replace them with new ones.

H. C. SINCELL & CO.,
High Grade Dependable Clothing, Shoes and Furnishings.

QUEEN QUALITY
—IS THE—
WOMEN'S FAVORITE

FOR ALL TIME.

The victories of the Republican party, what are they? Some of them have been achieved in war, but more in peace. All have been gained by that unity of purpose and effort which always animates every Republican heart when his country's honor or interest are at stake. Contrary to the Democratic party, our ranks are always unbroken in the hour of national political conflict and our marksmen always stand shoulder to shoulder on the firing line.

Such a conflict is now on. For ammunition let us turn to a brief recital of some of the Republican victories of past years. First and foremost among those many victories will forever stand that victory for which the immortal Lincoln gave his life—the abolition of slavery—which was cursing our fair country and dishonoring our flag. It was not until the advent with the first election of Lincoln, of the activity of the Republican party, that this great problem was seriously taken up for settlement. The Republican party, fighting for the Union against Southern secessions forced the abolition question to an acute stage, then the great heart and the the willing pen of a Republican President gave freedom to 4,000,000 people. Was not that a victory? A victory really greater than that of Gettysburg though without Gettysburg and the many other sacrifices of Northern and Southern blood that victory would not have been possible. For all time the victory of the abolition of slavery stands to the credit of the Republican party.

Then, thirty-seven years later, came another cry for help. Cuba, fair, fertile Cuba, ground into dust by four centuries of Spanish greed, held out imploring hands for help, another Republican President, another American martyr to the cause of liberty and good government, William McKinley of undying fame, listened to the cry. Was the cry for help disregarded by this Republican President? No! It was listened to by William McKinley, and that great soul moved toward the right as it always did. Peaceful measures for relief were tried till hope could try no more. Then goaded by Spanish treachery in the blowing up of the Maine war for Cuba's freedom was declared, and Cuba is free. All honor to our brave Navy and Army for the glorious work they, in this war for freedom's sake, did at the bidding of a Republican President. Time will not permit to name all the heroes of that war, but the names of Dewey, Sampson, Schley and Wainwright occur to our minds, together with that of the bold and brave man who stands foremost on the world's stage today, the Rough Rider of San Juan Hill, Theodore Roosevelt. For all time the victory of freeing Cuba stands to the credit the Republican party.

But there are other victories than those of war. Rarely more than a generation ago a Republican Secretary of State, with the far-seeing vision common to Republican statesman, saw that the most despotic power in the world, Russia, by its possession of Alaska might some day be a menace to our Pacific coast. Alaska was bought by Mr. Seward and the Republican party, and instead of being a menace it stands as a sentinel guarding American interests in the northern Pacific and the Artic Oceans. With diplomatic relations between ourselves and Russia acute as they are today by reasons of the Russo-Japanese war, is there not comfort in the fact that Alaska is ours? For all time the victory of peacefully acquiring Alaska stands to the credit of the Republican party.

For more than a half-century past American interests and the American people have demanded a canal to connect the waters of the Atlantic with the waters of the Pacific. On the trade advantages to ourselves of such a canal we need not enlarge; of its immeasurable advantage to the United States in time of war we are all, Democrats and Republicans, agreed; of its feasibility there is no question; of its early construction there has been no doubt since the recent day when the Republican party at the hands of Republican President Roosevelt, gave to our nation the American Panama Canal. For all time the victory of the Panama Canal will stand to the credit of the Republican party.

When we acquired the Philippines and Porto Rico we found school, privileges practically non-existent. Only six years have passed, and to-day over 300,000 Philippine and Porto Rican children are receiving American education and singing the songs of freedom in the Anglo-American language. For all time the victory of inaugurating the system under which these children are being fitted for eventual American citizenship stands to the credit of the Republican party.

Another Republican Secretary of the State saw that American trade in China was being restrincted by the greed of other nations, and by a series of clever diplomatic moves he has secured for us a commercial "open door" in China. For all time the victory of the "open door" in China stands to the credit of John Hay and the Republican party.

When the first Republican President, Abraham Lincoln, was elected in 1860 we had 123,000 factories with 1,000,000 workers. Now under the protective tariff we have 600,000 factories, with 7,000,000 workers. For all time 477,000 factories and 6,000,000 workers stand as a victory to the credit of the protective tariff and the Republican party.

Since the birth of the Republican administration in 1860 savings bank deposites have increased by nearly $3,000,000,000; annual exports by over $1,300,000.000; bank clearings by $113,000,000,000 yearly; money circulation by $2, 122,000,000, values of farm property by $15,000,000,000; factory capital by $9,300,000,000; steam railroads by 184,000 miles; telegraph lines by 980;000 miles; telephone lines, an entire increase of over 1,000,000 miles; states of the Union from thirty-one to forty-five, and so on through the long, long list of material advantages. For all time the credit of the victory in achieving these mighty results stands with the fiscal policies of the Republican party.

The end of the last four years' Democratic rule found us with factories closed or half-closed; with more than 2,000,000 of willing workers out of work; with empty cupboards and families suffering; with overstocked shelves and failing merchants; with failed and failing savings banks; with empty houses, unpaid rents and unproductive real estate; with business shattered and public credit threatened; with $262,000,000 added to our public debt and no new assets to show for it; with capital afraid and labor in want; with everyone asking, "What further calamity will happen next?" This was defeat, bitter, dire defeat after a four years' battle under Democratic generalship. Then William McKinley was elected commander-in-chief of the army of industrial America. His first order of the day was "Protection to American industries and American labor." Instantly, as if by the magic wand of an enchanter, factories opened up; idle workers got work; cupboards filled and families rejoiced; merchants began to sell their goods and pay their bills; savings banks prospered and multiplied; houses sold and rented, back rents were paid and real estate was once more a productive asset; business confidence was reborn, and the public credit was strengthened; government bonds were paid off instead of additional ones being issued; capital lost its fear, and labor was no longer hungry, and everyone was saying, "God bless William McKinley." For all times the credit for this great victory on behalf of industrial America is due the Republican party.

Now the battle for the protection of that protective tariff is again on. The attack must be again repulsed. Not a breach must be permitted in the walls of labor's citadel of protection. The ramparts must be manned by able marksmen, who shall shoot to kill. Our men are ready, our guns are ready, ammunition is plenty and victory, Republican victory, will again be ours when the sun goes down on November 8.

BROWN'S NOBLE JOB.

Hon. Frank Brown, millionaire banker, former governor of Maryland and aspirant for further honors at the hands of the Democratic party, certainly assumed a noble role when he came to Cumberland and sprung the Parker and Davis League to fight the 442 colored voters of Allegany county. There are 12,228 white voters in this county, and all are trembling lest 442 colored men so far forget themselves as to assert supremacy, social and political. Not a few Democrats are laughing at the crowd that allowed itself to be duped by Brown into this useless, uncalled for move against an inoffensive people. It can be said that the colored people of Cumberland behave themselves. It is rare that one of them is in the police court. No attempt is made by the average colored man here to enforce his personality on any one. He certainly goes about his business. Not a few own property and pay taxes. The colored man of Cumberland does not crave social equality. It is a senseless proposition that is only entertained by "sapheads," who desire to stir up prejudice against the Republican party. The cry of negro domination is so old and so foolish in the face of things that it is high time that it is "laughed out of court."

While ex-Governor Brown is making his crusade against the black man it is apropos to state that he was up in Garrett county leading a gallant charge, pointing out to the "terrified," not the "unterrified" there, that there was great danger of negro usurpation. Garrett county in 1903 had 3,967 white voters and 25 colored voters, or 156 white male adults to 1 colored male adult.—Cumberland News.

For Sale or Rent.

An 8-room dwelling in residence section of town. Apply to or address J. M. Litzinger, Oakland, Md.

PLEASANT FIELDS OF HOLY WRIT

SAVE for my daily range
Among the pleasant fields of Holy Writ,
I might despair. —Tennyson.

The International Sunday School Lesson.

Fourth Quarter. Lesson IV. 2 Kings v, 1-14. October 23, 1904.

Copyright, Davis W. Clark.

Elisha and Naaman

Happy the government which has at its disposal a commander of skill, experience, and integrity. He may repay his country in a single hour the expense of his own support in all the piping years of peace. Three thousand years ago there was such an officer in the employ of the Syrian Empire. He was the incarnation of bonhomie, his very name signifying "good fellow." He was chief prop of the throne, and very rich. But there are four words which heavily discount the situation, "He was a leper.

A little slave girl acts well her part in this stirring scene. She might have felt herself excused by her sex and servitude, but she carried her religion with her into her new and forced environment. She was alert and intelligent. She knew her master's malady and the deadliness of it. Her memory was stored with all the miracles of mercy the prophet had been working in Samaria. She steadfastly and joyously believed her master could be included in the charmed circle of divine healing. She skillfully and at the earliest possible moment dropped the seed of hope in the heart where it would likely to take quickest and deepest root. She said to her mistress, "Would God my lord were with the prophet that is in Samaria, then he would recover him of his leprosy."

The king acted quickly on behalf of the commander-in-chief of his army. Self-interest, if not humanity, prompted him. Naaman was not yet incapacitated for soldierly duties, and for half a generation the king had successfully defied the whole power of the Assyrian Empire through his clear brain and brave heart. But King Benhadad did not rise to a true conception of the prophet's character or function. He seemed to think him a court magician like his own, subject to the order of a king. So the letter was addressed to Jehoram rather that to Elisha. Great treasures were also carried, as if a cure could be bought by them.

"Sinking times are praying times." When Jehoran was in adversity he resorted to the prophet gladly, but now that he was riding the crest of the wave, he had actually forgotten the very existence of the prophet. He thought he read between the lines of the king's letter a pretext for war. He was in abject horror and alarm, and gave the Oriental sign of it. Elisha humbled the king at the same time that he relieved his fears by his message, "Let him come to me, and he shall know that there is a prophet in Isreal." There was the dignity of conscious power.

Any one who imagines that Elisha was grumpy and surly toward Naaman misses the spirit of the incident. The leper brought his old heathen ideas with him to the prophet's very door. He had to be dispossessed of them. The prophet wanted not merely to cure him but to convert him. Naaman thought Elisha would come to him like a Syrian necromancer, take a ceremonious attitude, repeat some formula of incantation, and wave his hand in solemn gesture. Instead of this, the prophet gave a brand-new receipt for leprosy. All Naaman's money and show went for naught, for the meanest Syrian slave could have met the terms prescribed by the prophet. And that was the very lesson to be learned. The cure was to be without money or price, but by the power of Jehovah. So the man who had come with gifts and pomp, according to heathen ideas, to induce the prophet to work the cure by some subtle charm or necromancy, must be emptied of his crude notions and humbly submit to a ceremony which was patently inoperative of itself. He must accept his cleansing as a gift. He must express his faith in an act of obedience. Naaman's greatest victory was his victory over himself. His pride, his stubbornness, his heathen faith—he slew them all and buried them along with his leprosy incrustations, deep in the waters of Jordan.

The Teacher's Lantern.

"A mighty man—but." That "but" is the wolf-note" that destroys the harmony. The meanest Syrian scullion would not have exchanged cuticles with Naaman.

Private war, freebootery on land, piracy on sea is at an end forever. That is one mark of the progress of civilization. Such wars as that in which the tittle maid of Israel was taken are no longer tolerated.

This little girl did not mope over her hard lot. She showed a cheerful and helpful disposition. Her contribution was caught up and woven into the providence of the ages, which is to make God known to man.

Help often comes from unexpected quarters. It was not the first nor the last time when a word of wisdom was on the lip of a slave. And when misfortune is severe no advice is too contemptible.

Naaman's contemplated gift was probably not far short of $50,000, not including the ten changes of raiment, which were probably of finest texture shot with threads of gold and silver, and sewn with pearls and other gems. The reason Elisha refused these gifts was that he was unwilling to put himself on the plane of heathen magi. He would have Naaman know also that Jehovah only had helped him, and that his gifts and gratitude must go to Jehovah alone.

"Kasier's beard" came to be known as the term expressing a fictitious cause of war. A water bucket was once casus belli between two Italian cities. No wonder Jehoram thought Benhadad sought a quarrel with him.

No wonder Naaman admired the rivers of his country. Abana means golden-flowing, and is said to shine like an emerald in the morning and like a sapphire in the evening. It makes Damascus an oasis. Jordan, on the other hand, was a muddy stream, but the very inferiority of the stream was to show that the healing was not by the water at all.

It is to Naaman's everlasting honor that he returned to give thanks. He is brother to the Samaritan among the ten lepers of Jesus' time.

The incident is a parable of sin and salvation. Sin is a morbid condition of the moral nature and resultant upon an evil choice. It can only be corrected when the will is enlightned, strengthened, and disposed to make the good choice.

There can be no adequate and true sociology which ignores this condition. Some sociologists, like the king of Israel, have forgotten there is a Prophet, who is at the same time a Savior.

There is a current preference of the streams of education and culture to the river of salvation.

NOTICE.

Change in Business.

The firm of Jno. W. Haney & Sons having sold its milling business, plant and feed store at Friendsville, Md., to The Friendsville Milling Company, hereby gives notice that all persons knowing themselves indebted to the above named firm must call and make settlements of their accounts on or before Oct. 1st, 1904. All accounts remaining unsettled at that date will be placed in the hands of an officer for collection.

JOHN W. HANEY & SONS,
22-4t Friendsville, Md.

Notice to Trespassers.

All persons are hereby warned not to trespass upon my farm lying two miles south of Oakland between the West Union Road and the Sollars Road, for any purpose whatever. All persons so trespassing will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

30—3t. DICE SPIKER.

Delightful Weather at the World's Fair

Thousands are taking advantage of the delightful weather to visit the World's Fair at St. Louis, which is now at its best.

The excellent through vestibuled trains of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, with Drawing Room, Sleepers, and superb Dining Car Service, passing over the most picturesque route in America, makes the trip a pleasure rather than one to be dreaded. Broad vestibuled coaches with comfortable seats and sanitary ventilation are provided for the Cheap Coach Excursions which are run every Wednesday. 32-3t

Washing Machines.

We are agents for the WhiteLily which was put on the market some 18 months ago, and that stands today the largest manufacture of any one style of rotary Washing Machines in the world. This is a very broad statement when you take into consideration that they are practically a baby concern just 18 months old, but the Company claim that they can back up this statement with solid facts. At no time have they been able to supply the demand. The machine is sold on a guarantee to give satisfaction, and any child 10 years old can operate it. Send for circulars showing cuts, styles and price of the most wonderful Washer ever made, and makes wash day what it should be a pleasure instead of a drudge to the house-wife. Price $7.50. Wringers $1.50 to $3.50.

3t J. M. DAVIS & SON.

A Card From President Sine.

I have sold to Messrs. J. W. Smith and B. F. Shaffer, what was known as my branch school located at Cumberland, Md. The new owners will conduct the school hereafter under the name of "The Tri-State Business College." This change in the ownership of the Cumberland school will enable me to devote my whole time and attention to the further building of Parkersburg's famous school—the Mountain State Business College.

September 26, 1904.

4t ALBERT G. SINE, President.

BAUMGARTNER'S BIG BARGAINS!

5C SUGAR BOWLS, CREAM PITCHERS, THREE PAPERS PINS, ½ GAL. TIN BUCKETS, CAKE PLATES, AND LOTS MORE. 5C

Come around and see what 5 and 10c will do.

THE LITTLE MAN.

THE SECOND NATIONAL BANK of CUMBERLAND, MD

Designated United States Depository

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS. BOXES FREE TO CUSTOMERS.

This Bank Pays Three Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

Capital	$100,000
Surplus and Other Undivided Profits	250,000
Liability of Shareholders	100,000
Additional Security to Depositors	$450,000

LLOYD LOWNDES, President.
D. ANNAN, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Lloyd Lowndes, O. C. Gephart,
James Clark, L. M. Shepherd,
R. R. Henderson, J. Philip Roman,
M. L. Fesenmeyer.

L. E. HANSON,
Mountain Lake Park, - - Maryland
PLUMBING, GAS FITTING,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
ESTIMATES FURNISHED.
All work done at reasonable prices.

BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD
CHEAP EXCERSIONS
TO THE
St. Louis World's Fair
EVERY WEDNESDAY IN
AUGUST, SEPTEMBER and OCTOBER.
Only $14.50 Round Trip from OAKLAND.

Tickets will be good going in coaches only on Specified Trains.

Returning, tickets will be good in coaches only on all regular trains leaving St. Louis not later than ten days, including date of sale.

Call on Ticket Agent for time of train and full information.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

Safe. Always reliable. Ladies, ask Druggist for CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other. Refuse dangerous substitutions and imitations. Buy of your Druggist, or send 4c. in stamps for Particulars, Testimonials and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Sold by all Druggists.

CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO.
2100 Madison Square. PHILA., PA.
Mention this paper.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.
The "Nation's Highway" and "SHORTEST ROUTE" TO THE
WORLD'S FAIR,
ST. LOUIS.
Three THROUGH Trains DAILY
Vestibuled throughout with Pullman Sleeping Cars, Observation Cars and Dining Cars, VIA CINCINNATI.

SEASON, SIXTY-DAY and FIFTEEN DAY EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE AT VERY LOW RAES.

CHEAP COACH EXCURSIONS
From all Stations Announced From Time to Time.

Ask ticket agents for descriptive World's Fair folder, boarding-house and hotel booklet, guide maps and full information. tf.

ONLY $4.00 TO WASHINGTON AND RETURN,
ONLY $4.50 TO BALTIMORE AND RETURN,
Saturday, September 17, via BALTIMORE & OHIO RAILROAD,

Special train will leave Oakland at 12 night, affording an opportunity to spend all day Sunday among the attractions of either Capital or Monumental City. 2t

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

The Man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

COAL.

I am prepared to furnish and deliver to the citizens of Oakland, an excellent quality of

Bituminous Coal,

mined from my mine west of town.

Consumers are well pleased with the Heating Qualities of the product.

Orders left at the store of Thomas Little will be promptly filled.

E. Z. TOWER.

MAGIC REMEDY
Cures Diarrhoea, Cramps in the Stomach, Colera Morbus, Dysentary or Flux, in a few minutes. A positive cure. Keep a bottle handy: it will save many a doctor's bill, and possibly your life. At dealers, 25c; by Mail, 30c—in safety mailing case.
KEYSTONE COMP'Y BLAINE W. VA.

CANCER CURED
permanently, guaranteed without knife, X Ray Arsenic or Acids; no inconvenience. SOUTHERN CANCER SANATORIUM, 1820 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md. Write for book.

INDIGESTION

"I was troubled with stomach trouble. Thedford's Black-Draught did me more good in one week than all the doctor's medicine I took in a year."—MRS. SARAH E. SHIRFIELD, Ellettsville, Ind.

Thedford's Black Draught quickly invigorates the action of the stomach and cures even chronic cases of indigestion. If you will take a small dose of Thedford's Black Draught occasionally you will keep your stomach and liver in perfect condition.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

More sickness is caused by constipation than by any other disease. Thedford's Black-Draught not only relieves constipation but cures diarrhœa and dysentery and keeps the bowels regular.

All druggists sell 25-cent packages.

"Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine to regulate the bowels I have ever used."—MRS. A. M. GRANT, Sneads Ferry, N. C.

CONSTIPATION

In Hearts of Papier Mache

By TROY ALLISON

Copyright, 1901, by Troy Allison

The papier mache dog on top of the rosewood writing desk glared at the rabbit compounded of the same fiber and tried to growl.

"It's contrary to the laws of nature for you to perk yourself right under my nose that way," he complained.

The rabbit made an effort to flick one ear and disdained to answer.

"In real life you would take precious good care to keep out of my reach," the canine growl continued.

"Oh, I really don't know," the rabbit giggled; "you would be nothing more than a floppy, overgrown puppy. I don't know that it would take any great amount of ambling to keep out of your way." She held her one fore paw with the limp grace which she had often admired in her distant cousin, the kangaroo.

"I see you are a cripple also," she smirked, with a polite interest. "You have lost a portion of your hind leg. Our present propinquity is probably due to our discrepancies."

"I don't know how you make that out," he snorted, with masculine obtuseness.

"That's easy enough," she sniffed. "My right side is really the handsomest, but after the parlor maid broke off one of my fore paws she got to putting that side next to the wall. I observe that you are wounded on the left side, and that it is your left side that is turned toward the wall." She peered round him with her glass bead eye.

INSISTED UPON HER HEARING HIS EXPLANATION.

"There may be something in your theory," he admitted. "When we were sound in body we had our best sides to the world and our backs to each other. I never knew you existed even."

"What a benighted state of ignorance for your mind to be in! Do you belong to her?"

"Most assuredly I do," in his most pompous manner. "She has had me for months. She told him she never would part with me. I will never forget how pleased she was the night she drew me from the grab bag at the fair. It was the day after they became engaged. I really believed they were the happiest people I ever saw."

"Tell me all about it," she coaxed. "I delight in romances."

"Are you hers, too?" he questioned suspiciously.

"Oh, that's all right! It's perfectly proper to tell me," she assured him. "I belong to her also, so you see it would all be in the family. If you hadn't been sitting with your back toward me until you lamed your leg you would have known that she had only been engaged four months when she got me."

"You don't say! And I never knew it!" he exclaimed in surprise.

"She won me at a euchre party, the rabbit continued, taking a nibble at the highly painted papier mache carrot that the manufacturer had thoughtfully placed in her mouth. "I was the booby prize, you know."

"Yes, I'm sure I should have guessed it," permitting his masculine jealousy to render him ungracious.

"You needn't be so snappy," said the rabbit, taking another bite of carrot, and wondering if it would have tasted better painted with yellow ocher instead of Naples yellow.

"I'm surprised that she didn't win the first prize," he muttered in an abstracted way that she probably mistook for a query, for she answered readily.

"She might have if she hadn't been so much in love. Every time she happened to be at a table playing against him she would simply throw away tricks. I was sitting on the parlor mantel, and I distinctly saw the rest of the people wink at each other."

"Well, I suppose people will be foolish at times." He gave a condoning sigh.

"I had a lovely poem attached to me me when I was presented to her." The rabbit showed some symptoms of pride in the reminiscence. "My mind was never very retentive, but to the best of my memory it run something like this:

"Be quick I'ke the rabbit.
If you see a trick, grab it."

"How atrocious!" he sneered in disgust. "I'm glad I never tried to write poetry, but I'm sure I could have beaten that."

"Oh, I dare say yours would all be mere doggerel," she giggled.

He tried to swell with indignation and grieved that he was not made of rubber or of some substance that would lend itself to his mood.

"I suppose you don't know how their affair ended."

"Do tell me," she entreated. "The parlor maid arranged my head in such a position that I was never able to see anything except the ceiling."

"That's a trial," he conceded. "My head turns, too, but I was placed where I could see everything going on. I think she really places me here to guard the contents of her desk. My eyes are turned at the exact angle necessary to read every letter she writes or every one that she takes out to answer."

"Do go on and tell me what was the cause of trouble with the sweet dears," said the rabbit impatiently.

He chewed his real feather muzzle reflectively. "It was as sudden as a whirlwind," he finally narrated. "He wrote her a note telling her he couldn't keep an engagement to take her to the theater one night. She happened to be on the car the same night and saw him a few seats ahead of her with another girl. Gee! I never read such a scorching letter as the one she wrote him that night. She sat up till 1 o'clock to finish it. I just knew it was going to make trouble. I spent the whole night wishing I could get to it and chew it up, for it was a positive certainty that it would cause trouble."

"And well it might! Men were always perfidious creatures!" hissed the rabbit, winking an angry tear from one glass eye and a sympathetic shower from the other.

"Now, you hold on," the dog advised loftily. "Females always would jump at conclusions. Wait till you hear it all. I never saw any one so unhappy as she was. She positively wore the polish off this desk weeping on it."

"To think that her happiness should have been destroyed at one blow by such villainy." And the small rabbit mouth quivered so she could scarcely hold the carrot.

"Now, there you go again," he growled. "Just wait till I finish this story. After he had stayed away for weeks he came walking in one day and said in a very dignified manner that he insisted upon her hearing his explanation, because he didn't care for any one to consider him a dishonorable cad."

The rabbit's eyes bulged with excited interest, and she intimated with a breathless manner that she wished him to continue.

The dog enjoyed his auditor's suspense. "There was the simplest kind of solution to the affair. A cousin of his had passed through the city unexpectedly, and he had been obliged to take her across on the ferry to make connection with her train. I had confidence in him all along, and you ought to have seen her smile of rapture when she heard his explanation. She was standing right beside this desk, and in her nervousness her fingers fell upon me with a tight clutch. He saw how she felt, and he did just what any man would have done. He walked right over and took her in his arms. She forgot to put me down, so I got crushed against his breast. That's the way I lost my leg, but 'twas well worth it," he sighed. "That has been months ago."

"The poor, sweet dears!" the rabbit breathed sentimentally. "I'm so glad they lived happily ever afterward," and screwed her head over on his shoulder in satisfied comfort.

When the maid dusted the desk next morning she grinned with appreciation.

"They are the most unnatural cratures," she said, twisting their heads until they gazed into each other's eyes as if there had never in the world been a feud between dog and rabbit. Then she took them and started out of the room.

"She said her baby moight loike to play with them."

A Bit of Chalk.

Did you ever microscopically examine a tiny bit of powder scraped from a piece of common chalk? Not one person in ten thousand has the least idea of the number and curious forms of the minute shells that can thus be brought into plain view. The largest of these shells is not more than the one three-thousandths of an inch in length, yet they are as perfect as the pearly titans of the beach that are large enough to hold a half gallon of water and that when empty roar like a cyclone. Some are shaped like squids and cuttlefishes, others like "sand dollars" or sea urchins, but by far the larger majority will remind you of seashells that you have seen at one time or another. One very common form of these infinitesimal structures is shaped exactly like the common conch shell, but it has been estimated that at the least calculation it is 2,000,000 times smaller.

A careful examination of different samples of any one specimen of chalk will generally show that there are from 300 to 500 species of minute shells in every conceivable shape and form, the very minutest specks among them being as curiously and wondrously made as those of larger caliber.

A Warning.

"Be mine!" he cried in a voice surcharged with anguish. "If you refuse, I shall die!"

That was forty years ago, and the heartless girl refused him. Yesterday he died. Girls beware!

The Enterprising Tapir.

[A nonsense jingle of the jungle, where good English "isn't spoke."]

ONCE an enterprising tapir
Started out upon a caper
Through the jungle, jungle, jungle,
In the island of Ceylon,
And upon his joyous route he
Met a charming young agouti,
And he said unto the beauty,
"Shall we fare together on?"

Said the enterprising tapir:
"Life is fleeting like a vapor,
But 'twould brighten, lighten, brighten,
If I passed it at your side.
Oh, my charming young agouti,
You shall live on tutti frutti
If you'll only
Be the lonely
Tapir's bright and blooming bride!"

But the agouti "didn't see it;"
Said, "Not much she wouldn't be it,"
And she mocked him, shocked him, mocked him,
Till he felt inclined to faint.
And he raised an anguished clamor
At her woeful lack of grammar
When she said: "What! Marryin' tapirs?
Well, I rather guess I ain't!"

And his grief was so tremendous,
And his rage was so stupendous,
That he darted, started, darted,
Through the jungle with a yell.
And perhaps the Gongo got him,
And perhaps the Shongo shot him—
You cannot be Informed by me;
I promised not to tell!

—Laura E. Richards in St. Nicholas.

A Slaughter of Innocents.

Impulsive, small James, somewhat out of breath and with his blue eyes fairly bulging, rushed home after the temperance lecture and threw himself upon his mother.

"Oh, mother," he cried, "find a safe place, quick, and hide the baby!"

"Why, James," demanded astonished Mrs. Bell, "what in the world is the matter?"

"Hide her quick!" panted James. "That man that talked today is coming right after her. He boards next door, and just as soon as I heard him say, 'I intend to devote my life to eradicating the crying evil,' I knew he meant our baby."—St. Louis Republic.

Back Numbers.

Mildred's mother had been a widow and recently married again.

One day the little girl and her two little brothers were walking when they met a gentleman, and he spoke to Mildred:

"Whose children are you, little girl?"

Mildred answered in a tiny voice:

"Our mamma is Mrs. Bell, but our name is Porter. We were the little left overs."—Lippincott's Magazine.

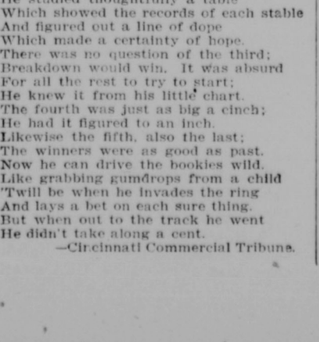
Interesting Him.

"Oh, yes," said the first girl, "he's a real Italian count. May Gidday had quite a talk with him."

"Did she? What did she find to talk about?"

"Oh, she was real nice to him; told him she was passionately fond of peanuts and bananas and all that."—Detroit Free Press.

Too Particular.



"Goin' to apply fer the job, Jimmie?"

"I did, but they don't want no boy; they wants an angel. Wouldn't take me 'cause I smokes cigarettes."—Boston Journal.

Like Their Elders.

Elsie—Let's play house. I'll be the lady.

Ethel—All right. I'll be another lady callin' on you.

Elsie—Oh, yes. Now I must pretend I'm glad to see you.—Philadelphia Press.

The Feminine Intelligence.

"Why don't you insist on being the head of the house?"

"I am the head of the house," answered Mr. Meekton resolutely. "But, as Henrietta says, a head is no good without brains."—Washington Star.

All Right!

Miss Rapidde (in dark hall)—O-o-o-h, mercy! Who is that?

Bob Gayleigh—Jack the Hugger.

Miss Rapidde—Oh, how you scared me! Come right in here, where we shan't be disturbed.—Town Topics.

Plain English.

"When you say that a thing is 'well enough as it is' what do you mean, father?"

"That you think it ought to be improved at once, but that you're too lazy to fix it."—Brooklyn Life.

The Wise Bettor.

The foxy man the card surveyed
To see what horses should be played.
He picked the first and then the second
And knew for sure when fortune beckoned.
He studied thoughtfully a table
Which showed the records of each stable
And figured out a line of dope
Which made a certainty of hope.
There was no question of the third;
Breakdown would win. It was absurd
For all the rest to try to start;
He knew it from his little chart.
The fourth was just as big a cinch;
He had it figured to an inch.
Likewise the fifth, also the last;
The winners were as good as past.
Now he can drive the bookies wild.
Like grabbing gumdrops from a child
'Twill be when he invades the ring
And lays a bet on each sure thing.
But when out to the track he went
He didn't take along a cent.

—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Judge Lynch's Court.

The Justice Dispenses of Many Cases in the Usual Lightning Order.

"THIS court now holds open for business," said Judge Lynch as he rapped for order and motioned for the constable to run two Chinamen out of doors. "It is my painful dooty to announce that I hev bin thrown down and trodden into the airth. The supreme court of this territory has seen fit to meddle with my way of servin' out justice, and if a state of anarchy reigns in this district fur the next year I can't be held to blame for it.

"Some four weeks since Jim Warsaw, who never saw no war and whose reputation fur stackin' a poker deck is known to all, comes to me cryin' out fur justice. With tears in his eyes he told me that Hop Lee, the Chinyman, had knocked him senseless with a club and then robbed him.

A FIGHT WAS THE CONSEQUENCE.

"I put it to him straight, and he never winked an eye. It was my dooty to issue a warrant and cause the arrest of Hop Lee, and the same was done. It was when I questioned Hop that the truth began to bulge up like wind in a bladder.

"What was the facts in the case?

"Jim Warsaw had scraped $2 together and gone up to the washhouse to play poker. He had four aces in the deck and two up his sleeve, and he meant to skin that heathen alive. He sot down to do it, and he did his level best, but Hop Lee wiped up the airth with his remains. In other words, Jim Warsaw was down to his boots when he left that washhouse, and the only way he could get revenge was to come to me and holler fur justice.

"When I found out how the case stood I discharged Hop from custody and sent Jim to jail fur a year fur tryin' to play horse with the majesty of the law. He hired a shyster lawyer to appeal his case, and notice has come to me that my decision has been reversed.

"In other words, the supreme court, which don't know Jim Warsaw from a handsaw, which wasn't here on the ground to know how he meant to use those six aces, which don't know that he can look a feller plumb in the eyes and lie like a spring freshet, has ordered that I give him a new trial and take into account the fact that he has never killed anybody in the past.

"That's the order, but this court ain't goin' to knuckle to it. This court was elected by the people to dispense jestice and is goin' to do so if the heavens fall. It is satisfied that Jim Warsaw is a liar and that he put up a job on Hop Lee, who ain't to blame that he was born with squint eyes and in a foreign land.

"What this court will do is to turn Jim loose, and the same is done right here and now. As fur the new trial, he won't git it. And, hevin' bin turned loose, this court wishes to say to him, both as a court and the owner of the Red Dog saloon, that if he ain't out of Sandy Bend within two hours he'll meet up with sunthin' wuss nor a stacked hand.

"There's one more case on the docket. It's between Lung Sing and Lee Long, the two Chinymen with a claim on Black Hoss hill. As nigh as I kin make out, each one has bin watchin' fur a chance fur the last month to steal the partnership funds from the other. Both of them got arter the bag of dust at the same time the other night, and a fight was the consequence.

"Both come to me fur jestice, and both are here in court. It's an easy case to dispose of. One is as bad as the other, and I don't believe either one. It's heathen versus heathen, and I fine each of 'em $5 and advise 'em to go out of partnership and work separate claims. I've nuthin' agin a Chinyman, and the law is as much fur him as fur the white man, but I want him to know that he can't use it to brush flies off his tent.

"It is perhaps needless to add that this afternoon a crowd is comin' over from Hunter's Gulch fur a horse race, and that I own the horse that is to run agin the Gulch animal. As a court I'm lookin' fur a fair race and the best horse to win. As an individual I'm expectin' all of you to bet your spondulics on my nag and encourage me to newer and higher ambitions.

"This court now stands adjourned, and may jestice hover over and purtect us all till we hev another case on trial." M. QUAD.

So Blissful.

"They say," remarked the observant man, "that the darkest hour is just before the dawn, and"—

"Gee whiz!" exclaimed Laziman. "That's my brightest and happiest hour. I'm invariably asleep then."—Philadelphia Press.

The Mountain State BUSINESS COLLEGE

Gives a training that turns [illegible] talent into a money making [illegible] Does it quickly, thoroughly, [illegible] Full and complete courses in BOOK-KEEPING, PENMANSHIP, [illegible] RAPHY, SHORTHAND and [illegible] WRITING. $110 pays tuition, [illegible] and room-rent for five months. Skilled teachers. Large attendance. Healthful study [illegible] and recitation rooms. Modern and convenient furniture. The M. S. B. C. has a National reputation and its graduates are sought after by business men everywhere. Now is an [illegible] time to begin a course. No vacation. Individual instruction. Our new Art Catalogue can be had for the asking. Address, A. G. SINE, President, PARKERSBURG, WEST VA.

The Boy Makes the Mule Go,
And the Mule Makes the Cart Go.

WITH OUR NEW PROCESS

We Make the Bread Go!

Because It Is Best.

A Trial Will Convince You.

OAKLAND MODEL STEAM BAKERY,
HENRY LAUER, Proprietor.

Carey's Magnesia Flexible Cement Roofing for Flat or Steep Surfaces

Is suitable for all classes of buildings as it affords thorough fire protection and is a non-conductor of heat and cold. It will last the lifetime of the roof-boards. It is fire-proof and is rated the same as metal or slate roofs. Call or write for samples and prices.

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.,
Agents for Garrett County, Oakland, Md.

First National Bank
OF GRANTSVILLE, MD
Now Open for Business.
EQUIPPED WITH A
Modern Fire and Burglar Proof Safe and Vault.

Offers to its patrons every advantage consistent with sound banking.

Deposits by mail and all correspondence given prompt attention.

We Solicit Your Account.

Paid-up Capital, - - $25,000
Liability of Stockholders, 25,000
Total Liability, - $50,000

PAYS 3 PER CENT.
on time deposits. Interest computed and paid semi-annually.

DIRECTORS.
C. H. JENNINGS,
U. M. STANTON,
G. C. KELLER,
ELI STANTON,
W. A. HITCHINS,
J. S. HERSHBERGER,
FRANK WATTS

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - President.
U. M. STANTON, Vice-President.
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier.

The Up-to-Date Grocery,
First National Bank Building, Oakland, Md.
Exclusively a Grocery Store.
CASH OR PRODUSE—One price to everybody and that the lowest consistent with a complete line of High-Grade Groceries.
Everything New, Clean and First-Class.
Fresh Vegetables on THURSDAYS and SATURDAYS.
Largest Line of CRACKERS in Oakland—Fresh Every Week.
W. H. BARTLETT.

THOS. LITTLE.
This is the season of year to make changes, and I will make a GREAT REDUCTION in the prices of China and Porcelain Ware.
I have a large stock of this goods and they must go at the remarkably low price of 10c each. Many of these pieces are cheap at 25c. But I have concluded to sell all at the low price of 10c each.
They consist of Decorated, Gold Trimmed Meat Plates, large and small, Bakers, Nappies, Pitchers, Bowls, Cups and Saucers, large and small plates, just the thing for every day use.
Also a Fine Line of Imported China at Less than Cost.
Come Early and get the Choice Pieces.
HO LITTLE

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Editor and Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

THE REPUBLICAN is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year	$ 1.25
One copy six months	.75
One copy three months	.40
One copy one month	.15
Single copies	.05

ADVERTISING RATES.

First insertion for square of ten nonpareil lines, $1; each additional insertion after first, 50 cents per square of ten nonpareil lines.

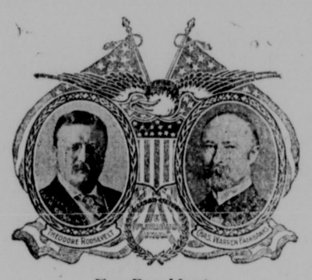
REMITTANCES:

Remittances made by money order, bank draft, registered letter or express order will be at our risk; if made otherwise, at the risk of the sender. Address,

THE REPUBLICAN.
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, OCT. 20, 1904.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.



For President:

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,

New York.

For Vice-President:

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS,

Indiana.

For Congress:

GEORGE A. PEARRE,

Allegany County.

GARFIELD'S APPEAL TO YOUNG MEN

(Extract from the speech of Hon. James A. Garfield, delivered at Cleveland, O, October 11, 1876.)

Now, fellow citizens, a word before I leave you on the very eve of the holy day of God—a fit moment to consecrate ourselves finally to the great work of next Tuesday morning. I see in this great audience to-night a great many young men, young men who are about to cast their first vote. I want to give you a word of suggestion and advice. I heard a very brilliant thing said by a boy the other day up in one of the northwestern counties. He said to me: "General, I have a great mind to vote the Democratic ticket. That was not the brilliant thing. I said to him: "Why?" "Why," said he "my father is a Republican and my brothers are Republicans, and I am a Republican all over, but I want to be an independent man, and, I don't want anybody to say: 'Thas fellow votes the Republican ticket just because his dad does,' and I have half a mind to vote the Democratic ticket just to prove my independence. I did not like the thing the boy suggested, but I did admire the spirit of the boy that wanted to have some independence of his own.

Now I tell you, young man, don't vote the Republican ticket just because your father votes it. Don't vote the Democratic ticket, even if he does vote it. But let me give you this one word of advice, as you are about to pitch your tent in one of the great political camps. Your life is full and buoyant with hope now, and I beg you, when you pitch your tent, pitch it among the living and not among the dead. If you are at all inclined to pitch it among the Democratic people and with that party, let me go with you for a moment while we survey the ground where I hope you will not shortly lie. It is a sad place, young man, for you to put your young life into. It is to me far more like a graveyard than like a camp for the living.

Oh, young man, come out of that! That is no place in which to put your young life. Come out, and come over into this camp of liberty, of law, of order, of justice, of freedom, of all that is glorious under these night stars.

Is there any death here in our camp? Yes! Yes! Three hundred and fifty thousand soldiers, the noblest band that ever trod the earth, died to make this camp a camp of glory and of liberty forever.

But there are no dead issues here. There are no dead ideas here. Hang out our banner from under the blue sky this night until it shall sweep the green turf from under your feet! It hangs over our camp. Read away up under the stars the inscription we have written on it, lo! these twenty-five years. * * *

Come down the glorious steps of our banner. Every great record we have made we have vindicated with our blood and with our truth. It sweeps the ground and it touches the stars. Come there, young man, and put in your life where all is living, and where nothing is dead but the heroes that defended it.

THE GARRETT COUNTY JAIL.

The above is a true picture of the Garrett county jail located in Oakland. That portion of the building shown under the gable is used by the sheriff and his family as their residence. The jail proper extends back and includes both stories, being lighted by the three windows shown on each of the two floors. The lower flower contains the cages, four in number, and measures twenty-four feet wide by thirty-five feet long. The flocr space, exclusive of the cages, measures less than seven hundred square feet. At times within the past year there have been as high as thirty-three prisoners confined within this ill-smelling, disease breeding and wholly inadequate structure. The cages accommodate eight prisoners with a very slight degree of comfort. After these have been filled the overflow of prisoners are compelled to sleep on the floor of the jail or clamber to the top of the cells where they breath foul air and become contaminated with disease breeding germs.

Of this structure the September Term Grand Jury said—

"We have visited the public buildings, * * * the offices provided are too small and are not provided with the conveniences and comforts becoming the dignity of our county. We have reason to be proud of our officers, but our public buildings are a reproach to a civilized and progressive people, and the proper officers should take immediate steps to provide a new court house and jail.

"We found the jail in as good order and as clean as is possible for the Sheriff to keep it under present conditions. The building, however, is lacking both in providing for the security of prisoners and in regard to its sanitary arrangements, and is entitely inadequate in size for the growing requirements of our county and for the numbers who have been confined within it. We found that while the jail was fitted to accommodate eight persons, there had at times within the past six months been as many as thirty-three persons confined therein, with an average of twenty persons. It is not only those who are held under criminal charges that are thus made to suffer, but many innocent witnesses who are unable to give bond for their appearance at court. In case of an epidemic under present conditions the county might be held to heavy damages in case of death of any of the inmates.

"We recommend that the confining of persons in our jail be discontinued and that arrangements be made with another county having adequate jail facilities to care for prisoners convicted by our courts."

The matter lies with the voters whether or not Garrett county shall have modern public buildings commensurate with her progress or whether she shall remain behind in the march.

To provide the little comforts for the less fortunate of our citizens who become involved in trouble and consequently sent to jail, is a moral obligation and should be looked upon as such by every voter and taxpayer.

Oakland's New Store.

The people of Garrett county will be glad to learn that a thoroughly up-to-date Clothing Store will be opened in the Opera House Block, Oakland, with a fine stock of

Men's, Youths' and Children's Clothing,

AT VERY LOW PRICES.

Our aim is to supply the Garrett county public with very good clothing for less money than they have ever paid; that is, we are going to combine Good Goods with Low Prices.

We wish to earn your confidence and in order to show that we mean what we say, we hereby publicly offer to return money to any purchaser who is not entirely satisfied.

Here are only a few of the bargains we have to offer:

MEN'S SUITS.

The best selections and up-to-date patterns in Cassimeres, Worsteds, Thibets, Cheviots and other styles.

A good, every day suit for		$ 3.98
A regular	$ 8.00 mixed suit	5.50
A regular	8.50 hair-line suit	6.00
A regular	9.00 Cassimere suit	6.50
A regular	10.50 fine, black Thibet suit	7.00
A regular	11.50 fine, blue Thibet suit	7.50
A regular	12.50 fine, black Clay suit	8.25
A regular	14.75 fine, blue Clay suit	9.50
A regular	20.00 custom tailored suit	12.00

YOUNG MEN'S SUITS.

These suits are all merchant-tailored and warranted to fit.

They come in Thibets, Scotch Cheviots and others to select from. You have to see them to appreciate their quality.

A regular	$ 6.00 suit	$4.50
A regular	7.50 suit	5.25
A regular	8.50 suit	6.50
A regular	10.00 suit	7.50
A regular	12.00 suit	9.25

Opening Day, Saturday, October 22nd, 1904.

COHEN'S,

Opera House Block, - - Oakland.

[Watch our advertisements every week.]

"ALL I ask is a square deal for every man. Give him a fair chance. Do not let him wrong any one, and do not let him be wronged."—President Roosevelt at Grand Canyon, Arizona, May 6, 1903.

DEMOCRACY AGAIN INSANE.

The reorganized Democracy has become disorganized and the old "insane and unsafe" Democracy is again in the ascendency. At St. Louis Mr. Bryan was deposed and the old leaders of the bolt against him in 1896 took control of the party machinery. David B. Hill took command of the Democratic party declaring it again "safe and sane." There was high hope in the ranks of the gold wing of the party but these were doomed to disappointment. The leven of sanity was not large enough nor strong enough to change the whole party.

The Bryan Democracy would not follow the new leadership. So long as Mr. Bryan was ignored those who had loyally followed him in two national campaigns refused to take any interest in the campaign. Judge Parker has seen the hand-writing on the wall, and he has quietly passed over his gold telegram and devoted his time and energy to pacifying the followers of Mr. Bryan. He has practically surrendered to Bryan and his followers. Chairman Taggart has been practically deposed and former Chairman Jones and former secretary Walsh have been invited to take hold and share in the direction of the Democratic campaign.

Judge Parker and his intimates have become as great extremists as ever was Bryan. Their campaign has descended to the old howl against safe and sane government. They have become revolutionists. Bryan has consented to take the stump because he finds that Parker is as insane as himself. He is making the same kind of speeches that he did in 1896 and 1900. He can do so with perfect consistency. The Democratic party has not changed. It is the same old Bryan Democracy.

The conservative Democrats won a victory at St. Louis but their candidate has surrendered all that they gained. They begin to realize that there is no conservative Democratic party. The conservative men who have called themselves Democrats have not been able to vote the Democratic tickets for years. The objection in 1896 and 1900 was not Bryan but the heresy of the party that followed Bryan. The same objection exists today with Judge Parker as the candidate. He may be sane and safe but the party is not. It has not changed. It cannot change any more than the leopard can change his spots.

The majority controls. It will continue to control. It will control in the Congress, and if the Democratic party has control of the House the majority of that party from the South, the home of heresies in government, will dominate legislation. Bryan is the idol of the majority of Democrats because he is a revolutionist. It is the Democratic party more than Mr. Bryan that is to be feared in Government control, and that party is more dangerous to conservative government in control of legislation than in the executive.

"MEN may say he is not safe. He is not safe for the man who wishes to prosecute selfish schemes to public detriment."—Hon. Elihu Root, at New York, Feb. 3, 1904.

WHO IS THE SOLDIERS FRIEND.

No feature of the campaign is likely to attract more attention for the next few weeks than the proposition of Judge Parker to revoke the recent Pension Order of President Roosevelt, if he is elected. It will attract attention because the people of this country are interested in the Union veterans of the Civil War. There are not so many of them left, now, but those who remain and those who have gone have plenty of friends.

It is more than a sentiment, this regard for the veterans; it is almost a religion. The young man who will vote for the first time this year, on whichever ticket, although he may not have had a relative in the army, knows what that Army did for this country and is profoundly grateful. If he had a relative in the service he is materially as well as sentimentally interested in the broken fragment of the noble organization.

These men and all men see the old veterans around them every day they see them growing feebler every year, some of them poorer every year, yet always brave and cheerful and never for a moment regretting the part they played in the tremendous struggle. Such a spectacle is bound to inspire sentiments of affection and gratitude for these old soldiers in the hearts of all who reside in their community.

Judge Parker declares in his letter of acceptance that if he is elected he will revoke Roosevelt's Order which made it easier for the aged veterans. He adds that he will ask Congress to pass a law to carry out what the President, acting within the law and safe guarded by precedent already has effected. In the same letter he asks that a Democratic House of Representatives be elected.

The Union veterans of this country will be very foolish to give their assent to such a program, and the hundred thousands of voters who love and respect these old soldiers will be wickedly foolish if they by their ballots assent to it.

The whole country knows what a Democratic Congress would do for the old soldier; the record of past Democratic Congresses is too plain. The country remembers Cleveland, and his vetoes of the pension bills and does not overlook the fact that wherever a Democrat has been in power, either in executive or legislative branch of the government, he has not been generous with the soldier.

On the statue books there are 14 general acts relating to the Union veterans. The votes on those bills in Congress totaled as follows:—

Democrats for the bills, 417.
Democrats against the bills, 648.
Republicans for the bills, 1,998.
Republicans against the bills, 0.

That's the record. Will you turn the old soldiers' interests over to a Democratic President and Democratic House?

MAINTAIN THE OLD POLICIES

There are indications in some quarters that the voters are manifesting a lack of active interest in the coming Congressional campaign on the ground that no pronounced issues are presented this year. Never was there a more mistaken idea, if such an impression prevails. The issues are pronounced, definite and exceedingly important. They are important not alone to the politician but concern still more vitally the business man, the professional man, the farmer and the laborer.

It is essential that a Republican House should be elected this fall and the issues upon which that election is asked are very clearly set forth by the Republican platform and thrown into relief by the silence of the Democratic platform upon some of them and its vagueness, weakness and deception upon others. After the Democratic tariff law known as the Wilson Bill had wrought havoc to the industries of the country it was not difficult for the people to percieve the issue; it was to put the country back under the protective tariff system and that could only be accomplished through the instrumentality of a Republican Congress. At the next election the voters put a Republican Congress in power and the desired legislation was forthcoming. It is necessary that the tariff legislation thus enacted and which has proven a material boon to the country should be sustained. That only can be definitely assured by the election of a Republican House.

HISTORY shows that disaster has always followed in this country the enactment of a tariff which failed to furnish adequate protection. Such a tariff has neither furnished protection to our industries nor raised sufficient revenue for the Government.

THE CAUSE OF IT.

It is matter of common remark that this presidential campaign is one of the quietest ever known. There is absolutely no excitement, and people are discussing politics with even less feeling than is ordinarily observed in off-years

The reason for this is found in the unusual conditions now existing. The people are satisfied with the administration of President Rooseyelt, who has faithfully carried out the pledges of President McKinley. All Republicans and not a few Democrats want Roosevelt re-elected; and the belief is well settled in the popular mind that there is to be no change.

It is a case of letting well enough alone. Business is resuming its healthy flow, and wants no unsetting change of policies and parties at this time.

Besides, Democrats feel that as their position of four and eight years ago has been surrendered and they are asked by the reorganizers to accept the Republican doctrine, there is nothing for them to get agitated over.

This is not therefore a campaign of education. The situation is accepted, and will be continued. But it is not to be inferred that because there is no excitement there is no interest. People are interested and are going to vote.

Especially the Republican people.

UNDER the protective system our workingmen need not all be farmers or all anything else, but may be profitably engaged in all the business pursuits and industries known to man. They could not be so engaged under free trade.

ROOSEVELT SAYINGS

After the farmers has had the farm for his life he should be able to hand it to his children as a better farm than it was when he had it.

We must treat each man on his worth and merits as a man. We must see that each is given a square deal, because he is entitled to no more and should receive no less.

Where we permit this law to be defied or evaded, whether by rich man or poor man, by black man or white man, we are by just so much weakening the bonds of our civilization and increasing the chances of its overthrow.

In the employment and dismissal of men in the Government service I can no more recognize the fact that a man does or does not belong to a union as being for or against him than I can recognize the fact that he is a Protestant or a Catholic, a Jew or a Gentile, as being for or against him.

The good citizen is the man who whatever his wealth or his poverty, strives manfully to do his duty to himself, to his family, to his neighbor, to the State; who is incapable of the baseness which manifes itself either in arrogance or in envy, but who while demanding justice for himself is no less scrupulous to do justice to others.

THE Republican party has always stood for adequate protection to the industrial interests of the entire country. It stands for a policy that is national, not sectional in its scope and operation.

IN THE second Cleveland administration the farmers could not sell their products because the idle wage-worker had no money to buy. The savings bank deposits were $1,748,000,000 in 1894 but now are $3,900,000,000. The savings bank deposits in New York State increased $55,000,000 from June 30, 1903, to June 30, 1904. There are more savings bank deposits in New York and New England than there were in the whole country in 1894. If protection is "a robbery," as the Democratic platform says, the goods are found on the people.

PARKER had a little lamb, he called it Mary Jane; it did not talk and had no views, hence it is safe and sane.

The Garrett National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

Pays 3 Per Cent. Interest on Time Deposits.

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice-President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
DANIEL E. OFFUTT,
GILMOR S. HAMILL,
JOHN M. DAVIS,
GEORGE W. LEGGE,
JOHN T. MITCHELL,
WILLIAM R. STULL,
SCOTT T. JONES.

Capital paid in, - $50,000.00
Surplus and Profits, - 20,000.00

A MATTER OF HEALTH

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure

HAS NO SUBSTITUTE

LOCAL AND OTHERWISE

Incidents and Events at Home and Nearby—Personal Mention, Etc.

Postmaster William W. Sweet, of Swanton, was here yesterday.

Dr. J. Gilbert Selby, of Eglon, was a business visitor to Oakland Tuesday.

Miss AnnieGrant has returned from a two weeks' visit to the St. Louis Exposition.

Mr. J. Alvin Friend, of Sang Run, one of the election officials of his district, was a caller at this office yesterday.

County Treasurer E. A. Weimer and County Commissioners' Clerk A. G. Ross left Saturday night for a visit to St. Louis.

Superintendent Thomas S. Long of the Park, left last night for a brief visit to points in New York State and elsewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius C. Renninger left Oakland Sunday morning for St. Louis where they will remain two weeks or more visiting the Fair.

Deacon Jones, Will Grant and Bowie Johnson arrived home last Friday from St. Louis where they spent ten days seeing the Exposition.

Major J. M. Burns of Morgantown, West Va., came over to Oakland yesterday and went down to Mountain Lake Park where he spent the day on business.

Mrs. J. Ed. Kildow and daughter Edna, of Elkins, West Va., arrived here Tuesday morning and will remain a few days as the guests of relatives and friends.

Mr. Samuel E. Boyer, of Fairmont, West Va., is in Oakland this week on business connected with the estate of his deceased father, Jacob Boyer, recently of Accident.

Hon. Arnold C. Scherr, State Auditor of West Virginia, spent Saturday night in Oakland, leaving here Sunday morning for Terra Alta and other points in his native state.

Capt. R. H. Gordon, of Cumberland, came up to Oakland last night and will remain here a day or two on business and in the hope that he will be benefitted by the mountain air.

The many friends of Mr. Elwood Offutt are pleased to see him out again after a threatened attack of appendicitis which housed him up several days during the past week.

Mrs. E. Manges, wife of Rev. Manges, who has been on an extended visit to relatives and friends at York and other points in Pennsylvania, arrived home Tuesday afternoon.

Attorneys E. L. Mitchell, E. H. Sincell and N. S. Heindel went to Grantsville Tuesday where they will be engaged several days making a preliminarp survey of some land in litigation.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Williams, of Philadelphia, who summered at West Chester, Pa., instead of Deer Park, as has been their custom for many years, returned to their Philadelphia home last week.

Miss Elsie Fay, of Washington, D. C., who was at St. Louis a few weeks, stopped off in Oakland on her return home and visited her sister, Mrs. Jerry O. Browning, from Saturday until Tuesday morning.

Among those who registered at the Maryland Building' World's Fair, St. Louis, Saturday, were Mrs. M. A. Yost, Bowie Johnson, John H. Rafter, B. T. Bray, Chas. E. Hilleary, Isaac I. Thompson and Henry M. Casteel, all being Garrett countains.

Dr. J. H. Hathaway, of Toronto, Canada, is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Ward at their residence on Green street. During the winter Dr. Hathaway will be engaged in this section of the country in evangelistic work where he is well known for his abilities as a pulpit orator and singer.

Mr. John E. Gnagey, of Accident, who spent several week in Oklahoma and other Southwestern States, returned to his home last Friday afternoon. Mr. Gnagey was very much impressed with the country which he visited and had a very enjoyable time.

Rev. Dr. Scott went up to Terra Alta Sunday morning and preached there twice during the day and evening. He removed his household goods to the above place this week. Rev. J. B. Workman, who was appointed to take the place of Dr. Scott as minister here, arrived in Oakland with his family Tuesday.

This paper is in receipt of a note from "Cheap John" Miehaels, who is living at York, Pa., in which he states that he is now living at his home, West Princess street. He is enthusiastic over the outlook for the election of Roosevelt and Fairbanks, saying that Pennsylvania will give a majority of 300,000.

The scholars of the Oakland High School received yesterday from the publishers a number of copies of Gibson's song books. These books are replete with songs and music specially written for schools and colleges. The books were purchased with funds raised for the purpose by the students.

Mr. and Mrs. William Heywood, who have for some years been summer residents of Oakland when they occupied the Judge Jeremiah Wilson place, arrived here Tuesday morning from Honolulu, H. I., where they spent the past summer, on their way to Washington, D. C., their winter home.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the Cohen clothing store, which will be opened for business in the Bolden & Brown building on Second street next Saturday, the 22nd inst. The proprietors of this new store come from Somerset, Pa., where they are engaged in the same line of business, having a large department store.

The public schools of Oakland are progressing as well as can be expected owing to the crowded condition now existing. The several departments are so full of pupils that the teachers cannot do them justice. There is a crying need for two more rooms and two additional instructors but owing to the lack of funds the Board of School Commissioners are helpless to remedy affairs.

Last Saturday two valuable pieces of real estate were sold at mortgagee's sale in front of the court house in Oakland. One was a town property, house and lot owned by Mrs. Louisa Chambers, and was sold to Merchant Thomas Little for $1790 cash. The second sale was that of the Isaac W. Thompson farm in District No. 8, which brought $3400, being sold to a daughter of Mr. Isaac I. Thompson.

Our well-known machinist and builder of gasoline engines, M. D. Miller, left on Monday evening on his automobile for Somerfield, Grantsville and other points to set up several of his engines, which were sold in the past few weeks. There is a great demand for these engines, and Mr. Miller informed us that the beginning of the week he had sold out his entire stock.—Meyersdale Republican.

WANTED—Special Representatives in this county and adjoining territories, to represent and advertise an old established business house of solid financial standing. Salary $21 weekly, with expenses advanced each Monday by check direct from headquarters. Horse and buggy furnished when necessary; position permanent. Address Blew Bros. & Co., Dept. A. Monon Bldg., Chicago, Ill. 6t

COUNTY GRANGE MEETING.

A Session will Be Held In Oakland on Saturday, October 29th.

The Garrett County Grange will hold a meeting in Naylor's Hall, Oakland, on Saturday, October 29th, at which all members are urgently requested to be present.

The executive committee of the Grange will meet at the hall at 10 o'clock a. m., followed immediately afterward by the session of the Grange.

An open-door meeting will be conducted at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at which all persons interested are invited to be present. Music and speaking suitable to the occasion and discussion of live agricultural subjects will be participated in.

G. E. BISHOFF,
County Lecturer.

"Third Battle" of Bull Run.

The Bull Run correspondent of the Kingwood, (W. Va.) Argus writes:

"There is quite a serious state of affairs existing near Rohr. The two wife-beaters have broken loose again and I kindly ask you to let the people who read your paper know just what kind of people they are. I will give you the facts as briefly as I can and you can word the article to suit your own ideas. Noah Cress, a blacksmith living at Rohr, accused his wife of becoming too familliar with the men, and the consequences are she has a black eye.

"His father, Oscar Cress, living a mile east of Rohr, also gave his wife a whipping last week. The wife in this case defend d herself with a fire shovel. The wife had her husband arrested and taken before Squire Scott. He gave bond in the sum of $500 for his good behaviour with his wife as security. The old lady is still away from home and vows that she will never return."

The Oakland Evening Business College

By solicitation of a number of leading business men of Oakland the undersigned announces that he will open an evening business college in a suitable room in Oakland on Monday evening, Oct. 24th, to continue throughout the winter months. The class will be limited to twenty pupils and will be conducted three evenings each week from 7:30 until 9:30 o'clock, and will be open to both males and females. The branches to be taught will include bookkeeping writing, mathematics and orthography. As the class will be limited immediate application should be made for enrollment. The terms will be moderate and be made known upon application to

J. FRANK MCBEE, A. M.,
32-2t. Principal.

Stoves

We have a stock on hand of more than one hundred stoves of all kinds, sizes and prices, running from a $10.00 Cook Stove to a $40.00 Steel Range, and Heating Stoves from $5.00 to $20. The above has been selected with the greatest care, not only in regard to price, but to the requirements needed for the trade in this part of our country. Stoves are manufactured for the section of the country that they are sold in, and according to the kind of fuel used, and prices are made by the manufacturer according to quality, style and finish. The stove business is a trade to itself and it requires years of experience to know when you have the best goods that can be bought for the money, and best suited to the trade you are selling. If you contemplate buying a stove of any kind, call and look our line over before buying, we think we can please any and all, both in regard to price and kind.

I M. DAVIS & SON.

Bargains at Hustling Store.

The Hustling Store Company, Mt. Lake Park, has the knife merrily at work in all classes of its stock of merchandise. This paring of prices will go own until all the old goods have been disposed of. At the two auctions conducted at this store and since the auctions have closed it would seem to judge by the crowds of people present, that some extraordinary bargains were secured. All remaining goods will be disposed of for what they will bring. Come and get bargains! 2t

Alleghany Conference.

The Alleghany Conference of the Maryland Synod will meet in St. John's Lutheran church, South Cumberland, Rev. Dr. Mann, pastor, on Wednesday evening, October 26th. The Maryland Synod of the Lutheran church will meet in Martinsburg, W. Va., on the 27th.

Died.

KEIPER—Anna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keiper, of near Crellin, died on October 14th, 1904, aged 15 years, 1 month and 7 days, and on the 15th inst. another daughter, Mabel, aged 11 years, 1 month and 3 days, died. The funeral of both daughters was conducted Sunday afternoon at two o'clock by Rev. E. Manges, of Oakland, at the Red House church.

Lutheran Church Services.

Services at St. Mark's Lutheran ch. next Sabbath as follows: Preaching at 7:30 p. m.

In the Lutheran church at Deer Park next Sabbath at 11 a. m.

"Every Friday" Club.

The pleasant "Every Fridays" which are held at Hotel Oakland each week, are increasing in interest and popularity, which is not surprising to those who have once enjoyed the charming hospitality of the affable host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Bore.

Among the guests present on last Friday evening were Mr. Chas. Tower and wife, Messrs. D. E. Offutt Jr., H. A. Rasche, Carl White, Will Browning, Ernest Harne, Walter Morrison, Carroll Elliott, Draper Vaughn, Leslie King, the Misses Glenn, Wonn and Josie Robinson, Mollie and Flo White, Bess Offutt, Rose Kenny, Bessie Hinebaugh, Edith and Leah Bolden, Alice Maroney, Rose and Fannie Browning.

Refreshments were served in the splendid hotel dining room at 11.30 o'clock which was in the nature of a most pleasant surprise to the delighted guests.

On this coming Friday evening a full orchestra will be present and shall also furnish the music for each Friday dance during the remainder of the season.

First Show of the Season.

On Saturday night, the 22nd inst., the first show for the season will be given at the opera house when Johnson's Ladies' Band and Minstrel Show will render a highly pleasing vocal and instrumental musical program. A feature of the concert will be two of the smallest musicians in America, aged three and four years respectively, who are marvels of musical talent and carry their parts through difficult band music with accuracy. The concert is clean and wholesome throughout to which ladies are especially invited. Tickets on sale at the usual places.

Sewing Machines.

Two years ago we commenced selling the New Royal Sewing Machine, contracting direct with the manufacturer, and have the first one yet to find any fault with one of these machines. They are all guaranteed for 5 years, made with the latest and most improved attachments, and in style and finish cannot be excelled. We are offering these machines from $13.50 to $25.00 according to style and finish. If in need of a machine and you look into the merits of the New Royal, we are sure you cannot help but be pleased. And when you want needles or any little repairs, you can easily obtain them for you have a Standard Machine that is not put out under any fictitious name by catalogue houses or department stores. J. M. DAVIS & SON. 3t

Died.

REAMS—At her home on Water street, yesterday afternoon after an illness of several months of consumption, Mrs. David Reams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Upperman. The deceased leaves besides her husband three children, one of whom is an infant of a few months.

Prof. F. M. Donahugh, a practical sewing machine and organ repairer, who has been in Terra Alta for the past three weeks where his work gave excellent satisfaction, is now in Oakland for a period of ten days, where he will repair machines and organs, making them as good as new. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded. All orders either in person or by mail, left at the tailor shop of Mr. James Brock, will have immediate attention.

Rev. W. H. Faust, Baptist minister at Deer Park, announces services on Sunday as follows: At Elder Hill, 11 o'clock a. m., sermon, the subject of which will be "Spreading the Gospel; Thaverville, 3.15 p. m., Preaching, from the subject "The Forgotten Vow; Deer Park, 7.30 p. m., preaching, subject, "Gethsemane." All are cordially invited to attend. In addition to the above services week day services will be held at Deer Park as follows: Prayermeeting each Wednesday evening at 7.30 and Christian Endeavor each Thursday at 7.30 p. m.

A letter was received yesterday by a friend in Oakland from Mrs. J. W. Butler, of Salem, Va., stating that her husband, the Rev. J. W. Butler, former Lutheran minister in Oakland, had died at a hospital in Baltimore a few days previous. The letter contained no details of the death of Mr. Butler other than the bare statement of his demise. In Oakland Mr. Butler was highly esteemed by many of his parishioners. After leaving Oakland Mr. Butler severed his relations with the Lutheran church and entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church, being stationed at Salem, Va., for several years prior to his death.

LETTER TO D. T. ENLOW.
Oakland, Md.

Dear Sir: Pay more for Devoe; be glad to. It is full-measure and honest.

Paint is a watch-dog. How would you like a watch-dog that had a way of wagging his tail at a burglar? That't false paint. The burglar is rain and snow.

Go by the name: Devoe lead-and-zinc.

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & CO

P. S. J. M. Davis & Son sell our paint

Dixon & Kelso

Notice to Coat and Cape Buyers.

We have a complete line of Ladies' Misses' and Children's COATS CAPES and FURS. Please cast your optics on these prices:

Ladies' All-Wool Jackets, all colors, at			$2.49
" " Coats, castor and black, worth		$6.00 at	4.99
" " " " " "	8.00 "		6.49
" " " " " "	10.00 "		7.49
" " Tourist, " " "	12.00 "		8.50
" Plush Capes,		6.00 "	4.24
" " "		5.00 "	3.49

In Misses' and Children's we have the strongest line we have ever carried.

The prices run from ..... $1.99 to $6.50
Furs ..... .99 to 7.00

Come and examine; we know the Prices and Quality will do the rest.

Yours, to please,
DIXON & KELSO.

BUILDING, PAVING, PRESSED FACE. BRICKS VITRIFIED FOR FOND ATIONS VITRIFIED FOR SEWERS, STREET PAVING BLOCKS.

Best Quallty for Builings, Casing, Sidewalks and Streets.
Beautiful Shades, Red, Light Granate and Mixed Colors.
Capacity 80,000 Daily. Prompt Shipments.
QUEEN CITY BRICK & TILE COMPANY
AND
CUMBERLAND GRANATE BRICK COMPANY
Cumberland, Maryland.

Seaboard Service to Southern Cities.

The Seaboard Air Line Ry. has the shortest line and offers the best service via Washington, the most attractive way to all points in the South. For time cards, information as to industrial openings, farms and truck lands, address, Seaboard Air Line Ry., 1411 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

BONE FOOD

Soft and crooked bones mean bad feeding. Call the disease rickets if you want to. The growing child must eat the right food for growth. Bones must have bone food, blood must have blood food and so on through the list.

Scott's Emulsion is the right treatment for soft bones in children. Little doses every day give the stiffness and shape that healthy bones should have.

Bow legs become straighter, loose joints grow stronger and firmness comes to the soft heads.

Wrong food caused the trouble. Right food will cure it.

In thousands of cases Scott's Emulsion has proven to be the right food for soft bones in childhood.

Send for free sample.
SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists,
409-415 Pearl Street, New York.
50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

A Home and Day School.

BRIAR-BEND SEMINARY,

AT MT. LAKE PARK, MD.,

In the Alleghany Mountains.

will be re-opened (D. V.)

On September 14th, 1904.

Full course of study. Music, Vocal and Instrumental. French, Latin and Bible Study. Certificates admit to leading colleges without examination.

A Home for Motherless Girls; Climate Unrivaled for Health; Only four visits from a Physician in thirteen years.

Applications received for service in ex- charge for tuition. Refererences quired.
Bills payable monthly in advance.

Winter Goods.

We have Underwear for Men, Women and Children, 25c, up.

Fine line Dress & Overshirts.

Flannels, Blankets and Comforts.

Sweaters for Men, Women and Children.

All-wool Tricot Cloth 25c. yard.

Gloves for everybody.

Good line of Floor Oilcloths.

AT TOWNSHEND'S.

Proposals for Building Sidewalks

Sealed proposals will be received by the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, Maryland, for the erection of a sidewalk fronting the opera house block in Oakland, beginning at the corner of Green and Second streets and ending at the north property line of H. Lauer, and extending from the property line along said block to the wood curbing.

Proposals will also be received for the erection of a walk from Second street to Railroad street walk.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the office of N. S. Heindel, First National Bank building, Oakland, Md.

Proposals must be on file with the clerk of said Mayor and Council not later than six o'clock, September 19th, 1904, and endorsed on the back, "Proposal for erecting sidewalks."

By order of the Mayor and Council of Oakland.

J. C. DUNHAM, Clerk.

JOHN W. ASH,

Plumbing,
Gas Fitting,
Steam and Hot Water Heating.
Center Street,
Keyser, W. Va.
PHONE 62.

The President's Son

By CHARLES B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis

WE had been working the Americano mine, situated almost on the dividing line between Peru and Chile, for two years before war was declared between those two countries. No complaints had been made against me as superintendent and engineer, but there came a day when the son of the president of the mining company graduated from Yale as a mining engineer, and his father had a job ready for him. I was to be shoved back into second place for a few months until Arthur had got a grip on the situation and was then to be politely dismissed, and he was to have full swing.

The president didn't say this exactly in his courteous letter notifying me that his son would arrive at Arica at a certain date and requesting me to meet him and put him up to things as far as able, but I read between the lines and saw the handwriting on the wall. I have never been quoted as a bad natured fellow, but I was down on Arthur Graves for weeks before I got sight of him. It's only human nature to despise the man who works you out of a good thing even if his father owns a controlling interest and wants his son to become practical enough to earn his own bread and butter. In my mind's eye I had a picture of a lackadaisical young man with a lisp and a cigarette and knowing about as much of practical mining as I did of running Vassar college. He would be half fool and half dawdler, the son of his father. He would say, "Dwear me—ah!" and "I cawn't, ye know," and the mine would be to him nothing but a hole in the earth. There was a feminine softness to his name, and the idea of getting him into a blue flannel shirt and working tools into his hands made me smile.

On three different occasions within a year I had picked up the handle of a pickax and sailed into a crowd of mutinous hybrid miners who had decided to run things to suit themselves and any one of whom could have picked up Arthur Graves and broken him in two. Twice during the same year guerrilla bands had swooped down on the mine and demanded toll money, but I had fortified the engine house, rallied five or six good fighters around me and driven them off. The cub from Yale would have swallowed his chin over it at the first shot.

It was while I was waiting the young man's arrival that war was declared, and it didn't take me long to figure out that the Americano was in a muss. We had the charter from the Chileans, but they wouldn't let a little thing like that stand in the way of seizing such a valuable piece of property and declaring our rights forfeited under some pretext or other. As for the Peruvians, they would plan to gobble it along with all else and would destroy it if they couldn't hold it. Within twenty-four hours after the news of war reached the mine a good half of the hands were out and tramping over the mountains to offer their services to one side or the other, and there was no certainty that the remainder would stay by me for a week.

"DON'T SOUR ON US, OLD MAN."

The next day a band of six Peruvian scouts descended on the Americano and were for taking immediate possession. Not a man among the hands could I induce to fire a musket for me, and I should probably have been shot out of hand had not an equal number of Chileans arrived with the same object in view. Of course there was a fight, and I had sense enough to stand back and let them have it out. The Peruvians were defeated and driven off, and only three of the Chileans were left alive, and as I seemed able to take care of them they gave up the idea of gobbling the mine and limped off to await a more favorable opportunity.

Two days after the affair of the scouts and at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when I was underground, I got word from one of the dozen laborers left around the mine that another enemy was in sight. I hurried to the surface to find one of the wickedest looking chaps it has ever been my fortune to see waiting my convenience. He was known as Pedro, the bandit, and had long been a terror on the coast. While he was a Peruvian by birth, he had no particular sympathy with his country. He robbed all alike and had been hunted by both Chilean and Peruvian. I had often heard of Pedro and had long expected a visit from him, but this was my first sight of him and his first call. I don't know what he would have said to me or how I should have replied to him, but before a word had been spoken we caught the hoof beats of mules and the tinkle of a bell, and visitors arrived.

Young Graves had shown up at last, but to my terror he had a girl with him, his sister Sue, as he gravely informed me. Even before I had scanned their faces I was calling him all sorts of idiots for being foolish enough to bring that girl into such a muss as I had on hand. Both of them saw the astonishment and the disgust in my face, but both laughed at me, and the young man said:

"Yes, we knew that a war was on and looked to find things a little out of joint, but Miss Sue was bent on coming, and her presence may prove a good thing. Don't sour on us, old man."

"Don't fear that I will be any trouble. I'm used to roughing it," added the girl, and both proceeded to dismount.

I had sent my man with an extra mule, but Graves had bought two more at Arica, one for his sister to ride and the other to carry the baggage. I caught sight of two Winchesters and a box of ammunition among the stuff and felt a bit consoled as I turned to the new arrivals. Young Graves was not a dude. He hadn't a cigarette between his lips nor a lisp to his voice. He stood near six feet tall, with his weight at about 160 pounds, and there was strength in his face as well as in his limbs. I felt that he would be a good partner in a scrimmage even before I got the hearty grip of his hand. His sister was a girl of about twenty, with fair face and resolute look, and the evil hearted guerrilla, who was standing all this time with his shoulders against the office building, whistling and humming by turns, had admiration in his eyes as he cast them upon her.

"Friend of yours?" queried Graves as he glanced at the guerrilla.

"No, not exactly," I replied. "Allow me to introduce you to Pedro, the guerrilla and robber. He arrived just a minute before you, and I think he has something on his mind."

"Yes, I have," said the fellow as he bowed to my visitors and cast a bold look at the girl. "I am here to take possession of the Americano. I was about to say so when these people came up."

"In the name of which government?" I asked as I looked up the mountain side and saw at least two dozen of his band sitting on the rocks with their weapons in hand.

"The government of Pedro, the bandit," he replied with another bow. "I know that most of your hands have gone, but I think I can induce others to work. How long will it take you to evacuate, Senor Engineer?"

"That depends on how long it takes us to wipe you and your ragamuffins off the face of the earth!"

Up to this moment Graves and his sister had failed to catch on to the true situation. They were rather inclined to think there was some joke back of it. The last few words made the matter plain, however, and the college graduate turned on the bandit and said:

"So you have a little game to play? We were in luck to arrive as we did. Begin your circus as soon as you please."

"One moment, senor," said the bandit as he held up a hand in protest. "Let us have a fair understanding. Do you refuse to surrender and get out in a peaceful way?"

"Of course we do!" I shouted.

"Surrender nothing!" added Graves as his sister stepped to the side of the pack mule and received the Winchesters from the hands of the native.

"Then listen to me. I have come to seize this mine. There is my force. If you are not on your way out of this within half an hour no quarter will be shown you. Yes, it was lucky you arrived—lucky for me. I can appreciate beauty in a woman as well as the next man."

He had half turned to go when young Graves sprang forward and delivered a blow under his ear that sent him down like an ox. The fellow would have got something additional but that his men began firing, and their bullets whistled about our ears. I got my Winchester from the office and began to return their good wishes, and after two of the band had pitched head first downhill the others had no doubt that I was shooting to kill.

"Plenty of time—take it cool!" I heard Graves call out as I fired my fourth shot, and by that time the baggage was being carried into the power house, and the young man and his sister were taking cover and sighting at human targets.

"It's a real row, isn't it?" asked the president's son with a laugh as he looked my way.

"It looks like one," I replied.

"Good! I don't like farces. There, Sue, you dropped one of them that time. Got the house fortified? Then we might as well go in, for I notice those fellows are making a flank move. Make a dash for it, Sis, and we'll follow. This is something almost as good as a campus rush."

The bandits fired enough lead to kill a hundred men, but the four of us gained the shelter of the power house without a scratch. It was fairly bullet proof and loopholed, and as we rested a moment after the dash I looked at the girl expecting to find her on the verge of hysterics. To my surprise she was shoving in fresh cartridges, and her face wore a smile.

"Mr. Chester," she said as she looked up and caught my eye, "you mustn't be disgruntled because I came along. I'll be as little trouble as possible, and I can handle a gun fairly well."

"But they may besiege us here for days and days," I protested. "It is a wild, rough place at best, but when you give us a desperate band of outlaws in addition"—

"But I couldn't get away now if I wanted to," she interrupted, with a merry laugh.

The bandits came as near as they could find cover and opened fire at the loopholes. As they were safely sheltered for the time being we sat down for a talk and let them waste their lead. After the end of about an hour young Graves remarked:

"It will seem more like a fight if we try to drop a few more of those fellows. There must be a full score of them left, and perhaps that Pedro can rally a few others. What do you think of the situation, Chester?"

"I'm afraid it has a bad outlook for us," I replied. "We can't count on aid from any direction, and these fellows have certainly got us cooped up. There's food and water for three or four days, and we are fairly well off for ammunition, but what are we going to do when we reach the end of the string?"

We went to the loopholes and soon discovered that the bandits had grown careless. Within five minutes we had bagged two apiece, and then any further shooting was a waste of lead. We could safely figure on having reduced Pedro's force by ten, but I knew his reputation too well to believe that he would abandon his object on that account. Soon after our six strike his men ceased firing, and a few minutes later the bandit leader advanced under a flag of truce. It was his little game to get a closer look at the power house and discover its weak spot, but we balked him by halting him thirty rods away. He at first promised us safe conduct to Arica if we would surrender, but when we defied him he indulged in such threats that I felt my hair curl. Threats from Pedro meant more than bluster.

The power house stood on a level spot close up to the foot of the mountain and was not loopholed in the rear. The mountain side was thick with trees, bushes and great bowlders, and as the firing ceased I had a dim perception of the next move to follow.

"I'll tell you what their next move will be," said I as I thought it out. "If Pedro has got the sense I think he has he will work around above us and use powder to start an avalanche. He can loosen enough rock and dirt above us to sweep this house away like a cork."

"Yes, that will be his game," answered Graves, "and we have got to take long chances. We've got to get out of this and into the shelter of the woods, and if they see us and pursue we must make the best fight we can. Sis, I'm sorry I got you into this mess. You can see for yourself that there's mighty little show for any of us."

WE DID NOT STOP TO RETURN THE FIRE.

"Well, I'm not crying over it," she said as she choked up and the color left her face for a moment. "Make your plans and I'll help to carry them out."

He went over and put his arms around her and kissed her, and I am quite sure she had to shut her teeth hard and fast to keep the sobs back. After the moment of weakness he turned to me with a forced laugh and tried to put some hilariousness into his voice as he said:

"Chester, old man, we'll make a game fight for it and give the Americano and old Yale reason to be proud of us. Sorry for dad and mam and the little girl here, but we'll wipe out a few more of them before we go under. Which way does Arica lie from here? I'm a bit turned around, you know."

"To the southeast."

"Then we must make that way as long as we can push on. Sis, you have a pocket compass; remember, to the southeast. The distance is about thirty-five miles, I believe. Let's have a bite to eat, stouten up our hearts and make ready for the dash."

When we had satisfied our appetites we made a thorough survey from the loopholes. No one was in sight, but we suspected that three or four of the bandits were concealed behind the bowlders to the north of us. Pedro would naturally leave some one on the watch, and the hiding place was near enough for them to open a flank fire if we left the power house. With my ear to the rear wall I listened for a time, and I felt sure that far up the mountain men were at work with pick and powder. It was time to go. We had our loaded rifles in our hands, and each had a full belt of cartridges.

"Don't want to hurt your feelings, pard," said young Graves, with a smile, "but I think I'll take the lead in this rush. Let Sue come next, and you act as rear guard. Well, I think we're ready. Open comes the door, and away we go!"

We had not traversed a distance of thirty feet when four rifles opened on us from behind the bowlders and four men uttered shouts of alarm. Those bandits had good weapons and knew how to shoot. One of their first bullets grazed my left shoulder, but we did not stop to return the fire. We had a downhill run of forty yards with no shelter to speak of, and then came a creek and a narrow valley. As the bandits pumped lead after us we heard something besides the ping of their bullets and their shouts of rage. There was a dull boom far above us, followed by such a crashing as I cannot describe, and I for one knew that the avalanche had been started. I shouted to Graves to run faster, and, catching Miss Sue by the arm, I hurried her along at a more rapid pace, and our gait was really marvelous. It was none too fast, however. The avalanche was rushing down the slope at railroad speed, and as we leaped the creek it struck the power house and dashed it to fragments. For sixty seconds we fairly flew, and then Graves struck a rock and came down with a crash, and we fell over him. I thought it was the end, but we had escaped by a hairbreadth. The avalanche had wiped out the power house, office, storehouse, kitchen and barracks and after filling the creek ten feet deep had pushed halfway across the valley and exhausted itself. The dirt and limbs and bowlders were not five feet behind us when we rose up, and the feet of one of the four dead bandits were sticking out to daylight beneath the debris. High up the mountain we saw a dozen men, and they fired down upon us and shook their fists and danced in wrath.

I do not think we were pursued. At any rate, after a night in the woods and half a day's travel we encountered a force of regular Chilean troops and were given an escort to the seaport, where we took steamer for New York. It would cost $50,000 to replace the machinery and buildings of the Americano, and it was useless to think of making a move before the war closed.

The title of my story may be somewhat misleading, as I have shown that the president had a daughter as well as a son. However, as he gave her to me, and she took my name within a year, I have made a modest effort to keep her in the background as much as possible and let the son reap what honors he could out of the affair.

Woman's Love and What the World Says

By Mrs. FRANK LESLIE

A WOMAN, let us say, although these catastrophes are as common to one sex as the other, but we will say a woman, alone and lonely, oppressed with the weight of worldly affairs and even more oppressed with that "NEED OF LOVING" which the French rightly place at the root of a woman's nature—such a one as this meets a man of plausible exterior and ready tongue, who, perceiving her lonely and brooding condition of mind, sets himself to convince her that he is the very person out of all the world capable of filling the aching void of heart and life and turning the gray raineloud that environ her into the roseate dawn of a brighter and better day than she ever yet has known. Such a promise as this IS ENOUGH TO BEWILDER THE JUDGMENT and blind the eyes of the wisest woman that ever lived—that is, supposing her to be loving by nature and lonely by circumstance. It is like the song of the sirens to wave worn Ulysses and his comrades. They well knew, those hard headed mariners, that the Circean shore was not that for which they had embarked.

But to return to our supposititious case—the wave worn and weary "she" listens to this siren chant and yields to its tempting. He says: "I love you beyond all else in the world. Will you be my wife and let me love you forever and a day?" She says, "It is all that I have been longing for." They marry, and in a few years or months or weeks or even hours he says, "You're a fool and cry for the moon," and she says: "Oh, how could I have mistaken you for my ideal man? Yes, I WAS A FOOL, BUT YOU ARE WORSE; YOU ARE A BRUTE." Of course the remarks vary with the persons and the circumstances, and in a good many cases they do not occur at all, but then when the fates take to playing with our lives all this and more is on the cards, and IT IS WELL TO BE PREPARED FOR IT.

Naturally, if such a state of things does come to pass, an "unpleasantness" arises in the family which cannot long be concealed from the public eye, and presently we hear what "the world says." And, oh, what cruel and venomous and foolish things the world does say when once it finds the chance! Why is it that the world is so lukewarm and languid when praise is demanded and so PHENOMENALLY ACTIVE WHERE THERE IS AN OPENING FOR CENSURE? Let a man or a woman perform an act of heroism or of saintly self sacrifice, let him or her spend life and fortune in doing good to the poor or the unfortunate or the wicked, and the world yawns and says, "Very good of him, I'm sure, but isn't he just a little bit of a crank?" Or, if it is a woman, Madam World smiles pityingly and says: "Ah, yes, poor thing! A WOMAN WHO DOESN'T MARRY MUST DO SOMETHING TO MAKE HERSELF OF IMPORTANCE. Did you ever hear that she was disappointed when young Croesus married her cousin instead of her?" Or perhaps it says: "Oh, gone into a convent, has she? What a blessed asylum for unattractive girls a convent must be! It is so much prettier to be called a Sister of Charity than an old maid!"

WHATEVER THE FORM OF VIRTUE MAY BE, MADAM WORLD IS SURE TO FIND SOME FLAW OR PIT IN THE FAIR FRUIT SHE CANNOT HELP PRAISING AND CLEVERLY DISPARAGES EVEN IN HER APPROVAL.

The Finance of the United States

By ELLIS H. ROBERTS, Treasurer of the United States

FORTUNATELY the United States is not asking for new loans. THE NATION IS NOT A BORROWER IN ANY MARKET. Its interest bearing debt at the beginning of the fiscal year 1898 was $847,365,130, and the annual interest was $34,387,315. A loan of $200,000,000 was made by popular subscription for war purposes. Yet at the start of the current fiscal year that debt was only $895,157,440 and the annual interest $24,176,745. In the interval the government has paid the cost of the Spanish war, $20,000,000, under the treaty of Paris, and $50,000,000 on account of the Panama canal.

NOW THE NATION STANDS ON A GRANITE BASIS OF CREDIT, AND OVER THE DOOR OF THE TREASURY MAY BE INSCRIBED, "WE ARE NOT BORROWING HERE."

In itself the United States note is weak; it gains strength as gold is put behind it. The practical banker may join with the theorist in the wish that it may pass gradually into the gold certificate. THAT CHANGE IS GOING ON WITHOUT JAR OR FRICTION on two paths—first, by the increase in the gold in the treasury, and, second by the use of notes of $10 instead of those of large denomination. In five years the ten dollar notes have run up from just less than $100,000,000 on July 1, 1900, to $193,459,321 in 1902, to $245,440,011 on the same date in 1904.

High Pressure of The Life of Today

By Judge ORRIN CARTER of Chicago

I BELIEVE THAT INSANITY TODAY BEGINS IN THE SCHOOLROOM. Children are rushed through their studies too fast, given studies that used to belong to the colleges, and many of them graduated from the high schools at the age of only sixteen. In many cases this wrecks the nerves of children, and many of them carry the nervousness with them THROUGH LIFE. But the result is a nervous, fidgety army of girls and boys, many of them unfit for business life before they begin.

There has been a big increase in insanity in ten years. Much insanity is caused by stimulants used by man to push him on AGAINST THE WARNING OF NATURE. If the overworked man would not keep up on drugs nature would give him the needed rest in the form of an illness, but under the whiplash of stimulants when he does collapse, having no reserve resistance, HE OFTEN BECOMES DERANGED.

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad

TO THE

WORLD'S FAIR.

VERY LOW RATES.

Various forms of excursion tickets to St. Louis via Baltimore & Ohio Railroad now on sale from Oakland as follows:

SEASON TICKETS, good to return until December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $28.80 round trip.

SIXTY DAY Excursion Tickets, final limit not later than December 15, 1904, to be sold daily at rate of $23.95 round trip.

FIFTEEN DAY Excursion Tickets, to be sold daily at rate of $19.95 round trip.

VARIABLE ROUTE EXCURSION TICKETS, either season or sixty day, will be sold going via one direct route and returning via another direct route, full information concerning which can be obtained from Ticket Agent.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days at each point will be allowed at Washington, Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park, Oakland, Mitchell, Ind. (for French Lick and West Baden Springs), Cincinnati and Chicago within return limit, upon notice to conductor and deposit of ticket with Depot Ticket Agent immediately upon arrival.

STOP-OVERS not exceeding ten days will be allowed at St. Louis on all one-way (except Colonists' Tickets to the Pacific Coast) and round-trip tickets reading to points beyond St. Louis, upon deposit of ticket with Validating Agent and payment of fee of $1.00.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington via Parkersburg and Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Three Solid Vestibuled trains are run daily from Pittsburg, Wheeling and Columbus via Cincinnati to St. Louis.

Magnigcent coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and unexcelled dining car service.

For illustrated folder, time table and full information, call at Ticket Office Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. tf.

GRANULATED

Fertilizer Lime!

FOR FARMERS.

THIS LIME is especially prepared to be drilled in with the crop the same as phosphate. Lump lime can also be had the year around. Write for circulars giving full information. Kilns located 3 miles from Grantsville. Shipping station, Niverton, on the B. & O. R. R.

C. J. YODER, Grantsville, Maryland.

Successor to R. M. Beachy. 7—2lt

Now is the Time! Don't Wait!

Teeth Without Plates.

Rubber Plate and Bridge Work

A SPECIALTY.

GOLD, SILVER, AMALGAM, PORCELAIN, } FILLINGS.

Teeth Extracted and plates put in same day.

ADVICE FREE.

BIXLER & SELBY,

First Nat'l Bank Building, Oakland.

J. B. WILLIAMS CO.

FROSTBURG, MD.

Cheapest place to buy

MONUMENTS HEADSTONES AND IRON FENCING

Send for prices

The Keyser Preparatory Branch

OF THE WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.

Next Term Begins Sept. 14, 1904.

Classical and Engineering Preparatory Courses for Students intending to enter College.

A Commercial Department in which Students are thoroughly fitted to fill responsible positions. A special Course for Teachers of Commercial Branches.

Special instruction for public School Teachers.

Instruction in Music.

A Splendid New Building Provided by the State.

A Beautiful Location. Healthful Surroundings. Enthusiastic Teachers.

Free Tuition to West Virginia Students in all courses except Music.

No Tuition in Commercial Department.

Small Tuition charged Students from other States.

Library, Literary Societies, Gymnasium, Athletic Teams.

Accommodations for Students at moderate cost. Open to both sexes.

For free catalogue of the school and announcement of the Commercial Department, address the Principal.

L. L. FRIEND,
Keyser, W. Va.

The Modern Child.

BORN scientifically,
Studied terrifically,
Clothed very carefully,
Dieted sparefully,
Aired systematically,
Bathed most emphatically,
Played with quite dreadfully,
Punished Spencerially,
Sweet infantility,
Steeped in gentility,
Santa Claus banished,
Mother Goose vanished,
Where are the babies,
The real human babies,
The olden time knew?

Harnessed scholastically,
Drilled superdrastically,
Cultured prodigiously,
Lectured religiously,
Classified rigidly,
Reasoned with frigidly,
Loved analytically,
Listened to critically,
Dosed with the "ologies,"
Rushed through the colleges,
Crammed pedagogically,
"Finished" most logically,
Where is the childhood,
The fresh, happy childhood,
The olden time knew?

Children successfvely
Reared thus aggressively,
Posing eternally,
Wearied infernally,
Planned for initially,
"Formed" artificially—
Will they submit to it?
Never cry "Quit!" to it?
Will not analysis
Stop from paralysis
Till our distraction
Ends with reaction,
Brings back the childhood,
The bright, careless childhood,
The olden time knew?
—James F. Morton, Jr., in Life.

The New Servant.

"Can you cook?"
"Yes, mum; everything."
"And wash?"
"Yes, mum."
"How many nights out do you want?"
"None."
"Sunday afternoon?"
"No, mum."
"How often will you scrub the kitchen?"
"Twice a week."
"And wash the windows?"
"Every Friday."
"Build a fresh fire every morning?"
"Yes, mum."
"Do you dislike children?"
"No, mum."
"How long were you in your last place?"
"Four years."
"Why did you leave?"
"The people went to Europe."
"How much wages do you want?"
"Eight dollars a month."
"When can you come?"
"Tomorrow."
Just then a keeper from the insane asylum rushed in shouting, "Oh, there you are!" bound her hand and foot and carried her off bodily.—New York Tribune.

The Kiss.

She kissed him.
"Speak to me!" she begged.
But he was silent.
Fondly smoothing his curling hair, she looked into his deep eyes pleadingly.
"Speak!" she implored again. It was more than he could resist.
"Bowwow!" he said.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Puzzle.

Once on a time two youths were suitors for the hand of a good, beautiful, sensible, bright, tactful, candid, soulful, womanly girl.
One youth made love.
The other made money.
Puzzle: Which youth married the good, beautiful, sensible, bright, tactful, candid, soulful, womanly girl?—Puck.

The Struggle For Bread.

"That's the best I can do for you," said the theatrical manager. "You've been idle all season so far. Now, will you stay idle the rest of the season or take this small part?"
"I'll take it," replied the comedian. "In this case a small role is better than a whole loaf."—Baltimore News.

No Bluffing.

"But, father," said the young man, "I'm sure I can make my way in the world. Even if you do not assist me, I have concluded to write poetry."
"Willie," said the proud papa, "you may as well understand right now that it will do you no good to threaten me."

A New Society.

She—I see the new women are to have a war society.
He—Why, that is what the old women have always had.
She (icily)—You forget. There are no old women.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Tensity.

"How Mr. Gazzletool's expression has hardened."
"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "He used to have a mobile countenance. Now it is an automobile countenance."—Washington Star.

Applied Science.

Buxley—Why, aeronauts tell us that a woman's voice can be distinctly heard at an altitude of 3,520 yards.
Trimble—Great Caesar! It must have been my wife!—Town and Country.

A Poem for Today

THE BANKS O' DOON

By Robert Burns

YE banks and braes o' bonnie Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary, fu' o' care?

Thou'lt break my heart, thou warbling bird
That wantons through the flowering thorn:
Thou minds me o' departed joys,
Departed—never to return.

Thou'lt break my heart, thou bonnie bird,
That sings beside thy mate;
For sae I sat, and sae I sang,
And wist na o' my fate.

Aft hae I roved by bonnie Doon,
To see the rose and woodbine twine;
And ilka bird sang o' its luve,
And, fondly, sae did I o' mine.

Wi' lightsome heart I pu'd a rose,
Fu' sweet upon its thorny tree;
And my fause luver stole my rose,
But ah! he left the thorn wi' me.

A Poem for Today

KEARNY AT SEVEN PINES

By Edmund Clarence Stedman

SO that soldierly legend is still on its journey—
That story of Kearny who knew not to yield!
'Twas the day when with Jameson, fierce Berry, and Birney,
Against twenty thousand he rallied the field.
Where the red volleys poured, where the clamor rose highest,
Where the dead lay in clumps through the dwarf oak and pine,
Where the aim from the thicket was surest and nighest—
No charge like Phil Kearny's along the whole line.

When the battle went ill, and the bravest were solemn,
Near the dark Seven Pines, where we still held our ground,
He rode down the length of the withering column,
And his heart at our war-cry leapt up with a bound.
He snuffed, like his charger, the wind of the powder—
His sword waved us on, and we answered the sign;
Loud our cheer as we rushed, but his laugh rang the louder:
"There's the devil's own fun, boys, along the whole line!"

How he strode his brown steed! How we saw his blade brighten
In the one hand still left—and the reins in his teeth!
He laughed like a boy when the holidays heighten,
But a soldier's glance shot from his visor beneath.
Up came the reserves to the mellay infernal,
Asking where to go in—through the clearing or pine?
"O, anywhere! forward? 'Tis all the same, Colonel;
You'll find lovely fighting along the whole line?"

O, evil the black shroud of night at Chantilly,
That hid him from sight of his brave men and tried!
Foul, foul sped the bullet that clipped the white lily,
The flower of our knighthood, the whole army's pride!
Yet we dream that he still—in that shadowy region
Where the dead form their ranks at the wan drummer's sign—
Rides on, as of old, down the length of his legion,
And the word still is Forward! along the whole line.

A Poem for Today

PITTYPAT AND TIPPYTOE

By Eugene Field

FEW writers have excelled Eugene Field in the sympathetic delineation of child life or in giving voice to the affection felt for those of tender years. His brother wrote of him: "To the careless observer the immense array of weird dolls and absurd toys in his working room meant little more than an idiosyncratic passion for the anomalous, but those who were near to him knew what a connecting link they were between him and little children, of whom he wrote."

ALL day long they come and go,
Pittypat and Tippytoe;
Footprints up and down the hall,
Playthings scattered on the floor,
Fingermarks along the wall
Tell-tale streaks upon the door.
By these presents you shall know
Pittypat and Tippytoe.

How they riot at their play!
And a dozen times a day
In they troop, demanding bread;
Only buttered bread will do,
And that butter must be spread
Inches thick with sugar, too!
Never yet have I said: "No,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!"

Sometimes there are griefs to soothe,
Sometimes ruffled brows to smooth;
For I much regret to say
Tippytoe and Pittypat
Sometimes interrupt their play
With an internecine spat;
Fie! oh, fie! to quarrel so,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

Oh, the thousand worrying things
Every day recurrent brings!
Hands to scrub and hair to brush,
Search for playthings gone amiss,
Many a murmuring to hush,
Many a little bump to kiss;
Life's indeed a fleeting show,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

And when day is at an end,
There are little duds to mend;
Little frocks are strangely torn,
Little shoes great holes reveal,
Little hose, but one day worn,
Rudely yawn at toe or heel:
Who but you could work such woe,
Pittypat and Tippytoe?

But when comes this thought to me:
"Some there are that childless be,"
Stealing to their little beds,
With a love I cannot speak,
Tenderly I stroke their heads,
Fondly kiss each velvet cheek,
God help those who do not know
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

On the floor, along the hall,
Rudely traced upon the wall,
There are proofs in every kind
Of the havoc they have wrought,
And upon my heart you'd find
Just such trademarks, if you sought.
Oh! how glad I am 'tis so,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

Sequel to Cushing's Exploit

A FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY WAR STORY

November 1, 1864

[Copyright, 1904, by G. L. Kilmer.]

NOV. 1, 1864, the Federal flotilla stationed in Albemarle sound recaptured the post at Plymouth, N. C., after a dashing fight which followed as a swift sequel to Lieutenant Cushing's famous torpedo attack on the Confederate ram Albemarle. Cushing had leaped overboard from his torpedo launch immediately after stabbing the iron hull of the ram with his infernal weapon, and for nearly a day remained in ignorance of the result of his startling adventure. All he knew was that he had shot his only bolt and had nothing to do but to save himself. His nearest friends, except the survivors of his band, who, like himself, were struggling in the water, were twelve miles away. He could hear the enemy searching in boats for the Yankee crew of the launch and heard his own name mentioned by strange tongues.

The night was very cold and the water chilled his blood; but, finding that the enemy was alert, he struck for the shore opposite the wharf where the ram lay. Some hours were passed in the river and its swampy margin, but at daybreak Cushing discovered that he was close to the suburbs of Plymouth and not forty rods from a Confederate fort. The town and the forts swarmed with gray clad soldiers and sailors in a state of unusual excitement, and Cushing said that it gave him deep satisfaction to know that he had pulled the cords which set all those figures moving.

After looking the ground over the fugitive decided to get into the shelter of a fringe of rushes on dry ground that bordered on the swamp. In doing so he passed open ground under the eyes of a sentinel on the parapet. Being covered with mud, he was of the same color as the terra firma and escaped notice, much to his relief. While in this hiding two Confederate officers passed so close that he heard them discussing the event of the hour—the destruction of the Albemarle—and wondering by what means it had been accomplished.

Cushing decided to take to the swamp again and to avoid discovery crawled inch by inch through a network of thorns and briers. On the way he passed close to a party of Confederates who were at work sinking some old scows to block the river channel. Finally, reaching dry ground in a piece of woods, he met a negro, whom he took into his confidence and bribed with a couple of greenbacks to go to town and learn what had happened to the ram Albemarle. In due time the negro returned with the news that when the torpedo exploded water began to rush into the ram through a hole stove in her hull. Pumps were set to work, but she went down in a few minutes and rested on the bottom, with only her smokestack and plated shield above water. The messenger brought ample confirmation of his story, and then Cushing's one desire was to carry the news to his people in Albemarle sound. Striking out blindly, with the sun for his guide, he soon came to a road which led him to the side of a stream. The road was observed by some Confederate pickets whose post was on the bank of the stream. While crawling along the bank to avoid the pickets Cushing saw a skiff moored to the exposed roots of a large cypress. Swimming stealthily through the water, with the cypress for a cover, he cut the boat loose and, floating with it on the far side, passed around a bend which completely hid him from the view of the pickets. Then he got in and with the one oar it contained paddled for liberty.

Following the inky black stream to its mouth, the fugitive came out on Roanoke river and paddled ceaselessly for hours until he shot out into the broad and fortunately calm waters of Albemarle sound. Ordinarily a frail skiff cannot live in the stormy sea of the sound, but Cushing found only a slight swell, which he overcame by paddling upon one side of his boat. He said that he paddled ceaselessly for ten hours and that during the last four his whole body, with the exception of arms and brain, had been asleep. He finally sighted a vessel and hailed it, the friendly picket boat Valley City. It seems that there was a torpedo scare on both sides of the lines, and the Valley City lowered boats and took precautions against torpedoes, refusing at first to pick the wanderer up for fear he might be the conductor of an infernal machine. The officers declared that Cushing had died in sinking the Albemarle.

After being taken on board and revived with brandy and water Cushing was able to convince the Valley City people that he was a Yankee torpedo fiend and they had naught to fear at his hands. He was taken to the flagship and was received with a display of rockets, all hands cheering as he climbed on board. Up to this time he had revealed nothing of the fate of the ram, but when the fleet commander came forward he stood up proudly, hatless, coatless, barefoot and covered with mud, and, saluting, said, "I have the honor, sir, to report that the Albemarle is at the bottom of Roanoke river."

"THE ALBEMARLE IS AT THE BOTTOM OF ROANOKE RIVER."

Now, the ram Albemarle had been a thorn in the sides of the Federal guardians of Albemarle sound and the adjacent waters for months, ever since, in fact, that April day when she dropped down the Roanoke river with mechanics still hammering her unfinished armor, sunk one warship in battle and drove another from the field, a triumph which wrested Plymouth from Federal control that had lasted three years.

Guided by Cushing and incited by his marvelous exploit, Fleet Commander McComb sailed up the Roanoke to attack the fort with his sea armament. Leaving the main fleet to move directly on the town, Cushing piloted the Valley City into a circuitous channel known as Middle river, which he had discovered during his adventures. McComb's warships found the Roanoke channel effectually blocked by sunken hulls at a point where the guns of the fort swept the river. They returned to the sound without offering battle.

Following Middle river the Valley City sailed around the town and struck the Roanoke channel above the obstructions. The new channel was wide enough and had depth of water enough to pass the larger ships, and on the last day of October McComb again steamed up to attack. Having seen the Federal ships back away from the obstructions the day before, the Confederates were taken by surprise when a row of strange smokestacks suddenly appeared in the river above the forts. But the men behind the guns were old sailors from the Albemarle and other vessels, which had come to grief at the hands of the enemy now confronting the town. They opened a fierce bombardment, but the ships rushed past the batteries, hurling showers of grape and canister into the works.

Cushing, in the Valley City, trained the guns upon the fort which he had reconnoitered during his hiding in the swamp. A Yankee shell exploded the magazine in Battery William, which was soon deserted, and two ensigns from the Wyalusing went ashore and hoisted the Federal flag over the work. During the night the Confederates evacuated the town and the Yankee sailors cheered a double victory—an iron clad monster destroyed and a fortified post restored to northern arms.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

H. W. McCOMAS, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at SANITARIUM.
Residence on North Second street.
Office hours, 8 to 10 a. m., 2 to 3 p. m., 8 to 10 p. m.; from June to October and from October to June, 7 to 8.30 p. m.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in McComas Building, Second street.

W. H. RAVENSCRAFT, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD.
Residence on North Third street.
Office in McComas Building.

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND, MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR D. O. McKINLEY,
RESIDENT DENTIST,
SALISBURY, PENN'A.
Will visit regularly through Garrett county Md., and offers his services to those wishing Dental Treatment. Charges moderate.
P. O. address, Elk Lick, Pa.

NORMAN S. HEINDELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
All business given prompt attention.
Office—First National Bank Building.
KLAND, MARYLAND.

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

FRED A. THAYER,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MD.
STATE'S ATTORNEY FOR GARRETT COUNTY.
Office in First National Bank Building.
Will be assisted in all important cases by Benj. A. Richmond of the Cumberland bar.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice inthe Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

BALTIMORE & OHIO R. R. TIME TABLE IN EFFECT Nov. 19, 1903.

The following time table on the P. & O. went into effect on Sunday, May 15, 1904. Trains now leave Oakland as follows:

GOING WEST.

No. 7.—	Daily	1.54 A. M
No. 3—	Daily	7.17 A. M
No. 71—	Daily except Sunday	9.26 A. M
No. 55—	Daily	4.53 P. M
No. 1—	Daily	10.26 P. M

GOING EAST.

No. 4—	Daily	12.57 A. M
No. *8—	Daily	6.04 A. M
No. 2—	Daily	6.31 A. M
No. 72—	Accom daily except Sun	5.12 P. M
No. 46—	Express, daily	4 34 P. M
No. 12—	Daily	8.32 P. M

*No. 8 stops at Oakland only to let off passengers from points west of Grafton.

GEO. L. POTTER, General Manager
D. B. MARTIN,
Manager Passenger Traffic.
V. V. WASHBURNE, Agent.

WEST VIRGINIA CENTRAL AND PITTSBURG RAILWAY CO.
IN EFFECT AUG. 28, 1904.

SOUTHWARD No. 3	SOUTHWARD No. 1	STATIONS	NORTHWARD No. 2	NORTHWARD No. 4
P. M.	A. M.		NOON	P. M.
3 15†	7 00† lv	Cumberland ar	†11 59	†7 40
3 44	7 29	Rawlings	11 31	7 08
4 07	7 52	Keyser	11 08	6 45
4 22	8 05	Westernport	10 58	6 33
4 29	8 09	W. Va. C. June	10 51	6 26
4 47	8 27	Barnum	10 36	6 10
4 54	8 35	Shaw	10 28	6 02
5 10	8 55	Blaine	10 11	5 44
5 15	9 00	Harrison	10 06	5 40
6 25x	9 50x ar	Elk Garden lv	x8 10	x4 25
5 49†	9 35† lv	Gorman	†9 35	†5 08
5 55	9 42	Bayard	9 28	5 02
6 06	9 54	Dobbin	9 17	4 52
6 10	9 58	Henry	9 13	4 48
6 43†	10 32†	Thomas	†8 38	†4 18
7 10†	11 00† ar	Davis	†8 05	†3 40
6 50	10 37 lv	Douglas	8 [illegible]	4 13
7 16	11 01	Hendricks	8 03	3 49
7 19	11 04	Hambleton	7 57	3 37
7 25	11 10	Parsons	7 50	3 30
7 59	11 44	Kerens	7 16	2 56
8 15†	11 59† ar	Elkins	lv †7 00	†2 40
	NOON

No. 45	No. 3	No. 1		No. 2	No. 4	No. 46
P. M.	A. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.	P. M.
3 30s	6 30†	2 35x	lv Elkins ar	x8 20	12 30†	s9 15
3 45	6 47	2 51	R.C. Jct	8 03	12 13	9 00
3 48	6 51	2 54	Harding	7 59	12 09	8 52
4 01	7 04	3 06	Junior	7 45	11 55	8 44
4 10s	7 15†	3 15x	ar Bel'g'n lv	x7 35	11 45†	s8 35
					A. M.

	P. M.	P. M.		P. M.	P. M.
	x8 30	12 35†	lv Elkins ar	x9 55	†2 00
	8 46	12 52	Beverly	9 39	1 44
	9 10†	1 15†	ar Hutt'e ar	x9 15	1 20†

No. 53	No. 51			No. 54	No. 52
A. M.	P. M.			P. M.	P. M.
x6 20	x12 35	lv	Elkins ar	x2 35	6 50x
7 49	1 24		Fishing Hawk	1 49	5 28
8 34	1 46		Glady	1 30	4 50
9 42	2 19		Burner	12 57	3 48
x10 15	x2 35	ar	Durbin lv	x12 40	3 15x

† Daily x Daily except Sunday. s Sundays only.

H. G. CLARK, Manager. F. M. HOWELL, Gen. Pas. Agent.

M. C. HINEBAUGH, M. D.,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
OAKLAND, MD
Office and residence, Alder St., east of post office.

Great Big Bargains.

$75 will buy Lot No. 241, on corner Hazel Glade Drive and Park front; worth $300.

$50 will buy Lot No. 242, adjoining above; worth $200.

$75 will buy Lot No. 219, on corner D street and Park front; worth $225.

$50 will buy Lot No. 218, adjoining above; worth $200.

$50 will buy Lot No. 220, fronting on D street, and

$50 for Lot No. 221.

No Building Conditions on these Lots.

Apply to

GOOD ROADS FOR WICOMICO

The Tax Payers Desire State Aid in Building Highways.

Unwilling to lose the advantages offered by the new State aid road law, the residents of Wicomico County, at a large public meeting held in Salisbury on Tuesday, September 27th, decided to act at once in taking the necessary measures to secure the State appropriation of $10,000 allotted to Wicomico County for the construction of highways built scientifically under State supervision. The whole subject of obtaining State roads under the new law was thoroughly discussed in this open meeting by Congressman William H. Jackson, State Senator Marion V. Brewington, and a number of others; and Mr. A. N. Johnson, Highway Engineer of the Maryland Geological Survey, who attended the meeting from Baltimore, explained the method of procedure under the law and answered questions concerning it from all who were interested.

It was pointed out at the meeting that should Wicomico not take up her allotment of $10,000.00 State funds for her road work, the money will be divided among other counties, and there was full determination expressed not to allow the money to leave the county. The whole tenor of the meeting was another example of the progressive spirit which the county residents of Maryland have shown in the matter of road building since the passage of the new State law, and it showed that Wicomico County residents are alive to the manner in which her road fund is to be spent. The discussions conducted were qualified to instruct the average resident upon the best available road material, and the questions asked and answered showed that the study of road conditions has been a live matter for some time with the tax-payers of Wicomico County.

The meeting was called by the County Commissioners, who wished an expression of opinion from the residents as to their willingness to stand their share of the expense of building State roads. Inasmuch as the law demands that the county shall appropriate dollar for dollar as much as the State fund gives in each case, or in other words, pays one-half the cost, the Commissioners wished to learn whether the County was willing to undergo this expense before any applications for Wicomico's share of the State fund should be made. Mr. Johnson explained at length the features of the new law, advised upon the best road material that is available to Wiconico county, and quoted estimates upon the cost of first-class modern roads, such as could be made under the existing circumstances.

Mr. Johnson told the audience to preserve their shell roads as a foundation for macadam roads, and to surface them with Wilmington limestone rather than Port Deposit granite, as the limestone binds better. Slag surfacing was not advised as it is not durable for heavy traffic. The cost of macadam road, including the foundation, was given as from $4,000.00 to $5,000.00 per mile at the highest, but with the shell foundation, said Mr. Johnson, the macadam surfacing would cost only $2,500.00 per mile for a roadbed twelve feet wide, with a shoulder of four feet on either side.

In explaining the procedure necessary to secure a State road, it was shown how the residents may either first request the County Commissioners to petition for the State aid, or the County Commissioners, on their own initiative, may decide to take up the allotment. The Highway Engineer of the Maryland Geological Survey surveys the road, gives estimates, and the County builds the road by contract under supervision of the Highway Engineer. Then complete, the State pays one half the cost. In order for the residents to petition for this aid, it is necessary for the owners of two-thirds of the property along the proposed road to pledge themselves to pay ten percent of the cost of the road; but no residents who do not so desire can be compelled to bear any part of this cost. The residents along any road can compel the County Commissioners to petition for the State aid up to one-fourth of the road levy of the particular County.

After a general discussion of plans, Mr. A. J. Benjamin introduced a resolution, which was adopted, providing that the county Commissionesr take measures to secure the $10,000,00 of State appropriation and to distribute it by petition of residents as suggested in the law, further, that these petitions shall be filed with the Commissioners onor before November 15th. It was suggested also that the best place to build the first State road in Wicomico County is from Salisbury to Spring Hill, where there already exists a roadbed of oyster shells.

Mr. Thomas Perry presided at the meeting, which lasted for over two hours, and was representative of the largest tax-payersin the County.

WEALTH, according to the free trade idea, is created by trading; the protectionists know that it results from producing.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Rev. H. E. Friend has moved to his farm near McHenry.

Mr. C. W. Hopkins and wife have gone to Cincinnati for a visit.

Mrs. A. R. Sperry has been visiting friends in Virginia.

Joseph Forward and family have moved to Flintstone, Md.

Mr. T. B. Evert has gone to Phillipi, W. Va., for a few days.

Mr. Bert Leighton and family are taking in the Worlds Fair.

Mr. Sam. Severs is and has been for several months working at Phillipi, W. Va.

The foundation for Mr. Harvey Cuppett's store building opposite the Post Office is being laid by Mr. Cogley, of Oakland.

Mr. M. M. Schrock, has accepted a position with the Williams Marble Co., of Frostburg, Md. He will go on the road.

Now is the time to buy property at the Park. It is below bed rock prices.

Rev. N. Bumgardner, and Rev. A. Mick were Park visitors last week

Rev. Hart, Baptist minister, moved into Hotel Chautauqua last Monday.

The Roosevelt, Fairbanks and Pearce club is a success.

Mr. A. L. Scott is visiting relatives in Virginia.

Mr. A. N. Pritchard bought one of the Davis cottages for $900. A decided bargain.

C. F. Dawson, and John Mitchell are working at Keyser W. Va., for W. A. Liller.

Editor Sincell, of The Republican, was a business caller at the Park last Saturday.

Mr. Henry May is clerking for his brother at Swanton, Md.

R. G. Richardson, Esq., of Piedmont spent last Thursday at the Park.

Mr. Adam Long has moved with his family from Loch Lynn to the Mt. Lake Hotel.

The meeting of the Republican Club Tuesday evening was an interesting occasion. The reports of the various committees were most encouraging.

Gay Hayden has accepted a clerkship in his brother Grant's store in Westernport Md.

Rev. Hathaway, who has been assigned to the Mt. Lake and Deer Park Circuit, preached his first session here Sunday evening. The congregation is much pleased with the appointment.

GRANTSVILLE.

In this vicinity the farmers are busily engaged threshing, picking apples, and husking corn.

Mr. C. M. Livingood, the proprietor of the National Hotel, has purchased the property of John Beachy, on Quality Hill.

Last Wednesday, Mr. Mahlon George while picking apples for Mr. G. Broadwater, fell from a tree and broke his arm.

Last Thursday while threshing at the barn of Mr. C. M. Livengood, Fred, his son, met with a serious accident by running the prong of a pitch fork into his hand. The wound caused him much pain.

Mr. N. Broadwater, the proprietor of the People's Store, has in stock a full line of fall and winter millinery goods.

Mr. C. Zook is making cider and apple butter day and night.

Last Friday afternoon the students of the Grantsville school with the assistance of the principal organized a literary society. Our motto is "Onward and Upward." Our aim is to make mental improvement; to enlarge our powers of expression; and obtain that discipline necessary for self control; and to become more efficient in the art of convincing others of the truth or falsity of a disputed matter.

The Rail society is becoming quite a prominent organization in our town.

Mr. Irving Broadwater, who is working at Jennings, Md., spent Sunday at home.

Dr. and Mrs. G. C. Keller arrived home Sunday from an extended visit through Ohio.

Miss Rebecca Bevans has been visiting friends and relatives at Salisbury Pa., the past week.

Miss Jeanette McKinley, of Santa Clara, Cal., who has been visiting Miss Margaret Brown the past week, left for Salisbury, Pa., last Sunday.

Mrs. Alvin B. Getty, who has been visiting here for a few weeks was accompanied by her mother-in-law Mrs. W. R. Getty, to Meyersdale, Pa., last Sunday.

Mrs. W. Kneight, of Salisbury, has been visiting her parents during the past week.

Rev. B. F. Hilbish, the pastor of the M. E. church, and family, will leave this week to take up their charge at Blaine, W. Va. The members of his congregation and the citizens of Grantsville wish them success in their new field of labor.

Subscribe for The Republican

AGES OF PRESIDENTS.

None Were 70 When Elected, and No Vice President Was 60.

The age of the President of the United States is always an interesting subject. It may not be generally know that 16 of the Presidents of the United States, from Washington to now have been between 50 and 60 years of age at the time they were sworn into office. Four of them—Pierce, Garfield, Cleveland, and Roosevelt—were under 50. Three were between 60 and 65. Three, William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor and James Buchanan—were 62 and over. Harrison was 68 when he took the oath of office. Several of the Presidents who served two terms were under 60 on the date of their second inauguration.

Of the entire number of Vice-Presidents who have succeeded to the Presidency all were under 60. Johnson was 57. Tyler 51, Fillmore 50, Arthur 51, and Roosevelt 43 on their succession. Most of the Vice-Presidents were in the 50's or below that age at the time of their qualification for office. The oldest was Elbridge Gerry, who took office in 1813 at the age of 79. William R. King qualified in 1853 at 67; Hendicks was 66 and Levi P. Morton was 65. The records of history show that both the Presidency and Vice-Presidency have, in the estimation of the people, been placed in the hands of men who were in their prime—between 50 and 60, youth sobered, mental powers ripened by judgment, and the physical man ripened to maturity. The judgment of the whole people is usually a wise one, and it is not likely that they will ever select as Chief Magistrate, or one who may possibly succeed to that position, a man who has already lived 10 years beyond the allotted span of human life.

The closest male relative of the First President, George Washington, is Lawrence Washington, a grandnephew of the Father of his Country. Lawrence Washington possesses the George Washington characteristics, as left in the Gilbert Stuart portrait, in very strong resemblance. Of course, it goes without saying that he isn't "pretty." No human being could ever have called Washington any more than a "fine figure of a man," for presumably he was with all that stature and lots of natural dignity, yet they do say he was awkward! Lawrence Washington is now in charge of the Library of Congress exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition.

SELBYSPORT

The farmers are busy hauling in corn and picking apples.

Quite a number of our young people spent last Saturday evening in Friendsville.

Mr. Burr Cuppett left last Friday for California, where he expects to remain several months.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kessler left for Pittsburg, Pa., last Saturday at which place they expect to remain all winter.

Mr. Dorsey Guard, our young music tercher, left for Ada, Ohio, where he expects to attend school.

Miss Rose Liston spent Saturday and Sunday with her parents.

A number of our people attended Mr. N. R. Selby's corn husking last Wednesday.

Mr. Leroy Holiday was a business caller in our town last Tuesday.

Mr. James Frantz of Oakland passed through Selbysport last Sunday.

Last Saturday afternoon in a ten inning game the Selbysport Athletic Club defeated the strong Friendsville ball team by a score of 14 to 15. Next Saturday afternoon our boys are to play another game with the Accident base ball team at Accident.

Prof. E. A. Browning has been visiting the schools in this part of the county.

Mr. E. M. Liston sold a nice drove of sheep to Mr. H. J. Speicher, of Accident.

Mr. Melville Coddington, of near Addison, Pa., passed through our town last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Welch spent Friday afternoon in Friendsville.

BITTINGER.

The Republican club at this place holds very interesting meetings on Saturday evening of each week, and its membership is rapidly increasing.

At the two sittings of the registrars at this place 17 new names were added to the list.

Mr. F. M. Bittinger is again in charge of his coal mine, the party to whom it had been rented having thrown up the contract.

Mr. G. W. Engle, after treating the new Lutheran parsonage to a coat of paint, returned to his duties in Baltimore.

Mr. Oester and family, of the Cove, were the guests of ex-Sheriff A. J. Oester over Sunday.

Mrs. Amos Bittinger and children of near Oakland, were visiting Mrs. Bittinger's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Brenneman, all of the past week.

Miss Lizzie Snyder, of Jennings, was visiting her home near here last week.

Oakland View Poultry and Truck Farm

For sixty days I will offer at private sale the above property, located one mile South of Oakland. For further particulars call on or address Chas. J. Newman, Oakland, Md. 32-4t.

Notice.

FOR SALE.—I will offer at private sale my farm situated opposite Shaw, W. Va., on the Maryland side of the river, containing 175½ acres, all under fence, of which 125 acres are improved with dwelling, outbuildings and good orchard. On it are seven springs of good water. About 20 tons of hay was cut on it this year, besides oats, corn and all other crops. Will sell on easy terms. Reason for selling, have more land than I need. For particulars call on or address

E. HARVEY,
31-4t Elk Garden, W. Va.

Comparatively new cook stove cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. 2t*

THE

Hustling Store Company

CONTINUE TO

CUT PRICES

until their present stock is sold off.

NEW GOODS

are arriving daily.

Bring in your

Potatoes, Butter, Eggs, Buckwheat Flour

and other good produce.

Highest cash prices will be allowed in exchange.

P. T. GARTHRIGHT,
Proprietor.

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

MARYLAND'S SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY.
THREE COURCES OF INSTRUCTION.
AGRICULTURAL. MECHANICAL. SCIENTIFIC.

Each Department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all Departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding Department supplied with all modern improvements: bath-rooms, closets, steam heat and gas.

New buildings with every modern improvement, and old buildings thoroughly renovated by opening of first session. Tuition, Books, Heat, Light, Washing, Board and Medical Attendance, with annual deposit, ($150) one hundred and fifty nine dollars, for scholastic year. Daily visit by physician to College. Catalog giving full particulars sent on application. Attention is called to the Short Course of ten weeks in Agriculture. Write for particulars.

Term Commences, Thursday, September, 15.
Early application necessary for admittance.
R. W. SILVESTER, President,
College Park, Maryland.

COMMISSIONERS' MEETING.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 29, 1904.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on Wednesday, Nov. 9, 1904,

to transact business that may come before the Board.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

E. H. Sincell and F. A. Fhayer, Mortgagees, vs. Louisa Chambers, Mortgagor.

No. 1293 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered, this 19th day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Edward H. Sincell and Fred. A. Thayer, Mortgagees, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 16th day November, 1904; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 16th day of November, 1904.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1,790.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

The First National Bank of Oakland, Maryland, vs. Isaacc W. Thompson, et ux.

No. 1295 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Ordered, this 19th day of October, in the year nineteen hundred and four, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in Equity, that the mortgagee's sale made and reported in the above cause by Fred. A. Thayer, attorney named in the mortgage, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 16th day of November, 1904, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 16th day of November, 1904.

The report states the amount of sale to be $3,400.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Appointment of Clerk of Election to Fill Vacancy.

OFFICE OF THE
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION
FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., Oct. 19, 1904

A. Y Hinebaugh, appointed Democratic Clerk of Election by this Board at a meeting held August 13th, 1904, for Election District No. 7, is found to be disqualified, by reason of failing to qualify, and in his place and stead Edward R. O'Donnell, whose post-office address is Mountain Lake Park, Maryland, is hereby appointed to fill said vacancy.

By order of the Board of Election Supervisors of Garrett county.
EDMUND JAMISON, President.

Her New Language.

SHE possessed a mind discerning,
That was stored and crammed with learning,
And her thoughts, forever burning,
She could suitably express.
All her sentences were rounded,
And her words imposing sounded;
I was really quite astounded
As I listened, I confess.

It was rather an infliction,
All this verbal unrestriction,
But her elegance of diction,
Each precise and polished phrase,
And the beautiful selection
Of the words and their connection,
And her most correct inflection—
They were quite beyond all praise.

But I saw her very lately,
And she did not talk ornately;
All that language suave and stately
She no longer kept on tap.
She was saying: "Bessums diddums!
Where de bad old pin got hiddums
In her muzzer's precious kiddums?"
To the baby in her lap.
—London Tit-Bits.

Her Suggestion.

"What has become of that Mr. Boogley who came to visit your folks last month?" asked the caller.

"Mr. Boogley? Oh, he—he has gone home, I believe."

"Gone home, you believe? Don't you know?"

"That is, I suppose he has," explained the young woman. "But, you know, he is imbued with so many of these mental science ideas that one hardly can be sure of where he is."

"But I thought he was going to make you an extended visit?"

"He was, at first. But he decided not to."

"Oh, do tell me. Did he propose?"

"No. I never let him get to that point. One evening he told me that I had a cold heart, and I told him maybe he'd better give me absent treatment for it."

Freddie's Letter to God.

Freddie was four years old and had been devoutly reared. He had been struggling at dinner with an apple baked with the skin on and had made detailed inquiries into the reason why apples had skins and who put them there. After dinner he announced that he wanted to write a letter on his father's typewriter. In a few minutes he produced a letter consisting chiefly of "q's" and "z's." He was asked whom he had written to and read his letter as follows:

Dear God—Please come around and see us some night. I never saw you yet, but my papa says you are very nice. Please God don't make any more baked apples with skins. FREDDIE.

—New York Times.

Gave Him Credit.

Grimes—I think Blodgett is the meanest man I ever knew.

Grant—What has Blodgett been doing now?

Grimes—I wrote an anonymous letter to his paper, complaining of the teacher of the Center school. He recognized my writing and published the letter over my signature.

Grant—Well, what of it? The letter expressed your sentiments, didn't it?

Grimes—Oh, yes, they were my sentiments all right, but I didn't want people to know that was what I thought. —Boston Transcript.

Self Evident Truth.

"M' dear," protests the husband who is explaining why he has been detained until such a late hour, "I 'shure you, it washn't my fault. I been held up!"

"Of course you have," replies the wife from the head of the stairs, observing his ineffectual attempts to find a keyhole in the newel post. "What I want to know is who held you up. Who brought you home this time?"

On the Domestic Diamond.

"It's a lucky thing for me I ain't in the box," said the great baseball twirler as he paraded up and down the bedroom floor with his tooth cutting son and heir.

"Why?" asked his wife sleepily.

"Because," he answered, "I don't seem to have any control of the bawl."

His Bad Break.

Percy—I have had a very pleasant evening. But, then, I always manage to enjoy myself no matter where I am.

Safety Appliances.

"And when your steamer ran on the rocks and sank where were your life preservers?" asked the judge.

"Why, judge," explained the captain, "the life preservers were the first things to go down."—Yonkers Statesman.

BARGAINS.

Furnished House, 7 rooms and bath, 30 ft. Porch, Hydrant in kitchen, good location, only $1000 Cash $400, balance one to five years.

L. A. RUDISILL,
Real Estate, Loans and Insurance,
Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Mortgagees' Sale

—OF—

REAL ESTATE

In Garrett County, Md.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Sidney A. Lewis and Amanda Lewis his wife, to Elijah J. M. Button dated the 11th day of July, 1903, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 43, folios 558, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, default having been made under the covenants of said mortgage, the undersigned named as attorney therein, hereby gives notice that he will offer at public auction to the highest bidder on Saturday, the 22nd Day of October, 1904,

at the hour of eleven o'clock a. m., in front of the Court House door in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, all that piece or parcel of ground situate in Garrett county, and State of Maryland, containing

49 1-2 ACRES,

mentioned in and conveyed by said mortgage and being the same piece of property which is fully described in a deed from L. F. Yoder et al. to Asberry Wolf dated the 4th day of April, 1896, and duly recorded among the land records of Garrett county aforesaid.

This property lies about seven miles north of Oakland, is partly cleared and is improved by two dwelling houses, two stables and other necessary outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Attorney for the Mortgagee named in said mortgage.

ADMINISTRATOR'S NOTICE.

This is to give notice, That the Subscriber, of Garrett county, Maryland, hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of

MARY A. SPEICHER,

late of Garrett county, Maryland, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same with the vouchers thereof legally authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 29th day of March next; then may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

Given under my hand this 27th day of September, 1904.

CHARLES C. SPEICHER,
Administrator,
Accident Md.

Order of Publication.

Rebecca A. McMinn, Plaintiff, vs. Howard J. McMinn, Defendant.

No. 1282 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county.

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by Rebecca A. McMinn, plaintiff, against Howard J. McMinn, the defendant.

The amended bill states that on the 25th day of May, 1896, the plaintiff was married to the defendant at Garrett county, Maryland, with whom she resided in said state and county until sometime about the month of February, 1899. That after said marriage the defendant frequently beat the plaintiff in a shameful manner with great cruelty and brutality, and that his vicious conduct became so intolerable that the plaintiff was forced to leave his house and take safety and refuge elsewhere, and was obliged to swear out a warrant for his arrest for her safety.

That at the March Term, 1899, of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, the defendant under the name of David J. McMinn, (by which name he was commonly known), was indicted and convicted in two separate cases for assaulting and beating the plaintiff. That the conduct of the plaintiff towards her husband has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, and that the defendant has not contributed anything to her support or her children for over five years, and that he has declared his intention of living with her no longer, and that there is no possibility of reclaiming her husband or their ever living together. That said abandonment by said defendant of said plaintiff was without just cause or reason and has continued uninterruptedly for more than three years, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation. That there were two children born to them from said marriage, to-wit: Grace Mabel and James William, seven and five years of age, respectively, infants.

That the said defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

The bill prays for a divorce a vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the defendant, the custody and guardianship of the said minor children, general relief and an order of publication against said non-resident defendant.

It is thereupon, this 20th day of September, 1904, ordered by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 21st day of October, 1904, give notice to said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 8th day of November, 1904, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to pass as prayed.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

The Maryland School for the Deaf,

37TH SESSION.

Reopens September 14th, 1904.

Non-Sectarian. For the deaf and dumb and those whose hearing is too defective for attendance on public school. Speech and lip-reading taught, as well as grammar school and academic studies.

Location very healthful. Board and Tuition free to residents of Maryland.

Apply to
CHAS. W. ELY, Principal,
Frederick, Md.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 28. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1904. NUMBER 35

GOV. EDWIN WARFIELD TAKEN TO TASK

Mr. Winstock Calls Down Executive for Criticism of Col. Pearre.

HAS BEEN FAITHFUL TO HIS TRUST

His Opponent, Mr. Johnston, Was Nominated, Not With the Hope of Winning, But To Take the Wind Out of Spencer Jones' Gubernatorial Boom

Melvin F. Winstock, prominent in Republican politics in the Northwest, discussed the issues of the campaign Saturday night at Lewistown, this state to a large audience. The hall was crowded, many farmers being unable to get in. Mr. Winstock spoke, in part, as follows:

"Last Wednesday night at Kensington, Montgomery county, the distinguished governor of this state, in a public address, proclaimed that Col. Geo. A. Pearre in point of record and achievement was utterly unworthy to represent the Sixth Congressional district in the halls of national legislation. A statement like this emanating from so high a source merits consideration. It is impossible that Governor Warfield does not know the facts, for every man of intelligence must have acquainted himself with Colonel Pearre's congressional labors.

Therefore, if Governor Warfield has misstated the facts it must have been done with a deliberate partisan purpose, and if the Governor has placed himself upon that stultifying political plane, he cannot object to criticism within the limit of decent political discussion.

"Colonel Pearre, though comparatively a young member of Congress has already reached a commanding plane among his Republican colleagues. He has been appointed upon most influential and important committees, has served on conference committees of importance, has introduced ...ntless bills of both public and private character, has spoken ably, strikingly upon all questions affecting the public welfare, has faithfully attended to the wants and needs of his constituents without regard to their political affiliations, and has been a most faithful and industrious representative in every respect.

"On Friday night at the city of Baltimore the Hon. Joseph Cannon, Speaker of the House of Representatives, spoke in glowing terms of Colonel Pearre, the Hon. Frank C. Watcher and the Hon. Sidney Mudd. As chairman of the Committee of Appropriationshe said that these Republican representatives had gotten out of the government more than $20,000,000, which had been expended for public improvement in the state of Maryland. He further said that in his opinion it would prove a calamity to the state of Maryland were these gentlemen, or any of them defeated by the Democratic opponents.

"In addition to the services already enumerated Colonel Pearre has voted with the administration on all great questions and has done splendid service toward the passage of such bills as fixing eight hours as constituting a day's labor on all government contracts; for the election of senators by a direct popular vote; for reciprocity with Cuba; for antitrust legislation; for extending rural delivery; for public roads between the District of Columbia and Montgomery county; for the repeal of the Spanish War revenue taxes; for the law by which the gold standard was finally adopted; for restricting alien immigration, and many other bills equally important to the whole country. Governor Warfield must not, in the face of a record such as this, repeat his charge. If he does he will lay himself open to the insinuation of a deliberate intent to deceive the voters of this district.

"Colonel Pearre's opponent, Mr. Walter A. Johnson, has no claim even to Democratic support. He pledged his constituents, if elected to the lower house of the legislature, that he would vote for a bill to submit to the people a constitutional amendment to still further suppress the suffrage. He was elected. A day was set when a vote of that bill was made the special order of the day. The hour of noon was also fixed. Mr. Johnson answered roll call in the morning, voted on other bills in the evening, but at noon where, oh where was Brother Johnson? Mixed up in factional fights, involving future politicals and afraid to fulfill his sacred pledge to the people who voted for and trusted in him! He was never nominated with any hope that he could win, but because Victor Baughman wanted to take the wind out of the sails of Spencer Jones and whip him for the next gubernatorial fight."

Oakland View Poultry and Truck Farm

For sixty days I will offer at private sale the above property, located one mile South of Oakland. For further particulars call on or address Chas. J. Newman, Oakland, Md. 32-4t.

OFFUTT'S.

—ABOUT OUR—

Comfort Shoes

—FOR—

Men and Women.

They are the greatest blessing ever invented for any one who is on their feet all day.

They soothe and comfort tired, aching feet till they feel more like feathers than lead. They ease every tender spot, support firmly, squeeze nowhere.

Uppers of soft, velvety kid; soles ample, easy, smoothe; toes roomy, comfortable; heels low, broad, flat; according to quality. $1.50 to 2.50.

They are a very paradise of rest for weary feet and a paradise of economy for weary purses.

D. E. OFFUTT & SONS.

TO BRING OLD NATIONAL PIKE UP TO DATE.

Maryland Geological Survey Will Have Roadway Improved.

Mr. Joseph W. Hunter, State Commissioner of Highways of Pennsylvania, will visit the Johns Hopkins University tomorrow, and will accompany Mr. A. N. Johnson, chief highway engineer of the Maryland Geogical Survey to Cumberland. They will make an investigation of the old National pike, which starts at Cumberland and runs into Southwest Pennsylvania, with a view to ascertaining the best way to bring it up to date. The road was built over 100 years ago, and is at present in a very bad condition.

Before returning to Baltimore, Mr. Johnson will take a trip over those sections of Allegany county where the Maryland Survey has men at work.

Numerous highway improvements are contemplated for that county, and Dr. William Bullock Clark, director of the survey, has several men in the field there as elsewhere throughout the State making the necessary surveys.—Baltimore News.

BLOOMINGTON.

Mr. Robert Grant, Sr., aged 71, died suddenly at his home at Savage on last Sunday morning at 6 o'clock. Mr. Grant was a Scotchman by birth and was a life long friend and companion of the late David Scot who was buried a few weeks ago. A miner by occupation, he was well and favorably known in this vicinity and all along the George's Creek region for the past 50 years. Mr Robert Grant, Jr., boss miner at the Buxton Mine and Mr. Lewis Grant, filling a similar position at Hampshire, are two well known and prominent members of his family. He was buried from the Presbyterian church of Piedmont on last Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock; interment in Philos cemetery, Westernport.

Mrs. Sallie Matthews and her sister, Miss Ada Harshbarger returned home from a short visit to Cumberland on Friday evening.

Commissioner Stump is superintending some county work at Swallow Falls.

Rev. Snedegar is visiting friends and members of his church at the Firm Rock settlement.

Mr. Samuel Montgomery, of Tunnelton, W. Va., candidate for State Senate, spoke at the Savage school house on last Friday evening. He reports his canvas entirely satisfactory and the prospects that a glorious Republican victory all along the line growing brighter and brighter every day.

Messrs. George Warnick and John Miller were witnesses in a law suit at Oakland on Wednesday.

The Watson family, of Hampshire, has moved to Windom.

Mr. Granville Evans moved his family from Buxton to Piedmont on Tuesday.

Forest fires are raging along the county road between this place and Barnum.

Work at the different mines in this vicinity is somewhat brisker this week than it was last.

A spirited revival service in charge of the U. B. church is in progress at the Hampshire school house.

George Connors, of Thomas, was struck by one of the fast 97's on last Friday afternoon about 3 o'clock, a short distance west of Savage and at the time it was thought had sustained a fracture of the skull from which he could only survive a short time. He was removed to Piedmont and taken to the undertaking establishment of E. J. Fredlock and Co., to be convenient and handy for burial. In the morning the injured man became disgusted with his dismal and dreary surroundings, picked up his hat, walked to the station, procured a ticket and boarded a train for home, and the undertaker was cheated of his prey.

Mr. Truman Warnick is on business in Cincinnati.

Mr. Murphy and family have moved to Corinth, W. Va.

It is said that wads upon wads, rolls upon rolls of campaign boodle are being distributed throughout the state of West Virginia. At Keyser the fight is hot. People enthusiastic and politicians on both sides, active and hard at work night and day. The county seat is almost hidden behind variegated colored posters of the different candidates of both parties, State and National, and bushels of campaign buttons are distributed daily on the street corners.

Subscribe for The Republican

REPUBLICAN Meetings.

Republican Meetings, to which all irrespective of their party affiliations, are cordially invited to attend, will be held at

Sang Run, Monday, Oct. 31.
Accident, Tuesday, Nov. 1st.
Bittinger, Wednes'y, Nov. 2d.
New Ger'y Thursday, Nov. 3d.
Grantsville, Friday, Nov. 4th.
Friendsville, Satur'y, Nov. 5.

These meetings will be addressed by

Hon. Chas. R. Schirm,
Member of Congress from Baltimore City.

Hon. D. E. DICK,
The Cyclone Orator of Allegany County.

several local speakers and will open at 7.30 o'clock.

AUSTIN BROWN,
Chairman Republican Committee.

GRANTSVILLE.

Mr. Thomas Neff, of Frostburg, has been visiting friends and relatives in this vicinity the past week.

Mrs. William Kontner, of Lonaconing, has been the guest of Geo. W. Shaw and family the past week.

Last Tuesday and Wednesday Messrs. Edward Sincell, N. S. Heindel, Edward Mitchell, prominent lawyers of Oakland, made a preliminary survey of the disputed land line between Noah Newman and Samuel Glotfelty. They put up at the National Hotel while here. On their way home they did some surveying for Mr. Bowman, near Engle's Mill.

John Getty and family moved into their new home which they purchased from Joel H. Miller.

C. A. Bender and wife made a business trip to Meyersdale, Pa., one day last week.

J. J. Bender and Hershberger are carrying on the mercantile business on a large scale. They have in stock a full line of fall and winter goods.

A last weeks item corrected: Dr. Robison, instead of Dr. Louderbaugh, attended Mahlon Georg. Dr. Robison has proved himself a competent surgeon. He has made many friends in our town and vicinity.

Mr. Christian Ulerich, and family are visiting Mrs. C. W. Livengood, sister of Mr. Ulerick.

The dance held at Dorsey's Hotel last Wednesday evening proved to be quite a success. An excellent supper was served at 10. Quite a number from Salisbury attended it. The Salisbury orchestra furnished the music.

Misses Ethel and Nellie Broadwater, made quick trip to Salisbury one day last week.

Will Sigler, wife and daughter, of Piedmont, and Wheeler Kight and wife of Westernport, passed through town on an automobile last Saturday evening.

Mr. B. T. Keller made a visit to Meyersdale one day last week.

BITTINGER.

The first real touch of winter was felt here on last Saturday and Sunday, when frequent snow squalls occurred.

Deputy Sheriff Frantz of Oakland, passed through here last Saturday.

Mrs. Boucher is visiting her sister, Mrs. C. E. Ellithorpe, this week.

Messrs. S. J. Orendorf and Henry Wiley, the two efficient registrators for this district, went to Oakland last Wednesday to make their returns to the Board of Election Supervisors.

Mr. Jacob Lohr, a native of this section, and a veteran of the Civil War, is making preparation to go to Florida, where he asserts he will locate permanently.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brennemen were visiting relatives in Pennsylvania over Sunday.

The young people gathered at the home of Simon Orendorf last Saturday evening, where an old fashioned "Apple Cutting" was held.

Rev. J. B. Shoupe of the Lutheran church, went to Cumberland on last Monday to attend Conference at that place.

TWENTY-TWO MEDALS.

Unprecedented Award to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company at the St. Louis World's Fair.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad exhibit at the Louisiana State Purchase Exposition has won all the medals that could possibly be awarded to a railroad company.

The highest award of the Exposition, carrying with it the premier honor in each department, or building, is the special gold medal for the best, most complete and most attractive exhibit. This award was to be recommended by the Department Jury, and ratified by the Superior Jury. In the department of Transportation Exhibits, the Department Jury, with Vice-President Kendrick, of the Santa Fe System, at its head, was composed of distinguished railway men, engineers, mechanical and other experts of this country, Germany, England, France, Austria and Japan. The Superior Jury has for its head Governor Francis, while Director of Exhibits Skiff is First Vice-President, and the membership throughout of the most eminent and representative men at the Exposition including the Commissioners General of the Foreign Countries, the Presidents of Department Juries, Chiefs of Departments, etc.

Naturally the rivalry was strong for the special gold medal, of which there is but one in each building, the holder winning with it the Exposition first honors, there being none higher and so exclusive.

The award was to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company by the unanimous vote of the full Department Jury, and like great distinction was accorded by the full Superior Jury.

The Grand Prize, another gold medal was awarded the Baltimore and Ohio on its Section as a whole, and denotive of the highest distinction in its class or group. In conjunction with the Grand Prize, eighteen collaborators' medals were awarded; these going to those who had contributed to the striking educational value and general completeness of the Baltimore and Ohio Section. The Group Jury, followed by the endorsement of Department Jury, and ratified by the Superior Jury, awarded a gold medal of honor to Major J. G. Pangborn, Director of the Exhibit, in recognition of the origination and completion of the great historical collection, and the scheme and perfection of its installation.

Additional to the foregoing, and distinctive of the honors awarded the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company in another building, is the Grand Prize and gold medal in the group of "Engineering and Architecture" in the Department of Liberal Arts, this being on the model of the new Union Station at Washington, which is the central feature of the B. & O. Section in the Department of Transportation.

The "Sweepstakes," as it might be termed, in the fourteen acres of exhibits in the Department of Transportation, The Grand Prize in the railway group of the same building, another Grand Prize in the Department of Liberal Arts, and the medal of honor—four gold medals of the very highest class, and eighteen other medals, most of them gold, is the Company's Louisiana Purchase Exposition record. It is beyond paralleling, for it is topped by the Special Gold Medal for "the best, the most complete, and the most attractive installation," and there is but one such medal.

SELBYSPORT

Mrs. John Liston left for Braddock, Pa., at which place she expects to spend the winter.

Miss Nezzie Friend spent last week visiting in Friendsville.

Rev. Site preached an able and interesting sermon in the M. E. church last Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Schlossnagle spent last Sunday among friends at Accident.

Adam Richter and Sam Gnagey, of Accident, passed through our town last Sunday.

Last Saturday afternoon our boys again defeated the strong Friendsville base ball team by a score of 9 to 15. Next Saturday forenoon Selbysport is going to play the Accident team, and in the afternoon Friendsville is going to play Accident. Both games will be played at Friendsville. This will be the last game our boys will play this season.

Miss Gertrude Nicklow is spending the winter with Mrs. Scott Grove.

Perry Frantz and Truman Hileman made a flying trip to Confluence, last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rose of Braddock, Pa., spent several days visiting friends and relatives in Selbysport.

Mr. Leical, of Rockwood, Pa., has rented Mr. L. Holiday's house and expects to move his family here in a few days.

Call For Your Letters.

Mrs. James Wolf, Miss Jennie Mattingly, Pearl Ringer, Mr. Auger, Mrs. Thrope, Messrs Eli Stanton & Long, F. R. Blackburn.

Comparatively new cook stove cheap for cash. Inquire at this office. 2t

HAS FILED ACCEPTANCE OF NOMINATION

Mr. William A. Michael Candidate of Prohibition Party for House of Representatives.

CALLS UPON ALL TO AID HIM.

Ask that The Republican Make an Announcement of His Determination—He Did Not Seek the Nomination.

Mr. William A. Michael, who was recently nominated for Congress by a committee representing the Prohibition party of the Sixth Congressional District, in a letter to this paper asks that the announcement be made that he has accepted the nomination and that his letter of acceptance is now in the hands of the committee which named him. Mr. Michael's letter addressed to the editor, is dated at Westernport, Oct. 24th, and is as follows:

MY DEAR SIR,—I desire to thank you for the announcement you made through the columns of The Republican of October 20th of my nomination by the Prohibitionists of the Sixth Congressional District for Congress, and I will thank you kindly to notice in your columns my acceptance of the nomination. My letter of acceptance is now in the hands of the nominating committee which was appointed at the meeting held at Reynolds, Allegany county, September 20th.

While the nomination was not sought for by one who does not feel worthy, still I trust that the Prohibitionists of Garrett county will wake up and and aid in this battle to drive out the legalized liquor traffic, which is the greatest curse of our land today.

Soliciting the suffrage of my Republican and Democratic friends of Garrett county, I remain,

Very respectfully yours,
WILLIAM A. MICHAEL.

Died.

GOOD—Mrs. David Sloan has gone to Kirkwood, Mo., where she was called on account of the sudden death of her father, Alexander C. Good, at his home in that city. The deceased passed away Sunday afternoon. He was born in Wheeling, W. Va., and when a young man removed to Oakland, where he lived for many years, serving for a considerable length of time as a justice of peace. Several years ago he removed to Kirkwood, where he became a member of the firm of Wolfe and Good, iron merchants.—Cumberland News.

GARRETT—Mrs. Agnes Garrett, wife of Mr. Michael A. Garrett, manager of the Garrett estate at Montebello, on the Hartford road near Baltimore, and daughter of the late Patrick McNally of Garrett county, died Sunday after a short illness. The funeral took place Wednesday morning at Oakland, from St. Peter's Catholic church, where Rev. T. J. Stanton celebrated a Requiem Mass for the repose of the soul of the deceased. A large number of relatives and friends from Deer Park, Piedmont and other points attended the funeral, arriving here with the remains of the deceased lady on train No. 3 yesterday morning. Mr. Michael A. Garrett has been in charge of the Montebello property for some time, but is not related to the Baltimore Garretts.

BROOKS—At his home in New York City, of pneumonia, after a short illness, J. H. Brooks, aged about seventy years. Mr. Brooks will be remembered by many of the citizens of Oakland as a merchant who conducted a store in the building now owned by Mr. R. S. Jamison on Railroad street. He visited Mountain Lake Park and Oakland last summer with his children. He was a member of the Oakland Lodge Knightsof Honor.

COZAD—At her home at Basic City, Va., after a short illness, Mrs. Mary Cozad, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Lawton, of Oakland. She leaves besides her husband three children. Her funeral took place yesterday, the interment being made in the cemetery at her home. Her mother and brother, Mr. Samuel Lawton, of Oakland, attended the funeral.

Orphans' Court Session.

The next regular session of the Orphans' Court for Garrett county will be held on Thursday, Nov. 10, instead of on Tuesday, Nov. 8th, that day being election day and the court officials desiring to exercise their privilege as voters will be unable to do so and attend court at the same time.